10. The Ted Kennedy School of Driving.
9. Don King's Hair Salon.
8. Keith Richard's Health Club and Spa.
7. The Van Damme School of Acting.
6. Dahmer's Bar and Grill.
5. The J. Edgar Hoover Men's Clothing Outlet.
4. Ye Olde Plague Shoppe.
3. Anna Nicole Smith School for the Gifted.
2. Anthrax Frozen Yogurt.
1. "I Can't Believe It's Not DC Food!" Restaurant and Pub.

Quote of the Day

"Why eat chocolate? Might as well apply it directly to your thighs."

–Rhoda

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Fall Craft Bazaar Hampshire College Sun. Nov. 19 @ 10-5 $3

Smith College ASA conference Friendship, Asian Pacific American experience, legacy. Nov 18 Registration @ Wright Hall 3pm party after Info 585-4808 Free to 5 college attendees

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD

Kai Chi delivering tortillas through Thursday 12-1:30pm and Friday and Saturday 11-3pm 586-2716

Rush Tri-Sigma! Interested? Meet them at the campus center information desk at 3pm. Questions call Jess 548-9868

The airport shuttle Need to get to the airport? Call Valley Transporter 549-7760

To Hadley barn's Saturday clean up crew. Pleasure doing grassaat! We really appreciate and you help. Anne Co.

U Mass Hockey!!! The involvement are really high this with a 6 and 1 record. We'll close out this exciting Hockey Connection @ Mass takes on Providence this Saturday @ Mullins Center Students get in free tickets @ Hicks Cage 7:45!

2 4 samaz grad students looking for companion Amherst area tell for no semester Call 549-9915

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease 1/96 latter Hadley 2 min. apartment Amherst center $495/month heather water inc Call 256-4973

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Subaru 1800 DL One owner Runs great. Reliable transportation. Clean condition $1700 323-0785

1985 Subaru GI 5 spd 81K a options $1200 obo 546-0895

93 BMW 318 5 stack coupe automatic Asking $21,500 Negotiable call Dave 585-5284

EMPLOYMENT

Accountant NYC EPA firm desires accountant with 2-4 years public experience. Our specialties taxation and inbound foreign investment. Salary from $40-$50 000. Fax resume @ 212-564-2030

All students N.E. College pairs you fun-filling jobs for summer positions in Boston, Hartford and surround ng towns. No experience necessary will completely train & support Rewarding summer earnings $8000 $10 000 Great resume builder. Possible internship Call 800-568-9939

CRUISE SHIPS HIRING
$Cruise Ships Hiring! $$$- Free travel

-Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii! Please apply immediately. No experience necessary. Junior (19-9) 929-4398 Ext. C1152

District Managers and sales reps wanted. Will advertising on the internet. You need not be a self-starter who has what it takes to succeed and wants to be part of a ground floor opportunity. Your time and energy is your only investment. You will be given all training and materials necessary. Some resume and cover letter to Buck's Int. P.O. Box 1474 Westboro, MA 01581 or e-mail BUCKMST@BUCKS.INT.COM

Exotic dancers We have no exp 413 536-0963

Quick $ for creative motivated people. Part, P/T. Artwork Call 800-5762 ASAP.

Looking for adventure? Marketing firm seeks outgoing extroverted ones for nationwide college promotion. Excellent pay & bonuses. Expenses paid travel. Fax resume to (617) 236-4113 Ann Price or call (800) 783-4291 x 334

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & Full time jobs available in parks & recreation. Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bounties! Call 1 206 545-4804 Ext. N 5083

Part time/Full time Supplemental income. Work at your private worksite at your own pace. No telemarketing! No travel. No quotas or sales inventory. 586-0192

We want you Highest commissions available. Related to $1.00 Inventory required $2500 Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day !!! each location your profit $32,480 1st year! 941-766-8001

You can earn $500 to $1000 between now and Christmas. Call Holly 1 800 691-7989

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn big money Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Guitar & Amp For Sale brand new Epiphone LesPaul gold top and Marshall 11M00 tube amp $450 each Call 586-5626 for details

Liza and rare recordings 3 tapes for $15 Call Adam 549-8079

Need a astra Bjork ticket? Ri- 1-17 can 549-3302, better hurry.

Round trip airline ticket, Hawaii or Alaska $800. 548-2072

Found Trak mountain bike 20 inch green/red/5-ish brown frame purple bar extenders 549-5864

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Hot Pants have a happy B day. Now you're a normal 20 yr older. Love Anon.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and support ive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

LOST

Black suede gloves on North Amherst or Sunderland but last Monday. I'm from the Caribbean, my hands are freezing!! Please help me! Call Maribel 253-0778

PERSONALS

Jeff M You are a hotty You asked for my Guess Who?

Marcia T The Collegian gets delivered over there right? Of course. Though only on Thursdays. I hope all is well with you, and you're being careful. Youre in my thoughts. I love you and miss you. Stay strong, no worries, write to me. Can't wait to talk to you next. Love, Ange Many K's and O's

Pasquale, you big dork! Happy 21st birthday! I'm right behind you and I expect nothing but fun. After all, queens deserve the best! Love, Dovle

Rachal No Kai Chicpee because there will be rays in the wind! Happy 22nd! Love, Bil

Steve Spenger It's over for you. You're history There's a new sheriff in town. His name? Buford T. Justice His game? Beating you down Don't act like your crap don't stink And I know your name ain't Joe Rockhead. Though it isn't a bad description of your brain capacity. Yo Momma

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst Jasper 546-7942

Want me to take over your lease Jan 1? Looking for 3 bed bus line Amherst house Call Sarah 253-3553

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate needed to share townhouse for spring semester 2 mus from campus Frank Day 413-568-9151ex 1725 Night 413 733-8079

Roommate wanted non-smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month On bus route Start Jan 1st Call Anna 253-1605 Heat & hot water included

SERVICES

Child care Subsidized slot available for toddler at quality center, route 63 (everett), 4 miles north of U Mass Call Brian, Hampshire Franklin Day Care, 548-9674

Economical manicures acrylics nail art Robert 546-7194

Free financial aid! Over $ billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income Let us help Call Student Financial Services 1 800 263-8495 ext F50012

International Students Visitors Dv 1 greencard program by U S Immigration Legal Services ref (818) 772-7188 20231 Stagg St Canoga Park CA 91306

Going to Florida during winterseason? I'll bring your car to you. Call Dmv. 546-1579

Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

Spring Break '96 Cancun from $399, Jamaica from $439 Florida from $99 organize a group of 15 and travel free!!! Call Student Travel Services 1 800 648-4849 for more info On campus contact Liz at 545-7146, Jason at 549-5529 or Catherine at 549-7594

Spring Break Bahamas or Florida Keys Spend it on your own private yacht One week only $385 00 per person including food and much more Organize and go for FREE! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters 1 800-783 4001 See us on the net http://www.shadow.net/~kosa

Winter Break Special Killington week $269 Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

2 asta 2 rndtrp airfare vouchers to Jamaica/Cancun fully transferable Food/drink included with hotel by arrgmnt $300/pair call Erik @ 549-3788

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $745/rt California $175 o/w Europe from $229 r/t Cheap airfares to S America, Asia, Africa, Middle East and Australia Call (413) 587-0001 Air Tech New England

Free Travel Spring Break '96 Sun Splash Tours Reliable spring break company Organize group! Travel free! Party! Jamaica Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

Spring Break '96 Cancun from $399, Jamaica from $439 Florida from $99 organize a group of 15 and travel free!!! Call Student Travel Services 1 800 648-4849 for more info On campus contact Liz at 545-7146, Jason at 549-5529 or Catherine at 549-7594

Spring Break Bahamas or Florida Keys Spend it on your own private yacht One week only $385 00 per person including food and much more Organize and go for FREE! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters 1 800-783 4001 See us on the net http://www.shadow.net/~kosa

Winter Break Special Killington week $269 Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

2 asta 2 rndtrp airfare vouchers to Jamaica/Cancun fully transferable Food/drink included with hotel by arrgmnt $300/pair call Erik @ 549-3788

WANTED TO RENT

Wanted 3 or more bedroom apt or house near usthorn or campus For spring semester Call 549 7403

Wantad to rent a 2 3 or 4 bedroom in Amherst Call 549 8818

HOROSCOPE

Aries (March 21-April 20) A great time to plan entertainment or a different your energies will find focus as a host or hostess Initiate goodwill at work—turbulent times may be afoot

Taurus (April 21-May 21) If you're feeling bored, check out a new opportunity where your experience may be valued more highly Beginning a personal communique may also renew your affection for another person

Gemini (May 22-June 21) Planning an excursion provides a welcome respite from a frantic week at work The pressure will ease when you learn to better delegate authority Take the first step to bridge a gap between yourself and an estranged friend

Cancer (June 22-July 22) The casual approach to office politics may disturb you a bit, but this week it's imperative to remain on the superficial, at least until you're sure which way the wind is blowing A weekend adventure provides fodder for contemplation

Leo (July 23-August 23) A romantic attachment flourishes when you make an effort to appreciate your partner's mind as well as other things A special treat you plan for your sweetie is much appreciated

Virgo (August 24-September 22) A new venture you begin is productive from the start, as long as you permit it to develop according to its particular bent Don't be upset if the reality differs from the theory, as long as it still works

Libra (September 23-October 23) Any extra time you can spend listening pays off handsomely Not only could you make a new friend, but the information and experience you gather could be invaluable as you head into a new and different situation

Scorpio (October 24-November 22) What seems like a boring week presents some unique opportunities for growth Give aid to someone in need who doesn't expect it—no act of kindness is ever wasted

Sagittarius (November 23-December 21) As a business deal develops, it may seem as if one of the parties involved is being deliberately obtuse Take the extra time to explain, the goodwill you cultivate will pay off one way or another

Capricorn (December 22-January 20) A journey you've begun enters a new phase as you pass a landmark along the way Celebrate with a trusted friend Keep your eyes on a central objective in order to avoid being distracted as the week progresses

Aquarius (January 21-February 19) If there's something you want more than anything, this is a good week to sit down and formulate a plan for getting it Trust a friend to advise you, then stick to your plan—your goal could be closer than you think it is!

Pisces (February 19-March 20) It may be time to sever a relationship that isn't working While distance can be painful at first, it may be the best path toward a new freedom and happiness Trust your inner voice.

WANTED:

The Collegian is looking for a librarian. This is a paid position which involves a minimum time commitment of five hours per week. If you have questions or are interested in an application, please contact Marni E. Helfner at 545-0719 or come down to the Collegian Offices at 113 Campus Center.

Applications will be accepted until Friday.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is an equal opportunity employer.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

~ SPORTS ~

■ NBA

continued from page 20

team in NBA history. Can you say futility?

Last season, the Kings started to show signs of promise when they fell one game short of the final Western Conference playoff berth.

This year, off-season improvements have led to speculation that the Kings could finally achieve their goal — the playoffs. In drafting Corliss Williamson (currently on IR) and Tyus Edney, Sacramento added two players who can make big contributions. After a strong pre-season and a 5-1 start, the Kings feel they are on their way.

Edney has been a tremendous addition to the team. His quickness, toughness and poise combined with a surprising ability to create his own shots has earned him prime-time minutes.

Besides the fact that their victories have come against weaker teams, the Kings are playing good basketball and are definitely headed in the right direction.

Spanning the "Globe"

• The Orlando Magic have extended the contact of head coach, Brian Hill. After entering last season with many critics, he led a young Magic team to the NBA finals. The contract was said to be a multi-year extension, however no monetary terms were disclosed.

• Check out Shawn Bradley, the "stick-figured Mormon" leading the league in rebounding. Who said this guy couldn't get physical?

• Anyone see the Bullets Gheorge Muresan's 31-point, 13-rebound explosion last week?

• How bad are the Nets? They recently beat a Sacramento team that only dressed eight players — by two.

• The NBA is looking at expansion possibilities once again. Possible sites include Pittsburgh and Mexico City.

• For all fellow users of the internet, take a look at http://www.nba.com, the NBA's new home page. It's an awesome way to learn new stuff about the great game of hoops.

Darren Cohen is a Collegian correspondent.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

The most bang for the buck.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

POP QUIZ

Q: What Can 99¢ Buy?

A:

A Baked Potato with butter & sour cream

TRY SOMETHING DIFFERENT FOR LUNCH-- A BAKED POTATO BAR WITH LOTS OF GREAT TOPPINGS!

the hatch

■ Rudy

continued from page 20

game, but he is a student of the game, as well, and the level of intensity never fades. He will observe whatever tapes he can get his hands on to learn tendencies and tactics that will better his team. He relays it to his players in a way that they can learn and stay focused on the task at hand.

"He doesn't overload us with information. He just tells us what we need to know," LeDuc said. "He is very focused in thinking about that game only. It's just one game at a time and he has been intense for every game this year. That is definitely helpful for the whole team."

"He is a great tactical coach. He makes the players he has better by putting them in the right positions. It's incredible how his mind works," Lynch said. "He tells us exactly what we need to know. He shows us exactly how the other team's going to play and the best way to play the best strategy."

"It's easy to bring that enthusiasm to the A-10 Championships and the NCAAs, but the good coaches inject that enthusiasm into the tough part of the season. It works well for him," Charnides said. "About three-quarters of the way through the season you tend to hit a slump, but he brings smile and love for the game everyday. That's a tough thing to do."

Rudy attributes that to his 20-plus years of coaching experience.

"I used to try to teach a lot of things and now I try to teach a few things really well," said Rudy. "I try to give the game back to the players."

Rudy will also try and use a sense of humor to lighten the pressure which can mount on his players through school and the game itself.

"As a coach I try and create an environment and do the things necessary to teach these kids so they can be educated by the game," said Rudy. "By me a little and by life a lot. When they get through it, they have a great thing — the experience in soccer and a good education. I enjoyed college and I am still enjoying college.

"I like to laugh and I like to have fun. Sometimes the pressure of the game can be a lot and parents can put pressure on too, so I try and keep them relaxed."

He put this practice to use last Saturday in the NCAA first round game against Hartford.

"When he sees that we're stressed, like after Hartford tied up the game, he'll give a little humor," Lynch said. "He said to us 'just think, we have another 30 minutes on Upper Boyden Field.' It made me relax a bit and focus on the fact that we still had 30 minutes to play."

After the eventual game-winner was scored, Rudy was able to share his joy with his friends in the stands.

"Because I couldn't get into the pile-up with the kids," Rudy said, "the next best thing was to really get into it with the crowd. Seeing friends and relatives up there was a way of saying that [the fans] were unbelievable, the team was unbelievable and what a incredible moment it was."

With Jim Rudy as coach, these moments can touch us all.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Jim Rudy has led the Minutewomen soccer team to seven NCAA appearances in the last eight years.

■ volleyball

continued from page 20

Speaking of Nolan, she is second to Rivera in the kill department with 3.726 kpg and a total of 395 kills on the season. Nolan's dpg average is 3.604.

Senior Rachel Sky leads the team with a .298 hitting percentage, while junior Dionne Nash is third in the kpg category with a 2.733 clip. Meanwhile, freshman Katie Pearce is improving and gaining experience with each match. The setter currently owns an 11.014 assists per game average.

Offensively, Rhode Island is led by Kris Normandin. The senior outside hitter, who earned A-10 Rookie of the Year honors in 1992, is averaging 3.7 kpg and has earned a total of 389 kills on the season, both team-highs. Remarkably, Normandin is also tied for the lead in digs with a 2.7 dpg average.

Another force the Minutewomen will have to contend with is Ram co-captain Carey Braun. Her 3.1 kpg average is second on the team, while her total of 268 kills is good for third. Lauren Maselli is second on URI with a 2.8 kpg average, and her 283 total kills is second on the team.

None of the previous players mentioned has a hitting percentage of over .252 (Normandin) however.

Up until three games ago, Rhode Island was undefeated in the A-10. But consecutive losses to George Washington and Dayton, followed by a win over Xavier, have dropped the Rams to second place in the conference. With the postseason approaching, URI may have picked the wrong time of the season to start adding to the losa column.

"All week long we've been working on distributing the ball on offense," Rivera said. "We're trying to set up the middle, which will open up our corners. Also, we're trying to work on our blocking, which is definitely one of our weaknesses."

"I think we've had a good week of practice," middle blocker Leigh Readey said. "We've been executing in our matches lately and I think it's been a result of our hard work. If we can just keep it up in our match against Rhode Island, I think we can beat them."

Memo

Beat the Flu -- Try our Fresh OJ Brew

Fresh Orange Juice Squeezed just for you!

...only at the Bluewall!

PAWSS

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES

Presents:

"Heroin As A Global Commodity"

A Lecture by:

Alfred W. McCoy
University of Wisconsin at Madison

Thursday, November 16th
7:30 PM
Campus Center, Room 101
University of Massachusetts

This program is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information call PAWSS at 582-5519.

Sports

UM loses season opener

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Last season, the Massachusetts women's basketball team's finish was nothing short of outstanding.

After finishing at a record-breaking 19-11 (13-5 in the Atlantic 10 Conference), expectations ran high for the upcoming season, which began last night in the Preseason Women's National Invitational Tournament.

The Minutewomen travelled to Orono to face Maine in the first round. The end results were not pretty as the Bears defeated the Minutewomen 70-56.

Maine	70
Massachusetts	56

In other preseason NIT first round games, Arkansas edged Louisiana in double overtime, 84-83; Colorado defeated New Mexico St., 63-56; Drake beat Memphis, 89-81; Duke drilled Virginia Commonwealth, 93-51; Ohio St. drubbed Pittsburgh, 85-50; and Texas A&M pounded on Lamar, 111-83.

O'Brien and Co. were looking to avenge last week's exhibition loss to Ska-Samara, but knew it wouldn't be easy. The field for the Preseason NIT, in it's second season, drew some impressive squads, including seven teams which competed in last year's NCAA Tournament, three other NWIT teams (in addition to UMass) and the 1993 NCAA Tournament runner-up, Ohio State.

It was clear that the team which took the floor last night was not the squad that placed fourth in last spring's NWIT, a first for Massachusetts, and the best performance of an A-10 team in the tournament.

Going into the game, O'Brien, the A-10 Coach of the Year, knew this game would not be a gimme, as the Bears were coming off a big season, as well, highlighted by an overall record of 24-6 (14-2 in the North Atlantic Conference) and an appearance in the NCAA Tournament. What's more, the 2,683 Maine fans didn't make it any easier for UMass to get into its game.

Massachusetts knew its defense would have to be tough, with 5-foot-9 sophomore guard Cindy

Turn to SEASON OPENER page 16

V-ball ends regular season tonight

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

It is safe to say that the Massachusetts volleyball team is on a roll.

Why? The Minutewomen have won 12 of their last 13 matches, losing a mere five games in the process. More importantly, 10 of those wins were over conference opponents, enabling the Minutewomen to boost their Atlantic 10 record to 14-5, 23-10 overall.

So, what does all this mean? An appearance in the postseason tournament to be held at UMass Nov. 24-25, no less. Fulfilling the main goal of the preseason, the Minutewomen have clinched a top four finish in the A-10 (third place, to be exact).

Only one match remains in the regular season and it is against Rhode Island, the team which UMass could possibly face in the first round of the playoffs. Currently, Rhode Island is in second place with an impressive 17-2 A-10 record, 25-5 overall. The two teams will square off tonight at 7 p.m., at URI. The Rams beat the Minutewomen the first time around (3-1) at Curry Hicks Cage on Oct. 3.

A win over the Rams would accomplish two things. First, it would send a message to Rhode Island, who is coached by Bob Schneck. Combined with the home-court advantage in the postseason, a win tonight could give UMass a psychological edge if these teams do in fact meet in the playoffs.

"I feel that Rhode Island is the toughest team in the conference," said UMass' Giza Rivera, the squad's strongest offensive weapon. "But they are also a beatable team. It's going to take a strong willingness to win, to be successful. We're going to have to leave our skin on the court. But if we have the right enthusiasm and mental toughness, we'll be OK."

Despite missing a chunk of the season to injury, Rivera leads the Minutewomen in kills with 414. The junior outside hitter also has a team-high 4.929 kills-per-game average, along with a .289 hitting percentage. Also, Rivera is second only to junior Lesley Nolan in digs-per-game with a 3.167 mark.

Turn to VOLLEYBALL page 19

George has trophy sealed; big ND win

GREG COREY on College Football

Well, folks, it's mid-November and the college football season is rapidly winding down.

Three weeks remain until Dec. 2, which will mark the end of another regular season.

Most teams have one or two games left but there are still a number of important questions that need answering before we can go bowling.

Where will the bowl bound teams be playing? Who will they be?

Who will win the Heisman trophy?

Will we have an outright winner of the national championship?

These questions and a whole lot more will play out over the up- coming weeks.

Circle the weekend of Nov. 25 on your calendar, because it will be one of the most important days of college football season.

The picture for the national championship could become a lot clearer as the Big Three (Nebraska, Florida and Ohio State) all face what "potentially" could be its toughest tests of the season.

The race for the Heisman will also be decided, seeing that the top three candidates will all be on the field this weekend.

• Taking a quick look back to last weekend — Nebraska and Ohio State (No. 1 and No. 2) were both winners by the score of 41-3, and Florida continued its perfect season with a 63-7 dismantling of South Carolina.

Speaking of the Florida game, what was Steve Spurrier doing taking timeouts with under a minute left with his team up by 56 points?

C'mon.

• How about Eddie George? The Ohio St. running back was a man

Turn to COLLEGE FOOTBALL page 16

Rudy leaves lasting impression

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

As his beloved women's soccer team streamed onto Richard F. Garber field with 1.4 seconds left in overtime, you could find coach Jim Rudy lying flat on his back, in the rain and mud that had turned the grass into a swamp-like surface. His smile lit up the stadium, as he looked into the roaring, adoring UMass crowd. That lasting image of him could best exhibit his passion for the game of soccer.

"The game is such a heavyweight. It has got a hook in me and a hook in almost everyone that has tried to play the sport," Rudy said. "It's got so much to offer. I am so much richer by the soccer experience with my relationships and people I met through soccer."

Rudy has been the Massachusetts women's soccer coach since 1988, after coaching both the men's and women's teams at Central Florida. He is also part of the U. S. Soccer Federation National coaching staff and has worked with coaches all over the world.

Rudy has taken the knowledge that he has acquired and added his emotion into the sport he loves dearly. It has become contagious to everyone who he comes in contact with.

"He's very much an ambassador of the game, locally around here at UMass and when we made the trip to Central Florida [this year]," first-year assistant Chris Chamides said. "He respects the game so much. People who are attracted to soccer appreciate that in him and follow him knowing he has that respect for the game."

The women's soccer following here at UMass includes the players he plays with whenever the chance presents itself, involving local men who share the same love of the game he has. These same men can often be found in the stands behind the UMass bench singing for extended periods of time, cheering on their friend's team. It is something that helps spur on the Minutewomen.

"The Old Boys, the soccer team that he plays with in the summer, after practice, games or whatever," Rachel LeDuc said. "They're great. It just lifts up the whole team, and it helps us out when they come out to support our team and coach. They contribute to our success."

"The fans are a big part of our success," junior Erin Lynch says of the Old Boys. "When they get singing it pumps us and him up, and raises our level of play."

What is so remarkable about the Rollins College graduate, is that his passion for the game is undying. Not only is Rudy a coach of the

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy [right], shown with assistant coach Chris Chamides [left], has 187 career wins coaching women's soccer.

Turn to RUDY, page 19

Real refs wanted, Kings surprising

Darren Cohen on the NBA

Over the summer when the NBA and the players union finally reached an agreement, most thought there was labor peace in the world of pro hoops. Unfortunately, one small detail was left out — the referees. Officially being locked out by the NBA at the start of the regular season has forced the referees into intense labor negotiations. Currently, with nearly two weeks of the season gone by, games are still being handled my replacement officials.

Despite the lockout, a crew of regular referees were scheduled to work last night's game between the Houston Rockets and the expansion Toronto Raptors. Last week, the Ontario Labor Relations Board banned the NBA from using replacement referees.

After a weekend of fights and fouls, players and coaches have stepped up their claim that the league must bring back the regular officials. Games have been handled by two-man crews of CBA and college referees, many whom are having trouble handling NBA players.

Last Friday, Indiana Pacers coach Larry Brown was fined $11,000 and suspended for one game after an outburst against the Knicks. The next day the NBA suspended 16 players after a Pacers-Kings brawl.

There is one thing that both sides have agreed upon, Commissioner David Stern must join the negotiations, Mike Mathis, a regular NBA official, has been negotiating for the referees union.

On to a brighter note ...

• The Sacramento Kings have been a playoff no-show since the 1985-86 season. That's longer than any other

Turn to NBA, page 19

New and improved Brad Norton

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Early in last Saturday night's win over UMass-Lowell, Judd Smith drew a two-minute penalty for holding. The Massachusetts four-man unit filed onto the ice to kill the penalty. Jon Jacques, followed by Rob Bonneau, Tom O'Connor and Brad Norton.

Brad Norton?

The same Brad Norton who was frequently the reason UMass was killing penalties last year? The same Norton who set a school record for penalty minutes in a season during 1994-95?

Despite the jersey switch from No. 28 to No. 6, it is indeed the same Brad Norton. But to watch him play this season, you'd never know it.

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore Brad Norton has greatly improved his play since last season, killing penalties instead of committing them.

In UMass' impressive 4-1 start, pleasant surprises are plentiful, but perhaps the one player whose improvement has stood out considerably has been Norton.

"I think that Brad Norton has made a significant jump from the first year to the second year," Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen said. "A lot of it has to do with him being more focused. It's made a difference."

A year ago, Norton looked lost. Thrown right into the action as only a freshman, Norton was frequently spun around by opposing forwards and he drew penalties trying to compensate for it.

This is not uncommon for big freshmen in Hockey East, especially defensemen. They come from high school or junior hockey, where they're one of the biggest players on the ice. By sheer reach, they are almost impossible to beat. The jump up to the collegiate level, where everybody is fast and everybody is strong, serves as a rude awakening.

"He's always been such a big kid on his team, that he had been able to get away with a lot of things because of his size," Mallen said. "But now he's being forced to learn the game."

Norton has begun that learning process and it has translated into strong early results. The penalty minutes are down, a stat that Norton and Mallen are both proud of.

"I don't think there is going to be half as many penalties," said Norton, who is proud of his new role as a penalty killer. "I was usually the person responsible for penalties, so I didn't get to kill many last year, I wasn't happy with all of the penalties last year."

"He is trying to stay out of the penalty box," Mallen said. "The more he stays out of the penalty box, the more he can play."

An extra year of maturity will improve anybody, but the combination of increased experience and the summer Norton had, all helped considerably.

The Acton native spent the summer working out with his older brother Jeff, a defenseman for the St. Louis Blues. Along with the things the younger Norton learned on the ice, he picked up some other tips as well.

"Jeff provides a role model for him on and off the ice," Mallen said. "He is a very hardworking, professional athlete. He takes very good care of himself. That's a real good lead for Brad. I hope that Brad sees that the fruits of Jeff's labor really paid off big for him."

The summer workout and newfound discipline have paid obvious dividends. His penalty minutes are down and his production is definitely up. In addition to his enhanced defensive skills, Mallen is looking to employ Norton's big shot as more a part of the offense as well.

"Brad is capable of scoring goals.

Turn to NORTON, page 16

Donaghue standing tall as she heads to Nationals

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

When Rebecca Donaghue steps up to the start at cross country meets, she hardly cuts an imposing figure. The shy, unassuming sophomore stands at a mere 5-foot-2. But it is her presence on the course that gives her a larger-than-life reputation.

Rebecca Donaghue

When she was young, Donaghue would often challenge neighborhood boys to races. Almost always, she would win. While in fourth grade, Donaghue entered her first organized race, a one-mile run. After a less-than-pleasing performance, she decided to scrap the idea of running distance, and concentrate on sprints.

"I ran that first race, and even though it was only a mile, I hated it," Donaghue said. "I told myself that I would never run distance again, and I was only in fourth grade."

When she entered high school, Donaghue intended on keeping her fourth grade pledge, trying out for the soccer team. After she didn't make it, she decided to give running a second chance.

"I knew I wanted to run track, but I wasn't sure about cross country," she said. "I always watched the Olympics and I knew that I wanted to be there someday."

At Nashoba Regional High School, Donaghue cleared the record books, setting cross country course records at Nashoba, Groton and Lunenburg high schools. Named to various all-star teams during her high school career, Donaghue was awarded the Eve Ingalls Memorial District MVP Award her senior year and garnered Nashoba Athlete of the Year accolades as well.

While in high school cross country and track, she was being watched by Julie LaFreniere. As the Massachusetts women's cross country and track & field coach, LaFreniere liked what she saw in Donaghue, and

Turn to DONAGHUE page 16

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 52 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, November 17, 1995

UMass faces UConn Huskies
Sophomore Danielle Dion will mind the net in Storrs Sunday as UMass meets UConn in the second round of the NCAAs (See Sports, page 12).

Abba plays Chess
The UMass theater guild will put on the play Chess this weekend, featuring music written by former members of Abba (See Arts, page 6).

Who's the Boss?
Boston's Mighty Mighty Bosstones will take over Pearl St. this weekend with two ska-filled shows. (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast
Today will be in the high 30s with a chance of flurries in the upper elevations. Tonight will be cold in the mid-20's. Saturday and Sunday will have a high in the mid-30s with some precipitation.

	Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH:	38	36	37
LOW:	25	25	24

After caucus dispute, student senators try to patch differences

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association (SGA) has cleared the air a week after the body was divided over the failure of a motion to propose a women's caucus on the senate.

Speaker Dan Castellano clarified that the motion was principally rejected because of the technical procedures that the proposal itself failed to go through, not because the senate refuses to support the empowerment of women.

A motion to form a women's caucus of non-senators was proposed by Sen. David Gafney at last week's session. Gafney made the proposal on behalf of his constituents, after he was approached by a group of women who wanted to form a caucus.

However, when presenting the motion to the senate body, there was no charter and Gafney only knew the name of one woman who wanted to form the caucus, who happened to represent the Everywoman's Center.

Senators, especially female senators, said they felt the motion was too vague to be considered on the floor at that time. They wanted to see a concrete charter before they endorsed the caucus blindly. They also wanted to make sure that the caucus represented a cross-section of the campus, not just one organization.

Female senators were especially disturbed because they had not been told of the caucus, which was supposed to be representing their concerns as well. There are 29 female senators on the senate. They held a meeting after the Wednesday's session in order to talk about the controversy. Many were called hypocrites for voting against the women's caucus.

"I'd be hard-pressed to find any women who was anti- women's caucus," Castellano said. "It was hard for these women to vote down a motion for women."

Castellano said the issue of caucuses has been a "hot" one on this campus, coming to a head at last week's meeting.

"I don't want to debate caucuses on the floor," Castellano said. "I want them to get their charter together first. It needs to be solid and long-term."

Many senators chose to voice their objections through The Collegian. Others in favor of the caucus and angry with the senate's rejection of the motion chose to chalk up the campus with anti-SGA slogans.

The issue of caucuses also draws heat to the ALANA caucus, currently the only formally recognized and voting caucus on the senate. ALANA is allocated 13 percent of the total elected senator seats each year. This year there are 9 ALANA senators.

Castellano said these conservative objections raise a lot of affirmative action questions. Many opposed feel this caucus gives people of color a special privilege. Castellano said this reflects nationwide discrimination.

"A lot of ALANA issues were marginalized so there was a need for better representation," Castellano said.

Caucuses can hold voting seats, as does ALANA, or may be ex-officio, meaning they cannot vote but may speak on issues that influence voting. It was unclear whether the women's caucus was proposed as a voting or non-voting body.

Castellano also said the group of women who wish to form the women's caucus should be the ones to work on the charter and bring it to the senate floor.

"Men can work on it, but a group of men cannot decide what's best for women's groups," Castellano said.

There are currently two more proposals for caucuses from the disabled students and GLBT communities that are being worked on.

There was a motion on the agenda Wednesday night which would enact a committee to recommend procedures for the recognition of a caucus. Castellano said this motion is the first step toward clearing discrepancies stemming from last week's miscommunication.

JEFFREY J. DIGIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN STAFF

Shop 'till you drop
Freshman Chau Nguyen does her Christmas shopping on the concourse of the busy Campus Center yesterday.

Chabad House expansion to bring new kosher pizzeria

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

There are several things that go hand-in-hand with being a college student at the University of Massachusetts. Going to Friday night parties, having political rallies on the Student Union steps, and, of course, eating pizza.

So, it's not normally too big a deal when a new pizza joint opens up in the Amherst area.

However, the next pizza place to open will be a bit different from many others, because some toppings, like pepperoni, won't be on the menu. The reason for that is the pizza will be kosher, cooked in Chabad House's new kitchen.

The kitchen, and pizzeria, is part of a larger expansion to the Chabad House. The addition will add 3,500 feet to the current building located near the Southwest residential area.

"A year ago the idea came to mind that we should look for more space," said Chabad Rabbi Chaim Adelman. "We looked into the possibilities and decided to do an addition to the present building.... As it stands right now, we're going to have a bigger synagogue and a mikvah, [a ritual bath]. We also needed more space for my [11 member] family because we all stay here on shabbat, and holidays... In the long run, should we ever get some more people to work in the area, we would have housing for them.

"I also had in mind that we should have some Kosher take-out facilities, because there is nothing in the area," Adelman continued. "I thought pizza would be one of the most popular types of food."

Adelman said he plans to hire a professional cook for the restaurant. "We'll probably start off conservatively, and open only certain nights to see the reaction... If it picks up, we can give more stuff, such as soup."

The expansion will also increase the number of apartments at Chabad which students can rent. "We will have three or four more rental apartments to live in a Jewish environment," Adelman said.

He also said the old synagogue in the Chabad basement will be turned into a "modern library with computers and CD Rom."

Adelman said he hopes students will come to use the new library as a source of material and information. "So much can be accessed through electronic media," he explained.

Construction will be finished in three stages. The new apartments should be finished around the end of December. The synagogue and mikvah will be finished around February, and the renovations to the older part of the building, including the pizzeria, around March or April.

JEFFREY J. DIGIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN STAFF

Oops! Forgot to plug it in!
Sophomore engineering major Brian Huppi analyzes his differentiating circuit in his lab. Huppi particularly enjoys operational amplifier design.

Funds used for multicultural groups

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

The Chancellor's Commission on Civility and Human Relations Forum convened Wednesday afternoon at the University of Massachusetts Campus Center — bringing together various groups and programs on campus that encourage multicultural, "bridge-building" activities within the community.

These programs include the Foreign Language Resource Center's Translation Center, the Everywoman Center's Women of Color program and the University Advising Center, which was formerly known as CASIAC.

A total of $10,000 awarded by the Chancellor was split between "programs which bring together members of two or more communities or constituencies in educational activities and encourage mutual respect," according to the Commission.

Most organizations receive between $250 to $1500, allowing the Commission to serve a wide variety of interests.

The forum provides these programs the opportunity to share ideas and enhance their abilities to function effectively, benefiting all of those involved with diversity issues.

The University Foreign Language Resource Center, through the Commission, has been able to improve its Translation Center, allowing international and bilingual students access to multilingual word processing.

The Everywomen Center discussed their newly expanded Women of Color Program, which began in the fall of 1993.

"There needs to be more collaboration between women in the ALANA community," said a representative of the center.

Turn to FUNDS, page 3

UMass awards environment scholar

By Elsa Allen
Collegian Correspondent

Raymond S. Bradley, head of the University's geology and geography department, discussed "Climatic Changes: Present, Past, and Future." The University of Massachusetts Annual Distinguished Faculty Series sponsored the lecture Wednesday evening.

At the end of his lecture, Bradley was presented with the Chancellor's Medal for Distinguished Service at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Bradley received this award, the highest honor given to a faculty member, for the outstanding contributions he has made, not only to the University, but globally as well.

Bradley analyzed the "natural archives" that he and other scientists use to guide themselves through the process of charting climate changes. These archives include historical documents, observations of variations in tree growth rings, and research of ice cores in Arctic regions.

The lecturer is an internationally recognized climatology expert who came to UMass in 1973. Bradley graduated from the University of Southampton in England, and then went on to earn a degree from the Institute of Arctic and Alpine Research at the University of Colorado.

He has served on the National Academy of Sciences Advisory Committee, the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration, the American and International Quarterary, and for the past seven years he has served as secretary for the Paleoclimate Committee. He was a delegate for the Bi-lateral Russian Agreement on the environment, and he served on the executive committee for the International geosphere and biosphere.

In his lecture, Bradley concentrated on the importance of past climate changes in determining future climates.

"By looking into the past, we are able to gauge the potential magnitude of future changes and tell whether they will be trivial or serious," he said. "It looks like they will be quite serious."

Bradley, who has served on several national and international commissions relating to climate and the environment, addressed whether global warming is actually occurring in the manner that people have been led to believe.

According to Bradley, temperatures have risen approximately half a degree Celsius in the past century. Bradley attributed this increase in temperatures, in part, to increased levels of carbon dioxide in the air, which is directly proportional to population increase.

Bradley also said he believes that we are on the upswing of a "mini-ice age" that occurred in the 17th century. By looking at past weather patterns, he theorized that over the next 10 to 15,000 years the earth will push towards warmer conditions, followed by an increase in glaciation.

Another cause of global warming that Bradley discussed was the planet's orbit. Changes in the orbit have played a major role in climate

Turn to BRADLEY, page 7

Newbury Comics

50 Main St. • Amherst, MA
256-8840

TOP 50 COMPACT DISCS ALWAYS ON SALE! INCLUDES . . .

Smashing Pumpkins
"Mellon Collie And The Infinite Sadness" $15.99CD
Radiohead
"The Bends" $8.99CD
Foo Fighters
"Foo Fighters" $10.88CD
Rancid
"And Out Come The Wolves" $9.99CD Garbage
"Garbage" $10.88CD
Dave Matthews Band
"Under The Table And Dreaming" $9.99CD
Sonic Youth
"Washing Machine" $9.99CD
Live
"Throwing Copper" $10.88CD
Marilyn Manson
"Smells Like Children" $9.99CD
Pulp Fiction Soundtrack $10.88CD

ALL REGULARLY PRICED T-SHIRTS $16.99 OR MORE ARE JUST $9.99 EACH!! INCLUDING . . .

- Filter
- Green Day
- Beastie Boys
- Foo Fighters
- Charlie's Angels

$5.99 SONY NICE PRICE SALE! INCLUDES . . .

Janis Joplin
"Greatest Hits"
Bruce Springsteen
"Greetings From Asbury Park"
Bob Dylan
"Highway 61 Revisited
Aerosmith
"Gems"
Clash
"Combat Rock"
The The
"Soul Mining"

Dr. Martens Air Wair ON SALE!

$69.99
Gibson 3 Eye Black Greasy

Gibson 8 Eye Black Greasy
$79.99

Sale Ends 11/29/95

Newbury Comics is on the Internet! http://www.newbury.com

$4.00 off
any compact disc*
(with coupon)
no double discounts • sale items excluded regularly priced $12.99 or more expires 11/29/95
854889

$4.00 off
any compact disc*
(with coupon)
no double discounts • sale items excluded
regularly priced $12.99 or more
expires 11/29/95
854889

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Nov. 17

Band-Aid — MASSPIRG is sponsoring a benefit concert at 7:30 p.m. in the Butterfield basement. The concert features Essex County Greenbelt, Clovis Point, and other mystery guests. Admission is $3 or three canned goods. Proceeds benefit the Food Bank of Western Mass. For more information contact 545-0199.

Sleep Out — MASSPIRG is sponsoring a sleep out on the Butterfield immediately following the Band-Aid Concert. Students are sponsored to sleep out in cardboard boxes. There will be a bonfire, with drum circle and "open stage."

Concert — UPC presents "311" with "Shootyz Groove" at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are $15 for UMass students and $16.50 for non-students. Tickets are available at Tix Unlimited, the Northampton Box Office, Strawberries, and For the Record.

GLBT Students of Color — A reception is being held for GLBT Students of Color in 120 Mary Lyon Residence Hall at 6 p.m. Food and beverages will be served. For more information contact Rosie at 545-0310.

Lecture — Kyre Mithranir, Reiki Master, will talk about the healing modality Reiki and how it can be used to heal, harmonize and balance your body, mind, spirit and emotions. Oasis, 63 Main St., Amherst, 7-9 p.m., free.

Meeting — There will be a Boricuas Unidos staff meeting at the Latin American Cultural Center at 5 p.m.

LBGA Dance — The LBGA will be holding a dance in Campus Center Room 1009 from 9 p.m.–1 a.m. Admission is $3.

Social Gathering — The Black Graduate Students Association is holding a social gathering in the Graduate Lounge from 6–8 p.m.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center. For more information call Utama at 256–8482.

Music — There will be a Bruce Springsteen listening session in the Graduate Lounge, Campus Center. Hear his new CD before you buy it, 5 people will win the full CD, refreshments served, 5 p.m.

Saturday, Nov. 18

Chinese Movie — The Conqueror (in Mandarin), Rm. 174– 176 Campus Center, 7 p.m.

Dance — Following Chinese movie, sponsored by Chinese Students & Scholars Association, dancing party is at 9 p.m. in the Graduate Lounge.

Concert — Punk/hardcore show in Van Meter including featured bands: H20, Showcase Showdown, Silent Majority, Sleepasaurus, Project Flatboy. $3 Van Meter residents, $4 everyone else. No backpacks, drugs or alcohol. ID required.

Astronomy — The Amherst Astronomy Association is sponsoring free public solar observing on the Amherst Town Common at 1 p.m., a planetarium show at the Amherst College Bassett Planetarium at 4 p.m., and observing at the Amherst College Wilder Observatory at 9 p.m.

Sunday, Nov. 19

Meeting — State Rep. Byron Rushing will discuss "Weld: A Libertarian Gingrinch" Sponsored by the Western Massachusetts Rainbow Coalition at 4:30-6:30 p.m. in the Parish House, 16 Spring Street, Amherst. For more information, call 256-8726 or 585-0806.

Study Group — The UMass Bolshevik Club and the Radical Student Union are sponsoring a study group on "Lenin and the Revolutionary Party," 5:30 p.m. in Campus Center Room 801.

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177–178. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

Campus Center Closings — During the Thanksgiving break, hotel and public areas will be open, retail and food areas will be closed. Access to floors, loading dock, and offices by those wishing to work can be accommodated by arrangement with Building Services at 545–1365 prior to Nov. 25.

Mediators — The Ombuds Office is accepting applications for the Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team. Training for this team will be Jan. 22–26, 1996. For more information, call 545–0867 or stop by 823 Campus Center. Applications are due by tomorrow.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587-9684.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five-College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10–11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8–10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323–6330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1–800–750– 2016; The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Campus Police Log

Family offenses/domestics
Nov. 14
There was a report of an argument between two individuals in Cashin Residence Hall.

Assist agency
Nov. 14
There was a storm drain plugged in Parking Lot 49. Physical Plant was called.
The power was out to the elevators on the 10th floor of the Campus Center.

Accident — Property Damage
Nov. 14
There was a two vehicle accident which was referred to the Amherst Police Department.

Medical emergency
Nov. 14
An individual with an allergic reaction was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

funds

continued from page 1

In September, the program sponsored "Voices Within," a series of lecture which included Judith Le Blance, a American Indian from the Caddo tribe in Oklahoma and a national organizer for the Communist Party.

The lectures also included faculty, students and activists from throughout the Pioneer Valley, focusing on issues which affect women of color.

The University Advising Center, formerly CASIAC, used Commission funding to produce a film for new students which outlines where they should seek academic advising and assistance upon arriving at UMass.

"We're always looking for new ways to provide for our students," said a center representative.

More informational films are in the works, according to the center — one aimed at parents of students and how they can stay involved with their children's college education.

The Center is, in addition, sponsoring several majors fairs, which bring together the University's sometimes overwhelming educational resources under one roof for curious students.

The student-run group Race Talks laid out their plans for the semester. The group, which sponsors a series of five lectures throughout the fall, assembled a panel of students and faculty to discuss issues such as the Million Man March, affirmative action, and women in the media.

Their next forum, on Nov. 20, entitled "Environmental Racism," will consist of a panel of UMass professors discussing the disproportionate amount of pollution found in minority neighborhoods.

The Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies will continue to explore diversity through film with Commission support.

Last spring, the program sponsored their first annual Multicultural Film Festival, showing movies from around the globe.

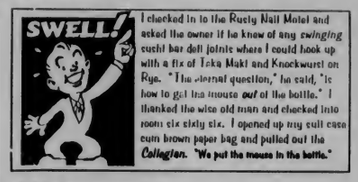
Many of the movies portrayed the lives of indigenous people, such as those in the Amazon River Basin.

"The focus in the mainstream media does not represent most ALANA students, said a program representative, necessitating a festival such a this one.

The Department of Education continues to explore multiculturalism in the classroom via Commission grants.

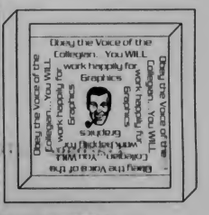
Education 210, Social Diversity in Education, seeks to bring to harsh realities of racial and ethnic conflict into a academic setting, where ALANA students can find a means for support with each other and construct positive relationships with fellow classmates of European descent.

"We are learning a great deal about the way we have to adapt our teaching," to serve all UMass students, said a department representative.



I checked in to the Rusty Nail Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging sushi bar deli joints where I could hook up with a fix of Teka Maki and Knockwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the mouse out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and checked into room six sixty six. I opened up my suit case cum brown paper bag and pulled out the Collegian. "We put the mouse in the bottle."

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS
Call Theatre For Showtimes
POINTER
GOLD DIGGERS
IT TAKES TWO*
THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT*
NOW AND THEN
NAMPSHIRE
Call Theatre For Showtimes
ACE VENTURA
GET SHORTY
GOLDENEYE*
HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS*
COPY CAT



A DRINK SO TOUGH, even the bottle has NO NECK.
CIDER JACK HARD CIDER

PLAY ONE HOUR AND GET THE SECOND HOUR FREE WITH THIS AD...
Great food and cocktails. Open 7 days 'til 2 a.m.
Play must be completed by 10 p.m. One ad per table per night.
885 Riverdale Street, W. Springfield MA (413) 731-POOL
Boston - Worcester - W. Springfield, - Warwick - Danbury - Fairfield

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Happy B'day Cards
Earrings
Rings Bracelets
T-Shirts
Posters
Candles
Chains Incense
Chinese Shoes
India Print Bedspreads
Sweaters
Dresses
Area Rugs
Socks Leather Sole
Baskets
Skirts
Mugs
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Porn protestors inhibit freedoms

They were out again last Friday, with that staid old prude Calvin Coolidge looking down on them from the bridge that bears his name, for another meaningless exercise in democracy. Across from the Adults Only Video Store, five college students lined up, waved at cars, held up the usual placards with the predictable one-liners, and then went home. A few of them probably caught colds; that was the only difference made.

Five or six years ago, in a column of mine dealing with the then-controversial censoring of the 2 Live Crew in Broward County, Fla., I published a throwaway bit of polemic, to the effect that censorship is an attempt to draw a legal line between Michelangelo, Mapplethorpe and Marilyn Chambers. While I'm sure most of last Friday's demonstrators are all for bullwhips up the butt, or Christ on the cross and submerged in urine, Lady Marilyn and Ron Jeremy don't live up to their self-declared "feminist" standard.

> I wonder if these same demonstrators will turn out the next time activist/performer Annie Sprinkle comes to town and bares her breasts on stage.
>
> Peter Orvetti

Last time I checked, the feminist movement was about the right of women to have choices in society: the right to work, the right to equal pay, the right to serve in the military, and yes, the right to publish blurry photos of your primary sex characteristics in "specialty" magazines. Though those twin arbiters of freedom, Andrea Dworkin and Katherine MacKinnon, might disagree, pornography is part of feminism.

Friday's rally was an ill-considered move, brought on more by passions than by consideration of the issues involved. In the earliest days of the women's movement, critics said it was unnatural, if not outright unholy, for women to seek equality. It was scandalous for women to show off half a calf at the beach in the days before World War II. The bikini was considered the first sign of the end of the world. Women were called perverts for demanding legalized birth control.

They were sluts if they needed the right to an abortion; they shouldn't have been having sex to begin with. And, in the past 20 years, many were sick and twisted for openly stating that, actually, they'd much prefer to engage in conjugal acts with members of their own gender.

I wonder if these same demonstrators will turn out the next time activist/performer Annie Sprinkle comes to town and bares her breasts on stage. Will they storm any college gallery that hangs up a photo of a nude form?

Stuck in the middle of this mess is the man who owns the neighboring Polish-American Cafe. Although not on the A- list of eateries for five-college students, the cafe is a favorite of the region's sizeable Polish community. Now, because the spot next door was leased to a guy who rents movies, the local government has re-routed traffic from one entrance, to make it a bit more difficult to get to the Adults Only store. The cafe owner estimates he will lose 60 percent of his business.

So much for free speech. The government hasn't actually prohibited the opening of the store. They're just making it impossible to get there. And an uninvolved party, who has owned a long-standing business, might have to shut down. Why? Because Adults Only makes people uncomfortable, and Hadley wants residents to feel safe.

This is another example of government protecting people from their rights.

If you don't like Rush Limbaugh, you don't listen. If you don't like "Friends," you don't watch. If you don't like cigarettes, you don't smoke; you don't drive down to North Carolina and hold up a banner. You ignore the things you don't like, and demonstrate by withholding purchase. There is no reason to actively try to disrupt the rights of other people who happen to disagree with you.

Basically, here's what happened: A businessman rented some space to rent out movies. He did this, not because he's sick or depraved, but because people rent porno. Sex is business. (And, if local residents didn't get it there, they'd get it in Holyoke or Springfield or by mail. Making Adults Only close down wouldn't stop the flow of porn to the Valley; it would just send the money elsewhere.)

The town couldn't stop him from exercising his legal right to rent movies, so they changed the traffic patterns, hurting bystanders. Then, the college students came out to rant.

One of the Dead White Guys that today's students seem to hate so much, an uptight, repressed prude, no less, actually is the best defender of the Adults Only Video Store:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." — James Madison

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Showdown at the White House

It's like a scene out of some cheesy western. The two big guns in town, walking to the center of a deserted street, staring each other down. They each hold their hands perilously over their revolvers, twitching their fingers. They fix their steely glares on one another, each daring the other to blink first. Then, suddenly... they turn around, walk away, refuse to talk to each other anymore, and shut the government down.

Well, OK. Maybe it's not exactly like a western, but the current battle over the budget between the president and the GOP has gone beyond simple bickering and name calling and aspires to be turned into something much more operatic.

Neither side dares to cave in, neither of them wants to appear as the weaker of the two. Each hoping to be the last titan standing, compromise be damned!

It breaks down like this. The government's fiscal year ends at the end of October. The latest a budget can be submitted is the middle of November, because the government can't spend any money unless it knows exactly where the money is supposed to go. All along, the President has said he will not approve a budget from Congress in the proposed form. According to him, the cuts in social programs and the tax breaks for the wealthy go too far. All along the GOP has said there won't be any compromise, take it or leave it.

See where the problem is?

The GOP budget proposal would have the budget balanced in seven years, but with drastic cuts in Medicare, Medicaid, student loans and other social programs, as well as providing a large tax cut for higher income Americans.

The White House proposal would have the budget balanced in nine years, and leave most programs either intact or with much smaller cuts made to them.

But, since compromise is out of the question, the only thing either side can agree on is that they're taking their bats and balls and going home. So, for now we get to see Newt Gingrich and Bob Dole standing side by side like Batman and Robin proclaiming to be the heroes in this little spat. Not the 1995 Nautilized Val Kilmer/Chris O'Donnell model, but the old, graying, fat model who winds up signing black-and-white glossy photos of the Batmobile at auto shows.

The fight isn't about two years. The fight isn't about whether or not the budget needs to be balanced. The fight is about pride. Who gets to save face, who doesn't look like they caved in to the "enemy."

So, in the interest in public service, I am unveiling for the first time anywhere, my plan to keep the moolah pouring into the government coffers. A series of new and reasonable taxes and programs designed to raise the cash flow without raising blood pressures. Here we go:

Church Tax: You want to raise money? Tax the churches... they take in plenty. Establish a reasonable tax based on land held, donations received, and profits made from such "wholesome" activities as bingo night.

Churches themselves could offset the costs by having devout members cough up change every time they transgress. Ten cents for taking the Lord's name in vain, etc.

This way, legitimate houses of worship would be contributing their fair share and the practice of establishing a "church" in order to dodge taxes would be virtually eliminated.

If the churches find this unreasonable, the compromise should be that either they pay the taxes, or, stay the hell out of politics altogether. No more endorsing candidates and no more lobbying. It's a win-win scenario.

Pretention Tax: A tax levied on every pretentious action or possession. Car phones, little pony tails on men, vanity plates, ground effects, fashion shows and a truckload of other activities and baubles are up for inclusion.

Just think, every time a supermodel bitches about how tough her job is, she'd have to cough up a check. It would be fabulous, darling.

Bar Song Tax: A tax that would be collected from anyone who either plays or sings along to any of the following tired, overplayed, songs in a crowded bar or club.

"Paradise by the Dashboard Light," "I Will Survive," "Son of a Preacher Man," "New York New York," "Piano Man," "Play That Funky Music White Boy," "Freebird," "I Heard it Through the Grapevine," "Stairway to Heaven," "Another Brick in the Wall," "Hey Jude," "Friends in Low Places" or "Margaritaville."

A lesser tax would be imposed on people who just requested the song from a DJ or simply hummed it.

National Lottery: This would be big. Two bucks a throw, and the jackpot would be determined by the number of tickets sold. You would have to pick six numbers out of 4000, and the winner would collect half of all the money collected. We could call it "Super Duper Mega Wowza Big- Time Bucks" and make a fortune.

That's all there is to it. Put these plans into effect and watch the loot roll in. Until both sides decide to grow up and compromise like the government was designed to do in the first place, these serve as an adequate back-up. And remember, I'm only here to help.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Opinion/Editorial

Letters to the Editor

Gay pride justified

To the Editor:

Several weeks ago, at about 1:30 a.m., three friends and I decided to go to Denny's after hitting a club in Springfield. When we got to the restaurant, we walked in and waited to be seated. People at a couple of tables noticed us walk in and each went right back to their business.

A hostess came and seated us not far from the front door, right next to a table with three or four jockish looking guys (I don't remember exactly how many). As soon as we sat down, we started to talk about all kinds of things, ordinary things. Anyone listening, however, could easily tell from our conversation that we were all gay. It was after the table next to us started eavesdropping on our conversation that a little incident arose.

After someone at our table said something, I heard the guys next to us laugh and then get silent. I knew they were continuing to listen, but paid no attention (or at least acted like I paid no attention). Several times, I could tell that their conversation revolved around listening in on ours, then slinging jokes amongst themselves.

I've been in situations like this before; they can be uneasy, but I'm used to them. After 15 minutes of this, they finished and got up to leave. As the biggest of them stood up, I heard him bellow, "Good night, girls." I turned to see a large guy with a football build and a snide "you fags" smile on his face. I immediately responded, "yeah whatever, idiot," to which he responded, "Don't start with me or I'll pound your ass into the ground." I kept my mouth shut and watched them leave, thinking to myself just who started that anyway.

Sometime last spring, my boyfriend and I went to the Peter Pan terminal in Noho where he was to catch his ride home to Springfield. As his bus pulled in, we walked towards it, talking as we usually do. As people began to board, we said our goodbyes and gave each other a little kiss and hug. Just as we finished our hug, I heard some tough-guy nearby scream, "Oh my God, he just kissed him." The tough-guy then turned to me and asked, "Did you kiss him? What are you, a couple of fags?" I responded, "Yes, I kissed him, and yeah, I'm a fag."

He took that as his cue to raise the stakes, and threatened to "go with me" and "kick my face in." I wanted to keep my face in one piece, so I did the best I could to lower the tension a little and walk away.

Collegian columnist Evan Young recently submitted an editorial in which he cried about the indignation he feels as a straight male having to tolerate Gay Pride marches.

So Evan, when was the last time you had a gay man confront you and threaten to kick your face in because you're straight, or because you dared to hug or kiss your girlfriend in public?

If anything like this ever happened to you, you'd appreciate a little show of public support every now and then to lift your spirits, too. Incidents like the ones I described above happen to us all the time. Pride marches show everyone that the same public that brings us bigots and bashers can also bring us supporters.

The next time any of you angry, oppressed straight guys gets bashed by a group of gays, I'll be the first in line to help you organize a straight pride march.

Michael Westermann
Northampton

Prison sponsors list corrected

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Prison Awareness Week committee, I would like to thank all of the sponsors of Prison Awareness Week for their invaluable assistance. Contrary to the abbreviated list published by the Collegian on Thursday, we read the names of sponsoring organizations before each event.

Twice, I asked Collegian editor Matt Vautour to print a correction, but no correction was ever printed.

The sponsors were: UMass Radical Student Union, Maoist Internationalist Movement, Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, American Friends Service Committee, Western Mass. Prison Issues Group, Boricuas Unidos, Black Mass Communication Project, Graduate Employees Organization Local 2322 United Auto Workers, Social Thought and Political Economy, Gray Panthers, Cape Verdean Student Alliance, SAKE, Malcolm X Cultural Center, Black Student Union and the Office of ALANA Affairs. Assistance was also provided by a grant from the Student Government Association.

There were many errors in the article about Dr. Allyn Rickett's lecture about "Thought Reform in Revolutionary China." Most significantly, in 1951, Dr. Rickett was justly arrested and sentenced as a spy. It is wishful anti- communism to listen to Dr. Rickett's talk and walk away thinking he was framed. Rickett most definitely did do it, and four years in a Maoist prison taught Rickett spying is wrong.

Chris Johnson
Maoist Internationalist Movement

Distinguished visitor not welcome

To the Editor:

When the Distinguished Visitor Program committee invites Charles Murray, co-author of The Bell Curve, to this campus, it legitimizes and in fact promotes to the student community of this University dishonest, patently fraudulent, pseudo-scientific "scholarship" in violation of the most fundamental responsibility of institutions of higher learning.

By agreeing to publicly debate Charles Murray on the alleged genetic intellectual disability of black people, Dr. Alvin Puissant of Harvard University gives credence to an assertation long since rejected by responsible scholars worldwide as having no basis whatsoever in scientific fact.

To assert that there is something to debate on the idea of genetic or racial superiority or superiority is to make us question and draw us away from the all-important task of ridding ourselves of attitudes and feelings of superiority or inferiority. This is what the Harry Bradley Foundation paid Charles Murray $500,000 to do. The University's Distinguished Visitors Program should not be aiding and abetting this objective.

David G. Du Bois, Visiting Professor
Journalism/Afro-American Studies

Leader deserves all respect

To the Editor:

Yitzhak Rabin's recent assassination has forced me to re- evaluate my identity as a Jew. I'm not a religious Jew, in fact I don't even believe in God. But regardless of belief, I am an ethnic Jew and I don't deny my identity. It was interesting for me to learn, as a Jew, about Yitzhak Rabin's life and all of the people he exiled and slaughtered in Hussein Ibish's Nov. 10 article, "The Life and Crimes of General Yitzhak Rabin."

Before last Sunday, when I heard the report on public radio, I knew little about Rabin, other than he was the Prime Minister of Israel. Now I know the truth, I think. While I respect Hussein's right to think and write whatever he pleases, I feel this article is exactly what the Jewish population does not need to read at this juncture. The monster Rabin may or may not have been is irrelevant now. He's dead and was killed by a Jew.

I just don't understand how members of a minority group that has been persecuted for thousands of years can forget the importance of unity amongst its own people. How often do we hear minority leaders tell us to "be strong" and to "come together" as members of an oppressed or disadvantaged group? We hear them every day, but we just don't listen. It scares me to realize that it took something like this to wake me up. And it scares me even more that there are people who are still asleep.

I see my people tearing apart at the seams, and although we are a people identified by our religion, it's not about religion, it's about terror. Israelis are terrified of losing their homeland again. Some Israelis, like Amir, are so scared that they are unwilling to compromise with anyone, be it Palestinians, Arabs, Muslims or Jews. What will this homeland be like if its people are divided? Who will its people be if they kill each other?

Let this be your wake up call. Realize where you're from, regardless of who you are.

Andrew Gerard Hadley

Alums offer support for Bulger

To the Editor:

I have recently been following accounts in the news regarding the selection of the next president of the University of Massachusetts.

I am a 1983 graduate of the University, a certified public accountant and a member of the Connecticut Bar. I am currently working as Assistant Counsel at Pratt & Whitney in East Hartford. Although it's been several years since graduation, I remain keenly interested in the future of the University.

Our University system is at a critical juncture. As our society rapidly moves toward two distinct privileged and disadvantaged segments, access to high quality, affordable higher education becomes ever more important. Yet, at the same time, a growing shortfall of financial resources available to support public higher education is occurring because of higher operating costs and fiscal constraints at the state and national levels. The next University president must be able to address this condition.

Sen. Bulger has clearly and capably demonstrated his support and appreciation of higher education over the years. He has also shown unparalleled effectiveness in forging compromise and forming majorities in support of education and other causes in which he believes. As president, his commitment and leadership skills would continue to advance the cause of higher education outside the University system, and at the same time, allow him to support the growth and development of the UMass student within that system.

Theodore M. Adams '83
Windsor, CT

Arts & Living

Boys in plaid coming to Pearl St.

COURTESY JOHN FALLS

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones will be patrolling Pearl St. on Saturday and Sunday night.

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones will take the stage Saturday and Sunday night at Pearl Street this weekend for an unprecedented two-night stand of Ska-core madness.

On tour in support of their fifth release (third on Mercury Records) Question The Answers, the Bosstones will be the first act ever booked for a two nights in a row at Pearl Street.

The Boston octet has always been a favorite on their home turf of New England, winning over a diverse range of fans with their mixture of hardcore, punk and ska. Their first two albums, Devil's Night Out and More Noise and Other Disturbances, released on the Boston-based Taang! label, gained the Bosstones the fan following and momentum that they needed to attract the attention of Mercury records.

The band's first major label release was a bit of a departure for the band, but a sign of things to come. Ska- Core the Devil and More was an EP that showcased some of the band's harder edged influences, and the first full length to follow, Don't Know How to Party, seemed like a natural progression.

The latest album, Question the Answers, has cranked up the horns but managed to keep the guitars going at a level that delivers the usual high intensity music that fans are accustomed to.

A live Bosstones show, however, is where the band really makes its mark. Concerts are usually exercises in mayhem, with bodies dancing and slamming everywhere and concert- goers lining up to get on stage. Once on stage, anything can happen from the usual, (stage diving) to the unusual, (lead singer Dicky Barrett letting you sing along, or even sing by yourself while he leaps into the crowd).

Past shows at Pearl Street have featured the throwing of CDs, and the band's trademark plaid jackets to fans and Barrett climbing to the top of the PA amplifiers and leaping into the crowd. But while the stage show of the band may be unpredictable, the one thing that is certain is that most in the crowd will leave the venue exhausted.

In the genre of ska, where so much ground has already been tread upon, the Bosstones have managed to come up with a fresh original blend of many diverse styles.

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones will play Pearl St. in Northampton Saturday & Sunday at 6:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. respectively. For more info, call (413) 584-7771.

Concert unveils new marimba

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Between the unveiling of a brand new five-octave marimba and the recording of a CD, members of the University of Massachusetts' music ensembles have been keeping busy.

Yesterday night, the Trombone Choir and the UMass Marimba Ensemble joined together to perform a full-length concert at Bezanson hall. The program included the unveiling of the new marimba.

"We have been waiting many years for this day," said Peter Tanner, director of the Marimba Ensemble. "Due to budgetary constraints we have been unable to purchase equipment."

Thanks to a grant from the Eleanor Naylor Dana Charitable Trust, secured by Music & Dance Faculty members Joanne and Peter Tanner, the eight-foot marimba will become an integral part of the ensemble, lending a new musical dimension by virtue of the instrument's extended low range.

Members of the University's Wind Ensemble are in for a rare experience: they will record a composition for release by Albany Records.

For the past several weeks, the Ensemble has been rehearsing "Tears" — a composition by David Maslanka. Maslanka will pay a visit to the University today to work with the ensemble and on Monday, under the direction of Professor Malcom W. Rowell Jr, will record the piece.

"There is no better way for students to experience creativity than to work in rehearsal directly with the composer," Rowell stated. "Our students will be able to experience the composer's mind and thought process. There is no substitute for this direct contact."

This isn't the first time the Wind Ensemble has been recorded in 1991 — the group produced a compact disk with two major works by Maslanka, "A Child's Garden of Dreams" and "Symphony No. 8."

Although the Ensemble has nearly perfected the performance of the work, Rowell believes that rehearsals with Maslanka will take the piece to a new level. In addition to working with the Wind Ensemble, Maslanka plans to coach student composers as well as meet with a variety of music classes and ensembles.

The New England premiere of "Tears" will take place on Sunday, Nov. 19 in the Fine Arts Center Hall. The concert, which begins at 3 p.m. will also feature the University's Symphony Band.

The highlight of the band's program will be the world premiere of John de Meij's "Symphony No. 2: 'Lord of the Rings.'" This major composition contains five movements each illustrating a personage or an important episode from the J.R.R. Tolkien book. Followers of the trilogy will be interested to hear how a composer uses musical motifs, instrumentation, rhythm and tempo to create musical description of Gandalf the Wizard, Lothlorien, the Elvenwood and the Hobbits.

Tickets to the Wind Ensemble Concert are $8 for the general public, $4 for students, elders and children UMass students are admitted free with a valid ID Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Fine Arts Box Office or at the door on the evening of the concert. For more information, please call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

COURTESY JOE KUSHNICK

The UMass Marimba ensemble (seen here) will join the University's Symphony Orchestra in a concert Sunday night.

COLLEGIAN DRIVER WANTED TO DELIVER ON CAMPUS.
• NEED CAR
• CALL RYAN AT
545-3500

When you're not hitting the books, hit the slopes at Stratton Mountain.

Stratton has sensational savings for college students throughout the winter and spring semesters. Just present your valid college I.D. to get mid-week lift tickets for just $20. And save $5 on weekends and holidays. And Stratton Village has loads of restaurants, pubs and live entertainment right at the mountain, so you'll have an amazing time off the slopes, too. Do your field work at Stratton Mountain this semester. Your Econ professor will be proud.

For more details, call 1-800-STRATTON. Or visit Stratton on the Internet at http://www.genghis.com/stratton.htm

Stratton VERMONT
The mountain will move you.

Extraordinary Resorts by Intrawest
Blackcomb Panorama Stratton Tremblant

SUB to get funky with diverse rock, rap & reggae sounds of 311

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

311 started their musical career with a bang — their first gig was opening up for Fugazi. Since that fabled night they have risen to be considered one of the hottest live bands around. Based out of Los Angeles, this quintet has successfully fused "hard rock, rap and reggae into a potent musical cocktail." Tonight, UPC brings the band to the Student Union Ballroom for what will certainly be an exciting show.

Originally from Nebraska, the band's influences are as diverse as their sound, ranging from Bob Marley to Nat King Cole to the Bad Brains — quite an interesting combination to say the least. This has helped the band generate a sound that has made them stand out in the rock world.

In 1993 the band released their debut record simply entitled, Music. This was followed by Grassroots and their current self titled release 311. Lead singer Nick Hexum commented on the titles of the album, "Our first record was entitled Music, [because] our goal was to take rap and make it musical. We called the second one Grassroots mainly because we wanted to grow up slowly, the right way, from the ground level up."

Since moving from Nebraska to the more vibrant city of Los Angeles, the band has been fully engulfed in the Southern California way of life. Quickly they have become a hit band amongst the surfing and skateboard crowds, but they have also been embraced by a much more diverse audience. Hexum stated, "Our audience is pretty much a bunch of people just like ourselves; meaning that they fit into any specific category. You can find a little bit of everything at our shows."

Tonight's show at the Student Union Ballroom will certainly bring out the best in a lot of folks. Be prepared for a night with steaming tunes filled with distinct sounds of reggae, rock, funk and rap. If this was not enough, Shootyz Groove will be opening up the show.

311 and Shootyz Groove play the Student Union Ballroom tonight at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15 for UMass students and $16.50 for the general public and are available at Tix Unlimited and the Northampton Box Office. Call UPC at 545-2892 for more information.

COURTESY VARNETY ARTISTS

The funky sounds of 311 (seen here) and Shootyz Groove will be featured in a concert tonight at the Student Union Ballroom.

Political espionage played out in Chess

By Matt Sinclair
Collegian Staff

CHESS
Bowker Auditorium
Nov. 16

The University of Massachusetts' Theater Guild premiered its latest musical production, Chess, Wednesday night, at Bowker Auditorium. Based on the original Broadway show and featuring music by Abba men Benny Andersson and Bjorn Ulvaeus, the musical was set within the context of chess rivalry, juxtaposed against a background of intense Cold War paranoia.

The principle theme was romantic and became interesting when Florence, the manager of American chess champion Freddie Trumper, starts to get involved with Russian arch- chess rival Anatoly Sorievsky.

It is a classic scenario of East versus West and the game of chess is the medium through which this confrontation takes place. The paranoia is so intense it becomes blatant satire. Each side refuses to budge an inch on issues which could bias one side against the other.

The Chess pit orchestra was impressive, as were the singing performances of the ensemble and many of the leading cast. Special mention must go to Amy Allred as Florence Vassy; her skills were considerable as the musical appeared to revolve around her.

Humorous characters that never failed to amuse the audience included Elsie Sara Schild as Andrea Walters, and Donald Marshall as Ivan Molokov. Andrea is Freddie's PR front–woman who manipulates him for her own ends. It becomes apparent that she is working for a government agency, therefore giving precedence to the political implications of the changing relations between the characters. Molokov is Andrea's Russian equivalent, likewise stopping at nothing to ensure political ends are met.

Chess is a heady blend of tragedy, romance, and above all comedy, these features being faithfully recreated by an energetic and enthusiastic cast, helped along by a supportive audience. The Theater Guild put on an admirable show involving considerable effort and dedication.

Chess will play tonight and tomorrow night at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets are $6 general public and $4 for UMass students and are available at the Fine Arts Box Office or at the door.

RESCHEDULING OF FINAL EXAMS ON OFFICIAL SNOW DAYS

FALL 1995

In order to reschedule final examinations in case of snow, two alternate exam periods have been devised. They are 6:30 p.m. and 8:45 p.m. each exam day. The use of these alternative periods in the event of closings is outlined below. In addition, the academic calendar includes Saturday, December 23, as an official snow day in the event that the University is closed December 22. This policy goes into effect ONLY if the University is officially closed. The snow day "hot line" is 545-3630. If the University is open, all exams are expected to take place as scheduled. Each faculty member should inform his or her class of the planned time and location of the rescheduled final exam in the event of a snow day. All rescheduled exams will be held in the same location as published in the final exam schedule.

If the University is closed until 11:00 a.m.

8:00 am	rescheduled to 6:30 pm same day
10:30 am	rescheduled to 8:45 pm same day
1:30 pm	held as originally scheduled
4:00 pm	held as originally scheduled

If the University is closed all day but open in the evening:

8:00 am	rescheduled to 6:30 pm same day
10:30 am	rescheduled to 8:45 pm same day
1:30 pm	rescheduled to 6:30 pm next exam day
4:00 pm	rescheduled to 8:45 pm next exam day
except
1:30 pm Dec. 22	rescheduled to 8:00 am Dec. 23
4:00 pm Dec. 22	rescheduled to 10:30 am Dec. 23

If the University is closed all afternoon and all evening:

8:00 am	held as originally scheduled
10:30 am	held as originally scheduled
1:30 pm	rescheduled to 6:30 pm next exam day
4:00 pm	rescheduled to 8:45 pm next exam day
except
1:30 pm Dec. 22	rescheduled to 8:00 am Dec. 23
4:00 pm Dec. 22	rescheduled to 10:30 am Dec. 23

If the University is closed all day and all evening:

8:00 am	rescheduled to 6:30 pm next exam day
10:30 am	rescheduled to 8:45 pm next exam day
1:30 pm	rescheduled to 6:30 pm exam day after next
4:00 pm	rescheduled to 8:45 pm exam day after next
except
1:30 pm Dec. 21	rescheduled to 8:00 am Dec. 23
4:00 pm Dec. 21	rescheduled to 10:30 am Dec. 23
8:00 am Dec. 22	rescheduled to 8:00 am Dec. 23
10:30 am Dec. 22	rescheduled to 10:30 am Dec. 23
1:30 pm Dec. 22	rescheduled to 1:30 pm Dec. 23
4:00 pm Dec. 22	rescheduled to 4:00 pm Dec. 23

EMERGENCY CLOSING POLICY
AMHERST CAMPUS

Closing Options *	Delayed Opening Until 11:00 am	Closed All Day	Closed During Day	Cancellation of Evening Activities
Watch or Listen...	Starting at 6:00 am	Starting at 6:00 am	When decided	Starting at 2:00 pm
When	STAY TUNED TO YOUR RADIO FOR ADDITIONAL INFORMATION
To	Amherst (WHCR WMUA WRNX WYTT) Brattleboro (WTSA) Greenfield (WHAI WRSI) WGAM) Hartford (WTIC WRCH) Northampton (WHMP) Orange (WCAT) Pittsfield (WBEC) Springfield (WHYN WACE WAQY WMAS WGGB-TV WMLP-TV) Ware (WARE) Worcester (WTAG) Campus Dorms (HSCN) (See alphabetical listing below for frequency numbers)
What will be affected	Classes Day Care Offices Activities Textbook Annex TOC Restaurant/Lounge Meanings University Store Munchy Store Continuing Education Bluewall Hatch Snacks Bars at Physical Plant Whitmore and Hampden
What won't be affected (Designated ESSENTIAL PERSONNEL will report to work)	Dining Commons Health Services Hotel Police/Security Coffee Shop Physical Plant Conference Services University Operator Other areas as pre-designated (consult your Department Head)
Athletics, Fine Arts, and Mullins Center	Athletic Fine Arts and Mullins Center events will take place as scheduled unless a separate announcement is made on local radio stations Athletics Information: Sports Information Hot Line 545-2439 Fine Arts Information: 545-2511 545-0900 or 545-0460 Mullins Center Information: 545-3001
Bus Service	Buses will run unless announced separately on local radio stations Call 545-1633 for recorded message
Library Academic Calendar and Intersession	Same as University
Exam period	Delayed Opening Until 11:00 am	The Library will make every effort to open Call Library Hours Hot Line 545-0414
Sat/Sun/holiday	Listen to Radio or call Library Hours Hot Line 545-0414
Information	Call Emergency Closing Hot Line 545-3630 or watch Housing Service Cable Network (HSCN)

* If there is no vertical line, the information applies for each option.

PARKING SNOW POLICY FOR 12/1 TO 4/1 OR REVERSE

AM				FM
WACE	730	WHMP	1400	WAQY	102.1
WAQY	1800	WHYN	560	WBEC	105.5
WARE	1250	WMAS	1450	WCAT	99.9
WBEC	1420	WTAG	580	WFCR	88.5
WCAT	700	WTIC	1080	WHAI	94.3
WGAM	1520	WTSA	1450	WHCN	105.9
WMAI	1240	WTTT	1430	WHMP	99.3
				WHYN	93.1
				WMAS	94.7
				WMUA	91.1
				WRNX	100.9
				WRSI	95.3
				WSRS	96.1
				WTIC	96.5
				WTSA	96.7

WGGB-TV Channel 40 WMLP-TV Channel 22

PARKING SNOW POLICY
AMHERST CAMPUS
In Effect From 12/1/95 to 4/1/96

The Amherst Campus Parking Snow Policy affects OVERNIGHT parking (1:00 A.M. to 7:00 A.M.) and parking during a SNOW EMERGENCY CLOSING period.

OVERNIGHT PARKING:

PARKING ALLOWED

Lot 24 Lot 42 Lot 25 (north of roadway to E Lot only)
Lot 27 Lot 52 Lot 32 (west of Lincoln Ave. only)
Lot 30 Purple Lots Lot 43 (including Thatcher Way (except at meters))
Lot 41 Yellow Lots Lot 46 (except at meters)

PARKING ALLOWED - ONLY WITH APPROPRIATE PERMIT

Lot 21 Lot 50 North Village
Lot 29 Lot 54 Lincoln Apts
Lot 47 University Apts Any posted reserved space

PARKING ALLOWED - ONLY WHEN AMBER LIGHTS NOT FLASHING

Lot 62 Lot 63 Lot 65

PARKING NOT ALLOWED

Lot 31 Lot 64 Lot 25 (south of the roadway to E lot)
Lot 33 Lot 66 Lot 26 (except by special permit only)
Lot 34 Lot 67 Lot 32 (east of Lincoln Ave. only)
Lot 40 Lot 71 any campus roadway (including Southwest horseshoe)
Lot 45 any parking meter

SNOW EMERGENCY PARKING -- ESSENTIAL PERSONNEL:

During a snow emergency closing period, essential personnel who report to work may only park in the following areas:

Lot 21 (west of Southwest)
Lot 26 (west of Physical Plant and north of roadway to E lot only)
Lot 31 (north of Engineering and Lederle Graduate Research Center)
Lot 32 and 34 (south of Whitmore and SOM)
Lot 62 (south of Morrill Science)

SUGGESTIONS/IDEAS FOR PARKING "SMART" ON A SNOW DAY:

1 Use the UMass bus service
2 Car pool rides whenever possible
3 Walk if possible
4 Have someone drop you off
5 If space is not available in your assigned lot, go to either Lot 25 or E Lot (both west of Physical Plant). During snow conditions, it is not possible to guarantee normal or close-by space will be available.
6 If you receive a parking ticket and believe it was improperly issued, you may appeal it at the Ticket Processing Office within 21 days from the date issued.

All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu© knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!! DAILY COLLEGIAN...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

1177 N. Pleasant Street
North Amherst (3 minutes from UMASS)
549-4555
muddy duck cafè
Dinner & Cafe Menus:
Delicious Rotisserie
CHICKEN, DUCK, and TURKEY
...vegetarian to grilled fish to Hamburgers...
Thurs., Fri., Sat. Cafe Menu 'til Midnight Bar 'til 1am
We Want To Be Your Special Late Night Place
NEW HOURS
DINNER
Tues., Wed. & Sun 5-9 pm
Thurs., Fri., Sat 5-10 pm
SUNDAY BRUNCH
10 am - 2pm
Fine Selection of Wines, Beer, Microbrews & Frosted Mugs

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Now Only Local Showing Thru Nov. 23
Curtain Daily 7 & 9
The New Comedy from Woody Allen
...and the goofiness is almost magical.
"Mira Sorvino Is A Perfect Fit: she squeezes into her role as if it were a pair of hot pants...she is too much fun to miss."
MIGHTY APHRODITE
ACADEMY...MUSIC
NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

WHAT NEXT
AFTER THE FINAL FINAL?
RELAX
WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOUR CAREER
The Monster Board Is An Eye Opener.
The Ultimate Career Site On The Web.
Conduct a job search, post your resume, even apply on-line in minutes ... all free!
No Pen. No Paper. No Postage. Just sit back and click.
What could be easier? Or more worthwhile?
The Monster Board
Find Your Future Online With The Monsters!
http://www.monster.com pay attention to life ... share what you find ... make noise ... move on ROAR
to detect and serve the new leaders of this world
http://www.monster.com/roar/Roar.html
Because The Job Market Is Scary Without Them

Women's Gym signs national recruit

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

One of the nation's top recruits in women's gymnastics has chosen Massachusetts as her college of choice, University of Massachusetts coach Dave Kuzara announced yesterday.

Mandy Mosby, out of Brookwood High School in Lilburn, Georgia, has signed a National Letter of Intent to attend UMass in the fall of next year.

The high school senior is a four time Georgia state champion, a Southeast regional champion and a Level 10 qualifier for the past five years. Mosby placed seventh in the nation on balance beam in 1994 and was the 1993 AAU National Beam, Floor and All Around champion.

Other schools in the hunt for Mosby included Arizona and Alabama.

Mosby is a member of the National Honor Society, Beta Club and Future Business Leaders of America. She is a Georgia Certificate of Merit winner and was named in Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Last season, the Minutewomen finished 14–12, which included wins over No. 21 West Virginia and No. 9 Penn State. The fact that UMass not only faced nationally ranked competition, but often fared well against it, should provide some confidence to the team going into this season.

J.J. Tolhurst, then a junior, qualified and performed well in the NCAA Championships after being awarded the Northeast Region's all around champion.

Tara Swartz, Lianne Laing, Penny Lebeau, and Karen Maurer, among others, also contributed greatly to last year's group. These returnees, along with what Tolhurst called a "great" group of incoming freshmen, could combine for one of the strongest seasons the team has seen in some time.

"I feel... they performed the best gymnastics of their careers, and they are still going to improve for next year," Kuzara said of his team at the end of last season.

The season opens up Jan. 13, 2 p.m. at George Washington.

Mo Vaughn beats Belle for AL MVP

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

Mo Vaughn beat out Albert Belle for the AL MVP award yesterday in one of the closest elections ever, a vote that called into question whether the Cleveland star's surliness cost him the honor.

The two sluggers tied for the AL RBIs lead with 126. Belle, however, led the majors with 50 home runs in the shortened season and became the first player to get 100 extra-base hits since Stan Musial in 1948.

Belle has earned a reputation, however, for being uncooperative and downright rude to reporters — who do the voting. He is expected to be penalized by major league baseball this month for berating a television reporter during the World Series, although that outburst came after all 28 ballots were returned.

"I guess it really does say something," Vaughn said at a news conference in Boston, held at a center where he founded a youth development program. "People are looking at the whole thing and that it's just not numbers."

A letter that accompanies the official ballot to members of the Baseball Writers Association of America lists the five rules — which have remained unchanged since the original ballot in 1931 — to consider. The third guideline: "General character, disposition, loyalty and effort."

Vaughn, regarded by media members and fans as one of the nice guys in baseball, hit .300 with 39 home runs as the first baseman for the AL East champion Boston Red Sox. Belle batted .317 as an All-Star outfielder for the Indians, who had the best record in baseball.

Vaughn received 12 first-place votes, 12 seconds and four thirds for a total of 308 points. Belle got 11 first-place votes, 10 seconds and seven thirds for 300 points. Had just one more first-place vote changed positions, Belle would have won.

"I know that he had some great numbers," Vaughn said. "If it's numbers, he probably would win."

Seattle designated hitter Edgar Martinez received four first-place votes and was third with 244 points, and Indians reliever Jose Mesa got the other first-place vote and was fourth with 130.

The eight-point margin between Vaughn and Belle was the ninth closest in MVP history, and the closest since Willie Stargell and Keith Hernandez tied for the 1979 NL honor.

The tightest AL election also involved a question of character when Joe DiMaggio beat Ted Williams 202-201 in 1947. Williams won the Triple Crown that season, but was left off the 10-place ballot by a Boston writer who did not like the sometimes-snarly Red Sox star.

"It's important to have character," Vaughn said.

The voting was done was by 28 writers — two from each league city.

Jack O'Connell, who covers the New York Yankees for The Hartford Courant, said he listed Vaughn first, Cy Young winner Randy Johnson of Seattle second and Belle third on his ballot.

"I'd like to think character didn't make a difference in my vote," O'Connell said. "But it could have. Subconsciously, it might have."

Vaughn became the ninth Boston player to win the MVP, and the first since Roger Clemens in 1986. No Cleveland player has won since Al Rosen in 1953, a year before the Indians had made their last World Series appearance until Belle led them that far this season.

Vaughn led the Red Sox early in the season, when they were struggling to stay ahead despite injuries to Jose Canseco and other key members. He set a career-high for home runs, played in his first All-Star game and showed improved defense.

In addition to his on-field efforts, Vaughn has been praised by city leaders for his charity work, especially with children.

■ Bradley

continued from page 1

changes.

The earth has wobbled on its axis, changing the time of year that we are closest to the sun. Eleven thousand years ago the earth was closest to the sun in June, while today the earth is closest to the sun on Dec. 21.

Due to the rise in temperature we can expect oceans to rise 20–50 cm. This change in sea level may not seem to be a crucial factor, but Bradley said that due to the rise in sea level, there will be a change in hurricane frequency, and the migration patterns of some species will be affected.

"These are very important issues," he said, "Even though there is a degree of uncertainty."

Bradley said he believes that within the next 10 years it will become easier to tell if global warming actually exists because computer technology will improve and the readings that are done by computer will become more accurate.

He acknowledges that the research done by himself and his colleagues is not the absolute answer to environmental problems.

"I don't think any scientist in this debate would argue that we have all the answers," Bradley said. "There are records that show very dramatic changes... the question is whether these changes represent just that part of the world, or if they truly represent integrated change.

"The question is whether these changes are confined to glacial periods, or if they can occur during interglacial periods such as we have now?"

Students at Holy Cross lift boycott

By Jose Martinez
Associated Press

Black students lifted their boycott of sports and other extracurricular activities at the College of the Holy Cross yesterday after officials reversed a student government vote to strike a clause in a black group's charter.

The boycott lasted three days on the campus in Worcester, Mass., with the school's 68 blacks going only to classes and work study jobs. Twenty-three varsity athletes stayed away from practices and even a women's basketball game against the Slovakian national team. But the protest ended yesterday afternoon and the athletes were expected to return to the playing fields and courts today, said Keon Carpenter, president of the Black Students Union.

Administrators said the clause in the BSU's constitution requiring its elected leaders to be of African descent was not discriminatory as written.

"We firmly believe there are compelling reasons for the BSU to establish this qualification for its officers. It preserves the integrity of the BSU and the very reasons for its existence," said the Rev. Earle L. Markey, vice president of student affairs and dean of students.

Student leaders had voted 31-21 Monday with four abstentions to eliminate a clause that some argued prevented white members of the BSU to serve on the group's executive board.

Members of the Black Student Union argued the organization was their only voice at the private liberal arts college, so any attempt to curb their control of the group was an attempt to control them.

Markey said the BSU was more than just a club, since it served as a "bridge to the Holy Cross community for its members. It has and will continue to be an integral part of campus life." However, the black students still want the college to address other issues, including the disparity between the number of black students who are recruited to play sports at the college and those who are non-athletes, Carpenter said.

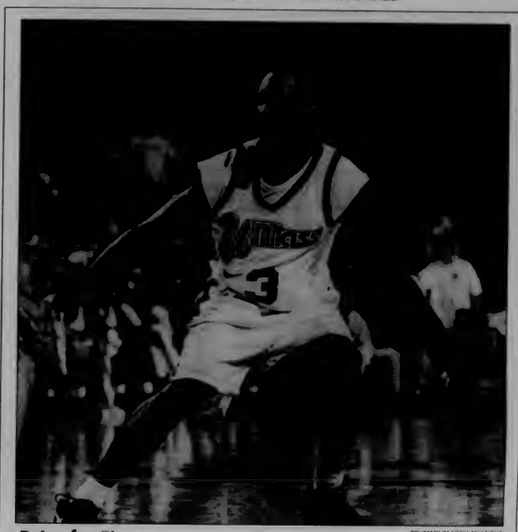
Members of the Student Government Association railed against the administration's "irresponsible handling of this issue," saying school officials had told the students to handle the matter as far back as April.

Jon Sarra and Tom Weber, the co-chairmen of the SGA, said the BSU's constitution set up white students to be second-class members without any chance of being part of the leadership.

"We challenge the administration to justify their paternalistic decision, in the wake of their lack of leadership on the issue," they said in a statement. "The decision rendered today undermines the college's commitment to student governance on this campus."

The administration could have intervened earlier but some officials thought it would be better to let the students try to resolve the dispute themselves, said Rhonda Brown, the school's affirmative action officer.

"If it were not a student-related matter, it would have been handled much earlier and differently," said Brown, who is black. Brown said the student leaders were well meaning idealists who latched onto an "attractive concept" but lost sight of the realities of campus life. Out of 2,738 students, Holy Cross has 68 blacks, 61 Hispanics, 73 Asians and three Native Americans. "In their minds, fairness is fairness and what is good for one must be good for all of us. That is not always so," she said. The school plans to hold a forum after Thanksgiving to allow the students a chance to discuss what has happened on campus as well as the larger issues involved, Brown said.



COURTESY OF MEDIA RELATIONS

Drive for Five

Dana Dingle will have to "D it up" against former teammate Derrick Kellogg tonight as the Minutemen host the Converse All-Stars tonight at the Mullins Center.

COME SEE THE BIG GUY!
BIG GUY LIQUORS
KEGS
BEER BALLS
Full Line of Beer • Wine • Liquors
BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE
RTE 63 NORTH AMHERST (NEXT TO CUMBY'S) • 549-3555

中国书法与绘画展
Chinese Calligraphy and Painting Show
Nov 13 through Nov 27
in the Grad Lounge
(Across from the Blue Wall in the Campus Center)
Check it out!
Sponsored by Chinese Student and Scholars Association.

Collegian Graphics:
We boldly go where no one has gone before...

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex. Pu Pu (for 2) Reg $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

The University of Massachusetts
Campus Activities office presents:
Something Every Friday
a weekly series of events.
Coming this Friday.
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs. Sign up 545-3600
Bluewall
November
17th
8pm Free
545-3600
Refreshments Will Be Served
Comedian Clinton Jackson followed by the Film
"Dangerous Minds"

UMass Division of Continuing Education
• January 2-25 •
Winter Session 1996
• More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
• Noncredit workshops
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register Now!
Call for a free course catalog • (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education • University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

UM swimmers prepared for Terriers

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

With two recent victories behind them, the Massachusetts women's swim team is confident that they can keep up their winning ways, when they take on Boston University tomorrow afternoon at 4 p.m in Boyden Gymnasium.

Coming off a 205.5 to 94.5 drowning of Northeastern last Saturday, the Minutewomen are aiming for their third consecutive victory in as many meets.

UMass has outscored the competition the past two meets by a total of 345.5 to 179.5.

Head coach Bob Newcomb has liked the way his team is performing, and is pleased with the overall team effort he has received.

"It's been a really good start for us," Newcomb said. "I'm pleased with the things we've done, and I'm really impressed with the leadership of the seniors."

The Minutewomen will continue to do the things they have done which has enabled them to swim off to a 2-0 start.

"We will continue practicing our stroke techniques, our turns, breathing, and our starts," Newcomb said. "We need to work on some race strategies and concentrate on our techniques, though."

According to Newcomb, the ultimate goal for the Minutewomen is the Atlantic-10 championships which lie ahead at the end of the year.

After the meet against BU, the Minutewomen will compete in the New England Championship at the beginning of December.

"The NE championship is a big picture event," said Newcomb. "That is the highlight of the fall semester for us, but in the end it just gets us prepared for the Atlantic-10."

Tomorrow UMass will have a tough meet on their hands as they attempt to knock off Boston University, which by no means is an easy opponent.

As for BU, the Terriers come to Amherst with a record of 1-0 so far in this early season. Their solo win came at the expense of the Northeastern Huskies.

Head coach Ray Wetmore says his team has been making some progress and is excited for this meet.

"We have been working hard so far," said Wetmore. "We have a lot of talent on this team, and we've been doing our normal routines and daily workouts in preparation for these meets."

Newcomb knows this meet is not going to come as easily as the first two victories have.

"They're extremely talented," said Newcomb. "This is the best BU team that we've ever swam against. We're going to have to take a big step up in order to compete with them in every event."

Talking about stepping it up, a number of UMass swimmers have done just that, giving the Minutewomen spectacular times and the incentive they need for victory.

Barbara Hickey is once again a notable mention, as she took first place last week in both of the long distance events; the 500 and 1000 yard freestyles. Hickey continues to get faster and consistently provides the Minutewomen with valuable points.

Sarah Baker continues to blow by the competition in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events with unbeatable times. Baker has also emerged as a team leader, providing the senior leadership that Newcomb was talking about.

The freshmen have also stepped it up greatly, as Julie Alexander finished in second place last week in both the 200 and 500 yard freestyle. Meghan Matacera took second place in the 100 yard backstroke. Jill Carroll also showed that her abilities are strong, finishing second in the 50 yard freestyle.

Boston University will counter with Kristy Helin, who is very versatile in the breaststroke and freestyle events. Laura Tuck and Lisa Marie are two of BU's strong mid-distance to long-distance swimmers, and their diving program is one of the best.

"Our diving is quite powerful," said Wetmore. "We have some very good divers, and our strength is in that area."

Brooke Foley, last year's East Coast Athletic Conference diver of the year, will lead the attack for the Terriers.

For UMass, Divers Angelique Rodriguez, freshman Kim Schadt, and Krystin Carpenter look to perform well off the boards which could be a determining factor in the meet. Rodriguez finished second in both the one and three meter diving events last weekend in the Northeastern contest.

"UMass has one of the best swim teams that I've seen in a while," said Wetmore. "We expect this to be a very, very close meet."

■ Alessio

continued from page 12

thing he has done in the past, getting the ball on pitches and running to the outside. But the outside is not as far out anymore. Alessio has bulked up since last year, hitting the weight room hard during the offseason. As a result, you'll see Alessio going more toward the inside because he is able to body up against the defensive linemen instead of trying to escape them.

"It has definitely helped me," Alessio said about the added bulk. "Since freshman year, I've put on weight. This past year, I figured if I was able to build up more, I'd be able to build confidence, as well."

If you have watched the Minutemen religiously over the last few years, and you have witnessed Alessio in action, you'll have also noticed something which sets him apart from the normal running back. He gets the ball, he runs with the ball, and he gets tackled, just like any other back.

But as others take their time getting up after being stopped, or fix their uniform shortly after being leveled by a defensive lineman, Alessio jumps up after every tackle, and runs back to the huddle. Whether it be a gang tackle or a solo tackle, you'll see number 20 bounce up as fast as he went down.

"I like to just jump right back up, even after I get wrecked," Alessio said. "I don't want to give the defense a reason to celebrate. I guess I just don't want the defense to think they got the best of me."

See Frank hustle back to the huddle.

Influence of Rene

Alessio gets into the three point stance at his tailback position on each play. Directly in front of him is another back doing just the same. It's fullback Rene Ingoglia, the best running back in UMass history. Each year Alessio has played, he's taken a back seat to the irreplaceable Ingoglia. Eleven school records and 4,565 rushing yards by Ingoglia have diminished Alessio's outstanding efforts. Being overshadowed could produce some frustration. Jealousy wouldn't be unheard of. More attention could be craved.

See praise Ingoglia.

"I wouldn't want to play with a different running back than Rene," Alessio said. "He's a big motivator, he's been a great role model for me. Rene has great work ethic, and he's just a fun person to play on the field with."

If Rene is a consistent in Alessio's life in relation to football, Frank Sr. and Judy Alessio are even more important in all facets of his life as a whole. He says they're the "biggest thing in his life," and that they have yet to miss one of his games throughout his career at UMass. Alessio also notes the fact his parents even made the trip to the 1992 season opener in Virginia at the University of Richmond during the 1992 season — even though he wasn't playing since it was his redshirt freshman year.

He's playing now, alright. The amazing 337-yard effort last week brought Alessio the Coca-Cola Gold Helmet award as New England's Division I Player of the Week, Yankee Conference Player of the Week, the ECAC Offensive Player of the Week, The Sports Network I-AA National Offensive Player of the Week. Don Hansen's National Weekly Football Gazette Co-Offensive Player of the Week... and a case of "turf toe."

So while the honors piled up, and the awards were given this past week, Alessio was dealing with the pain suffered from the fluid which collected in his two big toes. The "turf toe" is a result of making any kind of cut on the turf, and having your toe dig into the surface. Alessio said he did it in the first quarter of the game, which means he still gained at least 248 yards after he suffered the turf injury to his toes.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Minuteman running back Frank Alessio

Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges knows that despite the minor injuries, Alessio loves to run on the turf.

"This guy, he loves the turf, I've got to admit that," Hodges said after last week's BU game. "He had a twinkle in his eye when he went out there... That's an awful nice feeling when he breaks the line of scrimmage to just start looking for clipping penalties because you know nobody's going to catch him once he hits open field."

Last week, Alessio and Ingoglia became the first UMass backfield duo to gain over 1,000 yards apiece in the same season. While Ingoglia climbs up his own record charts, Alessio's record-setting day broke Ingoglia's old record of 313 yards set against Rhode Island last season. A great record, admits Alessio, but he favors breaking the 2,000 yard mark after three years of playing.

"Going over the 2,000 yard mark was a bigger accomplishment," Alessio said. "Getting that single game record, I'm obviously very happy with it. I give credit to the whole team, because without them, nothing would be possible. [The single game record] almost shocks me. As a back, you tend to look at your stats, but for me, it wasn't a big deal. The numbers add up."

They do add up. They are adding up. They will add up.

See Frank keep on running.

Ever Think of writing for Sports?

Stop by the Collegian Office at 113 Campus Center

LATINO SUPPORT GROUP

This group will deal with issues of identity facing Latinos as living or attending college in the mainland USA. Living in a culture where Latinos are viewed as a "minority" will be discussed in the context of how it affects Latinos self perception.

This will be a drop-in group held every week.

UMASS Campus Center
(Check schedule board for room number)
Wednesdays beginning November 8 and running until April.
3:30 - 5:00 PM

ANYONE WHO IDENTIFIES AS:
- Latino/ born in Mexico, South/Central America, Cuba, Puerto Rico, or the Dominican Republic.
- is first generation (meaning born here is the USA from Latino parent(s)
- is of Latino heritage

IS WELCOME TO ATTEND

Please call 545-2337 to register.
The group will be conducted in English or Spanish depending on membership

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Sophomore forward Deane Campanale and the Massachusetts hockey team travel to Rhode Island tomorrow to face the Friars of Providence College.

Shoe Sale. Shoe Sale. Shoe Sale. Shoe Sale.
3 days only!!
Thurs. Nov16 to Sat. Nov 18
Downtown Amherst

THE UMASS THEATER GUILD PRESENTS
Cheese
Nov. 15 -18th in Bowker Auditorium 8pm
Tix Available at FAC box office or door
$4 for Students $5 General Public

50,000 eyes will look at your ad if placed in the COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS.
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

Don't miss the boat!
Write for the Collegian

THE NYNEX COMMONWEALTH CLASSIC
UNDERGRADUATE LOTTERY TICKET APPLICATION
UMass VS. BOSTON COLLEGE
DECEMBER 9, 1995
FLEET CENTER, BOSTON
$20.00 PER TICKET
LIMIT TWO TICKETS PER UMASS UNDERGRADUATE
DEADLINE TO ENTER IS WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 23.
NAME:
LOCAL ADDRESS
CITY ST. ZIP
LOCAL PHONE
CHECKS PAYABLE TO: UMASS ATHLETICS
CC: VISA, MASTERCARD, DISCOVER
#: EXP. DATE:
LOTTERY WINNERS AND LOSERS WILL BE NOTIFIED BY MAIL AFTER THANKSGIVING BREAK
DROP APPLICATION OFF AT THE CURRY HICKS CAGE BOX OFFICE BY 5:00 PM WED. NOV. 23
NON-WINNERS WILL HAVE APPLICATION ALONG WITH PRE-PAYMENT RETURNED

Funky Soul Music from Boston
FUNKY
LIVE
BLUEWALL
UMASS Campus Center
Monday
November 20th
9:00pm
Nominated for best funk/soul act by the 1995 Boston Music Awards

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Smith College ASA conference Essentials: Asian Pacific American Historical Legacy · Nov 18 Registration @ Wright Hall 9am; carry after Info 585-4808. Free for 5 college (limitations)

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD
Kai Chi delivering Sunday through Thursday 12-11pm and Friday and Saturday to 3am 586-7774

CAMPUS COMICS AND CARDS
Every Friday on the campus center concourse weekly comics and a variety of back issues Also having a full array of magic packs and singles We also have many basketball, baseball, and football packs and singles
The airport shuttle Need to get to the airport? Call Valley Transporter 549-1350
To Hadley barn's Saturday clean up crew. The place looks grassast! We really appreciate your help · Anac Cb
UMass Babysitting The Minutemen are HOT! HOT! HOT! with a 4-1 record. Don't miss out on this exciting Hockey East action! U Mass takes on Providence this Saturday @ Mullins Center Students pick up your free tickets @ Curry Hicks Cage TODAY!
3-4 senior grad students looking for house/apt in Amherst area for Spring semester Call 549-9919

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Subaru 1800 DL One owner. Runs great. Reliable transportation. Clean, inside/outside $1200 323-6286
1985 Subaru GL 5 spd 83K all options $1700 obo 548-0895
1986 Ford Escort 4 spd standard 2nd owner excellent condition 70D or bo Call Sabrina 549-8867
93 BMW 318 IS black coupe, automatic. Asking $21,000 Negotiable, call David 585-5284

EMPLOYMENT

Accountant NYC CPA firm desires accountant with 2-4 years public experience Our specialties taxation and inbound foreign investment. Salary from $40-$50 000 Fax resume (212) 564-2030
All students M/F Collegiate pairs/pairs now hiring mgrs for summer positions in Boston, Hartford and surrounding towns Possible internships Call 1-800-569-9509
Bart's P/T counter staff must be available Nov. 24th and 25th to train for two 7am -2pm shifts per week and one night shift
Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $275-$375/week working to save the environment with Massping Casual, fun atmosphere Call Terri at 756-6434
National Parks Hiring Seasonal & Full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1 206 545-4804 Ext N 5002
Part time/Full time earn extra income Work with people you like at your own pace No investment no risk no travel no quotas no sales no inventory 586-0192 daily 9am-5pm
Score is looking for students to help with phonebank fundraising to help stop higher tuition and fees! $6/hr minimum 5 hrs/week Sun-Thurs nite 6:30-9:00pm. Nov 29-Dec 14th Apply @ Score (420 Student Union) by Wed 11/22 by 5pm!!
We want you Unique liquor related product Retails for $200 Inventory required $7,500 Follow our plan and it only 2 sales per day in each location your profit $37,400 first year! 941-786-9001
You can earn $500 to $700 between now and Christmas Call Holly 1-800-881-7989

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn big money Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Guitar & Amp For Sale brand new Epiphone LesPaul gold top and Marshall 1TM30 tube amp $450 each Call 586-5626 for details.
Round trip airline ticket, Hawaii or Alaska $800 546-7072

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Used/reconditioned rack systems and seperate components Buy/sell/trade Large selection, friendly advice, low prices and great prices Stereo Video Exchange at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley Open Sundays only, 9-5 Other days call 256-0941
WWII bolts 18 x 22 lisho/airsbag of Winston Churchill iron curtain speech museum seated 34 x 44 oak frame by Curtis Hooper signed Sarah Churchill $1500 negotiable Kevin (413) 568-2641

FOUND

Found Trek mountain bike 20 inch green/redish brown frame purple bar extenders 549-5804

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Hot Pants have a happy B-day Now you're a normal 20 yr older Love Anne

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5762

PERSONALS

Bryce- Your mom called, she said she has the ointment for your rash Does it smell like low tide?
Bryce- It a true! I have been smelling something fishy lately! I think you should consider consulting your physician Don't feet bad about it There's lots of people who smell like the beach! God bless you, my son, and good luck Peace out champ!

ROOM WANTED

Dentith exchange student looking for room near Amherst Jasper 546-7942

ROOM FOR RENT

Roommates wanted to share house in Hadley $730+ but route 10 mvt from campus Call Nancy 582-9951

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate needed to share townhouse for spring semester 2 mvt from campus Frank Day 413 568-8151ex 1225 Night 413-733-8079
Roommate wanted non-smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month On bus route Start Jan 1st Call Anne 253-1805 heat & hot water included

SERVICES

Child care: Subsidized slot available for toddler at quality center, route 63 Leverett, 4 miles north of U Mass Call Brian, Hampshire Franklin Day Care, 548-9674
Economical manicures acrylics, nail art Robert 546-1794
Free financial aid! Over $ billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income Let us help Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext FS007
Honeylove and Butterflies hosts jewelry parties Hemp, beads, accessories In time for holidays Specialties encouraged! 548-8786 eves
RESUME
Inexpensive professional resume services Packages $15-$30 Only at Campus Design and Copy The affordable alternative Upstairs in the Student Union 545-2721
Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eye glass frame repair and ear piercing Showcase Designs 764 N Pleasant St Amherst 253-3224
Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906
Quickhypo word processing professional word processing Term papers, theses, dissertations,etc Done quickly and professionally Call Cheryl at 585-8263

TO SUBLET

Available 1/96 Room in 4 bedroom/Bathroom prefer female $781+ Jennifer 253-0676
One room $295/month Utilities included Seconds from campus Call 549-8628
Large Room in furnished 7 bedroom apt on bus route, parking, gym Kosher/vegetarian $140 Lm 253-1857
Take over lease 1/1/96 Puffton Village $565/month heat/hot water inc Call 549-0578

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $249 r/t California $175 o/w Europe from $229 r/t Cheap airfares to S America, Asia, Africa, Middle East and Australia Call (413) 587-0081 Air Tech New England
"Free Travel Spring Break '96" Sun Splash Tours Reliable spring break company Organize group! Travel free! Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710
Go with others you know Spring break in Negril $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience
Port Antonio, Jamaica Ocean view cottages, great neighborhood Walk to beaches, restaurants, dancehall clubs $150/week 413-367-8250
Spring Break '96 Cancun from $399 Jamaica from $439, Florida from $99! Organize a group of 15 and travel free!!! Call Student Travel Services 1-800 648-4849 for more info On campus contact Liz at 548-7148 Jason at 546-5579 or Catherine at 549-7594
Winter Break Special Killington week $288 Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437
2 cats 2 redrip airfare vouchers to Jamaica/Cancun fully transferable Food/drink included with hotel by arrgmnt $300/ea/ call Eric @ 549-3788

WANTED TO RENT

Wanted 3 or more bedroom apt or house near uptown or campus For spring semester Call 549-7403
Wanted to rent a 2,3 or 4 bedroom in Amherst Call 549-8618

BEAUTIFUL ROOM

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located (1/2 mile to UMass) and center of Amherst, beautiful, spacious 3 bedroom, 2 1/2 bath condo at Amity Place Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen, and great sunset views Must be responsible, considerate, non-smoker $425.00/month plus utilities Available January 1, 1996 Contact Gary at 549-3886

ATTENTION CAMPUS SALES REPS
Are you earning the kind of income you'd like to be? Would unlimited earning potential and access to a professional, business marketplace appeal to your entrepreneurial spirit? If so, the Northwestern Mutual sales internship program may be for you. Our top ten college agents last year made in excess of $16,000 as full time college students.
For more information, call or write:
Kate Kane, NMI., 1351 Main St., Springfield, MA 01103. 413-748-6000

COLLEGIAN NEWS
Because it happens everyday.

ATTENTION
ALL CARTOONISTS & COMIC STRIP WRITERS:
There will be a MANDATORY meeting for anyone interested in drawing for the comics page on Sunday at 1 p.m. in the Collegian offices.
This includes current cartoonists.
The meeting will last approximately 30 minutes. Please bring 2-3 strips with you as well as a list of the days you will be able to do strips. Dimensions for long strips are 6 1/4 inches wide by 2 inches high. Dimensions for square cartoons are 3 inches by roughly four inches.
If you have any questions please contact Marni Heifner, Managing Editor at 545-0719.

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

Aries (March 21-April 19): Include prominent people when entertaining for business and pleasure. They will provide valuable guidance Pay attention to the manipulative behavior of a competitor; you cannot afford to ignore it.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Get as much work done as possible, then enjoy a relaxing weekend. Any questions left dangling could irritate you. Concentrate on working out details. A partner has a strong say in your life.

Gamini (May 21-June 20): Your intuitive feel for the nuances of a situation helps you separate fact from fiction. Empathize with someone who is upset. Rumors float freely; do not believe everything you hear. Romance is favored tonight.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): When spending on a financial portfolio, starting a business or making home improvements, deal with people who have a proven track record. Answering letters promptly lets others know that you are on top of things.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Take time to count your blessings and acknowledge recent gains. Your generosity is appreciated by loved ones. Organizational tasks and paperwork may occupy you later today.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good news from someone at a distance brightens your morning. Do not allow yourself to get caught up in a business-home conflict. A hands-off policy is best when faced with a confusing situation.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Let your intuition be your guide today. Aim high! Go all-out to impress an influential person who can help your career or business. Someone makes an interesting proposition.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Intellectual pursuits bring great satisfaction. Expand your horizons. Rethinking your priorities will help you boost profits. You will make more money than you dreamed possible!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A partnership is working in your favor. A mate introduces you to interesting opportunities as well as new friends. You move closer to a long-sought goal. A wish comes true. Be supportive of parents.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seminars, lectures and long phone calls prove enlightening. Keep the lid on spending by shopping for bargains. Difficult times with your mate or partner can be forgiven and mostly forgotten. Remember your initial attraction!

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your specialized knowledge serves you well in a leadership position. Overtime may be necessary, but it will latten your paycheck. Show family members more affection. Spending quality time with children cements your relationship. Be attentive.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Adopt an attitude of greater give-and-take when dealing with co-workers. You will need their goodwill. A stock market tip pays off in a big way. Host a modest celebration. Compromise at home.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

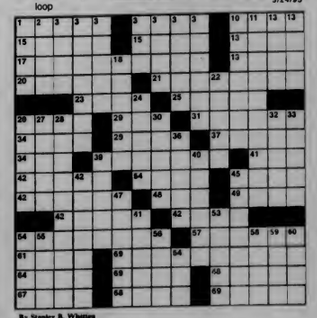
ACROSS
1 Part of EAP
6 Winged
10 Fr. ladies
14 Assault
15 Ascend
16 Air Comb. form
17 "Spartacus" author
19 — go bragh
20 Salad item
21 Encourage
23 Following
25 Introduces: with 41 Across
26 Hardy girl
29 Pointer
31 Duke's home
34 Engrossed
35 TV's Estrada
37 WWI battle site
38 Anger
39 Introduction
41 See 25 Across
42 Fragrant resin
44 Soft drink
45 Gaelic
46 Revise copy
48 Actor on a Cruise?
49 Forest denizen
50 Sag
52 Delhi garment
54 Elementary particle
57 World Cup game
61 City on the Tiber
62 Rapid learner
64 MP's quest
65 Take apart
66 Dine at home
67 Wallet items
68 Ideal place
69 Election group

DOWN
1 Wimbledon winner: 1975
2 "The — King"
3 Salacious
4 In opposition to
5 Gall
6 Sandy's sound
7 Prevaricator
8 Quality
9 Hold back
10 Eminent conductor
11 S. Dak. tourist attraction
12 Islamic prince
13 Loudness measure
18 Right
22 Immerse
24 Makes weary
26 Tester
27 — G. Wheeler
28 Hot rodder
30 Steer
32 Titillate
33 Type of maid
36 Acclaim
39 Embroidery loop
40 Pink flowers, with 53 Down
43 Namesakes of Marceau, the mime
45 Decreed
47 Type of converter
51 Hit repeatedly
53 See 40 Down
54 Part of QED
55 Rob of Hollywood
56 Brood of pheasants
58 — caper: dance
59 Blue pencil
60 Former Cubs great Sandberg
63 Scam

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

R	O	M	E		D	I	M	S		A	G	A I N
I	B	E	T		E	L	I	A		S	E	I N E
T	O	R	C	H	S	O	N	G		S	O	D A S
Z	E	E		E	A	S	T	E	R		R	E N T
		M	A	D	E			C	O	G
	P	R	I	D	E		S	P	A	C	E	M A N
P	R	O	X	Y		T	O	O		T	B	O N E
L	I	M	A			H	A	L		U	N	T O
A	M	E	N	D		E	R	E		P	R	E E N
Y	A	R	D	A	R	M	S		P	A	N	T S
		M	D	A			C	A	P	S
C	O	L	A		N	U	T	R	I	A		A D A
U	N	I	T	S		C	H	A	R	W	O	M E N
B	U	N	C	H		L	U	T	E		F	E L T
A	S	T	H	E		A	G	E	D		A	X I S

5/24/95



By Stanley B. Whitten
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:
Date(s) to run: Headline:
Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment
Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

I'M A GREAT BELIEVER IN THE VALUE OF NOVELTY
I SAY ANYTHING NEW IS GOOD BY DEFINITION! IT CAN SHOCK, INSULT, OR OFFEND ME, SO LONG AS IT DOESN'T BORE ME!
IF YOU CAN'T GIVE ME SOMETHING NEW, THEN REPACKAGE THE OLD SO IT LOOKS NEW! NOVELTY IS ALL THAT MATTERS! I WON'T PAY ATTENTION IF IT'S NOT FRESH AND DIFFERENT!
I SEE WHY TIMELESS TRUTH DOESN'T SELL.
GIVE ME A GOOD FLASH IN THE PAN ANY DAY.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

TAKE CARE OF HIM, GONJO, WHILE I CHECK ON THE GIRL!
SO THEY ARE HOLDING SANDRA CAPTIVE!
SORRY, MAN, BUT WE CAN'T LETCHA GO!
I'M EVEN SORRIER!
BUT YOU'RE NOT AS SORRY AS YOU'RE GONNA BE!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE LIGHTS?
THEY WENT OUT, DUMBO! CAN'TCHA TELL?
NOW THAT HE CAN'T SEE ME, I'LL USE MY SPIDER-STRENGTH TO BREAK FREE!
SECONDS LATER...
THE LIGHT SWITCH MUSTA BEEN LOOSE!
YOU IMBECILE! OUR PRISONER'S GONE!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

SO, IN YOUR DEPRESSION YOU'RE WALLOWING AND NOSTALGIC IMAGES YOU'RE FOLLOWING WITHOUT SECOND THOUGHT AS TO WHETHER OR NOT IT IS TRUE FEELINGS THAT YOU ARE FOLLOWING
WELL, IT'S POSSIBLE TRUE EMOTIONS ARE RARELY BUT ONE HAS TO ASSUME A SINCERITY FOR SELF-KNOWLEDGE LEARNING BY INWARDLY TURNING IS ESSENTIAL OR FORGING TOWARDS CLARITY
SO HAS SOCIETY JUST DEVELOPED TO SUCH INTELLECTUALS AND MEN ON THE MOON?
OR IS IT YOU'D RATHER TO GO HUNT AND GATHER AND RESPOND LIKE AN EMOTIONAL ANIMAL?
BUT I DON'T THINK IT'S JUST INTELLECTUALS TO MIX FEELINGS WITH MIXED INTERPRETING "INTROSPECTION"? WHAT KIND OF A WORD IS...OH NEVERMIND...GO ON.
HA, THAT'S OKAY, I'M NOT WHAT WE WERE TALKING ABOUT.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

MY CELLULAR PHONE AND LAPTOP COMPUTER ALLOW ME TO WORK ANY TIME AND ANYPLACE
WHILE DRIVING?
TOO DANGEROUS
IN RESTAURANTS?
TOO RUDE
OUTDOORS?
NOPE
BASICALLY, YOU LUG THEM AROUND AND WORRY THAT THEY'LL GET STOLEN OR BROKEN
STOP IT. YOU'RE SCARING THEM

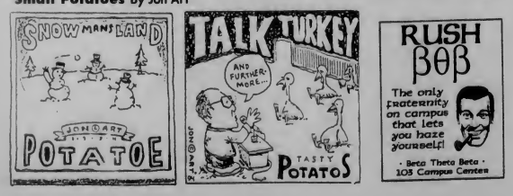
Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

I IMAGINE THERE'S NO HEAVEN, IT'S EASY IF YOU TRY...
NEIL! WOULD YOU STOP SINGING THAT STUPID SONG!!!
HEY! THAT SONG STANDS FOR FREEDOM, PEACE, AND EMOTIONAL EXPRESSION!
...AND THERE IS NOTHING YOU CAN DO TO STOP ME. THAT'S WHAT THE CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT WAS ABOUT. SO THERE.
YOU MAY SAY I'M A DREAMER, BUT I'M NOT THE ONLY ONE... AAAARGH!
FLUSH

Generation X By Chris Lehman

AND SHE WAS SO UGLY! I...
HOLD IT! YOU CAN'T SAY "UGLY."
WHY NOT?
IT'S NOT A POLITICALLY CORRECT WORD.
YOU'RE KIDDING, RIGHT?
NO, REALLY! IT'S IN THIS BOOK.
SO WHAT'S POLITICALLY CORRECT FOR "UGLY?"
"BEAUTY DEFICIENT"

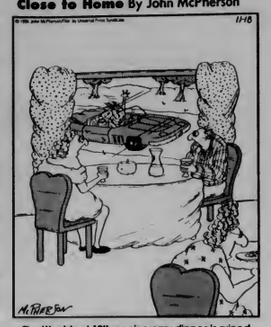
Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Close to Home By John McPherson

When car alarms start to fail.

Close to Home By John McPherson



The Weeblers' 10th anniversary dinner is ruined when they catch a fleeting glimpse of what looked like their baby sitter driving by in their newly restored '66 Corvette.

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I had nothing to do last Saturday afternoon, so I bought a bag of chips and went to this big fancy art museum.

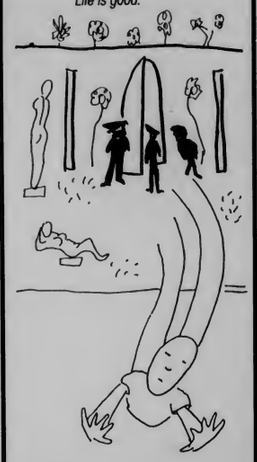
I stood so close to this famous painting I could see the thickness of each paint stroke. The paint even looked wet.

Wow, I wonder how long ago the artist finished it?

Maybe,... the artist is standing on the other side of the room watching me look at his painting. .....Van Gogh, Lautrec, Benton...they're here . 5:32 PM They are talking to me .....trying to show me what they felt. Does it hurt little babies?

I started to cry and yell a little.

"Thank you Toulouse! Thank you dear Toulouse! Thank you Leonardo!" They threw me out of the museum for yelling at the paintings. Geez, touchy, touchy, touchy. Life is good.



There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor.....Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician.....Jeffrey DiGiovanni
Production Supervisor.....Joshua Grey
Production.....Marianne Haner
William Darby

Dining Commons Menu

Friday

LUNCH
Savory Duchess Pie
Turkey Burger (Gobble Gobble)
BASICS LUNCH
Humus Vegetable Sandwhich
Turkey Burger

DINNER
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Roast Top Round of Beef and Gravy(Mmmmm!)
BASICS DINNER
Savory Roman Rice and Beans
Cheese Spinach Strudel

Saturday

BRUNCH
Omelet/Cheese, Sauteed Onions, Peppers, &Mushrooms
Jumbo Waffles/ Syrup
Sausage Patty
BASICS BRUNCH
Jumbo Waffles/ Syrup
Mexican Vegetable Stew

DINNER
Savory Cajun Style Scrod(No MSG added!)
Chicken Hoagie on Grinder Roll
BASICS DINNER
Hearty Latin Stew
Chicken Hoagie on Grinder Roll

Sunday

BRUNCH
Savory Scrambled Eggs
Bacon Breakfast Pizza
BASICS BRUNCH
Spinach Breakfast Pizza (need I say more?)
Caponata with Pocket Bread

DINNER
Savory Chicken Stir Fry
Manicotti in Sauce
BASICS DINNER
Stir Fry Vegetables and Tofu
Manicotti in Sauce

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Good Things About the Polymer Sciences Building

10. Free "I love Polymer Science" T-shirts on opening day.
9. D.C. now to serve fresh polymer science biscuits.
8. Large windows serve as great full-length mirrors.
7. Everyone has polymer-fever!
6. It's a great place to bring a first date.
5. Full bar in every room.
4. Every Thursday night is Polka night.
3. Authorities strictly enforce "no shoes, no shirt, no service" policy.
2. Free "mystery plastic" with every Happy-Meal.
1. It's Polymer-licious!

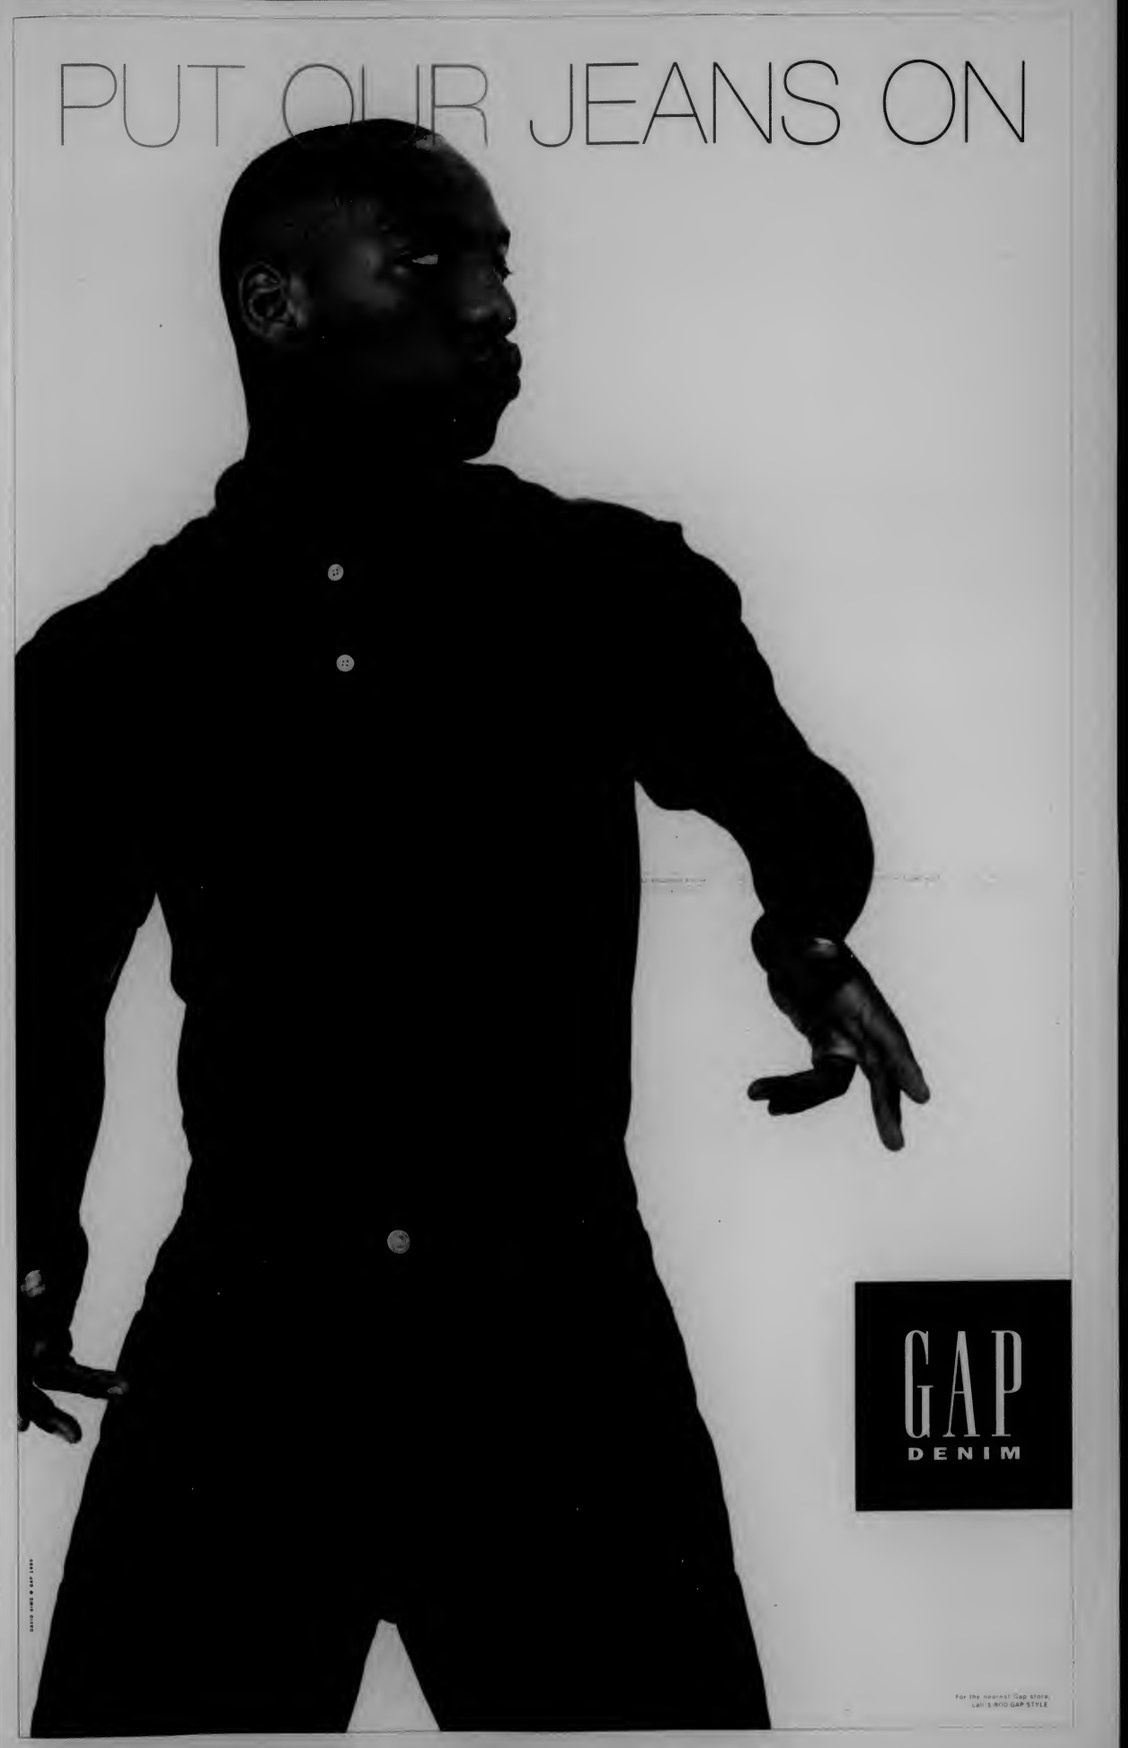
Quote of the Day

"Over? Did you say over? It's not over until we decide it is! Was it over when the Germans bombed Pearl Harbor?! Hell no!"

"Germans?"

"Forget it, he's on a roll..."

–Animal House



Sports

UMass faces UConn in second round of NCAAs

By Condice Flemming
Collegian Staff

For the last two years, it's been either the Massachusetts or Connecticut women's soccer team heading to the Final Four from the Northeast Region.

This year that could happen again, as the two teams face each other in the second round of the NCAA Tournament on Sunday at 1 p.m. in Storrs, Conn. The Minutewomen advanced to the second round with its 2-1 overtime victory against Hartford last Saturday.

The winner of Sunday's match advances to the third round to face the winner of the Wisconsin–Notre Dame game, also being played on Sunday.

In 1993, it was the Minutewomen heading to the Final Four, as they beat the Huskies 1-0 to advance. Last year, UConn went to the Final Four after beating Hartford, who had beaten UMass.

When the two teams met in Amherst on Oct. 21, the Huskies came away with a 2-0 victory in a torrential downpour.

In fact, the weather had a big part in the outcome, as a puddle in front of one of the goals stopped a sure Karin Johnson goal.

Jana Carabino's two goals led the Huskies to victory in the muddy contest. Carabino currently leads UConn in overall scoring with 42 points on 18 goals and six assists.

Entering that game, the Minutewomen were a bit tired, as they were playing their third tough game in a 11 days. Before UConn, they tied Hartford 0-0 and beat Dartmouth 1-0.

Entering Sunday's game, Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy feels confident.

"The team is playing better at this point in the year. That [first UConn game] was our third ball-buster match in 11 days. Now the games are spread out a little bit," he said. "We're more on top of our game now leading into UConn."

UConn's Kerry Connors, who was injured in the Oct. 21 meeting between the two schools, still might be sidelined for Sunday's contest. Siobhan Harold is the probable starter in goal for UConn, although Amy Schwarz as seen action in net lately for the Huskies.

"[Harold] is a kid we are looking to get another crack at," Rudy said. "[If Connors plays] that gives them three very quick one-on-one players."

At one point in the season, Connors led the nation in assists. On the season, she is second on the team in points with 35 (nine goals, 17 assists).

The Minutewomen will also have to watch out for the Tietjen twins, Margaret and Jennifer, that is.

Margaret is the team's third leading scorer (11 goals, 12 assists, 34 points) and Jennifer is the team's sixth leading scorer (four goals, 12 assists, 20 points).

UMass' Rachel LeDuc has been the UConn killer. She beat the Huskies with an overtime goal in the first round of the NCAA tournament as a freshman in 1992, and then beat them again in 1993 with a goal to advance the Minutewomen to the Final Four.

Rebecca Myers, who was injured during the Hartford game, should start against the Huskies. According to Rudy, she has "looked good."

Rudy isn't worried about a letdown after coming off of such an emotional win against Hartford, in which the Minutewomen won on a LeDuc goal with 1.4 seconds left in the second overtime.

"We've trained pretty well. We've gotten a little bit of rest," Rudy said. "I feel better this time around."

The game can be heard live on WMUA 91.1 with Anthony Guido on play-by-play and Justin C. Smith on color.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Junior Erin Lynch and the women's soccer team travel to Storrs to face UConn in the second round of the NCAA Tournament on Sunday.

UM watches as Alessio runs to greatness

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

See Frank run.

The lousy, rainy weather turned the grass of Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium into a mudpit three weeks back. Massachusetts tailback Frank Alessio pumped his legs a bit higher than usual, kept his balance by watching his footing, and sped his way to a game-high 206 yards on the ground and a touchdown in the Oct. 28 44-36 victory over Lehigh.

Two weeks later, the Minutemen played on astroturf for just the second time all season. Alessio's feet bounced off the soft, cushiony fast surface, as he exploded for a Yankee Conference record 337 yards in a 28-23 win at Boston University on Nov. 11.

Earlier this season, a sunny day on the University of Massachusetts campus resulted in a 51-0 drubbing of Holy Cross, with Alessio chalking up 153 yards on 12 carries.

See Frank run in any type of weather.

The Minutemen have been dealt just about every possible hand by Mother Nature so far this season. And, with a 6-4 record entering tomorrow's final game of the year at Connecticut, the team has responded differently in the types of climate. Yet if there's one player who has adjusted to the field of choice each weekend, it's Frank Alessio.

Always on the run

It's not a shock Alessio continues to run well on whatever surface is placed under his feet. This guy did it on the Pop Warner level back as a young child, where he'd find himself speeding to the outside for rushing yardage. He ran in high school on both the gridiron and the track before he came to UMass, as his opponents received a good look of the back of his uniform as he sped by them. He was an all-stater and team MVP at Sparta High School in Sparta, NJ in both sports.

"It did start in Pop Warner," Alessio said. "When I went to the outside, no one would catch me. I've always had that speed to my advantage, yet I still have worked very hard on my speed."

Even when he was redshirted, Alessio still did his running in practice. Simultaneously, the learning process also continued.

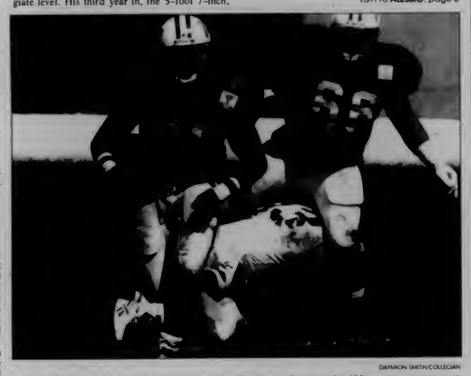
"It was a completely different game [than high school]," Alessio said. "It's just a faster, tougher, more competitive game. It took a little bit of time freshman year, with the hitting drills and the live running. I'd be running through the hall, not bursting, and get wacked. That's the way to learn, to play to the ability of your opponents."

Now, Alessio is running like crazy on the collegiate level. His third year in, the 5-foot 7-inch, 181-pound junior has rushed for 2,367 yards as a Minuteman, good enough for third on the school's career rushing list. In fact, Alessio has sprinted past All America Rene Ingoglia on the UMass rushing list for this season, gaining 1,151 yards on 140 carries.

See Frank gain 8.2 yards per carry so far this season.

This season, Alessio has shown major improvement in his game. He's doing the same type of

Turn to ALESSIO, page 8



DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Frank Alessio (20) and the Massachusetts football team close out the '95 season tomorrow at Connecticut.

Seniors say 'so long'

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

On Oct. 28, the University of Massachusetts football team had its own Senior Day, honoring the seniors rather anti- climatically for their efforts.

Three weeks later, the ultimate conclusion is here. Those 12 UMass players who have no years of eligibility left will play in a collegiate game for the last time as the Minutemen travel to Connecticut to take on the 7-3 Huskies (4-3 in Yankee Conference).

UMass (6-4, 3-4) is looking for it's seventh victory and, in the process, hoping to go .500 in conference play.

But since the win is of great importance in order to finish out the season with a commendable record, what's of greater magnitude is how those Minutemen players who put on the maroon and white jerseys play one more time.

The following seniors will end their careers tomorrow:

- Vernard Fennell, co-captain defensive end and team's sack leader before being knocked out for the season by a knee injury.
- Breon Parker, an All America cornerback last season, and the anchor of the Minuteman secondary for the past three seasons.
- Andrew McNeilly, the UMass starting quarterback for three seasons.
- Jason Tudryn, a two-year starter at free safety.
- Kevin Bourgoin, a three-year starter at wide receiver.
- Jason Mumford, a two-year starter at strong safety.
- DB Alex Korrentis and LB Brett Hammond, who both played key roles on special teams.
- Ken Bello, starting defensive end.
- Lou Brandt, backup center.
- Trejo Rust, starting linebacker.

There's also one more senior who will play the final game of his college career.

His name is Rene Ingoglia, and it is safe to say he has made a name for himself in his stay here at UMass.

He's rewritten the Minuteman record book 11 times. His 54 touchdowns are just two shy of setting a new Division I- AA record for career rushing TDs. He is also just two shy of getting the Yankee Conference record for career TDs. He has gained 4,565 yards on the ground in his career, which means he needs just 23 more to pass Delaware's Darryl Brown (4,587 yards) as the YanCon's all-time leading rusher.

Saturday will be his final chance to break all those records.

"It's the last collegiate game he'll ever play," said junior tailback Frank Alessio. "I'm excited to watch him. I want to see him play some tailback."

Ingoglia started his UMass football career at the tailback position, yet switched over to fullback to fill the hole.

He could very well have a chance to play both positions during tomorrow's 1 p.m. game against Skip Holtz' Huskies at Memorial Stadium.

UM will have a Devil of a time

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The first time the Massachusetts hockey team breaks out of its defensive zone tonight the Providence College Friars will react in the following manner.

The center will force the UMass puck-carrier wide to the boards. The defenseman on that side will step up and meet him, while the winger on that side will pull up alongside him. The opposing wing and defenseman will clog the center ice area, removing the puck-carrier's passing lanes.

It is called the neutral zone trap. This past summer it brought a Stanley Cup to exit 16W, and today it has brought the Friars, 14-17-6 last year, to the top spot in Hockey East.

Tabbed for seventh in the Hockey East preseason coaches' poll, the Friars found the ideal system to compliment their strengths and have worked it to perfection.

The connection between Providence and the swamps of Jersey runs deep. Devils General Manager Lou Lamoriello is a former player, coach and athletic director at Providence, and it appears that current Friar coach Paul Pooley has learned New Jersey's grinding style of play well from his predecessor.

The Friars and Devils are nearly identical in composition with each squad featuring rugged, poised and experienced defensemen. Scrappy, hard-nosed forwards who are quick on their feet and opportunistically look for turnovers fill the rosters of both teams. Meanwhile, Dan Dennis in the net has rivaled Martin Brodeur thus far in 1995, leading Hockey East in goals-against-average and save percentage.

The formula has paid dividends for the upstart Friars, who will battle the other surprising Hockey East squad this weekend.

UMass, tabbed for dead last by the coaches, has already equalled its league win total of last year, and with a sweep of PC, can overtake the Friars atop Hockey East.

"Ten points this weekend will put us in first place and a lot of people picked us to finish last," said senior Tom Perry. "Right now we've won three out of four [in Hockey East] and were starting to turn heads. Hopefully we'll continue to win this weekend and get ten more points."

The Minutemen will hope to counter the trap by scoring early, a method that has worked better than any tactical maneuver against New Jersey in the playoffs. Forcing Providence to open up its attack and abandon the trap is imperative for a UMass victory.

If the Friars are allowed to sit back in their trap and clog the neutral zone, like the Devils did so effectively this summer, problems will arise for UMass. The trap offers little space to work offensively, smothering opponents, limiting scoring opportunities and quality shots in particular.

"This is going to be frustrating," said senior forward Mike Evans. "It won't be pretty. We'll have to work hard and try to capitalize on the chances that we get.

"You can't really do anything against it, you've just got to fight through it and wait for your chances."

"It is a pretty interesting system that is designed to frustrate, but we're not going to let it frustrate us," said coach Joe Mallen. "We're going to focus on getting quality shots and finishing our chances."

To defeat the Friars, particularly tonight at Schneider Arena, UMass will have to maintain their composure in the face of a stifling and seemingly impenetrable neutral zone.

Saturday night on the William D. Mullins Center's Olympic-sized ice the Friars will face a challenge as they will be faced with more ice to defend. The Devils never faced this task; no NHL team plays on Olympic-sized ice.

Whether or not the Friars will have the team speed to compensate for the added ice surface will be an important factor that it is difficult to speculate about. The Mullins Center's sheer size could potentially render the trap useless and force the Friars to unwillingly open up their game.

Kellogg comes home with rival Brunson

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

Tonight's exhibition match-up between the Massachusetts men's basketball team and the Converse All-Stars will feature some familiar faces for the fans. They spent four years cheering one, and four years jeering the other.

UMass alum Derek Kellogg spent his entire college career as a guard for the Minutemen. Kellogg was a part of all four Atlantic 10 Championship teams and was named to three straight A-10 All-Academic teams.

Rick Brunson, a Salem native and three-year starter at Temple, will be in the back court for the Converse squad.

Kellogg and Brunson had spent their entire college careers as arch-rivals, both point guards in the volatile Temple- Massachusetts rivalry.

This will be the No. 7 ranked Minutemen's second and final tune up for the regular season, which will begin Nov. 28 at the Palace of Auburn Hills when they take on pre-season No. 1 Kentucky Wildcats in the Great Eight Tournament.

UMass' first exhibition game was a 105-75 thrashing of the Russian based Dinamo team Nov. 7. The winning margin wasn't indicative of the way the Minutemen played in the contest since UMass uncharacteristically made an abundance of turnovers.

Bright spots for the Minutemen included the play of Carmelo Travieso who reigned in 18 points as he shot 7-for- 15 from the field including four from three-point land.

Marcus Camby scored a team high 24 points against Dinamo and Dana Dingle contributed 17 to the UMass cause.

UMass Vs. Converse All Stars

Rick Brunson

Derek Kellogg

At the Mullins Center

7 p.m.

Edgar Padilla

UMass, Powell fall to UConn
Amy Powell and the UMass women's soccer team lost to the Huskies yesterday in the second round of the NCAAs (See Sports Weekend, page 12).

DVP is never left speechless
The Distinguished Visitors Program brings interesting and varied speakers to the UMass-Amherst campus (See story, page 2).

The Stars Are Insane
Teen Beat artists, Versus played a riveting set Thursday night at the Amherst College frontroom (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast
Mostly cloudy today with light winds and a high near 45. Tuesday should be rainy with a chance of showers. Expect temperatures to drop off steadily until Thanksgiving, with a low around 25.
HIGH: 48 LOW: 37 | HIGH: 38 LOW: 35 | HIGH: 40 LOW: 25

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 53 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, November 20, 1995

Darden relays significance of trial

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

O.J. Simpson trial prosecutor Christopher Darden may have surprised many in attendance at Smith College's John M. Greene Hall on Saturday by opting to focus much of his hour-long speech on the often overlooked aspect of the controversial case — domestic violence.

However, despite the serious nature of his primary topic and that of the other issues addressed surrounding the Simpson case and society itself, Darden demonstrated a sense of humor unseen by the millions of American television viewers who watched the Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney during the 16-month ordeal.

"See, I do smile sometimes," Darden quipped after the standing ovation which followed his introduction.

He was also quick to dispel recent rumors of his engagement to fellow Simpson prosecutor District Attorney Marcia Clark.

"I'm not engaged to Marcia," he said. "She hasn't asked me yet. But when she does she better have a big ring."

Although moments of banter would continue throughout the evening, Darden soon altered his tone, first thanking the audience for their support of him.

"I'm honored to be here with real Americans, real patriots," he said. "People who believe in justice."

Referring to the Simpson trial as a "tough case," Darden said the prosecution should have been victorious, but added that "God works in mysterious ways."

"We may have lost the battle, but we haven't lost the war," he said. "It's a war against domestic violence."

Continuing on the theme of domestic abuse, Darden said he regarded battering a companion as "a cowardly act," and warned current batterers of what he claimed to view as a new legal and societal perspective on such activities.

"The tides are changing," he said.

"Baby Justice"

Drawing from his own personal experience with domestic violence in arraignment court with an individual he described as a handsome and a seemingly upstanding citizen, Darden wove the harrowing tale of 21-year-old Cornelius Lee. According to Darden, his initial impression of Lee was destroyed upon reading Lee's files, which revealed the recent history of a man who would eventually murder a five-month-old child.

"'How could this be?'" Darden said he asked himself in disbelief. "'How could this happen?'"

As it turns out, Darden said, Lee had been seeing an 18- year-old woman for four weeks, and had become increasingly obsessive about the relationship. When the woman decided to cease contact with him because of his behavior, Lee first begged for forgiveness, and, after she repeatedly rejected him, turned to stalking.

On one evening, according to Darden, the woman was awakened by noise outside her window only to find Lee, who escaped before police arrived, on the roof adjacent to hers.

Soon after the roof incident, Lee was to commit the heinous crime which landed him in arraignment court, Darden said.

"There was a fuse burning in Cornelius that night in Brentwood," he said.

Seeking revenge for his ex-girlfriend's refusal to see him, Lee threw gasoline, followed by a match, through into her lighted room one night, unaware that the women's mother was the neighborhood babysitter, and that his victim would be the infant asleep on the bed under the open window.

Of the onlookers to the tragedy, Darden said there was only one willing to attempt to retrieve the child from the flame-engulfed home.

"I call that baby, 'Baby Justice,'" he said, explaining his metaphor by drawing a comparison to the passive crowd outside the burning house and the Simpson jurors. "We shouldn't be disillusioned just because they didn't have the courage."

Post-O.J. life

"I know that many of you were upset with the verdict, and I know that you know that I was very upset with the verdict," said Darden, who broke down in tears at a post- trial press conference.

Darden said that when he returned home following the close of the case, he did not watch television or read newspapers for a time, but did open the thousands of letters he received over the course of the trial. Although he was pleased with many of the sentiments expressed, Darden said the abusive content of some letters disturbed him deeply.

"I'm going to write a book and publish some of the letters where people called me names," he said. "I'm glad they did because now I'm going to make money off them."

Race seemed to play a major role in the letters as well, Darden noted, a trend he said annoyed him in some

Turn to DARDEN, page 3

COURTESY OF FOLKTREE

Attorney Christopher Darden spoke at Smith College's John M. Greene Hall Saturday evening.

Darden audience lacks diversity

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

A predominantly white crowd, comprised mainly of middle-aged people, filled into John M. Greene Hall at Smith College Saturday evening to see O.J. Simpson case prosecutor Christopher Darden.

Although the auditorium was not filled to capacity, many of the people present said they had followed the trial on some level, and were drawn to the Darden speech to hear a key perspective.

"I'm here just out of personal interest," said Hadley resident Bob Cummings, Sr. "I couldn't stand to watch [the trial] on the telly, so I thought I'd get it first hand."

On the other end of the spectrum were University of Massachusetts alumni Jean and George Gromacki, residents of Deerfield, both of whom avidly watched the trial from start to finish.

"We always watched Chris Darden," said Jean Gromacki, who added that between she and her lawyer husband, they saw the majority of the trial. "We were really just impressed with Chris, especially with his closing argument. We think he did a fantastic job."

First-year University student Dara Levinson was one of the few in the collegiate ranks to attend the speech.

"It sounded really interesting."

Turn to CROWD, page 2

Sleep-out raises $300 for homeless shelters

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Twenty-one students spent Friday night sleeping outdoors in 20 degree weather, with only cardboard boxes insulated with newspaper as shelter and a fire in a garbage can for heat. Through their sponsors, they raised $300 for local homeless shelters.

Altogether, the University of Massachusetts chapter of MASSPIRG raised about $2000 during National Hunger and Homelessness Week, Nov. 13–17, as well as collecting canned food and clothing.

The week's activities ended with a Five College fundraising concert and the sleep-out.

Three hundred people attended the concert in the basement of Butterfield Residence Hall, which featured the Smithereens from Smith, Greenly Spirit, Bradley Skaight, Clovis Point and the Chet Keefe band. The performance brought in $300 for the Food Bank of Western Mass. and about 100 canned goods for the Amherst Survival Center, according to Stacey Shackford, coordinator of the Hunger and Homelessness campaign.

The sleep-out was just as successful in terms of fundraising, even though there were only 21 sponsored participants. Jennifer Iveson, a volunteer coordinator for MASSPIRG, raised $170 — more than half the total income.

"It was a lot of fun," Shackford said, "but the participants also said that it gave them a great chance to think about the issue."

"I learned exactly how cold it could get at night," said sopho-

Turn to SLEEP-OUT, page 2

2 in 20 floor invites public

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts sophomore Chaya Radin had some trouble sleeping one night during her freshman orientation. Looking for something to occupy her time, she started leafing through a booklet on University resources.

It was at this point that Radin says she encountered an item that changed her life, a "little blurb" on the 2 in 20 Floor for Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Students and Their Heterosexual Allies.

The next day, feeling she "had a lot of guts," Radin decided to mark her housing Preference Form with a decision to move to the floor, one of the University's several Special Interest Residential Programs (SIRP).

The following September, Radin moved her things to the fourth floor of Mary Lyon Residence Hall. She had virtually no idea of what to expect.

By contrast, University students who attend the 2 in 20 Floor's Open House tonight at 7 p.m. in the Mary Lyon basement will be greeted with a wealth of information on the program.

In addition to presentations on the floor's history and moving-in procedure, prospective residents will hear stories by current residents and be welcomed for a tour of the residence hall itself.

The 2 in 20 Floor was created in the fall of 1992 to serve two functions in the un-campus residential community.

First, the program provides physical and emotional safety for residents by shielding them from homophobic harassment that sometimes exists in University residence halls.

"I did not want to go through what I went through in high school," Radin says, making reference to harassment she received as a lesbian at her high school in Williamstown.

"I was harassed and had to hide my orientation from my friends," she says. "I knew that no matter how strange a place [the 2 in 20 Floor] might be, I could always hang up whatever posters I wanted to and talk like I wanted to."

The second reason for the SIRP is to foster a sense of community among GLBT students and their heterosexual allies, many of whom have never had to opportunity to interact with GLBT people before arriving at the University.

"I did not know a single gay person my own age until I moved here," Radin says. "I only knew like five or six [GLBT] people and they were around 40."

Since moving to the floor a year ago, Radin has found the freedom to be a lot more open about her life than she had ever been before.

"It was such a relief... so different from high school," Radin recalls, adding that she spent most of her first semester "saying everything I'd wanted to say in my whole entire time in high school."

6-day shutdown over, both sides feel victory

By Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration and Republican congressional leaders ended a six-day budget standoff Sunday night, sending federal employees back to work after the White House committed to speedy negotiations to balance the budget in seven years.

"Tomorrow the government will go back to work and now the debate will begin in earnest," President Clinton said, appearing in the White House press room shortly after the deal was announced. By voice votes, the Senate and House adopted identical one-day measures to reopen the government. The Senate also approved a bill funding the government through Dec. 15 and the House planned to follow on Monday.

Both sides declared victory — Republicans because the deal reflected their seven-year timetable and Clinton because it spoke of protecting programs he considers important.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici (R-N.M.) said, "I hope in the next three or four weeks we will produce a balanced budget with the president on board."

In the four-week spending bill, the White House and Republicans agreed the balanced budget legislation would "protect future generations, secure Medicare solvency, reform welfare, provide adequate funding for Medicaid, education, agriculture, national defense, veterans and the environment."

The bill does not, as the White House had sought, raise the government's $4.9 trillion borrowing ceiling. However, private experts agree the Treasury Department can avoid the ceiling for months by tapping retirement trust funds set aside for the civil service.

Sunday's agreement followed a long day of negotiating against a backdrop of restlessness among federal employees and the public. Forty percent of the federal work force — nearly 800,000 employees — have been on furlough.

In a compromise that was key to the agreement, the two sides said the Congressional Budget Office will measure whether or not any eventual budget deal eliminates deficits, but only after consulting with the White House and other government and private economists.

The argument over whose technical and economic assumptions are used is important because the White House budget office's forecast would permit nearly $500 billion more in spending over seven years than the congressional office's prediction.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole (R-Kan.) and House Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.) and their chief deputies held a news conference where they were barely able to contain their euphoria.

Professor awarded for encouraging computer research

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts computer science department creates technology to change the way people live and work, and it has received recognition for those achievements.

For example, the American Association for the Advancement of Science chose Professor William Richards Adrion as a fellow.

When asked why the association recognized him, Adrion mentioned his re-organization of the research programs in the computer science department during his tenure as head of the department.

Adrion said that one of his goals upon arrival at the University was to diversify computer research. Before he came to UMass, all computer research was focussed on traditional computing such as hardware and operating systems, but he encouraged research in "lower" technology such as cars, home appliances and various other consumer electronics.

In addition to fostering computer research in other technologies, he said he continued supporting traditional research.

Computer research

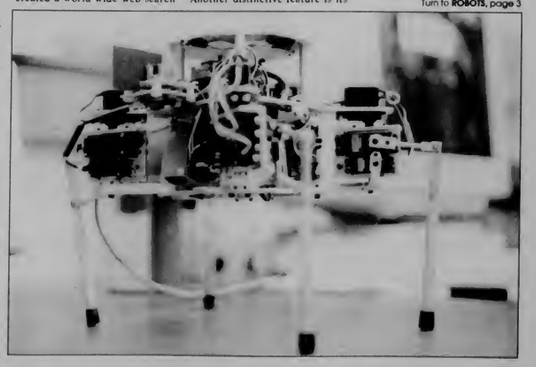
In 1992, the National Science Foundation granted the University money to continue advanced computer research, said Adrion. The grants were used to officially form different programs with in the computer science department. The research in non-traditional applications of computers was renamed the Center for Real-Time Intelligent Complex Computing Systems, and the traditional research program was named Center of Intelligent Information Retrieval.

The retrieval organization conducts research in data retrieval and archiving. The retrieval organization created a world wide web search program known as INQUIRY.

INQUIRY searches web pages in a unique manner, said Robert Cook, senior systems programmer. He explained that most search programs simply scan for bold text, but INQUIRY scans all the text. Another distinctive feature is its ease of use, Cook said. A full sentence may be typed in, and the computer will search for the sentence rather than each word as a separate keyword.

The search program is currently in

Turn to ROBOTS, page 3



ELIZABETH BROWN/COLLEGIAN

"The Thing", an invention which demonstrates four-legged movement, was built by Bill MacDonald, a computer science graduate student.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Nov. 20

Open House — The 2 in 20 Floor will be hosting an Open House in the Mary Lyon Lounge at 7 p.m. Anyone who identifies as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender or as a heterosexual ally and is interested in learning more about the program or wishes to move to the floor is encouraged to attend. For more information contact the Crabtree Cluster Office at 545-1506.

Psychology Colloquium — "The Motivation to Think: Effects on Attitudes and Social Judgements," a lecture by Ohio State University Professor Richard Petty is in Rm. 304 Tobin Hall at 4 p.m.

Anime Showing — The UMass Japanese Anime and Manga Society is holding its weekly meeting in Campus Center Room 911–915. A brief business meeting will begin at 6 p.m. with various Japanese animation films shown, 7 p.m. – 1 a.m. All are welcome to attend. For more information, contact 546–5777.

Fill–A–Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill–A–Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545–3327.

Support Group — "Making Peace" is the subject of REFLECT's support group this evening at 7 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center. REFLECT, the Five College student organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of a friend or family member.

Tuesday, Nov. 21

Fill–A–Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill–A–Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545–3327.

Support Group — "Memorialization" is the subject of REFLECT's support group this evening at 7 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center. REFLECT, the Five College student organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of a friend or family member.

Concert — "Chamber Music at UMass," the first in a new series of faculty concerts will be held in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Featured music will include works by Loeffler, Beethoven, Ravel and Janacek. $3 for students, $6 for all others.

Concert — "Jazz It Up — Jazz Lab Ensemble", will play in Hampden at 8 p.m. For more information contact, 545–1511.

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177–178. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

Campus Center Closings — During the Thanksgiving break, hotel and public areas will be open, retail and food areas will be closed. Access to floors, loading dock, and offices by those wishing to work can be accommodated by arrangement with Building Services at 545–1365 prior to Nov. 23.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Studcnt Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five–College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission st ould be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10–11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8–10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323–6330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1–800–750–2016, The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1–800–696–7752.

Domestic Exchange — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding information sessions on Tuesdays and Wednesdays throughout November and December in Campus Center Room 811, from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. For more information, contact the Domestic Exchange Office, E– 26 Machmer Hall, 545–5351

Charles Murray to speak in Dec.

Visitors Program tries to bring speakers in a variety of fields

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

The next guests of the Distinguished Visitors Program (DVP) will be Charles Murray, co–author of the controversial book, "The Bell Curve", and Harvard professor Alvin Poussaint, both of whom will speak at the University of Massachusetts on Dec. 4.

"The DVP provides students an opportunity to learn about a variety of topics like culture, entertainment, journalism and science," said Treasurer Raphael Maryakhin.

The program was started about 30 years ago with the purpose of bringing speakers from a wide variety of fields to give students lectures, debates, and discussions on any activity of the human experience, according to Maryakhin.

"We also have political commentaries on urgent issues, which is a big concern for us," he said.

Among some of the visitors who have come to the University of Massachusetts via the DVP have been Chuck D, of the rap group Public Enemy and author Kurt Vonnegut. Last week, Katie Koestner, who had previously appeared in Time magazine, spoke about her experience with date rape.

However, the DVP has to contend with is the complaints that it doesn't represent the needs of the students, according to Greaves.

"We encourage any one with ideas to come forth," she said. "Anyone can become a member. We try to get a large number of people with different personal interests."

Greaves said DVP has to deal with a recent budget cut of 10 percent.

"Before, all of our functions were free," she said. "But because of the cut, we have to charge non–students now."

Maryakhin said a friend who was a DVP member at the time, and has since graduated, got him involved.

"I sort of ended up doing it," he said.

Maryakhin is now the DVP Treasurer, and a member of the press committee.

The position of president for the past three years has been held by Tara Greaves. As president, Greaves is responsible for running DVP meetings, and is in charge of the public relations between students and agents, and the speakers that they request.

■ crowd

continued from page 1

she said.

Smith College junior Laverne Williams was another who said she was intrigued by the premise of hearing Darden speak.

"I just wanted to be here," she said. "I wanted to see what he has planned for the future."

However, there were only a handful of blacks at the speech, which addressed a trial whose outcome saw major division between blacks and whites in their opinions of the verdict. George Gromacki offered his reason as to why there may have been a low black representation.

"I would probably say there aren't too many [Blacks] in the area unless you count Holyoke and Springfield," he said.

Williams, herself black, gave another possible explanation.

"Maybe they were afraid of confrontation here," she said.

■ sleep-out

continued from page 1

more anthropology major Jeff Lourie.

There are approximately 25,000 homeless people in Massachusetts, and $20–60 million hungry people worldwide, depending upon the definition of hungry, Shackford said.

First–year student Liz Carney, who was involved in several of the activities last week, said she believes the environment in the job market and "unforeseen circumstances" are primary causes of homelessness.

"If you're living from paycheck to paycheck, it's really hard to deal with an emergency," Carney said.

"People don't acknowledge it because there's such an aura of shame around homelessness," Lourie said. "A lot of people walking around looking like college students are really homeless. It's just not talked about."

Lourie said the sleep–out "opened people's eyes to what the problem is all about," especially when students looked out their windows and saw people sleeping in boxes on the lawn.

MASSPIRG's Hunger and Homelessness Week also included a clothing and canned food drive. The clothing drive was actually more successful than the can drive, according to Shackford, who said many students were sorting through their clothes before the Thanksgiving holiday.

The Skip–A–Meal program was the most financially successful program of the week, bringing in $1200 for the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts. MASSPIRG volunteers asked students on the University meal plan to sign up to skip a meal on Nov. 15. Food Services had agreed to donate $1.50 per meal, and 800 students participated, Shackford said.

The Supermarket Sweep, however, "didn't go as well as we planned," Shackford said. Although MASSPIRG had planned to distribute "wish lists" with items needed by local shelters and soup kitchens, one major supermarket would only allow a collection box, not soliciting.

The Hunger Banquet at Earthfoods, also on Nov. 15, illustrated the worldwide pattern of food distribution. About 50 people attended the dinner, raising about $200.

NEED $150!
WELL-KNOWN COMPUTER COMPANY SEEKS COLLEGE STUDENTS INTERESTED IN PURCHASING COMPUTER HARDWARE AND PRINTERS. WILL PAY $150.
$150 REBATE

Macintosh Performa® 636CD
8MB RAM/250MB hard drive, CD-ROM drive, 15" color monitor, keyboard, mouse and all the software you're likely to need.

Color StyleWriter® 2400 w/ CardShop Plus™
Ink cartridge and cable included.

Looking for a great deal on a computer and a printer can be a whole lot easier than finding a roommate. Because right now, when you purchase a Macintosh® Performa® from the 630 series and an Apple® printer, you'll get $150 back. Just think about it. You can get your work done faster, it will look great and you can receive an extra $150 at the same time. So take a moment to look into the power that can keep you ahead. The power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.® Apple

Visit The University Store Computer Department For More Information

UNIVERSITY STORE ☆ Campus Center 545-2619 Mon. - Fri 9-5 Sat 11 - 3

Purchase any Apple Macintosh Performa 630 series or 640CD DOS-compatible computer along with any Apple printer and receive a $150 mail in rebate. (Offer valid through January 15, 1996, while supplies last and subject to availability. If you have any questions about the "Performa + Printer + Payback" offer, please call 800-950-6354 or see stores for a complete list of details. ©1995 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the apple logo, Macintosh, Performa, StyleWriter and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. PowerPC is a trademark of International Business Machines Corporation, used under license therefrom. CardShop Plus is a registered trademark of Broderbund. All Macintosh computers are designed to be accessible to individuals with disability. To learn more (U.S. only), call 800-600-7808 or TTY 800-755-0601.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

The Mighty Boss

Dicky Barrett, lead singer of the Mighty Mighty Bosstones, worked the crowd into a frenzy Saturday night at Pearl Street.

Pregnant mother, children slain

Suspects in murders removed live, healthy baby from womb

By Brian Bergstein
Associated Press

ADDISON, Ill. — Three people were charged Sunday with killing a pregnant woman and two of her children and slicing open the woman's womb to remove her infant son, police said.

The infant, named Elijah by relatives, was found with one of the suspects Friday, authorities said. The child was in good health at a hospital.

Investigators said they did not know who Elijah's father is, and they would not discuss a motive for the crimes.

Elijah was found hours after Deborah Evans, 28, and two of her children were found murdered. A third child, 17-month-old Jordan, was found unharmed, shaking in a bedroom of the slain woman's apartment.

The body of 10-year-old Samantha was found in the apartment with Ms. Evans, and the body of 8-year-old Joshua was found by police about 12 hours later in an alley in Maywood, about 10 miles to the east of this Chicago suburb.

All three had been stabbed, and Ms. Evans also was shot in the head.

Police said Elijah was cut out of his mother's womb during the murders. They refused to give more details of how the crime unfolded, saying the investigation is pending. They did not notify Ms. Evans' relatives until Saturday, after the baby had survived. Ms. Evans was due to give birth Monday.

A memorial of teddy bears, cards, footballs and basketballs was propped up Sunday outside the family's apartment complex. A family friend, Earl Nix, added a fishing rod because he had planned to take Joshua fishing next summer. "Me and Josh were always talking about fishing together," he said.

The suspects were charged with murder and kidnapping.

"It was more than domestic, but it was not devil worship," said DuPage County State's Attorney Anthony Peccarelli. "It was planned. Here's a woman who's home with her children, and somebody comes into the home; there apparently is no forced entry," he said.

He also said there appeared to be no relationship to drugs. In custody Sunday were 24-year-old Levern Ward, whom they believe to be Jordan's father; Jacqueline Annette Williams, 28, and Fedell Caffey, 22. Elijah was found with Ms. Williams.

Poland's presidency goes to Communist

By Andrzej Stylinski
Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — A polished former Communist, Aleksander Kwasniewski, defeated faded Solidarity hero Lech Walesa by a slim margin in a presidential runoff Sunday, according to projections from the state polling agency.

Kwasniewski won 51.4 percent of the vote to 48.6 percent for the incumbent, according to unofficial ballot results compiled by state television's OBOP agency from 1,150 of 22,472 precincts.

The projections had a 1 percent margin of error, and the race was so close neither candidate acknowledged victory or defeat. The election was a symbolic duel between Poland's two major postwar forces. Walesa keyed his campaign to fears of a Communist resurgence while Kwasniewski insisted he could be trusted to transcend his party's totalitarian past.

Kwasniewski, 41, had already left his headquarters when the projections were announced, triggering a joyful frenzy among youthful campaign workers. They danced, screamed and sang "May He Live 100 Years."

The 52-year-old Walesa never appeared at his campaign headquarters, where supporters fell silent upon hearing the news and slowly began filing out.

Walesa, the former Solidarity leader, had steadily lost support during his five-year term. He looked dour as he thanked supporters in a brief appearance just after polls closed and retired with his family.

■ robots

continued from page 1

use on Thomas, the Library of Congress's web page. Lotus, a Boston based software firm, also uses INQUIRY on their technical support Web page.

Robots

Adrion said that under his leadership, the Center for Autonomous Real–Time Systems, a robotics research group at UMass, continued to further its studies of artificial intelligence and helped begin the process of realizing such theories of "smart" assembly lines which can dramatically cut costs of production.

"Smart assembly lines will allow for products specifically designed for an individual," said Jefferson Coelho, a graduate student who is researching robotics.

The University robotics lab is one of only eight labs with a rare robotic hand, and they have two arms unlike most other labs, according to Coelho. He said the UMass computer science department was the first to successfully use a robot to change a light bulb without breaking it.

In addition to researching manipulation with robotic arms, they are researching locomotion, said graduate student Bill MacDonald. He said they hope to create a robot which can easily traverse rough terrain.

Marketing the research

However, Adrion said these three organizations had nowhere to go with the research, so in 1988 he and a few other professors at the University helped create the Applied Computing Systems Institute of Massachusetts which assisted in finding applications for the technology.

"Companies aren't interested in basic research, but universities do basic research for educational purposes," Adrion said. "However, the University isn't well structured to develop the research," so the UMass computer science department created the institute.

Profits from the institute go to the University which is re– directed through out the campus, said Adrion.

"[The institute] does straight contract work, but it must include basic research because there is no advantage in doing development unless the University can benefit directly," he said.

The institute is operated like a company with a board of directors which is made up of both individuals of the University and the business community. The institute does about $1.5 million in business and only has about 15 full time employees, Adrion said.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science will award Adrion with the fellowship in February.

ELIZABETH BROWN/COLLEGIAN

This robotics arm will pick up blocks and place them within the box. It also picks up light bulbs and screws them into a socket.

Adrion accumulates accolades computer science re-organization

Professor William Richards Adrion believes he was chosen for the American Association for the Advancement of Science award because his re–organization of the research programs in the computer science department at the University of Massachusetts.

Yet, Adrion will not know the official reason for the recognition until he is made a fellow in February.

"Most professionally societies that have fellowships base it on scientific achievement, while the AAAS also recognizes people for contribution to science policy or education," Adrion said.

He said he assumes he was recognized for both advancing science education and policy.

Also, most associations which grant fellowships often allow a person to simply request an application while the American Association for the Advancement of Science has a committee which chooses fellows, Adrion said.

The Association for Computing Machinery also named him a fellow.

Adrion came to the University about nine years ago to become the head of the department, a position which he held for eight years.

Meanwhile, the computer science department at the University grew and diversified. As a result, it began to receive grants from the National Science Foundation to continue research in differing areas of computer science.

— Matthew Wurtzel

■ Darden

continued from page 1

cases. Several people would indicate their race in their introduction, he said, and others even used racial epithets.

"Some white writers used that nasty little word that I basically risked my life for to keep it out of the courtroom," Darden said.

He added that others threatened backlash against blacks both in the political and business worlds, specifically looking to "destroy affirmative action."

"I was trying to stand up for everybody," Darden said.

Race and the trial

In the wake of the Simpson trial, many polls indicated a distinct dichotomy between blacks and whites in their beliefs about the validity of the jury's decision, leading many to believe the verdict was racially motivated due to the presence of nine blacks on the jury. Darden said these claims were presumptuous from his perspective.

"I can't imagine how anyone can come to the conclusion that the decision was race–based if I haven't even come to that conclusion," he said. "I'm not saying it wasn't race– based, but I'm not saying it was race–based."

Darden also addressed the question of what constitutes reasonable doubt, a legal term he said judges in California are reluctant to allow lawyers to explain to jurors.

"We ask jurors to use common sense," he said. "But not everyone has common sense, or what we perceive as common sense."

Yet Darden also said common sense is relative to "life experiences," especially those of blacks in urban environments.

"You find comfort in hearing a police siren here in Northampton," he said. "In L.A., when some people hear a police siren, they tremble in fear."

Recently, while a child stood nearby, a young black mother was shot seven times — six times in the back — by Los Angeles Police Department officers, Darden said.

"I bet if it had been the Northampton Police Department, that mother would still be alive," he said.

In his own family, Darden said, there was an incident which would give him an understanding of racial injustice at an early age. Darden's grandfather, Walter, was shot and killed in the 1930s in Decatur, Georgia by an angry white landowner incensed by the sharecropper's defiance of a white citizen.

According to Darden, his relatives were neither able to remove the body from the shallow grave into which it was buried, nor could they press charges against the killer. Darden said the murder and multiple similar past travesties are probably the basis of the modern black outlook on the legal process, including that of the black jurors.

"If [the murder] is the foundation of our experience," he said. "Then what is the basis of the jurors' experience."

Win a Dinner for Two at Judie's!

From the UMass Recycling Program

It's simple. Just submit a mascot or slogan proposal to the UMass Recycling Program and if your entry is chosen you will receive a gift certificate for $50.00

Your entry should be photo ready if possible; a finished product that can be reproduced easily is preferred. All mascot and/or slogan entries will become the property of the UMass Recycling Program. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible and should submit their entries to the UMass Office of Waste Management, Physical Plant in care of April.

All entries must be recieved by December 1st to be considered for the award.

Questions? Call the Office of Waste Management at 5-6528

UMass Division of Continuing Education

· January 2-25 · Winter Session 1996

· More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
· Noncredit workshops
· Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
· Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register Now!

Call for a free course catalog · (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education · University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Dayvinon Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Tony "Xai" Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Adviser/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is entirely independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Chaos in Palestine

Israel will never find peace with the Palestinians until the Palestinians find peace amongst themselves. The Palestinian peoples are blindly led into the future, while their leaders savagely fight to gain recognition as the authority of the Palestinian movement.

The Palestinian Liberation Organization, led by the notorious Yassir Arafat, has realized, after many years of terrorist acts against the Israeli's and the rest of the world, that peace will not be achieved through those means. Arafat's struggle has changed its objectives from obtaining Israel in its entirety to receiving a few selected areas along the Mediterranean coastline, and in the Hills of Judea and Samaria. Arafat's Kaffiyeh that once symbolized terrorism and violence now is a great symbol of the Palestinian people. He has realized that only through peace can he reach his goals.

Maybe by attacking the school children and peaceful farmers of the Northern towns of Israel they will achieve their objective. I don't think so.

Guy Chayoun

Arafat has already visited Leah Rabin twice in Tel Aviv to pay respects for her husband's death. He has openly referred to Yitzhak Rabin as a "friend," and shared his condolences with the rest of Israel. That is commendable, but unfortunately the rest of his people don't feel that way.

There are many extremist groups among the Palestinians who are against peace and the peace process with Israel. These groups will hold fast to the aspiration of conquering all of Israel. Unfortunately, a larger percentage of the Palestinians are in support of these extremist groups, such as the derelicts in the radical "Hamas" faction, than of the peaceful movement of Arafat.

The Palestinians should not easily be forgiven for all the crimes they have committed throughout this half of the century. The terrorist acts that put the world in fear were all done by a people who notoriously are afraid of the dark. We should not forget the airline hijacking that plagued the 1970s, all in the name of the Liberation of Palestine.

More recently, we should not overlook the bombing on Dizengoff Street that killed many innocent victims last year. Was the sacrifice of those people who were drinking coffee, and enjoying the weather on Dizengoff Street imperative to freeing the Palestinians from their "bondage"? Or earlier this year, when a bomb was set off in a bus in Jerusalem killing a number of innocent victims, including an American student from Brandeis University — did that help their movement? Maybe by attacking the school children and peaceful farmers of the Northern towns of Israel they will achieve their objective. I don't think so.

How can Americans sympathize with a people that has preached hatred for the "American Capitalists" in order to gain favor from the closed ears of the other Arab nations? How soon have we forgotten that the Palestinians favored Saddam Hussein and Iraq in the Gulf war?

Even the other Arab nations minimally sympathize with the Palestinians; it stems more from spite for Israel, than genuine sympathy. Egypt refused to take the area of Gaza when they were offered it, not wanting to bring more problems to their own country. If their own Arab brothers can turn their backs on them, what is Israel supposed to do?

There is a total lack of democracy in the Palestinian world. Leadership is gained through military power and intimidation rather than the will of the people. Up until recently, every time a new leader would talk about making peace with the Jews, he would suffer a brutal death or maiming. Even today, the different Arab factions in the occupied territory are killing each other off like flies.

The Palestinians cannot seem to agree on anything regarding their state of existence. Arafat works toward peace, while the other groups work to stop him. If land were to be granted to the Palestinian people, a bloody civil war within the "liberated Palestine" would erupt, while the world (including the Arab countries) would sit back and watch. The Palestinians as a people need to decide where they wish to go in the future, and then take diplomatic steps to reach that destination. Until then, the chaotic savagery that is going in the occupied territories will continue. Wake up Palestine.

Guy Chayoun is a UMass student.

The stigma of therapy

A couple of weeks ago, I had just gotten off the bus at Haigis Mall when I ran into a friend (I'll call her Jill). We stopped and had the usual chit-chat that occurs when you run into someone on Haigis Mall.

"Where are you headed?" she asked.

"I'm on my way to Tobin for therapy," I answered.

"Oh, you have therapy in Tobin — where? The Psychological Services Center?" she replied.

"Yes," I said. "You don't have to whisper the word 'therapy' like its a bad word."

"I know," she said rather embarrassedly.

"Therapy, therapy, THERAPY, THERAPY," I yelled at the top of my lungs.

My friend Jill blushed and seemed rather embarrassed that I had no qualms about going to therapy.

"I don't mind telling you that I'm going to therapy — its something I do for myself," I said. "See you later."

As I walked off, I thought about the long road I had travelled to get to the point where I was now.

I grew up in a dysfunctional and abusive home and was beaten by my mother on a regular basis. I moved out when I was 16 and moved around, lived with a foster family and then eventually wound up in a homeless shelter for teenagers. When I first moved out, I started therapy and have continued on a regular basis since then. I have had five therapists, with therapy a little more different each time.

I have a lot of anger to deal with towards my mom and a lot of hurt that I need to deal with. I have many long-buried memories that I suddenly remember. I have to realize why the things I do now are because of how my mom treated me and what I can do to fix them.

However, there is a stigma attached to therapy. For thousands of years, the mentally ill and those seeking therapy have been the subject of criticism, ridicule, ostracization, punishment and even death.

My friend Jill blushed and seemed rather embarrassed that I had no qualms about going to therapy.

Marni E. Helfner

Hitler had hundreds of thousands of the mentally ill shot with drugs and then burned to hide the bodies. Their families were told that they had died of pneumonia.

During the '50s and '60s, dozens of "sanitariums" in the United States and Europe were exposed for being little more than giant camps. The people who lived there were treated like animals, allowed to wallow in filth and were beaten and raped on a regular basis.

People who are institutionalized for their mental illness or are "found out" by others have often lost their jobs, families and support networks.

I used to be very afraid that if I told anyone I saw a therapist and suffered from chronic depression, I would lose everything I had and be ridiculed for my "weakness."

My third therapist helped me solve my problem with the stigma of therapy by telling me to look at it another way. I don't have to look at therapy as a way of curing an "illness." There is nothing "wrong" with me; I am trying to look at how I can better myself. She simply said, "Going to therapy is like taking a class in yourself."

"You learn about who you are and why you are that way," she continued. "There's nothing wrong with you. Lots of people go to therapy for long periods and short periods — there's nothing wrong with questioning who you are and what you believe."

I believe that my therapy helps me. I believe that it helps me to cope with the stress and anger in my life. It is the only place in my life where I can go and say anything I want, feel anything I feel, and know that there are no repercussions. It is where I go to unlock the door that keeps all the bad stuff inside.

There's nothing wrong with therapy — only with the people who believe there is something wrong with therapy.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e-mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu.

Opinion/Editorial

The father's handbook of knowledge

I want "The Book," now.

I have a theory about fathers, and it all revolves around "The Book."

My father knows everything. I mean everything. We could be in Paris, France and the man would know the back roads.

"Hey Dad, you've been here before?"

"Nope."

My Dad taught me how to score a baseball game, tried to teach me a curve-ball (sorry about the shiner, Dad). He knows the best restaurants in every major city and what to order there. He probably knows Jesus Christ's shoe size. I just haven't asked him yet.

Tim White

I was thinking about all of this the other day and I realized that my Dad was at his early 20s when my parents had my oldest brother. That really scared me. I have no plans to have a kid any time soon, but I still have to call my Dad and ask him about stuff like changing the oil in my car or how to barbecue.

When am I going to obtain this knowledge? Well, don't worry men, I've come up with the answer: when you have your first child, you get "The Book."

The Book has all the information a father needs: how to fix the car, tie knots, make flies for fly fishing, how to build a deck, how to play hockey (hell, every sport, even curling) and how to deal with the injuries you get from these sports. There a million other things, I just haven't needed the answers yet.

So, this how I figure it's going to happen: I'll still be in my hospital skivvies fresh from the delivery room when a man in an all white suit and a heavy southern drawl will approach.

"Mr. White?"

"Yes?"

"Congratulations on the spud."

"Spud?"

"Yeah, the kid... here, I have a gift for you."

"Um, do I know you?"

He'll hand me a package, in it will be a thick black book with gold letters that glow on the front reading "The Book."

"Now, don't lose this," he'll say. "You can never get another."

"I'm sorry, you really freak me out, could you go now?"

"Just read it Mr. White, I have to be going anyway... Excuse me, Mr. Johnson? Congratulations on the spud."

The key point is, you can't lose the book. Those are the fathers that don't know what's going on and have that blank look on them like a deer caught in headlights.

You probably should read it cover to cover, but you can use for it as a reference book, too. If your Dad ever executes himself to go to the bathroom after a really tough question, he's probably going to look up the answer. I'm going to check behind the toilet when I go home next...

There are a few things left out of The Book. For example: how to win an argument with your wife or understand women in general. Maybe women get a book too, and it tells all on how to argue and understand men. I think they get theirs when they're born though.

I'm sure you can't let anyone else read the book either, but you can exchange information with other fathers.

"Hey Frank, I can't find my Book and my daughter just asked me how to put up dry wall, can you look it up for me?"

I suppose I won't be holding my breath for The Book. I'll just keep draining my father for all the answers he has — I should start writing this stuff down.

Maybe, as our fathers get older, they write their own books, and they are the men in the white suits who appear on the birth day of our child.

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

Idiots surfing the Internet

Just when you thought it was safe to travel the information super highway, you crash into a roadblock. As with any other source of communication, some idiots have to abuse it. In this case not only did someone abuse the system, but they used it to spout violence. These weren't extremists or crotchety, old men; these were 18-year-old Ivy Leaguers.

Free speech and advanced technology might not make such good bedfellows. You give someone a new way to spread their message to millions of listeners, and there is bound to be trouble. Instant communication via e-mail is a relatively new phenomena for me.

I thought it was pretty cool to talk to my out-of-state friends minus the hefty phone bills. I haven't quite mastered the art of "surfing the net," though. I never imagined the power these computer screens could hold.

Powerful and disheartening images have been on our illustrious information super highway these days. In particular, four Cornell University freshmen took it upon themselves three weeks ago to use the Internet for a joke amongst friends. The hilarious cyber garble they sent, which was called, "Top 75 reasons why bitches should not have freedom of speech" landed in cyber space with a bang.

I think I have a pretty good sense of humor. I don't even flinch when I hear about the numerous nude shots one can download in the comfort of their own Lazee-boy. Computer dorks will have their fun, right? I do not, however, find "jokes" that depend upon images of raping women the slightest bit amusing.

In their defense, the four students claimed that everything they included on their list could be seen on television, in music lyrics or newspapers. This is a claim that's getting a little hard to swallow. Yes, these are messages present in today's popular culture, but this does not mean we are responsible to perpetuate this cycle.

According to the "four players of Cornell," they never intended to offend anyone. With lines like, "If she can't speak she can't cry rape," I'd say those excuses will fall on deaf ears. No television show, song or movie could incite someone to make these violent rules of thumb.

Tara Ruelle

The men also insisted this list was to be circulated as a joke among their circle of friends. My guess is they know exactly what to do with a computer. An inexperienced user like myself can barely log off, never mind espouse my political views to millions of screen watchers.

More important than the number of people viewing the message, was the message itself. There were 75 lines devoted to the supposed comedy of violent acts against women. The comic value was lost on me, I guess. This goes beyond the boundaries of political incorrectness; it's vile and vicious. I've tried to see the infinite wisdom of these individuals to suggest that sexually assaulting women is adequate comic relief. Sorry, can't happen. I'm just pissed.

According to the "four players of Cornell," they never intended to offend anyone. With lines like, "If she can't speak she can't cry rape," I'd say those excuses will fall on deaf ears. No television show, song or movie could incite someone to make these violent rules of thumb.

If one has a brain, then one can decipher for themself what is right and what is wrong. Funny, I don't ever remember someone taking me aside when I was young telling me that rape was OK, or that women should accept the advances of a violent man. Television and movies can only influence you if you let them. Don't blame society for things that you can only learn through your own value system.

If these guys are dogs then they should be proud enough to bark — they were brave enough to include their names with their message. I don't think their justifications were an adequate cover-up for their actions.

These are some of the reasons why those "crazy feminists" (as I've heard them called) must continue "Take Back the Night Rallies." People constantly bitch about the need for women to organize and speak out against these crimes, but as long as idiots like these continue to spread dialogue of hate, there should be candlelight vigils denouncing them.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

Always a little sister to me

My little sister is finally growing up and I'm not quite sure how to handle it. True, she is 19-years-old and a sophomore in college, but to me, she has always been my little sister.

Take into consideration that she's about 5' 8" and could more than likely beat the crap out of me. She got the height and the build from my father's side of the family. Because she's a quarter Fin, my brother (patron saint of degrading nicknames — he dubbed me "lizard" in 6th grade) calls her "The Viking." Last semester, my Mom called her hysterical because Jen hugged her too hard and bruised her ribs. Now every time Jen comes close to hug, ging me, my Mom screams, "Put her down. Mother of God, you'll snap her in two!"

Tara MK Connelly

Jen and I will laugh just like we always do when my Mom overreacts. When we were smaller we never got along and it was only recently that I came to honestly say that she's one of my best friends. She has always been down to earth, and I'm always the one urging her to try something new. We balance each other out and it's a good feeling.

I guess Jen is what you would call a home body. She has always been content to sit with my Mom, do odd errands and just stay in on the weekend. More than likely, this summer I'd be home maybe an hour per day tops, but you can guarantee that she'll be there after work watching movies with my Mom until 11 p.m. and then going straight to bed.

The biggest thing she's ever done was go dog sledding in Michigan. She loves the winter and spent a week sleeping on frozen lakes, eating a pound of butter a day and watching out for frost bite. But she had a blast, and it was one of the few times she actually left the house.

When she first went off to college she came home every weekend crying about how she missed home. She just wasn't content anywhere else.

But things change, she's changed and I'm not quite sure how or when or even why it happened. Maybe it's because I'm never home or the fact that I was the "first" to leave the nest, but I look back and can't help but say, "What the hell happened?"

I guess it all started when my brother called me with the story about her driving up to Syracuse with a person I don't particularly like and how she got several phone numbers shoved at her in a bar. Maybe it was the fact that she goes to the park with a bunch of guys and drinks like a bloody fish, but tells my Mom she just likes the swings.

Or perhaps it was the stunning news that she is hanging out with a 21-year-old mechanic named Mark who wants to double date with her and his friend's 41-year-old mother in Boston and then go and sleep over his house later.

Call me crazy, but I think that was it.

My first impulse was the swear. The second to say, "there is no way in hell my little sister is going to do that" and finally my last response is a tentative — "Well, why not."

I am a firm believer in action and the fact that life is experienced by those who do rather than those who wish they did and are now kicking themselves in the ass going "what if..." That's how I learned, I never was content to sit back and enjoy the ride.

And now, it's her turn to learn, and to be honest I'm scared to death for her. And as much as I'd like to lock her away and keep her in my head as the little girl who played paper dolls with me and watched "The A-Team," I can't. So when Mom calls me up an begs me to "talk some sense into her," what will I do?

Well, I'm going to wish her the best of luck, be there for support, encourage her to explore and tell her that no matter what happens or what decisions she'll make later in life — she'll always be my little sister.

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian Columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Bulger has much to offer

To the Editor:

On Nov. 1, I wrote the search committee to express my support for Senate President William Bulger.

I am a 1982 graduate of the University and was active in student government at the time, serving as the Assistant Attorney General from 1981 to 1982. Today, I am Director of Recruiting for Applebee's International, Inc., in Kansas City. Applebee's is the fastest growing restaurant chain in America. I have met business leaders from all over America and daily review dozens of resumes. I understand the value of education. My UMass degree is considered quite impressive in most parts of the country, but its value is always linked to people's current opinion of the University.

As student populations decline, and budget dollars grow tighter, UMass is in peril. William Bulger, I think can play a pivotal role at this difficult time. He is an effective and pragmatic leader and has always expressed a deep commitment to education.

His candidacy should be looked at closely, as it would be a loss to all present, past and future students to let a man of his talent not serve.

Robert F. Luz '82
Overland Park, Kan.

Article portrays Senate unfairly

To the Editor:

As a senator I was deeply offended by the Collegian's front page story, "Senate Rejects Woman's Caucus," in the Nov. 10 edition. I believe it was an unfair portrayal of the intentions and practices of the Student Senate.

During the Nov. 7 Senate meeting, the proposal for the establishment of a Women's Caucus was rejected because of the way in which it was presented. Senator David Gafney, who presented the motion, felt that as a white male he should speak for the thousands of women on campus. He did not ask for the help of, or consult, any of the 28 women senators in the Student Senate.

When questioned, Gafney could not provide specific names of a supposed group of supporters of this motion. The Senate itself was not informed of this motion until Wednesday, and was expected to vote blindly without research on the topic. A majority of the Senate expressed concerns that this proposal was misleading and lacked substance.

During the previous week's Senate meeting, Senator Lawrence Plano tried to force an unannounced motion concerning the formation of caucuses through the Senate but failed. Because both of these motions were not submitted before-hand and did not go through the proper channels, they took on an air of illegitimacy. I felt that the Woman's Caucus issue was a front that would establish a precedent for the formation of other caucuses with less desirable motives.

Specifically, they could be used to expand the personal power of certain individuals within the Senate. Gafney and his colleagues should give the rest of the Senate a little more credit than to expect us to support such underhanded devious acts.

The passage of a motion with this kind of agenda would damage credibility of the Senate. The senators who voted against Gafney's proposal deserve praise, not the criticism suggested by Allison Connolly's article. If in fact we do form a Woman's Caucus, as I certainly expect we shall, we must do it for the right reasons, not to further someone's personal agenda. The members of the Senate take their jobs very seriously and when a motion is passed or defeated there is always justification.

I feel that the reporter emphasized the minority's position for the sole purpose of sensationalism. Reporters should always strive for objectivity, and stories like this degrade the quality of the Collegian.

Jennifer Casasanto
Southwest

SCERA misunderstood

To the Editor:

This letter is response to the Nov. 16 Collegian article, "SCERA rallies again to fight proposed financial aid cuts." There was a misunderstanding between myself and the writer of the article concerning welfare reform. SCERA opposes any measure to balance the federal budget that would cut student financial aid. However, SCERA does not support cutting any federally funded programs, including welfare, to save financial aid. I regret the misunderstanding between myself and the writer and hope the matter is cleared up.

Jason Vecchio
SCERA Student Organizer

FLATBOY responds

To the Editor:

Well, once again Project FLATBOY has been maligned and slandered by the University of Massachusetts free press. Of course, there are the normal cartoon appearances (although we have been suspiciously left out of Brian Marchionni's Top Ten List). We enjoy these, but the "creator" of Buttah has seen fit to not only insult us in her comic, but has headed further down the primrose path and utter imbecility. Yes, Dahling has written of the horrible FLATBOY.

She has accused us of covering Butterfield with our stickers and violating the loving community of her dormitory. Damnable lies, I tell you. I went to a show in the basement and handed out stickers. That is all. I wasn't signed in to the building, and as a matter of a fact, was not even allowed upstairs to use the restroom.

Therefore, my slow-witted friends (those of you who contribute to Buttah), it was obviously Butterfield residents or their guests who perpetrated these abhorrent acts of vandalism. I don't care if people don't like us, just don't make up lies against us. There are plenty of real things you could trash us about, so please choose one of these in the future. Thank you.

Project FLATBOY
Easthampton

PC language full of denial and pretense

To the Editor:

This is in response to Geri Sahn's column, "Underestimating the Power of Words." The author stated in closing, "And this, PC bashers, is the reason why this country needs to redefine and control words and use."

Control? I feel as though this concerned author who obviously has a distaste for systems of inequality and hate, (as do I) has been seriously misled in terms of the function of politically correct language, and in terms of what the real problem is.

In my opinion, political correctness was an ingenious linguistic invention which only serves to better the power systems of this country, not to benefit those who are being systematically oppressed. It's goal is to give people and systems who truly are racists, or sexist, or homophobic, the ability to delude the individuals with whom they interact into believing they are actually color-blind, gender-blind, sexuality-blind, and ethnicity-blind, when that is not the reality.

Also, those like myself who do not believe in our country's systems of power, hate and oppression should most definitely not censure ourselves or partake in this language that's been created to appease the oppressed, to relax the white middle-class, and to protect those in power.

Politically correct language is a "band-aid" solution to a tremendous problem. "Band-aid" solutions usually have the desired effect of deluding the blind masses into believing that the problem itself has actually been solved, that everything is OK now, and that anyone who continues to speak out against the problem that that all-healing band-aid was placed on, is just some irritating radical feeling sorry for themselves. It's what they want.

If you are so truly concerned and angry about the state of things, why in the world would you contradict yourself and play into the scheme? You are underestimating the power that language has to fool people, to create a false sense of reality that is inevitably created by this politically-correct terminology.

It can fool masses of people into believing that the mentality of the country is actually changing, when it is not. Only the terminology is changing. On the other hand, you are over-estimating the power of pretentious terminology in its ability to solve a problem that needs to be solved at its core.

Using the politically correct terminology glosses over the issues of ingrained hatred and fear; issues that must be overcome and destroyed. The terminology is a mask to manipulate us into believing that the hate itself actually has been destroyed, when it has not. To get to the true problem and to destroy it entails revolution, not "control" of words or a protective, pretty language of denial and pretense.

Dana Welch
Amherst

Multiculturalism summarized

To the Editor:

I read the two-plus page spread of multiculturalism and Hernan Rozemberg's follow-up column in which he asks why whites aren't responding and wonders if they have any ideas about multiculturalism. After reading all the columns, I believe I, a white guy, finally understand the core of multiculturalism and can summarize it as follows.

White people have bad ancestors. White people must be made to feel ashamed of their bad ancestors. Non-white people, or people of color, are good people. They have good ancestors and good cultures. Capitalism is bad because capitalists are greedy, racist, sexist homophobes. Free speech and the First Amendment are bad because white people can say bad things and go unpunished. Western or white culture is bad. America is a bad country. Socialism is good because sharing is good.

White people, especially inarticulate ones, who disagree with Multiculturalists are ignorant, racist, sexist homophobes. White people who agree with multiculturalists will be tolerated. (This gets a little tricky because if too many white people agree with multiculturalism then people of color will begin to discredit multiculturalism. Whites are probably conspiring to make this happen.)

White people who say critical things about any person of color, or group of people of color, anything related to people of color, are racist, sexist, etc. White people who say nice things about any person of color, group of people of color, or anything related to people of color are paternalistic and condescending racists. Because they have bad ancestors and a bad culture, white people have no moral authority make judgements, good or bad.

With some minor revisions, the above summary would work reasonably well if white heterosexual men were substituted for white people, and women and gays were added to people of color.

Feel free to replace any forthcoming big multiculturalism spread in the Collegian with the above summary. I'm sure white people will be able to read and understand this summary, and the Collegian could save a tree with the reduced use of news-print.

William Sillin
Sunderland

Blowing up TV after CHiPs

Kill Your Television.

These were three words that I recently spotted on a car which was littered with a sea of tacky and rather obnoxious bumper stickers. But instead of passing this one off as just another politically correct slogan on the back of some bleeding heart's Volkswagen bug, I actually began to think about its intent.

Maybe we should blow our boob tubes sky high. Might as well, since there really isn't much to watch these days. I mean television shows just aren't what they use to be. Gone are those stupid sitcoms that you loved so much as kids ("Three's Company," "The Brady Bunch," "Good Times," etc.). Instead, we get family-orientated show after family- orientated show.

This made me reevaluate what I watch when I'm killing time between doing all that studying (if any of my professors are reading, brownie points will be accepted). So now for the first time ever I bring you The Matt Audette Guide to What's Good on Television. Here goes:

1.) "CHiPs" — Can't go wrong with this classic. First off it has one of the finest theme songs ever (I can't for the life of me remember how it goes, but I know it's cool when I hear it). Plus, it is really swell how Ponch and John can casually talk to each other as they're racing down the highway at 80 mph. Someone recently told me that they were really just riding on the back of a trailer. My "CHiPs" dreams were forever shattered — but I'm learning to cope.

2.) "My So-Called Life" — Granted there are only 19 episodes — but what great episodes. I secretly have a crush on Claire Danes (I know, she's only 16-years old, but I bet they are a very mature 16 years), and the simple fact of the matter is that those kids are cooler than you or I will ever be.

3.) "The Monkees" — Okay, so they don't show it on TV anymore, but my housemates happen to have every single episode on tape. Wacky, wacky stuff with great songs to boot. It's too bad most of these shows are impossible to see, but if you're a cute girl who likes "The Monkees," you're welcome to come over and watch anytime.

4.) "The Price Is Right" — Come on, admit it — you get a rush when Rod yells, "Come on down!" Bob Barker is the coolest host (I firmly believe that he didn't have an affair with the Showcase Showdown bimbo), and an animal rights activist, too. I especially love it when he reminds you to get your animals neutered at the end of the show (I've actually only seen him do it once, but it was pretty cool). Plus, one word — "Plinko." Enough said.

5.) "The Religious Channel" — There are a couple different ones, depending on what cable company you subscribe to. I'm not actually religious at all, but these stations are so bizarre, it is almost hypnotic. The other day I was watching a bunch of old people saying the "Hail Mary" over and over, while images of scenic areas and people doing nice things for each other floated by. My housemate eventually told me to change the channel because it was scaring her. I did — I think I was beginning to scare myself.

6.) "The Simpsons" — Everybody likes "The Simpsons." Simply the best show going right now.

7.) "MTV's Sandblast" — Just kidding. Why is this on, and does anybody actually watch it?

8.) "Ripley's Believe It Or Not" — Okay, I admit it. I just like hearing the dude say, "Believe It... Or Not?" I once saw a cool episode though about a woman who built a house out of garbage. I guess that was just a bonus

9.) "The Twilight Zone" — The old ones, which can be seen on the Sci-Fi Channel. I'm completely convinced that Rod Serling was a genius. Doesn't get much better than this.

10.) "Baywatch" — Err... ahh, I really like the... ahh... quality writing. Yeah, that's it, quality writing (I think I'm busted).

Well, there you have it. I hope you tune in and enjoy, Me? I'm eventually going to kill my television, but right now "CHiPs" is on and I really having nothing better to do.

Matt Audette is a Collegian columnist.

When will they learn?

I must warn all readers that the following column contains mature, adult situations which may be unsuitable for some liberals. Parental discretion is advised. Again and again I am forced to defend myself simply because I am a white male representing the conservative party. Why is it that the left continually attempts to bash and hinder the political agenda of the right?

The left seems to take extra special pleasure in illustrating an unsavory opinion of Newt Gingrich. They revel in labeling Newt as "the sultan of swine" and "the prince of porcine" without a hint of irony. Perhaps the only way they would know anything about being pigs is simply because they have "rooted around in their own vile excrement" before.

While some liberal opinions are entertaining (for lack of a better word, maybe fulsome), they are far from the facts behind Newt's policies and the truth itself. However, I do realize liberal frustration, for I would be kicking and screaming too if I knew the opposing party was taking away my bottle of "cap in hand" milk. Yes, it's time for the left to be weaned from the government nipple and start earning its keep.

Matthew Pugh

Say "so long" to the outrageous amounts of welfare charity provided for those who have every means in the world to work. There will be no more sucking the pocket dry of the honest American taxpayer. Say "bye bye" to that failure Affirmative Action. Pity that some may actually have to earn their jobs. I know liberals hate to read this, but I think they hate Newt for the wrong reasons. Do they hate Newt simply because they thinks he's pig or simply because Newt gets the job done? I cannot count the number of times I've read liberal rhetoric full of limp-wristed name calling.

One wimpy leftist described Gingrich's supporters as "minion." This is simply an articulate way of calling them henchmen. Gee, I wonder where I've heard this before. They claim that Gingrich is a Nazi or racist who advocates the policies of a tyrant. Without an open mind, they discredit the messenger, hence discrediting the message. What I want to know is why I've never read anything about the left discrediting Louis Farrakhan? After all, Farrakhan is a racist and advocates the policies of a tyrant.

In fact, it's safe to say Farrakhan is more like Hitler than any other modern day political figure. We never hear Gingrich speak despicably about the Jews. Perhaps the left is using Newt Gingrich as a scapegoat for their own fear of conservative effectiveness. Liberals may fear that this effectiveness, despite existing for the benefit of America, may take away their ability to receive a hand-out. It's an effectiveness that is not only shining for the future, but has burned red hot in the past.

Let me remind the left that much of today's right wing conservative ideology derived from the Lincoln presidential party. I will not insult liberal intelligence with a history lesson, but I will refresh their memory. Lincoln was, indeed, the Great Emancipator.

I believe Lincoln said it best — "property is the fruit of labor... a positive good in the world. That some should be rich, shows that others may become rich, and hence is just encouragement to industry and enterprise. Let not him who is houseless pull down the house of another; but let him labor diligently and build one for himself."

I need not go any further than that.

Probably my favorite conservative hate cliche is, "the right-wing politikkkally correct." Are liberals assuming that the right wing party is directly affiliated with the KKK? If so, they are woefully mistaken. The last time I checked, the Klan was a racist organization that allowed only white, Christian, Aryan males as its members. I will have the left know that I am personally acquainted with conservatives from all walks of life. I know black, homosexual, Asian, female, American Indian and handicapped conservatives. I am certain that these types of people would not be welcome into the KKK community.

I am a white American and nothing more. I will not be made to feel like I have to apologize for the color of my skin. I do not owe a single man or woman in this country a dime for iniquities committed by my fore fathers. I am tired of this provincial attitude from the left. I am not a racist, bigot, homophobe or any of the other popular cliches associated with being a white conservative.

I am simply a passenger on the most powerful, political locomotive this generation has seen in over 30 years. We're riding a train on the journey of national healing. It may slow down, but it will never be stopped. All those who wish to come along may hop aboard. The conservative train is leaving and heading for the Promised Land. Yes, liberals even you may go too, but you must pay the fare. There are no free rides.

Matthew Pugh is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Ska–core legends heat up Noho

Mighty Mighty Bosstones keep crowd sweating and moshing

EMILY BERRY/COLLEGIAN

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones stomped through the Valley Saturday and Sunday night.

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

THE MIGHTY MIGHTY BOSSTONES
Pearl Street
Nov. 18

NORTHAMPTON — Even though the sound system at Pearl Street Saturday night favored hardcore tunes, it was obvious from the crowd's reaction when the Mighty Mighty Bosstones took the stage that they were there to see some trademark ska–core.

As a canned fanfare blared away and a giant Bosstones logo banner was unfurled, Dicky Barrett and the rest of the Bosstones strutted onto the stage and greeted the crowd. "Hello Northampton, we're the Mighty Mighty Bosstones from Boston, Massachusetts," Barrett said, and the band launched into "Kinder Words," from their latest release, Question The Answers.

The crowd was bouncing up and down to the rhythms and loving every minute of it, especially when Barrett and Co. mixed in some old favorites like "Howwhywuz Howwhyam," "Where'd You Go?" and "Devil's Night Out" with more recent songs like "Someday I Suppose," "Illegal Left," "Hell of a Hat" and "Holy Smoke."

But it was the classics that really had the audience moving, and as expected, stage diving commenced not three measures into the show. Genuinely upset over cords being pulled out and having people crash into the horn section, Barrett told the crowd — "Do your thing and get off."

When the crowd was asked if they wanted new or old school, the crowd responded with an ear splitting request for the old and the band was more than happy to oblige, delivering such favorites as "Cowboy Coffee," "Never Lose My Wallet" and "Drunks and Children."

Decked out in suits that ranged from Barrett in plain grey, to bassist Joe Gittleman and guitarist Nate Albert in matching red plaids, the Bosstones delivered a show that was short in comparison to most other bands' sets, but with double the energy level of almost anyone. And those in attendance left Pearl Street no doubt equally as drained as the Bosstones were when after an encore that featured their classic "A Little Bit Ugly."

Spring Heeled Jack and Buzzkill opened the show. And while Spring Heeled Jack had a set of textbook, but enjoyable ska, Buzzkill delivered a set of hardcore that proves the theory that with the right amount of boring power chords, a lot of screaming and continuous drum pounding — you too can have your own hardcore group.

True hard core punk at Pearl St

By Adam Długacz
Collegian Staff

7 SECONDS
Pearl Street
Nov 7

NORTHAMPTON — Thursday night at Pearl Street, 7 Seconds showed the crowd where real Hard Core/Punk started.

The group was formed in a time when punk was not only rebellious but potentially dangerous to be into punk — plus it couldn't be seen on MTV. Combining melody with their Minor Threat inspired thrash, 7 Seconds set the standard for years to come.

Despite the low turn out, the band that sang "Young Till I Die" over 14 years ago still have what it takes to move the crowd. Opening up with "You Lose," one of 7 Seconds earliest songs, they blasted into a set comprising of both old school and newer songs.

Although the more recent songs were excellent, the pit got more hectic and the sing–a–longs increased when 7 Seconds played classics like "Regress No Way." It was clear that the people in attendance had been following this band since the beginning. Ironically, the song that best portrayed the spirit of 7 Seconds wasn't even their own — it was their cover of Sham 69's "Kids United."

They saved their best for last though as the lights came down one more time and they ripped into "Soul Force Revolution." Although they had claimed to be playing only one more song, they did their cover of "99 Red Balloons" and smoothly flowed into their anthem "Walk Together Rock Together."

H2O from New York opened up with their brand of classic New York Hard Core. Songs like "Here Today, Gone Tomorrow," "Scene Report" and "Five Year Plan" demonstrated H2O's ability to play true hard core, while so many bands are trying to pass off bad metal as hard core. On a down note, H2O's more melodic songs demonstrated their ability to try and appeal to the MTV crowd that has overly embraced the punk sounds of Offspring.

Despite the low turn out it was a great night of classic punk.

Versus' new songs add extra excitement

New York natives played Frontroom with Tizzy, New Radiant

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

VERSUS
Amherst College Frontroom
Nov. 16

Amherst has become a favorite site for established bands to experiment with new material. Last year Helium and Sonic Youth both came to town and played sets largely of brand new material; Versus did the same Thursday night.

During their 10–song set, Versus performed seven unreleased tracks including the new crowd favorites "Yeah You" and "Double Suicide." The former is a near perfect pop song sung by bassist, Fontaine Toups, the later was dedicated to all the couples in the audience. The set closer "Linus" featured a riveting dual guitar solo between Richard and James Baluyet, the newest member of the band.

The rather small crowd first started bouncing around during "Tin Foil Star," an uplifting song originally released on Simple Machines as part of the Working Holiday 7" series. "Let's Electrify" from the EP of the same name, also brought the crowd into a pop frenzy. The highlight of the regular set was the band's amazing version of "Crazy," one of the best songs the band has yet recorded. This slow, moving tune fully displays the range of the band. Versus may be a noisy guitar band but they are hardly afraid to show their sensitive side.

For an encore, the band performed "Blade of Grass" and "Bright Light," two blasts from the pasts which pleased virtually everyone longing to hear older tunes such as these. "Blade Of Grass" was one of the highlights off Versus' debut album Stars Are Insane while "Bright Light" appeared on the band's second seven inch. The song was dedicated to Bill Peregoy, the man who released the single on his own Pop Narcotic label.

Overall, the show displayed the greatness of Versus, who must be one of the most consistent live bands around. Largely due to the unfamiliarity of the material, the audience never got into the music nearly as much as at their spectacular performance at the Iron Horse last spring, which was one of the peaks of the Loud Music Festival.

Opening up the show were two of the Valley's most talented bands, New Radiant Storm King and Tizzy. NRSK played first and put on a mediocre set that failed to live up to high expectations based on stellar recent shows. Celebrating the release of their second single, Tizzy was in top form playing old hits such as "Miss America" and "New Jersey" along with "Igloo," the A–side of their new single.

PATRICK MCNALLY/COLLEGIAN

Versus (Richard Baluyet, Ed Baluyet, Fontaine Toups)

UM Our Town production ends at FAC

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

OUR TOWN
Rand Theater
Nov. 18

The Thornton Wilder classic, Our Town, finished its three –weekend run on Saturday evening to warm applause. The drama about life in Grovers' Corners, a small New England town, was produced by the University of Massachusetts Theater Department.

The play, which was divided into three acts spanning 13 years, had a very minimal set consisting of tables, chairs and a couple of trellises. A clock on the back wall was adjusted by a stage assistant depending on the time of day. As each act was finished, the set was diminished until all that was left at the end of the third act were a set of chairs.

The first act opened with the stage manager (played by Maxwell M. Mount) introducing the main characters and showing the layout of the town. It was 1901 and it was the beginning of the romance between Emily Webb (Deirdre O'Keefe) and George Gibbs (Ken Ward). Bryn Anne Manion delivered a brief but inspired performance as the librarian, Miss Willard, who was called on to inform the audience on the town's demographics.

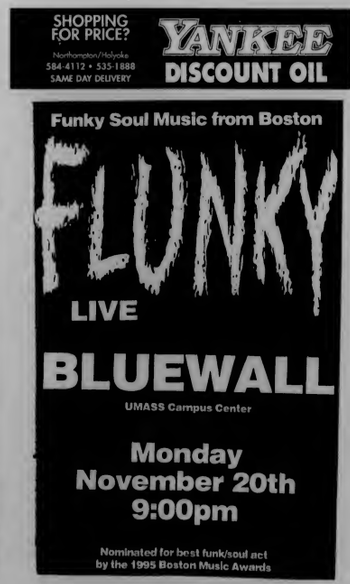
The second act takes place three years later on the morning of George and Emily's wedding. George, anxious to see his bride over the protests of his future mother–in–law, finds himself sitting down to breakfast with Editor Webb (Marty Norden). What followed was a funny conversation in which the Editor admonished George not to ask or follow anyone else's advice. The wedding ceremony featured commentary from the gregarious Mrs. Soames (Sharon Hart) who stood up frequently during the ceremony to tell the audience what a beautiful wedding it was.

The final act took place nine years later at Emily's funeral. Emily, who dies in childbirth, tries desperately to reconcile her death with the life she once knew and loved.

The acting in Our Town was exceptional. O'Keefe's Emily was passionately portrayed — especially in the last act. Norden delivered a wonderfully composed Editor Webb while Ward was convincing as George Gibbs.

The costumes were authentic, and what was especially outstanding was the lack of props and the placement of the sound effects crew right on stage with the actors.

Our Town was a beautiful production and everyone involved deserves praise for a job well done.



OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
(One Mile from UMass bus route)
IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the
Big Y
SHUTTLE
MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE
SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE
DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

Sports

Minutemen look back on careers

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn. — The three guys walked into the press room following the season–ending 20–7 loss. Their heads were down; they were moving rather slowly. They eased themselves into chairs set up for them.

"In addition to Coach Hodges, over here we have All– American corner back Breon Parker and our All–American running back Rene Ingoglia," Massachusetts Sports Information Director Bill Strickland said to the media, placing a hand on their shoulders.

It was some reassurance. It was some comfort. It reminded the players, and media as well, the accomplishments of the two men in Minuteman football jerseys. It was a note of success in a time of disappointment.

All three sat there. Breon Parker had his elbows resting on his knees, looking down at the floor. Mike Hodges had his arms folded, looking rather distraught. Rene Ingoglia sat upright, seemingly fighting back the tears. Staring them straight in the face were a handful of media personalities, waiting to ask them about the game. Not 15 minutes after failing to get the seventh win they were fighting for, or go out with a victory for the seniors, they had to answer some questions.

Hodges spoke first about the last game for the seniors.

"These two guys here, it's very disappointing whenever you lose the last football game," Hodges said. "The hardest part of it is that these two guys and 10 more in that lockeroom don't get a chance to play here again. And they've given an awful lot to this program.

"They work so hard and they give us so much, and it really hurts to have them have this as a last memory. It's very difficult. There've been a lot of great memories for these guys... hopefully. That's a thing that I hope they hold with them."

Parker then was asked a question about the same thing.

"I guess as a I look back, one thing I can say is I made a lot of friends," Parker said. "Today's game — I mean, it hurts a little, but it almost doesn't really mean anything for the simple fact I got to run around with those guys one last time."

A reporter wanted to know Ingoglia's thoughts on getting the Yankee Conference record for most rushing yards in a career.

"I mean, it's a tribute to UMass," Ingoglia said. "I've played with so many good... I'll probably get emotional here... I've played with so many good offensive lines. I've been here for five years, and God blessed me enough to play for four of those years. I've played with so many great people, so many great coaches. I think it's a tribute to them, more so than me."

The three offered what they felt about it being the last game of their collegiate careers. They all wanted a seventh win, and didn't get it. They all wanted the seniors to able to go out with victory, and they weren't able to do it.

But they all looked back from a different perspective.

Parker looked back on the friendships, and said it really didn't matter if they won or lost. Hodges said how he just wished he could send his 12 seniors off with one last W. Ingoglia credited his teammates for his records, while getting choked up in the process.

Especially eerie is how Breon Parker and Rene Ingoglia, in the true sense of the world, were "looking back." As they sat there, they still had their football pants and pads on. Yet, they were technically former UMass football players. No more games, no more practices.

Minutes before they spoke after the game, they were the main men on the Minuteman squad. The All–American Parker anchored the secondary corps. The All–American Ingoglia was the main cog in the UMass rushing attack.

But here, they were looking back on their careers.

Parker, Hodges and Ingoglia all got up at the end of the interview session, and headed out the door back to the lockeroom.

"Thank you one last time," Ingoglia said while waving his hand.

Our pleasure, Rene.

■ football

continued from page 12

Ingoglia, denied by the Huskies. Third down, Ingoglia, no. Fourth down, the Minutemen need more than a field goal, hand–off again to Ingoglia, he leaps and is stopped in his tracks. The Huskies are going wild. Ingoglia was stopped four consecutive times.

"We saw some different fronts, but we've been facing all types of fronts all year," Ingoglia said. "But if they want to crowd the line of scrimmage and we had to try to find a way to beat them, we had to get that one yard and we didn't. So you've got to give them credit."

"UMass played an awfully good game. Obviously they can run the ball like they have against everyone else all year, but I thought the difference in the game was our defense," UConn coach Skip Holtz said. "I was very proud of the way our defense played. We have waited all year for the goal line stand and we got it today."

Then the Minutemen defense buckled down and did the job. They prevented the Huskies from escaping the UConn territory of the field. A lousy punt had the Minutemen in scoring position once again.

McNeilly, once again takes the field. Ingoglia stayed on the sidelines this time after the beating he received in the previous drive. UMass looked for new answers. A couple of McNeilly QB keepers, and a few pitches to junior tailback Frank Alessio had the Minutemen on the 10–yard line and threatening to score. Ingoglia entered the game to draw the attention of the UConn defense. On fourth down, the Minutemen went for it. McNeilly took the snap and tossed a nice pitch to his left. Alessio hauled in the ball and danced around a few Husky defenders before sprinting into the corner of the end zone. Touchdown.

That was about all UMass could muster on this dreary and freezing day as the Huskies were able to build a comfortable lead.

UConn quarterback Shane Stallord was impressive commanding his Huskies and building a 17–0 lead. A 35– yard field goal from UConn kicker David DeArmas and two two touchdowns, one a 55–yard connection between Stallord and UConn flanker Dak Newton, the other a three–yard scamper from Husky back Brandon Bailey, had UMass in the hole early.

"We had some opportunities in the first half and we put ourselves in a very difficult situation," Hodges said. "It seemed like every time we had the ball we had 80 yards to go. It felt like we were always climbing uphill."

UConn capped off the game with DeArmas' second field goal of the day, a 27–yard boot.

The game marked not only the end of a credible season, but the last game for the seniors. All–Americans Ingoglia and cornerback Breon Parker had been the cornerstones to the program, putting up phenomenal statistics wearing the maroon and white. The duo reflected upon their time as UMass Minutemen football players.

"As I look back, the one thing I can say is I made a lot of friends. The fact that we lost today hurts a little, but it almost doesn't mean anything for the simple fact that I got to run around with those guys one last time," Parker said. "I was just happy to play one last time and I'm glad nobody came out injured. I tried to have fun and put it all on the line today one last time."

"I'll probably get emotional here, but I have played with a lot of great offensive lines. I've been God–blessed to play four years," Ingoglia said fighting tears. "I've played with so many great people and so many great coaches and I think it is a tribute to UMass rather than to me."

Knicks win with Ewing's basket at 30.5

By Wendy E. Lane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing atoned for a poor shooting night by hitting a tiebreaking basket with 30.5 seconds left as the New York Knicks squeaked by the Vancouver Grizzlies, 98–93 Sunday night.

After Ewing's shot gave New York a 95–93 lead, Greg Anthony drove to the basket, missed a layup and was called out–of–bounds when he grabbed his own rebound. He argued the call, resulting in a technical foul. Charles Oakley's foul shot at the other end sealed the Knicks' win over the Grizzlies, who lost their eighth in a row.

Derek Harper led the Knicks with 25, and Anthony Mason had 20 on 10–for–12 shooting.

Anthony, the former Knick who went to the Grizzlies in the expansion draft, finished with 18 points on 8–of–12 shooting. Anthony's 3–pointer with 2:13 left tied the game at 91, and after a layup by Harper, tied it again with a driving layup with 46.3 seconds to play.

Oakley missed an open 18–footer, but Ewing got the rebound and made the jumper. Before the shot, Ewing had made only 4–of–11 field goal attempts for 11 points. He finished with 16 rebounds. Despite holding the Grizzlies, the league's lowest–scoring team averaging just 88 points a game, to 19 points in the third quarter, the Knicks couldn't build any kind of a lead until coach Don Nelson went to a four–guard lineup. Using the fast break, New York scored six straight, and a basket by Mason made it 89–80 with 6:21 remaining.

Vancouver, though, kept hanging around, cutting the lead to three points on a basket by Blue Edwards with 4:21 left.

Both teams started the game looking like they couldn't miss. Vancouver made seven of its first eight shots and the Knicks hit 11 of their first 12.

The Grizzlies led 31–29 after one quarter and were on top 40–38 in the second before the Knicks scored eight straight points. But by halftime, New York's lead was just one, 55–54. The Knicks shot 56 percent, and the Grizzlies made 50 percent of their field goals. Knicks forward Charles Smith, who was resting a groin injury, was not in uniform.

Pats playoff hopes dwindle with loss

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO — Marshall Faulk knotted the yellow–and–brown tie around his neck and straightened his monogrammed white dress shirt. Nearby, Jim Harbaugh sat with an ice bag taped around his left thigh and grass stains on his pants.

The flashy runner and the blue–collar quarterback had just led Indianapolis to a 24–10 win Sunday over the Patriots that helped the Colts playoff chances and may have ended New England's. The Colts (6–5) snapped a two–game losing streak in the key AFC East matchup. The Patriots (4–7) had won their previous two games and three of four.

"If we're talking about playoffs, every game is critical," said Colts defensive back Ray Buchanan.

Harbaugh and Faulk outplayed the Patriots' combination of Drew Bledsoe, the can't–miss quarterback who missed quite a bit, and rookie Curtis Martin, the third–round draft pick who had been running like a first–rounder.

"I know I'll never be Drew Bledsoe. I don't have the gun," Harbaugh said. "I know what I am and I need other players around me to do well and I'm finally in a situation where I got some help."

That came from Faulk, who rushed for 96 yards and a touchdown and gained 71 more on eight catches. Harbaugh also helped himself, throwing scoring passes of 3 yards to rookie tight end Ken Dilger and 14 yards to Floyd Turner.

Harbaugh was waived after the 1993 season after seven years with Chicago and signed with the Colts. He started Sunday's game as the NFL's top–ranked passer and probably will stay there after completing 20 of 26 passes for 232 yards.

"I'm just a grinder, a mudder" said Harbaugh, who had been limited by a groin injury to four quarters in the previous three games. "I always believed in myself, even when nobody else did." Bledsoe, the top pick in the 1993 draft, was 20–for–39 for 180 yards with five sacks after being sacked once in his previous 168 passes before Sunday.

"They were the best we faced at getting into our backfield," Bledsoe said in a monotone. "It seemed like every drive we would go out and make some mistake."

Martin, whose 520 rushing yards the previous four weeks were more than any other player in that span, was held to one catch, 48 rushing yards and a touchdown against the Colts' fourth best run defense. The Colts didn't allow a 100–yard rusher for the 24th straight game.

Smith runs for three TDs in Dallas win

By Rob Gloster
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Who needs Deion Sanders on offense? Certainly not the Dallas Cowboys.

Emmitt Smith ran for three touchdowns and Troy Aikman threw a 17–yard scoring pass to Michael Irvin as Dallas provided yet more proof of the NFC's continuing superiority with a 34–21 win Sunday over the Oakland Raiders.

With Sanders adding a key interception, Dallas rebounded from last week's thrashing by NFC rival San Francisco. After that humbling 38–20 loss, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones vowed Sanders would see much more action this weekend.

But Sanders made only a cameo appearance on offense, getting bodyslammed by Rob Fredrickson after a 1–yard gain on an end around.

"This is a great feeling," Sanders said. "We really needed a pickup game to prove that the Dallas Cowboys are still intact." Dallas began a week in which it will face the AFC's two best teams by battering the Raiders. Oakland played the second half without Jeff Hostetler, who reinjured his left shoulder on a hit by Chad Hennings.

The Cowboys (9–2) host the Kansas City Chiefs, who have the NFL's best record, on Thursday. The NFC has won 11 straight Super Bowls, with the Los Angeles Raiders the last victorious AFC team in 1984.

For Dallas, it was a chance to erase memories of the loss to the 49ers — a game that wiped out the aura of invincibility that seemed to be building around the Cowboys.

"When we lost that game last week, we lost a lot. A lot of emotion," Smith said. "Believe me, it upset a lot of people. I think this game was very important for us."

Vince Evans had touchdown passes of 24 yards to Tim Brown and 16 yards to Kerry Cash as the Raiders (8–3) pulled within 31–21 early in the fourth quarter after trailing by 24 points in the third period. Harvey Williams had a seven–yard TD run for Oakland in the first half.

The Raiders, who were penalized 13 times for 113 yards, lost at home for the first time since moving back to Oakland this season. "We got beat soundly in every area. We made a couple of turnovers, added a few penalties to it and then just took the day off," said Raiders coach Mike White. "We were not equal to the task."

Smith, who gained 110 yards on 29 carries, had touchdown runs of 13, four and four yards. Irvin had seven catches for 109 yards, the ninth game this season he has gone over 100 yards. Aiknan was 19 of 24 for 227 yards.

After Irvin's scoring catch, Sanders returned his interception 34 yards to set up Smith's first four–yard TD run. Sanders held the ball aloft during the return and showed the same bravado that made him a fan favorite in San Francisco last season.

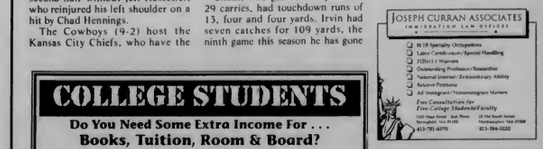
Sanders made the interception by leaping over Raiders speedster Raghib Ismail on a deep pattern.

"I don't think there's any other cornerback in the league that can make that play," said Dallas safety Darren Woodson. "Deion played a great game, shutting down their deep threats."

Williams' scoring run completed an 82–yard drive and pulled Oakland within a touchdown, but Chris Boniol kicked a 26–yard field goal to give Dallas a 17–7 halftime lead.

Smith had two more scoring runs as the Cowboys built a 31–7 lead late in the third quarter. Evans, at 40 the oldest player in the NFL, rallied the Raiders with his two touchdown passes, but Boniol kicked a 38–yard field goal at the end of a 10–play drive as Dallas ran down the clock.

COLLEGIAN DRIVER WANTED TO DELIVER ON CAMPUS.
• NEED CAR
• CALL RYAN AT
545-3500



COLLEGE STUDENTS
Do You Need Some Extra Income For . . .
Books, Tuition, Room & Board?
If You Have an Affinity For Numbers, Some Keyboard Experience, Access to a Phone and Reliable Transportation . . .
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Wants YOU IN JANUARY
as Inventory Takers in Retail Establishments
We offer paid training at a job that is:
• Unique • Flexible • Fast Paced • Challenging • Rewarding
Come join our team!
Call Before December 1st, Monday - Friday, 10am - 4pm
For Interviews
W. Springfield 413-737-7218 • Worcester 508-832-6153
Boston No. 508-657-5522 • Boston So. 508-821-5889
Boston Central 617-484-1288
Equal Opportunity Employer

University Health Services extends thanks to all students who participated in the Urgent Care Waiting Time Study by completing the satisfaction survey. The information you provided was very helpful.
Many thanks!

Sports

UM falls to Converse All–Stars

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

The reason they play exhibition games is so that this doesn't happen during the regular season.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team committed 20 turnovers in its second sloppy outing so far this season. The first team the Minutemen encountered was not of high quality and UMass won on pure talent, as opposed to playing as a well-oiled machine.

Converse	94
Massachusetts	89

The final score was 94-89 in favor of the Converse All– Stars, but in some aspects it wasn't even that close.

"We've got a ways to go," said UMass coach John Calipari. "We built this program on an aggressive way of playing basketball. We only did that for the last six to seven minutes."

UMass trailed by as many as 13 at some points in the contest, the last being with 5:19 left on the final field goal for Converse, as the Minutemen fouled the All-Stars for the duration of the game.

Once again, it was center Marcus Camby who led the way for UMass with 31 points and 14 rebounds. The only other Minutemen to reach double figures in points were Dana Dingle and Tyrone Weeks, who contributed 10 apiece.

"Tyrone and Inus [Norville] gave us what they could," Calipari added. "But we are a long way from home.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby goes up for two of his 31 points in the Minutemen's exhibition loss to the Converse All–Stars on Friday night at the Mullins Center

"They say we're a top 10 team, I've coached top 10 teams and we could be a top 10 team," Calipari said. "But guys on the team have to fill roles and do what they have to do."

On this night they were far from the No. 7 ranking that has been bestowed upon them in the polls, shooting an atrocious 34 percent from the field and an equally bad 5-for- 8 from the free throw line.

One of the bright spots appeared to be the play of freshman Charlton Clarke. Clarke was able to play 22 minutes despite his recent knee injury.

"My knee feels alright," Clarke said. "It's not 100 percent yet, though.

"I was so-so for my first game. I got really hyped up. I can play much better. I made a lot of freshman errors. Cal said I would only play 15 minutes but I got a lot of opportunities. My knee wasn't bothering me so it wasn't on my mind."

In the extended playing time, the freshman collected seven points and dished out two assists while collecting five fouls. His aggressiveness on the court was a positive but at times it caused him problems as well.

"A lot of people will say that Charlton was aggressive and that it's good," Calipari said. "But he only shot 2-for–11 from the field and made some mistakes on defense."

The Minutemen were better shooting from the field in the second half at 55 percent, a lot of which came on Camby dunks. He brought the crowd to its feet early in the second half with a jam that seemed to start from the third row of seats on the right wing.

Although the junior had a good game statistically, he realizes that his team is in some trouble if they do not pick up their play.

"We were the same team as last week," Camby said. "A lot of guys didn't show up including myself."

One of Camby's inside partners, Norville, also had a good game, hitting three of four shots while grabbing three offensive boards. Senior co–captain Donta Bright also was solid on the glass, grabbing nine boards.

The game also marked the return of former Minutemen Derek Kellogg, who hit three trifectas and finished with 13 points.

UMass had lost just once in the William D. Mullins Center prior to Friday night's preseason tilt. The other defeat was to George Washington this past Valentine's Day.

The next time the Minutemen take the court it will be the real thing, as they will tangle with No. 1 ranked Kentucky at the Great Eight shootout on Nov. 28 in the Palace of Auburn Hills.

Volleyball defeats Rhode Island

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Streak n. — 3. a tendency in behavior, etc. 4. a period, as of luck.

The behavior is winning, but the Massachusetts volleyball team's streak has no bearing on luck what so ever.

The team has clearly been on fire since the half way point of the season, Oct. 10. Since that point, the Minutewomen have won 12 games and only dropped one, finishing up their regular season with a record of 24–10 overall, 15–5 in the A– 10.

Their most recent victory came last Thursday when UMass defeated Rhode Island (15–11, 14–16, 7–15, 15–12), the team which has sat atop the A–10 for the majority of the season. This loss dropped the Rams to 25–6 overall, 17–3 in the A– 10. Last weekend, the Minutewomen clinched an A–10 Tournament berth by sweeping Xavier and Dayton in a two match Ohio road trip.

Although coach Bonnie Kenny's squad did not have to worry about earning a post–season spot Thursday, it was the last time UMass would get a look at the Rams before the tournament. After the Oct. 3 five–game battle which saw the Minutewomen lose 12–15, 15–12, 10–15, 8–15, this was as an opportunity to exact revenge and gear up for the tournament. Massachusetts did both.

The Minutewomen not only came home with the win, but posted some impressive stats. Four players in Maroon and White tallied double figures in both kills and digs, the first three double–doubles coming from the outside hitter slots.

Once again, it was junior outside hitter Giza Rivera leading the team with 19 kills and 14 digs. Sophomore outside hitter Lesley Nolan totaled 16 kills and 22 digs as junior outside hitter Dionne Nash had 17 kills and 11 digs. Senior middle blocker, Rachel Sky posted 13 kills and 19 digs.

The win was not easy, and as in the last confrontation between the two, the match was not decided until the final game. In the fifth game, the Rams opened up with an impressive 7–2 lead. That's when UMass stepped up their play, winning eight of the next nine points taking a 10–8 lead. Rhode Island was not about to end their season on such a flat note, as they succeeded in knotting the score at tens. But the Minutewomen were too tough, as they won five of the last seven points to arrive at the 15–12 victory.

This win is significant, for it represents something that Kenny had been trying to instill in her team throughout the season. She realized that she has a good team, but if the whole squad comes out and gives 100 percent, they are a great team.

A quick stat check is all the proof needed to substantiate this point. With four players earning double–doubles in such an important match, it is clear that the Minutewomen are ready for post–season play.

Next up for the Minutewomen is the A–10 tournament. Massachusetts opens up the post–season with a semi–final match on Thanksgiving at 5:30 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage. As of press time, final standings and match–ups were not available.

This is the first of two major women's volleyball tournaments being hosted here at UMass in the coming month. After the A–10s, the NCAA Championships will be held Dec. 14–16 in the William D. Mullins Center.

While the win over Rhode Island was big, UMass will have to be tough if they hope to win the A–10s and make a run to play on the floor of the Mullins Center once more this season.

Lady Vols drill No. 3 Cavaliers, 66–34

By Tom Sharp
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Pat Summitt told her Tennessee team in practice it was the worst–rebounding bunch she'd had in her 22 years of coaching.

Surely she was kidding. At least Virginia must think so. The No. 6 Lady Vols outrebounded the third-ranked Cavaliers 66-34 Sunday en route to a 78-51 victory in the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic.

Fourth-ranked Louisiana Tech edged No. 1 Connecticut 83-81 in overtime in the opening game, snapping the nation's longest winning streak at 35 games.

Tennessee ran its home winning streak to 65 games and tagged Virginia with its worst loss since the 1989 NCAA tournament, when Tennessee beat the Cavaliers 80-47.

To find another team that beat Virginia so badly, you have to go all the way back to 1984 when North Carolina did it.

"I was most unhappy with the rebounding, not checking out and doing the things we normally do well," said Virginia coach Debbie Ryan. "We just didn't compete today and that bothers me." Summitt unveiled a new and different team from the ones that went 122-11 over the last four years, but the results didn't change much.

"I think the one place where we really needed to have an edge was on the boards, and it was evident from the very start that we were going to rebound the basketball with a great deal of authority. I'm really pleased we did that," Summitt said. Tennessee used a rarely seen zone defense to stymie Virginia, holding the Cavaliers to 33 percent shooting.

"We prepared for the zone, we just didn't see things the way we should have," Ryan said. "Our execution led to a poor effort." Michelle Marciniak led the Lady Vols with 16 points. Latina Davis, a 5-foot-6 guard, had 12 points, 12 rebounds and four assists. Pashen Thompson had 12 points and 13 rebounds for Tennessee and freshman Chamique Holdsclaw added 13 points and 10 rebounds. Wendy Palmer, Virginia's preseason All-America center, was held to nine points but did have 10 rebounds. Tara Suber led the Cavaliers with 15 points, while Monick Foote added 12.

The Lady Vols led 31-21 at halftime and 45-34 with 12 minutes left when Davis sparked a 14-0 run that put it out of reach. After Brynae Laxton hit a free throw, Davis scored a rebound basket, fed Holdsclaw for a bucket and scored again herself to make it 52-34 with 9 1/2 minutes left.

Laurie Milligan hit two free throws and converted a three-point play after her steal to finish the 14-0 run. It was 57-34 with just under nine minutes to play.

No. 10 Arkansas 86, Ohio St. 80

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Instead of talking about perfection at the free throw line, Christy Smith wanted to talk about taking care of the ball.

Smith was 15-for-15 from the free throw line and scored a career-high 33 points Sunday to help No. 10 Arkansas to an 86-80 victory over Ohio State in the semifinals of the women's Preseason NIT.

The victory put Arkansas (3-0) in Tuesday night's championship game against No. 14 Colorado (3-0), a 74-68 winner over Texas A&M on Sunday.

Smith's outing at the foul line was a school record — Betty Fiscus was 12-for-12 in 1985 and Tracy Webb matched that in 1987 — but her four turnovers were six less than she had in the season opener against Northwestern Louisiana.

"I didn't think about it, really," she said of the free throws. "We're just playing together as a team, and that's the difference." How about those turnovers?

"I'm really proud of that," she said.

LaTech gives UConn first loss in a year

By Tom Sharp
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Debra Williams scored eight straight points in overtime, and fourth-ranked Louisiana Tech gave No. 1 Connecticut its first taste of defeat in more than a year Sunday with an 83-81 victory in the Basketball Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic.

Williams hit back-to-back 3-pointers to rally the Lady Techsters from a 79-75 overtime deficit. The second put La Tech up 81-79 lead with 47 seconds to go. Connecticut center Kara Wolters, who had 29 points and 20 rebounds, scored on a tip-in with 26.3 seconds left to tie it at 81.

The Lady Techsters ran down the clock and then Williams drove straight down the lane and hit a lay-up with 5.2 seconds left for the victory. UConn couldn't get off a shot before the buzzer. William's heroics in overtime atoned for the miss of a free throw with 23 seconds left in regulation that might have sealed it for the Lady Techsters.

Louisiana Tech's victory ends the nation's longest winning streak at 35, and puts Connecticut in a situation it never faced last year on its way to an undefeated season and the NCAA title. Williams finished with 29 points. Preseason All-American Vickie Johnson rebounded from a 4-point first half to finish with 20 points and 12 rebounds. Raquel Spurlock added 15 points for the Lady Techsters.

Nykesha Sales, whose two free throws with 4.9 seconds left in regulation sent the game into overtime, scored 20 points for Connecticut. Jamelle Elliott added 11.

The Huskies showed they could still play without consensus national player of the year Rebecca Lobo, who graduated. But they couldn't do without both her and the 6-foot-7 Wolters. Wolters went to the bench with her fourth foul with 8 1/2 minutes left to play and the Huskies ahead 55-53. When she came back with five minutes left, they trailed 66-64 and it became 68-64 seconds later on Johnson's steal and score with 4:06 to go.

The Huskies went without a point for nearly 4 1/2 minutes until Wolters scored inside with 1:31 left to cut La Tech's lead to 70-66. Williams hit two free throws to make it 72-66 with 59 seconds left; Sales answered with a falling 8-footer with 48.7 seconds to go and it was 72-68.

After Williams hit one free throw, Carla Berube kept UConn's hopes alive by rebounding Jennifer Rizzotti's miss, scoring, and converting a three-point play with 32.4 seconds left to make it 73-71, La Tech.

Hasek helps Buffalo Sabres defeat Ottawa Senators

By Mark E. Johnson
Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Dominik Hasek had 31 saves and recorded his first shutout of the season as the Buffalo Sabres defeated the Ottawa Senators 6-0 Sunday night.

The Senators, playing with a two-man advantage late in the second period, were denied by Hasek, who came up with several big saves, including one lying on his back, to preserve the shutout.

The Vezina Trophy winner continually frustrated the last-place Senators, who lost their eighth straight and dropped to 6-13-0 in the Northeast Division.

Donald Audette had two goals and Brad May, Matthew Barnaby, Pat LaFontaine and Derek Plante each scored one for the Sabres, who have won four straight. Buffalo improved its record to 9-9-1 and reached .500 for the first time since the second game of the season.

May scored first for the Sabres at 8:06 of the first period. Jason Dawe dug the puck out from behind the net and passed to May, who spun and backhanded his shot past Senators goaltender Don Beaupre.

Barnaby scored 27 seconds later on a feed from Randy Burridge to give Buffalo a 2-0 lead. Burridge extended his point-scoring streak to six games with the assist.

Audette scored Buffalo's third goal at 13:16, putting in a loose puck after successive shots by LaFontaine and Burridge. Audette has eight goals in six appearances for the Sabres this year.

LaFontaine scored on a power play 39 seconds into the third period. Audette added his second goal on a power play at 6:27 of the final period.

Plante scored with 47 seconds left.

Beaupre had 35 saves.

Open Forum

The Campus Center/Student Union Commission invites you to an open forum. Come and share your ideas and suggestions that you may have to improve the current bulletin board system within the Campus Center/Student Union complex. All members of the campus community are invited to attend and participate.

DATES: Tuesday, November 21, 1995
Place: Campus Center Rm. 911-915
Time: 7:00 PM

THE NYNEX COMMONWEALTH CLASSIC
UNDERGRADUATE LOTTERY TICKET APPLICATION

UMass VS. BOSTON COLLEGE

DECEMBER 9, 1995
FLEET CENTER, BOSTON
$20.00 PER TICKET

LIMIT TWO TICKETS PER UMASS UNDERGRADUATE
DEADLINE TO ENTER IS WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 23.

NAME:
LOCAL ADDRESS
CITY ST. ZIP
LOCAL PHONE

CHECKS PAYABLE TO: UMASS ATHLETICS
CC: VISA, MASTERCARD, DISCOVER
#: EXP. DATE:

LOTTERY WINNERS AND LOSERS WILL BE NOTIFIED BY MAIL AFTER THANKSGIVING BREAK
DROP APPLICATION OFF AT THE CURRY HICKS CAGE BOX OFFICE BY 5:00 PM WED. NOV. 23
NON-WINNERS WILL HAVE APPLICATION ALONG WITH PRE-PAYMENT RETURNED

Sports

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

UMass' Julie Magid (2) and Amy Powell (14) battle for the ball in yesterday's season–ending loss to UConn in the second round of the NCAAs.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 12

with a great look on net. Woodward opted for the left corner and booted it past Dion.

"[UConn] was a great team that was on, and we tried to be on," Rudy said. "[Len Tsanitis'] got a great team. This is the best UConn team I've seen. They outplayed us. They have speed and athleticism but also great skills."

Rudy reflected on his team's season and his seniors.

"We had a great season. I think this is probably the finest team I've coached. They play for each other and fight hard. This is a fantastic group of kids," he said. "There will be no one else like [Rachel LeDuc] again — for certain. Nikki's [Ahrenholz] is a great kid. She's almost like a daughter to me. I'm sorry to see [Polly Hackathorn] go. She made some great progress [at UMass].

Erin Lynch, Amy Powell and Erica Iverson played well in the loss.

"It was a good season. I have no complaints. This is a great team. They give you what they have in practice. They had great training, great results. You can't ask for too much more than that. I'm honored to be the coach of this team," Rudy said.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 12

Myers returned although considerably hobbled. It was her ability to play in such circumstances that helped lead UMass to the victory, staving off elimination.

Myers, with less than 15 seconds to play and jumping off of her bad leg, headed a ball to Erin Lynch. Lynch collected her composure along with the ball, and sent a cross to the six–yard line where LeDuc out–hustled the Hartford goaltender and won the game with 1.4 seconds on the clock.

With Myers playing in pain, and every player going all out until the final whistle, the Minutewomen moved on and Hartford went home.

Just five minutes before LeDuc's heroics, UMass keeper Danielle Dion made a play that made the senior's goal a game–winner. Dion mistimed her jump a bit too early on a Jessica Reifer shot from 25 yards out. As Dion was coming back to earth, she seemed to jump on air to get her fingertips on the ball and send it out of harms way, keeping the score tied.

It was not the first time this year that Rudy's troops scored in the last minute of play. At Central Florida, UMass had given up a goal in overtime and was losing 2–1, but again Lynch came through. This time she did the scoring herself, as she took a run between two UCF defenders and fired a blast into the net to save a 2–2 tie in a pivotal inter–regional match–up.

Not only did UMass have a knack for scoring big goals in crucial situations, but the defense came through saving games as well.

During the UMass Classic, the Minutewomen hooked up with the Texas A&M Aggies and one of the premiere goal scorers in the nation, Bryn Blalack.

In a 2–1 contest between two nationally ranked teams, UMass held the lead with less than 10 minutes to play as A&M stormed the Minutewomen defense. The Aggie front– runner beat Dion, but it was defender Erica Iverson who got to the ball before it crossed the end line. It was the sophomore's extra effort that preserved the victory.

■ UMass

continued from page 12

goals to drive him from the game. Dennis took over for Bell and was solid in garbage time, giving up only one goal.

The following night the Minutemen could taste their first two–win weekend. They had driven out PC's No. 1 goalie on Friday and figured that the Saturday night affair would likely go in their favor as well.

They hadn't counted on Dan Dennis. On the strength of solid play of the then–sophomore, Providence downed UMass 5–2.

With the graduation of Bell, Dennis, now a junior, has inherited the top job and has shined so far.

"Danny really trained hard in the off–season. He wanted to be the No. 1 goaltender," said Providence coach Paul Pooley. "He's worked hard. You look at the intensity and the confidence that he has. He wants the puck."

Despite giving up five goals in Friday night's game, it was his 13–save first period that set the tone for the game allowing the Friars to open up a 4–0 lead.

His Saturday performance, however, was brilliant. He was one rebound away from a perfect outing. After sophomore Dean Campanale scored UMass' only goal to cut the Providence lead to 3–1, Dennis put the clamps down. He robbed Tom Perry twice with under two minutes to play on golden scoring opportunities.

"Obviously, he was a very key factor in the 10 points that they collected this weekend," said UMass senior Captain Jayneen Rissling. "Martin Legault was a puzzle that we had to solve. Eventually we solved that puzzle and we moved on."

Massachusetts had several opportunities to cut into the lead as the Minuteman forwards attacked the net feverishly, but Dennis had an answer for every UMass chance as the Friars completed the sweep.

Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen lauded the junior goaltender's play.

"I thought that Danny Dennis put on a show [Friday night]," Mallen said. "But he put an extra special show tonight."

Providence, like the Stanley Cup champion New Jersey Devils, employs a neutral zone trap. Mallen pointed to the importance of good goaltending to making the trap effective.

"With the trap, you have to have good goaltending like Martin Brodeur last year," Mallen said.

"We have to give him credit," said UMass junior center Warren Norris. "He played really well tonight."

Massachusetts isn't the only team to have nightmares about the play of Dennis. Entering the weekend, the Saskatchewan native had posted the best numbers in Hockey East, with a 2.14 goals–against–average and a save percentage of .926 against conference opponents.

Dennis' performance can be directly credited to why the Friars, who were picked to finish seventh in the conference's preseason coaches poll, are currently sitting atop HE. His six wins are far ahead of any other goalie.

Notes: The one goal scored by Massachusetts marks the lowest goal output of the season for the Minutemen. Their previous low was a four–goal performance against Merrimack.

Three Minutemen, Sal Manganaro, Tom Perry and Rob Bonneau had six–game point streaks broken Saturday as well.

The Minutemen will now get a break from conference action as only two of their next 10 games are against Hockey East opponents. The two that are left however are against defending National Champion and current No. 1 ranked Boston University.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

minder Brian Regan to open the scoring.

Jon Coe and Mike Mader scored 18 seconds apart midway through the second, and despite holding a 25–15 shot advantage, UMass trailed 3–0 after two.

Dean Campanale rekindled UMass' hopes on the power play 7:02 into the third. Jon Jacques collected the rebound of a Mike Gaffney shot behind the net, and fed Campanale on the doorstep for the sophomore's third goal of the year.

The Friars held on, though, adding an empty–netter to secure a 4–1 victory. Junior Dan Dennis stopped 36 of 37 shots in the Friar net and took home the night's first star.

If Elvis Presley was in Providence's Schneider Arena Friday night, he'd tell you that for the first 40 minutes, Providence was "the Devil in disguise."

Using exceptional forechecking, while shorthanded in particular, and the New Jersey Devils' defensive system, the Friars were able to pin UMass in its own defensive zone for much of the first two periods of play in a penalty–laden affair.

When UMass did work the puck up ice, Dennis was there for some tremendous saves. Dennis made 35 on Friday and 71 for the weekend.

"Dan Dennis put on a show [Friday] and he put on an extra–special show tonight," Mallen said after Saturday's game. "He played terrific. For them to be successful in the trap they have to have good goaltending, and they got it."

Meanwhile, the Friars went up 4–0 early in the second on just six shots against senior Dave Kilduff.

UMass rallied as Providence abandoned its trapping ways in the third period, permitting an up–tempo game.

Tom Perry's first two goals of the year and Rob Bonneau's eighth and ninth drew UMass to within two at 7– 5, with 2:30 remaining, but the Friars held on for the win. Five goals is the most scored this season against Providence.

Regan was impressive, making 19 saves in relief of Kilduff, but was once–upped by Dennis, the league's leader in both goals–against–average and save percentage.

While much was said of the Friars defense–first attitude that had propelled it into first place in Hockey East, they showed versatility in playing a more wide–open game Saturday night. While they might not have enough to top Boston University, with continued solid netminding by Dennis, the team will go far.

Overall, Mallen was proud that his team outshot Providence each night and could have easily taken a pair from Hockey East's front runners with some better bounces.

"Despite the score last night or tonight we could have won that game very easily with a couple of goals. We wanted to play with self disciple and composure tonight and we did that. We wanted to outshoot them and we wanted to take less penalties. So we accomplished a lot of those subgoals that you need to do to win. They were all done right tonight, except for the finishing touch.

VIVA

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS COMMUNITY SERVICE CALENDER

CAMPUS EVENTS
November 20, 21 & November 27-December 1
The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the third annual "FILL-A-BUS" donation drive. The bus will be parked in the turn around outside the Student Union from 11Am -3PM for seven days. Food, clothing and toy donations will be given to the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and The Amherst Survival Center. Please bring your donations to help "FILL-A-BUS"

VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES
SUMMA PROGRAM is looking for volunteers to be be big brothers/ big sisters to African-American students in Springfield, MA. Volunteers are responsible for their own transportation. Contact Deborah Pace, Program Director, at 545-3584.

The UMASS CARING AND SHARING (COMEC) CAMPAIGN is currently underway. Employees receive a pledge card to contribute to hundreds of local, state, national, and international charitable agencies. Students can also contribute by calling Celina at 545-4203

The AMERICORPS WATER WATCH PROJECT is seeking volunteers for stream surveying and water testing. Also, they are looking for people to lead educational workshops in local schools on water conservation. If interested, please call Catherine Heins at 545-0199.

VIVA COUNCIL MEMBERS: Community Service Program, TEAMS Project, Panhellenic Council, Circle K, Commuter Services, Habitat for Humanity, Alpha Phi Omega, Boltwood Project, Boltwood Project, MASSPIRG,VIBES, Newman Student Association, Hampshire County United Way, SHARE, Interfraternity Council, CALP, TALP, and MALP,Western Massachusetts Girl Scout Council, First Call for Help, Family Housing Tutoring Project, UMASS Extension, Big Brothers/ Big Sisters, Consumer Studies Service Advisory Committee, SUMMA, Center for Diversity and Development.

The above listings are just a small sample of the service opportunities available on campus. To become more involved, we encourage you to join one of the VIVA Council member organizations or call the Community Service Program to ask about other ways to become involved.

The Bluewall

FLUNKY

All The Way From Boston

Monday, Nov. 20th
9:00pm - 12:00am

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.

Ask for our specials.

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF PARIS

AUP prepares its students to be a part of an increasingly global society.

Bachelor degree programs in ten disciplines. Fully-accredited by Middle States.

Traditional Junior-Year Abroad curriculum.

Special Visiting Programs, which include study at the Sorbonne and other French institutions.

Full range of Summer Programs.

Contact our U.S. Office: B.P. 130, E. 11th St., Suite 434, New York, NY 10003-9000
Tel. (212) 677-4870 / Fax (212) 475-5205
Web Address: http://www.aup.fr

AUP. The American university in Europe.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals ot a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The airport shuttle Need to get to the airport? Call Valley Transporter 549-1350

3-4 senior grad students looking for house/apt. in Amherst area for Spring semester. Call 549-9919

83 Tercel hatchback AT AC, newer engine $850! Best offer 549-0589

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Ford Escort 4 spd standard. 2nd owner, excellent condition 70K or bo. Call Sabrina 549-8887

'93 BMW 318 IS Black automatic w/mtr package. Call David 525-1175 $20,500 negotiable

Accountant NYC CPA firm desires

EMPLOYMENT

accountant with 2-4 years public experience. Our specialties taxation and inbound foreign investment. Salary from $40-$50,000. Fax resume (212) 564-7030

All students N.E. Collegiate painters now hiring mgrs for summer positions in Boston, Hartford and surrounding towns. No experience necessary, will completely train & support. Realistic summer earnings $8000 $10,000. Great resume builder. Possible internship. Call 1-800-589-9539

Bertl's PJ counter staff must be available Nov. 24th and 25th to bake for bertl's 7am - 2pm shifts per week and one night shift

Environmental Jobs Over winter break earn $175-$375/week working to save the environment with Massprg. Casual fun atmosphere! Call Tim at 256-6434

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutley no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hrs per week. Start at $5.75/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're in the Mt Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri: (413) 586-8625. ABT Associates, telephone research center, Mt Farms Mall, Rte 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer.

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & Full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206 545-4804 Ext. N 50012

Part time/Full time earn extra income. Work with people you like at your own pace. No investment no risk no travel no quotas no sales no inventory. 586-0192 daily 9am-5pm

Scera is looking for students to help with phonebank fundraising to help stop higher tuition and fees! $8/hr minimum 5 hrs/week. Sun-Thurs nite 5:30-9:00pm Nov 29-Dec 14th. Apply @ Scera (420 Student Union) by Wed 11/22 by 5pm!!!

We want you Unique liquor related product. Retails for $200. Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location, your profit= $72,400 first year! 941-756-9001

You can earn $500 to $2000 between now and Christmas. Call Holly 1-800-591-7089

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn big money Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Round trip airline ticket, Hawaii or Alaska $800. 546-2072

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Used/reconditioned rack systems and separate components. Buy/sell/trade. Large selection, friendly advice, warrantee and great prices. Stereo/video exchange at Jackson's Fras Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only, 9-5. Other days call 256-0941

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

LOST

Lost on campus silver Zuni ring with turquoise inlay sentimental value. Reward call 545-4173

Red work ID Walt Disney World. Please call 6-1415. Lisa

PERSONALS

Bryce Your mom called, she said she has the ointment for your rash. Does it smell as raw as I do?

Bryce It is true! I have been smelling something fishy lately! I think you should consider consulting your physician. Don't feel bad about it. There's lots of people who aren't like the beach! God bless you, my son, and good luck. Peace out champ!

D- Have a great Thanksgiving. Thanks for being a great roommate! Emme

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2942

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for rent on bus route; all utilities included. Male or female. $268 per month. Available Jan.1. Call Nikki 253-7741.

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located 11/2 mile to UMass and Amherst center[, beautiful] 3 bedroom, 2 1/2 bath condo at Amity Place Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen, and great sunset views. Must be a responsible, cat-loving non-smoker. $425.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3866

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located 11/2 mile to UMass and center of Amherst, beautiful 3 bedroom, 2 1/2 bath condo at Amity Place Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen, and great sunset views. Must be responsible, cat-loving, non-smoker. $425.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3866

Roommates wanted to share house in Hadley. $730+ bus route 10 min from campus. Call Nancy 582-8951

Roommates needed to share town house for spring semester. 2 min from campus. Frank Day 413-568-9151 ax 1725. Night 413-733-8078

Roommate wanted non-smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month. On bus route. Start Jan 1st. Call Anna 253-1605 heat & hot water included

Roommate wanted to share apt. in Mill Valley. Heat & hot water incl. 253-1402

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robert 546-1794

Free financial aid! Over $ billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. F50012

RESUME

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15 $30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union. 545-2771

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3224

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

Quicktype word processing professional word processing. Term papers, thesis, dissertations,etc. Dena quickly and professionally Call Dianne at 585-9763

TO SUBLET

Available 1/96 Room in 4 bedroom/Belchertown prefer female $381 + Jennifer 253-0676

Large Room in furnished 2 bedroom apt on bus route, parking, gym. Kosher/vegetarian. $740. Lori 253-1657

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $249 r/t California $175 o/w Europe from $278 r/t. Cheap airfares to S. America, Asia, Africa, Middle East and Australia. Call (413) 587-0001. Air Tech New England

$CRUISE SHIPS HIRING $$$ + free (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii) Seasonal/permanent. No exper. necessary. Guide (919) 929-4398 Ext. C1040

Free Travel Spring Break 96 Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group! Travel free! Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

JAMAICA

Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril. $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience.

ISO woman friends for X country train trip, January, inexpensive. 546-1374

Winter Break Special 8 Kingston weeks $269. Independent Call Time to Maxim 584-7581

WANTED TO RENT

Wanted to rent a 2,3 or 4 bedroom in Amherst Call 549-8618

Wanted 2 or more bedroom apt or house near uptown or campus for spring sem. Call 549-7089

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trade Michel Jaffe

ACROSS

1 Road sign
4 Shiny fabric
9 Lyric poem form
14 Salsa
15 Minneapolis suburb
16 Calkins bearer
17 Pindar work
18 Garb for Mather?
20 Use hoboots
22 Essay as —
23 Keen
24 Dive's milieu, for short
26 Portuguese king
28 Warbler
29 Garb for Anna?
34 Broadcast
35 Weep's family
36 Used the microwave
40 Ends
42 Nasty
44 Follow
45 Moose or Raphael of the art world
47 Long, long time
48 Parts of soul singer Al's shirts?
51 Droop
53 Dieppe donkey
54 On appendage
55 Friends
57 Social commentator Herbert
59 Resembling
63 Alibi for a princess?
66 Bounder
67 Wrong
68 Soprano Jones
69 Used
70 French income
71 Good —
72 Richard of "Miss Minniver"

DOWN

1 Shine
2 Armenia's slave
3 Tore
4 More than brut
5 Espousal
6 South American monkey
7 Advanced student
8 Spanish cape
9 Downs
10 Duckbilled —
11 Hamlet
12 Borks of TV
13 Gaseo
19 Pin down
21 Ostrich's cousin
25 Less relaxed
27 Lamb concoctions
29 Kismet
30 Nothing, in Nantes
31 Fluids
32 Out of bed
33 Hardened
37 Capital of Ukraine
38 Bacchanalian cry
39 Rarely rooms
41 Tops in humanity
43 Denigrate
46 Unity
49 Bridge seat
50 Shocking swimmer
51 Muck
52 Adey of dance
58 Shebat follower
56 To be, to Brutus
58 Soon
60 Nacha occupant
61 Cabbage variety
62 Whirlpool
64 Actress Farrow
65 Adage

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	L	L	A	N		A	L	A	M	M	E	S
S	I	E	G	E		R	I	S	E		A	T	M	O
H	O	W	A	R	D		B	E	A	L	S	U	N	E
			E	N	D	I	V	E		B	E	A	U
			N	E	A	T			R	O	T	E
T	E	S	T			T	I	M		G	U	R	A	M	I
R	A	P	T			E	R	I	N		S	O	M	M	E
I	R	E		P	R	E	L	U	D	E		O	U	T
E	L	M			S	O	D	A		P	R	S	E
R	E	D	A	C	T		T	O	M		D	E	E	R
			G	R	O	O	P			S	A	R	I
E	L	E	C	T	R	O	N		S	O	C	C	E	R
R	O	M	E			Q	U	I	C	K	S	T	U	D	Y
A	R	O	D			U	N	D	O		A	T	T	I	N
A	W	O	L			U	N	D	O		A	T	I	N
T	E	N	S			E	D	E	N		S	L	A	T	E

5/23/95

HOROSCOPE

Aries (March 21-April 19): Business travel brings highly favorable results. Sign contracts. Your pleasing personality and all-too-rare talents receive new attention. Do not let old insecurities sap your confidence.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Public acclaim comes to those who have proven themselves under fire. Someone's reputation could be at stake due to an indiscretion. Communication and compromise will help mend a domestic rift.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): A banner day for writing assignments and contract negotiations! You will have difficulty communicating your ideas. Influential people are impressed by the breadth of your knowledge.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): More can be accomplished from the sidelines than by taking center stage. Move forward with your personal plans. An energetic friend is as good as money in the bank. Expect the unexpected in romance!

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Be patient. An office or personal problem will eventually work itself out. A real estate venture looks financially sound. New information puts money, favors or someone's expertise at your disposal.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Taking calculated risks and plunging into new areas can bring you good luck this week. A credit arrangement provides the financial backing to launch a pet project. A romantic goal moves within easy reach.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stay cool when conflicts arise at work. Clear away the debris and get others talking. You are at your persuasive best when dealing with your romantic partner. Be careful not to get in over your head.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be wary of business associates who like to play games. Show that you, too, are an expert at office politics. A flirtation could put you on a collision course with a friend. Proceed slowly.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The outlook is bright for those in search of employment or a college education. A change in a romantic relationship is a pleasant surprise. Remain true to your priorities.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Changing your attitude towards a project or romance will work to your advantage. You need to make a financial decision without further delay. Procrastination only causes headaches.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Curiosity could make it difficult for you to stay out of trouble. Be subtle when asking questions. Pride leads you to probe behind the scenes for answers. Choose your confidants with care.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Sit down and talk calmly with a loved one; new rapport is possible. Complete pending projects before starting new ones. Heavy spending habits spell trouble. Be frugal.

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest

Jewish Affairs needs writers!

If you have an interest in writing for and about the UMass Jewish Community,

Contact Jacob W. Michaels

113 Campus Center
545-3500

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character , space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Massachusetts Daily Collegian 113 Campus Center 545-3500

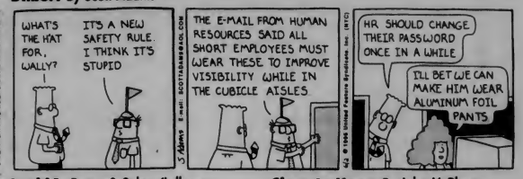
50,000 eyes will look at your ad if placed in the COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS.

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.

Ask for our specials.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Dilbert By Scott Adams

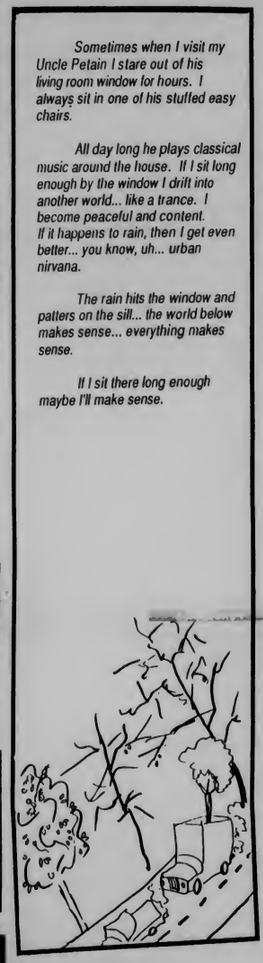


WHAT'S THE HAT FOR, WALLY?
IT'S A NEW SAFETY RULE. I THINK IT'S STUPID
THE E-MAIL FROM HUMAN RESOURCES SAID ALL SHORT EMPLOYEES MUST WEAR THESE TO IMPROVE VISIBILITY WHILE IN THE CUBICLE AISLES
HR SHOULD CHANGE THEIR PASSWORD ONCE IN A WHILE
I'LL BET WE CAN MAKE HIM WEAR ALUMINUM FOIL PANTS

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

HOW'D THAT PUNK GET AWAY?
NEVER MIND THAT, YOU CRETIN! FIND HIM!
HE CAN'T GET FAR! WE KNOW EVERY INCH OF THIS PLACE!
LOOKING FOR SOMEONE?

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



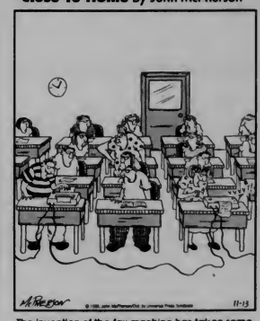
Sometimes when I visit my Uncle Petain I stare out of his living room window for hours. I always sit in one of his stuffed easy chairs.

All day long he plays classical music around the house. If I sit long enough by the window I drift into another world... like a trance. I become peaceful and content. If it happens to rain, then I get even better... you know, uh... urban nirvana.

The rain hits the window and patters on the sill... the world below makes sense... everything makes sense.

If I sit there long enough maybe I'll make sense.

Close to Home By John McPherson



The invention of the fax machine has taken some of the charm out of passing notes in class.

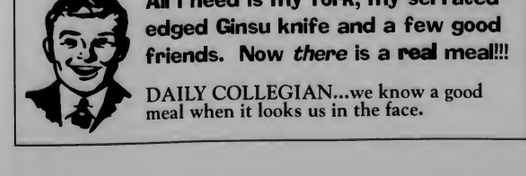
Close to Home By John McPherson

With the due date just days away, and still clueless about what to name their baby, the Lorhners finally called 1-900-KIDNAME.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

IF YOU'RE AFTER THE GUY WHO JUST RACED DOWN THE HALL, HE WENT THAT WAY!
GREAT! WE CAN STILL GET 'IM!
HOLD IT, YOU DUMMY!
WASN'T THAT— SPIDER-MAN?!
STAN LEE/ LEE / LESSER '95

Garfield By Jim Davis



Generation X By Chris Lehman

DAVE, YOU CAN'T JOIN THE COSTUME PARTY, YOU'RE NOT IN COSTUME.
YES, I AM. I'M THE BLACK GUY IN FRIENDS.
FRIENDS DOESN'T HAVE A BLACK GUY!
YOU KNOW... THE BLACK GUY WHO WALKS AROUND THE CAFÉ BUT NEVER SAYS ANYTHING, OH... THAT BLACK GUY ON FRIENDS! COME IN!
WORKS EVERY TIME.

Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

HMMM... I THINK WE HAVE A TINY PROBLEM.
WHAT IS IT, NICK?
I HAVEN'T A CLUE WHAT I'M LOOKING AT.
WHAT?!
LOOK AT ALL THIS USELESS GARBAGE IN HERE! WIRES! COMPUTER CHIPS! INSTRUCTIONS! I HATE THESE NEW CARS!
I SHOULD HAVE BEEN A DOCTOR... WOOPS! WAS THAT IMPORTANT?
PROBABLY.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Sorry! No menu today. Call 545-2626

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian... For all your informational needs

Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian

Write for GLB Issues

Let your voice be heard
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center
545-3500

All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!!

DAILY COLLEGIAN...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Copy Editor ..... Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician ..... Elizabeth Brown
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Dan Bergeron, Leon Latino

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 things you'll never hear a UMass student say

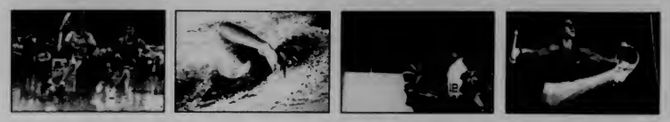
10. "Mmmmmm... Meat Pie."
9. "I hope I get to go to Whitmore today."
8. "I think the thousands of FLATBOY stickers that litter our campus look nice."
7. "Shhh! Geraldo's on!"
6. "I wish the top ten guy would make more jokes about the talking dolphin."
5. "Anyone up for a game of Yahtzee?"
4. "I'm going to try and arrange my schedule such that I have as many 8 a.m. classes as possible."
3. "Thanks for that killer weed, Chancellor."
2. "Yippee! Another tuition hike!"
1. "If you keep printing columns that are unsubstantiated... Mr. Marchionni, you just might make liars out of us after all (Wups! Scratch that one...)."

Quote of the Day

"Your silence will not protect you."

–Audre Lorde

SportsWeekend



Collegian Sports • Monday, November 20, 1995

Inside this issue:

• The men's basketball team fell to the Converse All– Stars, 94–89 in an exhibition Friday night (See story, page 8).

• The women's volleyball team beat first–place Rhode Island in five games last Thursday. Four Minutewomen earned double–doubles in the victory (See story, page 8).

• Sarah Baker and Jessica Farley each posted double first– place performances as the women's swimming team defeated Boston University on Saturday, 161–139. See the story in tomorrow's Collegian.

• The men's swimming team collected its third victory of the year, Saturday, beating Boston University, 156–142. The Minutemen were led by Greg Menton, who took four first– place finishes. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.

UMass defeated by UConn in NCAAs

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn. — If there was any weakness on the Massachusetts women's soccer team, it was their lack of speed.

In yesterday's NCAA second round match–up between Massachusetts and Connecticut, that lack of speed finally caught up with the Minutewomen, as they lost 3–0 to the Huskies.

"Speed was the key thing [in this game]," said Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy. "We're not a fast team. We've deceived everyone all year."

The win advanced the Huskies, now 19–2–2, to the third round where they will play Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind. The Irish defeated Wisconsin yesterday to advance. The Minutewomen finish the season 14–4–2.

The Huskies' speed was unbelievable, and it prevented UMass from getting any scoring opportunities throughout the entire contest. For the game, the Minutewomen could only muster one shot (in the second half) while the Huskies pounded out 18 shots. Many times a UMass forward who be rushing towards the net but before they could get a shot off, a UConn defender who catch up to them from behind and thwart the rush.

Connecticut	3
Massachusetts	0

"We just couldn't get it near the goal," Rudy said. "They ran us down, doubled us and stripped us."

UMass keeper Danielle Dion never caught a break in the game making eight saves — a couple which were outstanding. One great save came with just under 27 minutes to go in the first half. Margaret Tietjen let go a shot from the left side about 10-15 yards out that was heading for the upper right corner of the net, but Dion made a leaping and diving save to her left to keep the game scoreless at the time.

UConn got on the board first at the 20:16 mark of the first half when the UMass defense failed to clear a corner and Ginny Woodward scored on an assist from Tietjen and Kim Baverstock.

The score stayed 1–0 until the half helped by another nifty save by Dion. With around 11 minutes to go, Woodward was looking for her second goal of the day but her shot was stopped by a diving Dion.

The Minutewomen came out playing better in the second half and had more success rushing the net, but still could not get any scoring opportunities — just the one shot on goal.

Meanwhile, the Huskies kept the pressure on Dion and came up with two more scores.

UConn scored its second goal of the day at the 65:41 mark when Tietjen powered a shot to the lower right corner of the net, by a diving Dion. Tammy Barnes assisted on the score. The Huskies put the game away at the 76:33 mark when Woodward struck again. Baverstock started things off with a pass up field that Amanda Thompson tried to handle but couldn't, allowing Woodward

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 9

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN
Massachusetts freshman defender Amanda Thompson sits dejected during yesterday's 3–0 NCAA tournament loss to Connecticut.

Heart and desire led UM all year

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn. — In yesterday's season finale for the Massachusetts women's soccer team, a 3–0 loss to the Connecticut Lady Huskies, many things became apparent about this team.

They would never give up.

The heart and desire exhibited all season by this group of 20 women was astounding. The natural talent of the squad in some games may have been less of their opponents, but that was never an excuse.

At the outset of the season it was questioned where the scoring on this team would come from, and in the end, the single–season point record in Minutewoman history was broken.

Rachel LeDuc, a senior who was the last player on the bench when she started as a freshman, totaled 18 goals and 10 assists for 46 points. That total surpassed Natalie Prosser whose previous mark was 37, set in 1979. LeDuc probably won't go down as the most talented Minutewoman forward, but she did it with extra effort.

"You always know that when she comes off the field that you've gotten 110 percent from Rachel LeDuc," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said after she broke Prosser's record.

By slide tackling, diving for headers, and in general distracting the opposition–, LeDuc, as well as her teammates, create UMass goals.

Last week in the NCAA first round match–up against Hartford, after completely controlling the play in the Hawk end and leading 1–0 for 89 minutes, the Minutewomen gave up the tying goal which forced overtime. In similar situations, most teams would be devastated and doubt themselves as the momentum shifts from one side to the other, but not UMass.

Into overtime the Minutewomen continued to carry the play, showing no ill–effects of the lead they had let slip away. Then, midfielder Rebecca Myers would go down late in the second overtime.

Her intestinal fortitude would now be tested, and she would persevere.

After a two–minute break on the sidelines, the one part of the game in which Hartford carried the play,

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 9

Hockey loses twice to Providence

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts hockey team fell to a surprising Providence team 7–5 Friday night despite outplaying them. The Minutemen then lost 4–1 Saturday night at the Mullins Center, in a game which was a carbon copy of Friday's contest.

Each night UMass dodged the Friars' dreaded neutral zone trap, taking early territorial and shot advantages, but found itself down by three after the second period. Both nights, third period UMass rallies fell short, as the Friars maintained their hold on first place in Hockey East, improving to 7–2–1. 6–1–1 in the league.

Providence	4
Massachusetts	1

"I think we played a hell of a hockey game tonight," coach Joe Mallen said after Saturday's game. "We out-shot them almost 2–1. We out–hit them, out–worked them but we didn't outscore them. I was proud of our effort and if that's the top team in the league then we aren't very far away."

Providence	7
Massachusetts	5

Saturday night the Minutemen came out flying as they outshot Providence 10–0 by the 13:25 mark, but saw the momentum shift after Warren Norris was sent through a pane of glass. The Mullins Center staff diligently removed and replaced the shattered glass in 12 minutes, but the break was sufficient for Providence to regroup.

Shots were even 3–3 for the remainder of the period, and the Friars tallied their first goal on the power play at 3:35 of the second. Mike Omicioli fired Providence's seventh shot of the power play, beating sophomore net-

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

ELIZABETH BROWN/COLLEGIAN
The Providence Friars kept hold of first place this weekend with their sweep of the Minutemen in the teams' home–and–home series.

UM can't solve Friars' Dennis

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

In its first two seasons following reinstatement, the Massachusetts hockey team had one puzzle it couldn't solve. Despite playing with and sometimes outplaying Merrimack, the Minutemen could not solve goaltender Martin Legault. But two weeks ago, UMass solved that puzzle as it finally defeated Merrimack and Legault.

But this weekend the Minutemen found a new nemesis — Providence goaltender Dan Dennis.

It started last year.

The Minutemen had beaten the Friars 7–3 in the first night of a home–and–home series, torching Friar goalie Bob Bell for six quick

Turn to UMASS, page 9

Football ends year with loss

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn. — The name of the game was defense. But the opposition named it.

Saturday, the Massachusetts Minutemen travelled to Memorial Field on the campus of Connecticut in attempt to spoil the Huskies' chance for post–season play. But UMass was not the spoiler, as UConn won handily 20–7 in front of a crowd of 8,479. The Minutemen finish its season 6–5, while the Huskies' 8–3 record has their fingers crossed hoping for a crack at the post–season.

With the fourth quarter just underway, UMass took possession of the ball trailing 17–0. Senior quarterback Andrew McNeilly was inserted into the game to replace the struggling sophomore Anthony Catterton.

Wasting no time, McNeilly fired a 17–yard strike to senior wide receiver Kevin Bourgoin. McNeilly, who was the starting QB for three years, had been sidelined all year. Catterton had been the player the coaches thought could move the offense best.

"In the second half, Andrew went in and gave us a little spark and a little life. He completed a couple passes and we picked it up a little bit," Hodges said. "But we didn't get the job done when we needed to.

"It was in the back of my mind all year long to play Andrew. To be honest, we needed something, we needed a spark. He had been throwing the ball very well in practice and I went to him. I told him to go in there and play like a senior and get the ball into the endzone, and he did that."

Connecticut	20
Massachusetts	7

See related story page 7

A spark it was, as McNeilly drove the Minutemen down the gridiron and to the one–yard line. Then the unthinkable happened.

Senior Rene Ingoglia has been UMass' go–to guy all season long. He never failed to deliver yards when the Minutemen were in dire need of a few. On first and goal at the one–yard line any coach would hand the ball off to Ingoglia to score the touchdown — no problem.

First down, ball handed to Ingoglia, and he is stopped by the UConn defense. Second down, hand–off to

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

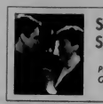
DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN
Rene Ingoglia broke the all–time Yankee Conference career rushing record in his last game as a Minuteman Saturday at UConn.

Volleyball hosts A-10 Championships
Junior Giza Rivera will lead the Minutewomen against Rhode Island on Friday (see Sports, page 10).

Women in the news
Check out what extraordinary things women have been stirring up in the news, in this week's "Women Making Waves" section (See story, page 3).



Stars and Stripes
Love blooms in The American President, Bond makes entrance with Goldeneye (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Today their will be clouds mixed with some sun, giving way to a cloudy Wednesday with a chance of flurries. On Thanksgiving their will be a chance of rain or snow.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 40 LOW: 25	HIGH: 40 LOW: 25	HIGH: 40 LOW: 25

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 53 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, November 21, 1995

Sprinkler system vandalism causes damage in Cashin Hall

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The new sprinkler system on the sixth floor in Cashin Residence Hall was vandalized early Monday morning, resulting in yet unestimated damage to rooms on the second, third and fourth floors. There is a $500 reward being offered to anyone who can identify the perpetrator.

At approximately 5 a.m., the glass to the sprinkler system in the stairwell of the sixth floor of the northwest wing was broken, setting off several other sprinklers in the building. Assistant Residence Director Bonita Harvey said 50 gallons of water per minute rushed out.

Residents were sent out into the cold morning for two and a half hours while Emergency Health and Safety and maintenance staff worked to clean up the water and damage. Residents were allowed back into the building at approximately 7:10 a.m.

Don Pelky, operations manager for the Northeast/Sylvan Area, said the janitorial staff has been cleaning carpets and clearing water from storage rooms since the alarm.

"The staff spent most of the morning cleaning the water and disrupting their regular work," Pelky said. "It was a real inconvenience for the staff and the residents."

Sean Mason, a resident of 304 Cashin, spent the early morning hours in the lobby of McNamara Residence Hall. He said it was more than an inconvenience and hopes the vandal is caught.

Mason believes the vandal didn't realize they would cause as much damage as was done.

"I believe it was someone who didn't know what they were getting into," Mason said.

Although there was no damage to Mason's room, the damage to a room a down the hall, 302D, was extensive with water damaging everything in the room from computers to clothing. Mason said the women who live there were visibly upset and were unsure of what to do next.

EHS spokesman Dave Beaudin said the case is still under investigation. They are working on a few leads but nothing substantial as of yet.

Harvey said the vandal should have been drenched with water after breaking the sprinkler. She and the rest of the area staff are asking residents who saw someone enter a room or a bathroom to take off wet clothes to notify investigators.

If you have any information, please call the EHS headquarters at 545–2682 or the University Police at 545– 2121.

EMILY REILY/COLLEGIAN
The belongings of the residents of suite 302 in Cashin Hall dry out in their bathroom, after being soaked by the vandalized sprinkler system.

Student aid advocates win victory as revised bill eases hardships

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Student Center for Education Research and Advocacy (SCERA) was celebrating a student financial aid victory yesterday instead of protesting outside of Representative Peter Blute's office as planned.

The revised bill coming out of conference committee over the weekend cuts $4.9 billion rather than the proposed $10.1 billion, and targets the pockets of banks rather than those of students.

The new bill shrinks the banks' profit margin, rather then cutting work study programs and grants. However, the bill does reduce the direct lending program from 30 percent to 10 percent. Only two campuses had the direct lending program but SCERA's Jason Vecchio said there was a 60 percent approval rating of the system.

"It's considered a win and a financial aid victory for students. There weren't any inside games to [reducing] the cuts. It was students across the country saying we can't afford these cuts."

— Michael Hass

Overall, the reduced cuts are a success to student aid advocates.

"It's considered a win and a financial aid victory for students," SCERA coordinator Michael Hass said. "There weren't any inside games to [reducing] the cuts. It was students across the country saying we can't afford these cuts."

Student Trustee Dan Rivera attributes the succes solely to student grass roots organizations such as SCERA. The movement began with letters and phone calls and progressed to mobilizing with other groups on a state and national level.

"It's a win for us because the administration had nothing to do with it," Rivera said.

Student Government Association President Christine Lopes wants students to remember the two Massachusetts representatives, Peter Blute and Peter Torkelson, who voted for cutting financial aid after they stated publicly they would not.

"We need to remind [Blute and Torkelson] that students are watching and are looking for a representative who is student–friendly in the '96 elections," Lopes said. Neither Blute nor Torkelson had anything to do with the conference committee revisions.

SCERA had scheduled to hold a rally in place of the protest in front of Blute's office yesterday afternoon, however they were unable to do so at the time.

The next focus of the student fight will be on lowering the cost of tuition and fees. UMass is currently the second most expensive public university in the nation.

"Because we have the second most expensive University the costs should be lowered so we have greater access," Rivera said. "But the Chancellor is not ready to commit to no increases in the total cost."

Rivera said the University will most likely be the target of further cuts in the coming year, with a projected $80 million gap in money allocated from the federal government to the state.

"It would be naive of us to think that we won't be the brunt of it," Rivera said.

Hass said his group will fight for zero percent increases across the board. Last year, students rallied for and received a zero percent increase in tuition and a compromised $47 increase in mandatory fees. However, housing and room and board were not covered. Housing fees increased $160 last year, an increase Rivera warns has been steadily going up in the last five years.

SCERA and the SGA are currently laying the groundwork for next semester's protests of any cost increases. Vecchio said the student voice will be important in keeping the costs of this university at status quo.

"It's important that we focus on student actions in playing a major role," Vecchio said. "This energy now has to go toward tuition and fees."

Filmmaker discusses latest movie

Tajiri's discussion examines motivation behind new project

By Maureen Rozanski
Collegian Staff

Wednesday, November 15, filmmaker Rea Tajiri held a panel discussion on excerpts from her first feature film entitled, "Strawberry Fields."

Tajiri's film is a feature length dramatic narrative that took three years to produce.

"Strawberry Fields" raises many issues. The story revolves around the life of an adolescent Japanese–American girl, Irene, growing up in Chicago in the '70s.

The film ties together Irene's struggle with the death of her younger sister, the decrepit relations between her and her parents, her boyfriend, and the peer pressures of the 70s including the "war" issue and the heavy usage of drugs.

The film stressed the lifestyle of a second–generation Japanese–American. Irene struggles with her identity, venturing around the U.S. searching for the truth behind the experiences of her Japanese relatives in the U.S. during WWII.

Tajiri's production addressed Japanese segregation in the American society during the 40s and the prejudice and racist attitudes they received.

Irene's parents and grandparents were placed in Japanese– American internment camps, and Irene struggles with this. Late in the film she quotes, "No one will ever really know what went on here."

Turn to Tajiri, page 3

Speaker looks at heroin in drug market

By Matthew Pottinger
Collegian Staff

With the world's illicit heroin supply expected to double every 2 to 5 years, and a planet full of current or potential users, a conclusion to the global drug trade won't come easily, if at all, according Alfred McCoy, a professor of history at the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

McCoy spoke last Thursday evening in the Campus Center on heroin as a global commodity.

"In the past five years there has been a sudden resurgence in heroin abuse, both in the United States and around the globe. Production is soaring in southeast Asia, central Asia and Latin America and [heroin] is spreading rapidly into new markets like Russia, China and India," McCoy said.

"In the past 25 years the number of hard–core heroin users in the U.S. has risen from about 68,000 in 1970 to somewhere between half a million and 700,000 today," he said, adding that much of the increase in heroin abuse has occurred in the last five years.

According to McCoy, a substantial increase in heroin supplied by southeast Asian countries has allowed prices to drop from $100,000 to $60,000 per kilogram, creating "a whole new clientele" in the U.S.

Increased purity, which McCoy estimated to have risen from three to 70 percent over the last 25 years, is another direct result of the recent surplus in heroin. He mentioned River Phoenix as an overdose casualty of the new surge in pure–grade heroin. The greater ease in getting "high" afforded by the raise in purity has led American users between the ages of 20 and 30 to substitute intravenous ingestion with the smoking and snorting of heroin.

McCoy said that opium and its derivative, heroin, must be viewed as major global commodities; "with production systems and a political economy similar in scale to other major stimulants such as coffee and tea." He further suggested that early demand for heroin was created in part by narcotic and cocaine–based medicines mass–marketed by pharmaceutical manufacturers, such as Parke–Davis of Detroit, and Bayer of Germany.

McCoy claimed that "two key aspects of our current drug problem [are] intelligence agency protection of the drug lords, and the repeated failure of America's attempt at prohibition through drug wars."

In terms of prohibition, McCoy argued that most

Turn to Heroin, page 3

Guide to GLBT courses released

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

In a move designed to increase visibility for gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender studies at the University of Massachusetts, the Academic Subcommittee of the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters has prepared and released a guide to Five College courses offered in spring 1996 (See course listings on page 2).

"We did this to know what was available in the [Pioneer] Valley," said committee member Deborah Carlin, an Associate Professor in the UMass English Department.

See Related Story Page 2

Knowing what courses are being offered allows the Academic Subcommittee to work on the establishment of a GLBT Studies Certificate Program at UMass, Carlin said.

The guide includes information on 18 Five College undergraduate and graduate courses that fall under the broad definition of GLBT studies. Some classes address GLBT studies directly, while others include it as a component of a broader topic.

A few of the courses are listed because they allow students to pursue GLBT studies in seminars, class discussions, written work and/or independent projects.

According to Carlin, the current publication is an "interim guide" only and will be followed later on by a "future, comprehensive edition." For now, the catalog lists only those courses which were voluntarily submitted by professors last spring. Professors responded to questionnaires distributed by the Academic Subcommittee.

"My hope is that the list is less complete than it might be because there's a greater number of courses [than appear in print]," said Carlin

Another member of committee, UMass undergraduate Ashavan Doyon, said that he personally knew of several courses that could have been included in that guide but have been left out simply because professors never filled out the committee's questionnaires.

"It's really hard to judge how complete the list is," Doyon said.

Broad spectrum of courses included

Currently the courses span a broad spectrum of disciplines, from psychology ("Adolescent Psychology" at Mount Holyoke College) to government "Lesbian and Gay Politics and Theory" at Smith College) and English ("Representing Sexualities in Word and Image" at Amherst College.)

More than half the courses come from the University of Massachusetts, which offers GLBT studies through its departments of history, English, philosophy, political science, sociology, comparative literature, French and anthropology.

Sociology professor Janice Irvine will be leading two courses designated as "core courses" for GLBT studies: "Political Sociology: Sexuality, Gender and the Religious Right" and "Sexuality and Society." The former examines societal conflict over "family values," while the latter explores the ways in which social factors shape human sexuality.

"Sexuality and Society" will also include topics such as adolescent sexuality, the medicalization of sexuality, and the invention of heterosexuality, homosexuality and bisexuality.

In addition, Irvine will be conducting a graduate course called "Sociology of Sexuality" that devotes a significant portion of its time to topics that fall under GLBT studies.

More than two years ago, the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters released a report that recommended the establishment of University certificate program in GLBT studies.

Although the report offered specific information on how and why such a program could be initiated, none of its deadlines were met and there has been inaction on the issue for several months.

Perhaps the release of the current course guide will aid the committee in its efforts, Carlin said.

"It's still just a first step," said Doyon.

Campus Police Log

Bomb/bomb threat

Nov. 17

A caller using the emergency phone on the east side of Patterson Residence Hall reported a bomb on the fourth floor. The building was evacuated and the residents were housed in MacKimmie Residence Hall. The building was searched; no device was found. The occupants were allowed to re-enter.

Assault & battery

Nov. 16

Nedley A. Anderson, 23, of 1200 Broadway, New York City, N.Y., was arrested for domestic assault and battery.

Nov. 18

Hayes C. Batten, 25, of 1004 North Village Drive, Amherst, was arrested for domestic assault and battery.

Nov. 19

There was a reported fight in Washington Residence Hall. One individual refused medical attention.

Follow-up investigation

Nov. 16

An investigation into an alleged theft in Boyden Gymnasium resulted in the issuance of warrants. The investigation will continue. Brendan U. Enere, 22, of 128 Blake St., Hyde Park, was arrested for larceny of a credit card, larceny worth under $250 and two counts of receiving stolen property worth more than $250.

Traffic stop

Nov. 17

Joshua D. Berthiaume, 18, of 33 Hardwick Rd., Ware, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, as well as changing lanes improperly and operating a motor vehicle with a license violation.

Nov. 18

Vorin Hay, 23, of 52 Short St., Lowell, was arrested for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, speeding and an equipment violation.

Annoying behavior

Nov. 15

Two employees in Coolidge Residence Hall reported sexual notes left on their door and cleaning equipment.

An apple was thrown into a student's room in Patterson Residence Hall.

Nov. 16

There were objects being thrown from the 17th floor of John Quincy Adams.

Nov. 18

There was an individual repeatedly knocking on a resident's door in John Adams Residence Hall.

There were snowballs being thrown at individuals in Greenough Residence Hall.

Warrant service

Nov. 15

Annette Elizabeth Quail, 20, of 24 Bayberry Rd., Westford was arrested on a warrant.

Keoph F. McDonald, 22, of 1004 North Pleasant St., Amherst was arrested on a warrant for a number plate violation to conceal identification, as well as operating a motor vehicle which was unregistered and uninsured.

Matthew S. Puffer, 20, of 251 Georgetown Rd., Boxford, was arrested on a warrant for operating under the influence of alcohol.

Larceny

Nov. 15

An individual returned to the 13th floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Library in time to see a male individual stealing her backpack. Police searched to no avail.

An individual in Morrill Science Center reported his leather jacket stolen.

There were backpacks reported stolen from the Campus Center and Herter Hall.

A shoulder bag was stolen from Boyden Gymnasium.

Nov. 17

There was a bicycle stolen from Boyden Gymnasium.

There was a report that a Walkman and sunglasses were stolen from Washington Residence Hall.

Nov. 19

An individual reported that a TV/VCR and camera were stolen from her room in Leach Residence Hall.

Burglary/breaking & entering

Nov. 16

An individual reported that his vehicle in Parking Lot 22 was broken into and his stereo stolen.

Medical emergency

Nov. 15

An individual in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall, who had a medical reaction, was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Nov. 17

An individual who passed out in front of his room in Kennedy Residence Hall refused medical attention.

An individual with stomach problems was taken from Thatcher Residence Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual with a broken nose was taken from the Campus Center to the Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Nov. 18

An individual with a severe hand laceration on the forearm from a broken window was taken from Cance Residence Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual in Grayson Residence Hall received a head laceration striking his head on a door frame. He was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Vandalism

Nov. 15

There was a window smashed on a parked vehicle in Parking Lot 50.

There was a windshield smashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 22.

Nov. 16

There was a bottle thrown at a vehicle in Parking Lot 50.

Nov. 18

There was a rock thrown from a window in Kennedy Residence Hall.

There was damage to furniture and fire extinguishers in Cashin Residence Hall.

There was extensive damage from car tires on the playing fields on Stadium Dr.

Animal complaint

Nov. 16

There was a kitten in McNamara Residence Hall. The owner was located and will be taking the animal home.

Health/safety hazard

Nov. 16

There was a report of cement bags on Massachusetts Ave.

A poster was set on fire on the 13th floor of Washington Residence Hall.

Accident/property damage

Nov. 16

An individual reported observing a vehicle roll out of a parking space and strike another vehicle.

Vehicles belonging to Joseph Kelly of Deerfield and Susan Carroll of Greenfield collided at the intersection of University Drive and Massachusetts Ave. Kelly complained of back pain. There was no visible injury.

Assist citizen

Nov. 16

A resident was having a problem with a smoke detector in his room in Hamlin Hall.

Disturbance

Nov. 17

There was a fight on the third floor of Pierpont Residence Hall.

There was a possible assault reported in the lobby of Coolidge Residence Hall.

Nov. 18

There was a fight in the lobby of Washington Residence Hall.

A verbal confrontation was broken up in Patterson Residence Hall.

There was a verbal dispute on the 8th floor of Washington Residence Hall.

Accident — Pedestrian

Nov. 17

An individual was checked in at Cooley Dickinson Hospital. The Amherst Police Department investigated the incident.

Alarm — Fire

Nov. 18

There was a rug fire, started by fireworks, on the 8th floor of John Adams Residence Hall.

Noise complaint

Nov. 18

A steam vent was preventing residents near the Berkshire Dining Commons from sleeping.

Attention all current, former and future

Cartoonists

The Managing Editor's desk is over run with dozens of student comics that have already run in the Collegian. If you want to keep your cartoons please come by the Collegian and pick them up. There is a file in the Cartoonist's Mailbox for you to go through.

All student comics that have not been claimed will be thrown out one week after the last day of the semester.

If you have questions, please call Marni E. Heffner, Managing Editor at 545-0719.

Course guide provides GLBT college classes

The following is a list of courses included in the Five- College Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Course Guide for spring 1996 compiled by the Academic Subcommittee of the Chancellor's Task Force for GLBT Matters:

Courses at Amherst College:

English 4: Representing Sexualities in Word and Image

Courses at Hampshire College:

School of Social Work 134: Law and Difference

Social Sciences 399-D: Law, Politics, and Sexuality

Cores at Mount Holyoke College:

English 372-S: Twentieth-century American Women Writers

Philosophy 350-S: The Metaphysics and the Ethics of Sex

Psychology 339: Adolescent Sexuality

Courses at Smith College:

Government 364-B: Feminist Theory

Government 366: Lesbian and Gay Politics and Theory

Courses at the University:

Anthropology 697: Feminist Anthropology

Comparative Literature 694-A: Melodrama, Fassbinder and Godard, and Sirk

English 891-B: Queer Theory

French 297: Crisis and Culture in France

History 389: U.S. Women's History in the 20th Century

Philosophy 702F: Graduate Seminar in Foucault

Political Science 361: Civil Liberties

Sociology 325: Political Sociology: Sexuality, Gender, and the Religious Right

Sociology 387: Sexuality and Society

Sociology 582: Sociology of Sexuality

COLLEGIAN DRIVER WANTED TO DELIVER ON CAMPUS.

• NEED CAR

• CALL RYAN AT

545-3500

JOHNNY DEPP
Ninety minutes.
Six bullets.
No choice.
NICK OF TIME
PARAMOUNT PICTURES PRESENTS A JOHN BADHAM MOVIE JOHNNY DEPP CHRISTOPHER WALKEN
NICK OF TIME EXECUTIVE PRODUCER D.J. CARUSO WRITTEN BY PATRICK SHEANE DUNCAN PRODUCED AND DIRECTED BY JOHN BADHAM
R RESTRICTED
SOUNDTRACK ALBUM AVAILABLE ON MILAN CDs AND CASSETTES
TM & COPYRIGHT 1995 BY PARAMOUNT PICTURES ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

WOMEN making WAVES

Oldest living person

On October 17, 1995, Jeanne Calment's name went into The Guinness Book of Records as the oldest living person whose date of birth can be authenticated.

Calment was born a year before Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone, was 14 when she met Vincent Van Gogh and 20 when the first silent movies were screened.

She was born in Arles on Feb. 21, 1875, four years after France lost the Franco–Prussian War, and has lived through the administrations of 27 French presidents.

Since 1985, Calment has been living at a nursing home that has been renamed after her, and throughout her life, she has kept a keen sense of humor.

When asked at her 120th birthday bash last Feb. 21 to describe her vision of the future, she replied mischievously: "Very brief."

Calment has been forced to give up her two cigarettes a day and her single glass of wine before meals, but she still eats chocolate, her one vice.

Mother receives lost notes

ROCHESTER, N.H. — A terminally ill woman is to be reunited with the letters and poetry she wrote for her newborn baby, thanks to the concern of another mother.

Kristen Trepanier said she received a phone call from a friend of the ill woman Tuesday, one day after Foster's Daily Democrat ran a story about a mysterious baby book Trepanier received as a gift when her own daughter was born.

The baby book contained several letters, dated May 1992, detailing the thoughts of a new mother diagnosed with the AIDS virus.

The caller said that the baby book was accidentally sold at a yard sale.

Trepanier plans to send the book back to an address in East Rochester given by the caller.

Test opened to women

JERUSALEM — The High Court of Justice ordered the Israeli Air Force on Nov. 9, 1995, to admit a woman to exams for its course for fighter pilots.

The order reverses a longstanding ban on women — in combat roles.

The Court accepted an appeal by South African–born Alice Miller, a 25–year old licensed commercial pilot and an air force aeronautics engineer, against the military for barring her from the training course.

The Air Force had argued in its defense that it was too expensive to put women through flight training when their careers could be cut short by pregnancy. Miller had argued this policy was the equivalent to sexual discrimination.

"I feel a lot of tension," Miller said after the ruling. "Now the real struggle begins. It will be very hard to be a woman among men, especially with the attitudes that men express about women on this matter," she said.

For Your Information

PIFs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Nov. 21

Fill-A-Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill-A-Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545–3327.

Support Group — "Memorialization" is the subject of REFLECT's support group this evening at 7 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center. REFLECT, the Five College student organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of a friend or family member.

Concert — "Chamber Music at UMass," the first in a new series of faculty concerts will be held in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Featured music will include works by Loeffler, Beethoven, Ravel and Janacek. $3 for students, $6 for all others.

Concert — "Jazz it Up — Jazz Lab Ensemble," will play in Hampden at 8 p.m. For more information contact, 545– 1511.

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177–178. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

Campus Center Closings — During the Thanksgiving break, hotel and public areas will be open, retail and food areas will be closed. Access to floors, loading dock, and offices by those wishing to work can be accommodated by arrangement with Building Services at 545–1365 prior to Nov. 23.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5 p.m. – 6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545– 4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five–College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10 a.m. – 11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folk dancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8 p.m. – 10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323–0330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1–800–750– 2016. The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1–800–696– 7752.

Domestic Exchange — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding information sessions on Tuesdays and Wednesdays throughout November and December in Campus Center Room 811, from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. For more information, contact the Domestic Exchange Office, E– 26 Machmer Hall, 545–5351.

■ heroin

continued from page 1

At one point in the movie, Irene's mother admonishes her daughter for her rebellious "teenage" ways quoting, "It's hard enough being punished for things you can't help."

In the panel discussion held following the viewing of the film, Tajiri notes the film's "transference between generations" and gave a specific description of the main character, Irene. Irene is a young Japanese girl with strict parents who smokes pot and doesn't sleep at home.

"We wanted to get a character that went against the grain of the modern minority," Tajiri said.

Tajiri noted that she received much of her inspiration for the characters in her film from reading short stories by Asian–American writers.

Tajiri also related the film's contents to her own family's past history. She said that her own grandparents were residents of the Japanese internment camps during the war era.

"Strawberry Fields" was produced for the Independent Television Service (ITS). Funds were provided by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

The showing of the film was a VHS computerization of the real thing, as the edited film will not be released in the theaters until next year.

"Strawberry Fields" is currently in post production, with minor editing changes still in progress.

■ Tajiri

continued from page 1

attempts at prohibiting narcotics in America, beginning in the 1920s, have not only failed to eradicate the targeted illicit drugs, but actually contributed to both their production and consumption. He attributed a four–fold increase in the global production of heroin between 1970 and 1990 in part to the three U.S. drug wars led by the Nixon, Reagan and Bush Administrations.

"As seizures and suppression reduces drug supplies in some sectors, global prices rise, stimulating expanded production elsewhere," he said.

In terms of "intelligence agency protection of drug lords," McCoy claimed that the fact that both the Soviet Union's and China's southern frontiers met with opium growing countries, such as Afghanistan, and the "golden triangle" of Burma, Laos and Thailand, made those regions "a key part of the Cold War confrontation."

In the opium brokers and tribal warlords of those regions, the CIA found its "most effective covert action assets," he said, adding that cooperation between the CIA and drug lords allowed for the widespread supply of heroin to U.S. troops serving in Vietnam.

In addressing alternative policies for combating heroin that the United States might consider adopting, McCoy suggested shifting funds from the Drug Enforcement Agency to a U.N. crop substitution campaign.

In reaching a middle ground between the complete eradication of heroin, and its legalization, McCoy also mentioned changing the current U.S. policy of mandatory incarceration for users to one of mandatory treatment.

The talk was part of the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) fall semester lecture series.

Soccer Football

Collegian SPORTS Has got it all.

Basketball Rugby

Water Polo

Baseball Field Hockey

Be Worldly!
Write for Developing Nations!
Contact Syed Mohammed Ali Raza
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Win a Dinner for Two at Judie's!

From the UMass Recycling Program

It's simple. Just submit a mascot or slogan proposal to the UMass Recycling Program and if your entry is chosen you will receive a gift certificate for $50.00

Your entry should be photo ready if possible; a finished product that can be reproduced easily is preferred. All mascot and/or slogan entries will become the property of the UMass Recycling Program. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible and should submit their entries to the UMass Office of Waste Management, Physical Plant in care of April.

All entries must be recieved by December 1st to be considered for the award.

Questions? Call the Office of Waste Management at 5-6528

UMass Division of Continuing Education

• January 2-25 •
Winter Session 1996

• More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
• Noncredit workshops
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register Now!

Call for a free course catalog - (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education • University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

THE GREATEST ISSUE ON EARTH!

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents

A Spectacular Sports Extra

The 1995-96 UMass Basketball Preview

Coming to a newstand near you December 6, 1995

LOOK FOR IT!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Brilliant, yet so stupid

Allow me to introduce the self-named, "Four-players of Cornell University": Evan Camps, Brian Waldman, Rikus Linschoten and Pat Sicher. But instead, and with just a little touch of sarcasm, I think these boneheads should change their little group name to "The Four-Romeos of Cornell" for their poetic and romantic compositions justify them to be so.

In case you may not have either seen it in the news, read it in the newspapers, or even received it on your e-mail, these four brilliant Ivy Leaguers composed the infamous "Top 75 Reasons why women (bitches) should not have freedom of speech: 'Let's go back to the good old days when men were men and women were ribs.'"

This top 75 list has been circulating throughout the Internet and has hit college campuses stretching from Boston University to the University of Washington. And yes, it has even hit locally at Smith College and Mount Holyoke College. And according to my list of e-mail recipients, boy did it spread around Mount Holyoke!

If you haven't had the privilege of reading the ingenious work of four of our nation's finest bright young minds, then I will show you.

David Chan

If you haven't had the privilege of reading the ingenious work of four of our nation's finest bright young minds, then I will show you. I won't reiterate the great 75 reasons, but I have instead come up with my own list. I call it "The top 10 of the top 75 reasons why women should not have freedom of speech." (Please note these are taken from the list made up by they Cornell students.)

10. I could give a shit if you're pregnant.
9. Honestly, do they really have anything useful to say?
8. This is my dick. I'm going to fuck you. No more stupid questions.
7. If my dick's in her mouth, she can't talk anyway.
6. Unless the words are, "Doctor, can you make these bigger?," shut the fuck up.
5. Nothing should come out of a woman's mouth, swallow bitch!
4. Because they're not men.
3. Where does speaking come into barefoot and pregnant?
2. If she can't speak, she can't cry rape.
1. Of course, if she can't speak, she can't say no."

Kind of makes you feel sick? Sorry about the vulgarities, but they're exactly quoted. Given that these guys have publicly apologized in the Cornell newspaper expressing their deep remorse for their stupid actions, and that the list was only a joke to be circulated among friends, it still does not fully excuse them.

They have publicly humiliated every woman in the world. And yes guys, that includes your girlfriends, your sisters and even your mother. That top 10 list are some of the things they feel about them.

I'll admit that my top 10 list is a little biased. Some people may find any of the other 65 statements more offensive. But as you can see, most of the ten I listed illustrated the brutality of rape. They had the immaturity to joke about such a theme because they obviously have never been a victim, nor do they have any loved ones who have been a victim.

In that sense they're lucky because many of us are not in their position of being ignorant to the issue of rape. I dare them to look into the eyes of a rape victim and say she shouldn't be able to cry rape or say no.

Their public humiliation was not intended. They may have been stupid enough to forget that once you send something through e-mail, it can be sent all around the world.

But I think they are smart enough to rationalize that if all the women at Cornell were to see their list, they'd never make any friends again, and they're only freshmen.

Now Cornell administrators are debating whether or not to discipline them. What do you think? Their stupidity has got them in trouble, and their perversion and sexist "jokes" are now exposed.

Their parents are going to find out, and I'm sure this is something their Mommys will stick on the refrigerator door.

David Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Giving thanks for Thanksgiving

Mark McGrath

The weather is starting to become chilly and the mittens are out of their boxes. The leaves, when dry enough, go tumbling across the street with the wind. There's little doubt about it, Thanksgiving is upon us once again.

Thanksgiving has to be the grandest of holidays, especially for the typical college student. Next to it, Labor Day, St. Patrick's Day and even Christmas pale in comparison. There's just something about the fourth Thursday in November that makes this student want to write a column about it.

The first reason why Thanksgiving is such a great holiday for students is because of timing. By the end of November, everyone seems to be just about studied-out. The four day window created by the holiday gives just enough time for the student to regroup and settle down for December's stretch run.

Similarly, the Thanksgiving break is an instant cure for the homesickness which can be brought on by a length of time away from the friends and family that are so plentiful back home. Because of the traditional football games and dinners, a student can renew a seemingly endless number of relationships on one day. When renewing the friendships, students get a sense that they'll be home sooner than they thought, making the last few weeks of the semester go by that much faster.

Thanksgiving is also much cheaper than the other holidays in its class. Let's face it, the typical student is pretty poor at this point in the semester. While other holidays cost a literal fortune, Thanksgiving costs next to nothing. The most expensive part of the holiday, the meal, is usually paid for by the time you get home, and did I mention you get food?

The food is far and away the best part of this holiday. There's turkey. Turkey may not be the best, most flavorful type of meat, but it has its advantages. As big as a turkey is, it has quite a diverse body. There is the white meat and the dark meat, and they co-exist happily. There's the neck, which I can break without feeling guilty, and there are the giblets, a still unexplained phenomenon. Last, but certainly not least, there is the best part of the turkey, the skin. Crispy and loaded with fat and cholesterol, the skin is enough to wet any healthy appetite.

What a wonderful creation the turkey is, and it only trots by once a year.

Throw in some stuffing, potatoes, gravy and cranberry sauce, and you've got yourself quite a meal. Nothing could top a good Thanksgiving meal, except maybe a good Thanksgiving dessert. If there's any room left in your belly, you're in for a treat. Cakes and pies and brownies and eclairs — I'm getting excited just thinking about it. Nothing can help a student get over DC appetite syndrome like a good Thanksgiving feast.

Another great thing about Thanksgiving is the fact anyone can celebrate it. It has no religious affiliations. While most prominent holidays are religious in nature, Thanksgiving is purely American and celebrated almost universally.

It also doesn't need any kind of mythical mascot to keep up its popularity. What would Christmas be like without Santa Clause? Easter without the bunny? Thanksgiving is fully able to stand on its own. Granted, there are the Pilgrims and the Native Americans, but taking them away does little to alter the concept of the holiday.

Thanksgiving is a holiday with principle. To put aside a day to give thanks for what we have is noble. We really should be thankful every day, but in our society we tend to take things for granted, and even a short reminder of how lucky we are can only help to bring about that understanding.

So, this week, when you're heading home to give thanks, think not only of your family and your freedom. Think of how lucky we are to have such a holiday as Thanksgiving. Enjoy the time off, and save me a drumstick.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If you haven't yet, please come down this week to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to work the system.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

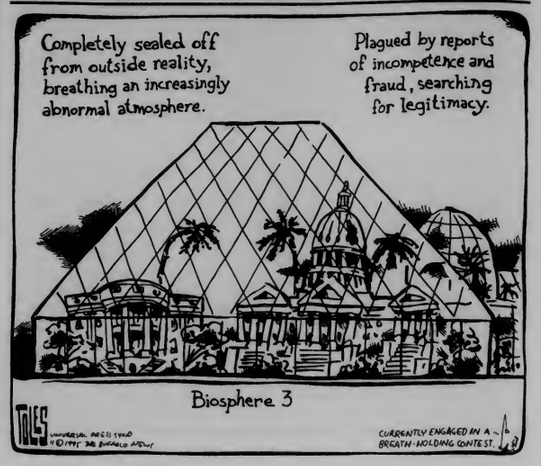
All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.vms.oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial



Completely sealed off from outside reality, breathing an increasingly abnormal atmosphere.
Plagued by reports of incompetence and fraud, searching for legitimacy.
Biosphere 3
TOLES ©1995 THE BUFFALO NEWS
CURRENTLY ENGAGED IN A BREATH-HOLDING CONTEST.

Always ratting on the royals

If you didn't already know, Princess Diana gave the BBC an exclusive interview which was aired in England yesterday. The interview, which was kept secret, stunned Buckingham Palace, and for days people have been speculating that this was Diana's revenge for Prince Charles' interview last year in which he revealed he had been unfaithful.

Chances are, it's just a juicy opportunity for Diana to tell the whole world her side of the story. It would be nice to know if she actually made those dirty phone calls to Oliver Hoare, or if she's really responsible for the break-up of a close friend's marriage. Maybe, if we're really lucky, she'll dish out how she really feels about The Firm — as she calls the Royal Family.

Honestly, what Diana has to say doesn't seem that significant in light of recent events around the world. Maybe we'll get a look at one of the most public figures in the world and see a side of Shy Di that we haven't seen before, but the interview itself isn't earth-shattering. In fact, the trials and tribulations of the current young royals seem almost trivial in light of past history.

The divorce dilemma can be answered with the shining example of Henry VIII, probably one of the most colorful figures in English history. Henry VIII divorced two of his wives (of course he had to create his own church to divorce the first one) and beheaded two of them. All the while, Henry was claiming he was on the marital fast-track for England.

In this respect, the Queen and her family are doing pretty okay — Princess Anne and Princess Margaret are the only ones who have been married more than once, and neither have beheaded their respective ex-spouses.

Then there was Mary Queen of Scots who takes the cake for adultery. The Scottish Queen, who was beheaded by Elizabeth I, not only had her second husband Lord Darnley murdered, but then eloped with his murderer. So far, Charles and Diana aren't that desperate to be rid of each other.

Of course, questions are going to come up about Diana's relationship with her horse trainer. Past history has revealed that the Nine Days' Queen Jane Grey's mother, Frances, married her stable hand after her husband and daughter were executed by Mary I for treason.

One of Queen Victoria's sons has been suspected of being Jack the Ripper. What's Charles' public laundry airing compared to that?

Seema Gangatirkar

The possibility Charles and Di will divorce is extremely slim. You don't have to look too far back in history to find the current Queen's uncle, Edward VII, who gave up the throne to be with Wallis Walford Simpson. England wouldn't accept the divorced American Wallis for queen, and chances are the country won't accept the now divorced Camilla Parker Bowles as Queen either.

Which leaves the whole fate of the monarchy in question. Critics say the antics of the young royals have destroyed the illusion and mysticism of a great tradition. The problem is that because they are royals, because they are supposed to be bigger than life, we have created expectations the Firm cannot possibly live up to.

The English Royal family is only human and they make human mistakes. They've probably been making those mistakes all along — the public probably just never knew about them.

One of Queen Victoria's sons has been suspected of being Jack the Ripper. What's Charles' public laundry airing compared to that?

These days, media is so prevalent because the public desire for knowledge about public figures is unquenchable. It's imperative to know that Fergie spent a week with Prince Andrew or where Diana works out. The stories are usually accompanied by pictures of steamed royals glaring at the camera.

With all the in-your-face journalism, does it really seem incredible that Charles and Diana's marriage would last? They were never given the chance to get to know each other away from the cameras.

Not content to rest with the parents, the journalists are going after Prince William who just started at Eton this past fall. It's well-known that three or four of William's classmates rat on the heir to the throne to the newspapers.

Now everyone's scared out of their wits about what Diana has to say. Probably, if she gets a chance, she'll tell everyone to bug off. Now that would be something worth listening to.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian staff member.

The lighter side of snacking

Did you ever just sit down and wonder who comes up with some of the stuff you see and hear in everyday life? Well, if you have then you would certainly realize that some of it can be pretty funny when you look at it a little differently.

Take, for instance, the wonderful world of snack cakes and the like. Let's start with everyone's favorite, the "Twinkie."

What was it about this cake that made someone at the big table in Hostess heaven look at it and go hmm ... Twinkie, yeah, Twinkie?

It boggles the mind to think that someone actually sat down and thought of a name for this snack and came up with Twinkie. Not to mention they got paid to do so. What type of qualifications must one have to acquire a position such as that of the obviously knowledgeable namer of the Twinkie? I figure they must need at least a degree from kindergarten.

How about the good ol' "Yodels"? Where did they come up with this one? Are they really expecting us to break into a stunning rendition of "yodel lay hee hoo" after biting into one of these. I don't know about you folks, but when I bite into a yodel I'd like to believe I could do so without the fear of popping a lung from singing afterwards.

I think "Ho-Ho's" are on the same wavelength as Yodels. They were probably named by the same person. Seriously, is this not the happiest soul on earth or what? So I suppose after stuffing a Ho-Ho down my esophagus I'm going to run out and buy a big fuzzy red and white suit, get some reindeer, hire some elves and go stuff myself down chimneys. I think not.

I don't think I'll even giggle after eating a Ho-Ho, let alone letting out a full bellied "Ho-Ho-Ho." I'll bet the genius that named the previous snacks probably named those jelly candies "Chuckles" after conquering the "Ho-Ho project."

Let's not forget the "halfway healthy" granola bar "Kudos." That sounds strikingly similar to something I might feed my dog instead of myself. "Here Rover, I just poured you a nice big bowl of Kudos."

Or we could take it a little farther down the gastrointestinal tract, "dammit, I just stepped in a big pile of dog Kudos!" Fits quite nicely don't you think?

Since we are on the topic of dogs it would be a sin to leave out the dreaded "Devil Dog." Let's see, are we supposed to eat this thing or fear it? Devil Dog? Hmm... you mean like Cujo or Old Yeller. I wonder what it was that made this dog such a devil? Maybe he had one too many bowls of Kudos.

Whatever you do just don't offer your dog some donuts. What's that? Dough-nuts! Yikes! That sounds horrible. It sounds like a testicular disease. I can see it now, "Hey Bob, what''s the matter you look a little under the weather?" "Well Phil, I've got a raging case of the donuts."

"Oooh, that's too bad Bob, but as long as their not Dunk-in donuts you'll be okay."

"I know if they were, they might turn into full blown crullers."

Time to make the donuts? No thanks. I think I'll have some pancakes instead.

On the opposite end of the naming spectrum we have "Little Debbies." It's quite clear that Little Deb didn't waste any money by hiring that Twinkie fella to name their products. Virtually every one of their snacks is called pretty much what they are.

We have the Little Debbies Snack Cakes, the Oatmeal Cream Pies, Peanut Butter Bars, and the Swiss Cake Rolls. I get a little foggy about the Swiss part, but the rest is pretty straightforward.

So the next time you go to bite into a delicious snack of any sort, stop and think about the name of it for a little while. I'll bet a lot of them will have you yodeling and ho- hoeing so much you won't be able to finish eating. As for me, I've got to go pick some chocolate out of my teeth.

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Brosnan is golden as the new James Bond

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

GOLDENEYE
Directed by Martin Campbell with Pierce Brosnan
Playing at Hampshire Six

COURTESY FRANCOIS DUHAMEL

Michael Douglas and Annette Bening prove politicians make good bedfellows in The American President.

He's the best looking guy in a tuxedo. He can blow up buildings with his watch. He never winces in the face of death. He's got a killer car, and all the babes. He has a license to kill. He's Pierce Brosnan — the new James Bond — and unlike his martinis, he's not shaken or stirred.

Brosnan takes the baton from a string of former Bonds — Sean Connery (no one will top the original Bond), George Lazenby (one-hit wonder), Roger Moore (decent in a pinch) and Timothy Dalton (a quick replacement for a "Remington Steele"-locked Brosnan). Pierce's Bond finishes this race in an admirable second place.

Once we have Bond suited up in an array of Italian suits, seated behind the wheel of a brand-new baby blue BMW (to compliment his steely sapphire eyes) and outfitted with some of Q's gadgets of the secret agent sort, he is ready to roll.

Secret agents go head-to-head in Goldeneye, as 007 is on the chase for British spy-turned Russian favoritist, 006. His cronies are a vicious Russian general and a raven-haired vixen who's specialité is strangling the torsos of men until they suffocate. She also adds to the sexual overtones of the movie with the orgasmic screams that she emits as she is shooting people.

The trio of villains, along with an expert computer geek, succeeded in stealing the Goldeneye — a device that can launch Russian missiles from a satellite in outer space. Bond's mission is to stop them from setting off a second bomb.

Bond also has his obligatory love interest — a Russian computer programmer who simultaneously dodges bullets and falls in love with him.

Director Martin Campbell (No Escape) has captured the Bond feeling with Goldeneye. All of the traditional aspects are there — the cat and mouse car chase with a beautiful woman, Bond's adept climbing capabilities and the action camera angles all combined with fantasy sexism that hasn't been seen in Bond flicks for a decade.

The film makes some modern strides with the new M being a woman, but the other two female characters (if taken seriously) could sue Bond for sexual harassment with all of his innuendo.

The irony about Bond movies, though, is while he is smooth, sophisticated and sexious, the film is not. It's thrilling and escapist while funny and egotistical.

Brosnan certainly is a pleasure to watch, supplying the film with the savvy of a British spy. No amount of gunfights or plane crashes can wrinkle his suits, or his attitude. He just straightens his tie, winks in the face of adversity, and goes on his way.

That's because Pierce Brosnan is Bond, James B...well, you get the message. A-

THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT
Directed by Rob Reiner
with Michael Douglas, Annette Bening
Playing at Mt. Farms Four

When the tenderhearted and widowed President of the United States meets a beautiful and feisty environmental lobbyist, both political parties are left seeing stars and stripes.

Rob Reiner could have used the title American Fairytale for this romantic, almost royal, tale of love in the White House. It has that Reiner-esque feel-good characteristic that wins over audiences (When Harry Met Sally...) combined with a sharp political plot that adds drama (A Few Good Men).

Michael Douglas plays President Andrew Shephard — a Democratic president with a staff resembling that of President Clinton's. Michael J. Fox plays the President's advisor and speechwriter, Lewis Rothschild, and Martin Sheen is the chief of staff, A.J.

Douglas (or commonly referred to as "Mr. President") flourished in a role where he wasn't evil or sadistic, or the male victim of an evil or sadistic woman — the Fatal Attraction, War of the Roses, Basic Instinct and Disclosure days are far behind Douglas with this part. He shows off his soft side, and is so romantic you forget that it is Douglas on the screen.

Douglas isn't the only one with his heart on his sleeve. Annette Bening plays Sidney Ellen Wade — a lobbyist for an environmental corporation who captures the President's fancy by, basically, insulting him (in the political arena, of course).

The President brings Sidney to a Cinderella-like State dinner, where she charms his friends and they dance all night. His motherless daughter likes Sidney at once, and even his chief of staff, A.J. approves. It all seems so perfect, for a little while.

The problem the President faces is the central question that Reiner based the movie upon — can you be the President and also be a human being, that is, a male human being who wants to have a social life?

Douglas and Bening cannot escape political persecution under the scrutiny of the public. It is election year, and when it comes to character judgement it remains true to life that we can't expect the President to uphold all sorts of morals.

It also does not help that Douglas' opponent for the presidency (a wily Richard Dreyfuss) is mudslinging with the best of them, making sure the press watches their every intimate move.

Reiner (who also produced the film) shot the movie in a very presidential way. The shot of Douglas making a sentimental glance out of the Oval Office window is hauntingly reminiscent of President Kennedy. Reiner also remains constant. He keeps that intrusive flavor running when every time the couple kisses, they are interrupted.

Amidst the backdrop of a solid and talented cast, Douglas and Bening do make fireworks. An unlikely couple, both in and out of their roles, they prove to have chemistry, and create an American Camelot in the White House. B+

UPC hosts unique rap band 311 at the SUB

By Jason Flax
Collegian Staff

311
Student Union Ballroom
Nov. 17

This past Friday 311 brought their guitar driven rap music to the Student Union Ballroom. Opening the show was Shootyz Groove who consist of two rappers and a back up band that plays hardcore stomp grooves.

Throughout Shootyz Groove's short set, the two lead rappers kept there heads bobbing to the back up music, while giving props to 311 and even the UMass basketball squad. Ending with "Swimming In The Ocean," rapper Spec appropriately made a stage dive into the sea of people.

Although the crowd seemed pleased with the old school rapping flavors that Shootyz Groove offered, it was 311's guitar driven hip hop that the crowd so eagerly anticipated. Opening the set with "Fourth Of July," both singers Nicholas Hexum and Count SA displayed their rapping skills as well as their laid back singing styles, while drummer Chad Sexton and bassist P. Nut supplied the backup beats.

Playing a wide variety of material from all three of their albums, Count SA danced and played his tambourine throughout the show. In addition Hexum's energy was on high as well. During the song "Down" off of their new record entitled 311, Hexum displayed his musical talents by playing chunky guitar riffs while singing "You Know That We Have Always Been Down-Down."

While 311 did not play their latest single, they still performed most of the crowd's favorites from their first album 311 Music. Songs such as "Welcome," and the James Brown sounding "Freak Out" got the crowd into a dancing frenzy. However, if there was a down point of the show, it occurred when the band slowed things down to a Santana- like style jam session pace — this left some people heading for the merchandise stands.

311 drew the crowd back when they went into there herb inspired song "Hydroponic," where Hexum and Count SA sang in perfect harmony, "Jumpin' out my skin/The skin I'm in/And the hydroponic's on."

311 who are known for their live shows, didn't let the mostly filled Student Union Ballroom down. Although the band borrows a great deal from their influences, they have a sound that is unique. More importantly, they make music that makes people feel good which is just what they did Friday.

COURTESY VARIETY ARTISTS

311 brought an impressive show to the SUB.

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Don't miss the boat!
Write for the Collegian

Sensual cedar sculptures on display at Gallery

Ursula von Rydingsvard's "Socks On My Spoons" filled with amazing art

By H. Varick Pelton
Collegian Correspondent

URSULA VON RYDINGSVARD: SOCKS ON MY SPOONS
University Gallery
Nov. 4 – Dec. 15

"Sensuous, soft and sexy" are the words Ursula von Rydingsvard uses to describe the cedar she works with. Von Rydingsvard is known for her large indoor and outdoor sculptures carved from cedar beams. "Socks On My Spoons," currently on exhibit at the University Gallery, contains impressive samples of von Rydingsvard_s work in cedar, as well as pieces introducing her use of peat moss and animal intestine.

Von Rydingsvard appeared at an opening reception in the gallery Thursday night, where she presented a slide show and answered questions about her work. The slides included many of her large-scale outdoor commissions, as well as shots of her studio and pieces under construction.

Several audience questions focused on von Rydingsvard_s role as a woman in such a labor intensive profession.

"Since I am a woman, I wasn't born into a tradition of having to use tools a certain way. I don't handle tools the way men do...we really use tools."

Von Rydingsvard also commented that she does not consider herself to be a feminist.

The title of the exhibit is derived from two of the works currently on display. The pieces consist of a collection of long oar-like poles with pods on the end. Cow intestine or peat moss has been stretched over the pods and dried, resulting in the sock-like appearance. The use of cow intestine and peat moss is a new departure for the artist which "extends the potential of meaning in the work."

The sculptures are created from 4" x 4" cedar beams of varying lengths which are stacked and glued together. The carving is done primarily with chisels, mallets, circular hand-saws and grinders. The cuts, while rough and unfinished, reflect a firm sense of harmony and significance.

While much of the labor of building and cutting is done by assistants, all of the cuts are dictated by the artist as she draws where the cuts are to be made. Large expanses of surface area offer a creative opportunity for von Rydingsvard to do carving which she calls "drawing with the circular saw."

The artist uses a method called reversed stacking when piecing the boards together, which results in a very textural and three-dimensional surface. The pieces are finished with a black wash which is rubbed on and then scoured away. About this process von Rydingsvard comments that "the wood has to seep it up, it can't feel as though it is painted on the surface."

The University Gallery, located on the lower level of the Fine Arts Center, is open to the public Tuesday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m..

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

Magic Lantern
40 YEARS OF THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT
FALL SEASON - ALL NEW SHOW
AMATEUR NIGHT
EVERY WEDS 8:00 PM
Featuring ... TOP FEMALE AMATEURS COMPETING
$500 1ST Place
& runner-up prizes
Interested Contestant Call: 283-9275
Free Admission With This Ad
ONLY 30 MINS. FROM CAMPUS!!
Rt. 9 South to Rt. 181 West to Rt. 20 West, 2 Miles On Right
BOSTON RD. · Rte. 20 · PALMER, MA (413) 283-9275
HOURS: MON-SAT 12 NOON to 1:00 AM

THE NYNEX COMMONWEALTH CLASSIC
UNDERGRADUATE LOTTERY TICKET APPLICATION
UMass
VS. BOSTON COLLEGE
DECEMBER 9, 1995
FLEET CENTER, BOSTON
$20.00 PER TICKET
LIMIT TWO TICKETS PER UMASS UNDERGRADUATE
DEADLINE TO ENTER IS WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 23.
NAME:
LOCAL ADDRESS
CITY ST. ZIP
LOCAL PHONE
CHECKS PAYABLE TO: UMASS ATHLETICS
CC: VISA, MASTERCARD, DISCOVER
#: EXP. DATE:
LOTTERY WINNERS AND LOSERS WILL BE NOTIFIED BY MAIL AFTER THANKSGIVING BREAK
DROP APPLICATION OFF AT THE CURRY HICKS CAGE BOX OFFICE BY 5:00 PM WED. NOV. 23
NON-WINNERS WILL HAVE APPLICATION ALONG WITH PRE-PAYMENT RETURNED

Vampires are back, unfortunately

By Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Correspondent

THE ADDICTION
Directed by Abel Ferrara
with Lili Taylor, Christopher Walken and Annabella Sciorra
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

Cinema has a vast history of movies dealing with vampires. From the beginning with F.W. Murnau's Nosferatu and the insurmountable works of Bela Lugosi to the more recent Interview with a Vampire and Francis Ford Coppola's Bram Stoker's Dracula, these creatures of the night are omnipresent. Earlier this fall Michael Almereyda's dark and twisted Nadja offered, if nothing else, a visually impressive piece of work. With the upcoming Tarantino–scripted From Dusk till Dawn and Mel Brooks' zany Dracula: Dead and Loving It, the big question is do we really need another vampire movie?

The latest in the never ending chronicles of the vampire is The Addiction. Abel Ferrara, who comes off as a vain stepchild of Martin Scorsese, directs this modern day opus. Ferrara made a great disturbing vision of a corrupt New York City policeman with Bad Lieutenant, with Harvey Keitel quite easily living up to the title role. Ferrara's King of New York, star-packed with the likes of Christopher Walken, Laurence Fishburne and Wesley Snipes was disappointing, only coming off as something of a prequel to New Jack City.

Like the early films of Scorsese, Ferrara likes to present the gritty depths of New York City. Whereas Scorsese's stories laid out the puzzle pieces for you to play with, Ferrara tends to stick them more in your face, whether you want them there or not.

Like Nadja, Ferrara shot The Addiction in a grayish black–and–white tone that works well with the characters and the overall mood. He uses light and darkness to create film noir– esque use of shadows that recur throughout the film.

The main vampire in this outing is Lili Taylor, best know for her smaller parts in films such as Say Anything, Short Cuts and the upcoming Four Rooms. She plays Katherine Conklin, a philosophy graduate student whose life is radically changed when she becomes a vampire. Lili Taylor just doesn't have the charisma to tackle such a complicated role. She works better in smaller roles where the audience need not delve so deep into her character.

Katherine is in her own personal struggle to get her doctorate and to understand the philosophy of her life when along comes a woman named Casanova, played by the miscast Annabella Sciorra, who asks Katherine to tell her to leave her alone. Katherine, in terror, does not respond so Casanova suckles a heaping portion of blood from her neck.

It seems obvious that the casting agent wanted Isabella Rossellini for the part of Casanova but took Anabella Sciorra because she could look like Rossellini and because she was also Italian.

Katherine begins her transformation into a vampire. At first she doesn't even know it, but soon she develops the hunger (the addiction) for blood. She proceeds to claim some victims of her own including her professor and a local hood played by Fredro of the bald–headed rap group, Onyx.

She continues to thirst for blood, all the while rambling off philosophical quotes from Kierkegard and Feuerbach when she runs into veteran vampire Christopher Walken. Walken delivers a comic bit part à la Pulp Fiction, in which he tells Katherine that she can avoid the addiction of the vampire and could live like a regular person.

The story continues with Katherine and her battle with being a vampire and trying to remain mortal. Ferrara tries to tackle the ongoing struggle between people and the presence of evil. He dilutes the real issue by trying to reinforce it with philosophical quotes and parallels with humankind's past travesties (including graphic images from the Holocaust). Ferrara is amassed with potential but the world could do without another vampire movie. C–

COURTESY CHRISTINE ALCINO

Talkin' About A Revolution

'80s folk legend Tracy Chapman will be appearing at the John M. Greene Hall at Smith College in Northampton on Monday, December 4 at 8 p.m.. Tickets for the show are $23.50 for general admission seating and are available at the Northampton Box Office.

Red Sox renew contract with Kennedy

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — Kevin Kennedy, who led the Boston Red Sox to the AL East title in his first season as their manager, has patched up his differences with the club and accepted a one-year contract extension through the 1997 season.

Monday's announcement by general manager Dan Duquette came 11 days after Kennedy rejected an earlier offer that "shocked" him.

"There's give and take in every negotiation," Duquette said Monday. "Kevin's a hard-nosed guy and he likes to be well compensated."

He said terms of Kennedy's 1996 contract were not renegotiated, and he didn't disclose terms for the extra year. Kennedy's original contract had salaries of $500,000 for 1995 and $550,000 for 1996. After learning of the earlier offer, which reportedly contained a $50,000 raise for 1997, he had said,

"Quite frankly, I'm hurt. ... What they offered would be a normal raise for any manager. What's the reward for winning?"

Duquette later said he was surprised that Kennedy had gone public with his dissatisfaction.

Duquette said Monday the original contract contained provisions for a bonus based on the team's 1995 performance.

Kennedy, fired by Texas after the 1994 season, succeeded Butch Hobson, who was fired after leading Boston to a 54-61 record and fourth-place finish. The Red Sox turned that around last season with an 86-58 record and a seven-game advantage over the second-place New York Yankees. But they were swept in three games by Cleveland in the first playoff round.

The Red Sox took over first place on May 15 and stayed there the rest of the way despite constant personnel turnover.

Kennedy "kept the team together and in the race with a team record 53 players," Duquette said.

"He's a young manager and we think he'll continue to improve."

Duquette also announced that bench coach Tim Johnson, had signed a two-year contract through the 1997 season.

The only change on the coaching staff is the promotion of Dave Carlucci from bullpen catcher to bullpen coach, replacing Herm Starrette, who will be reassigned to a minor-league coaching position, Duquette said.

First-base coach Frank White, third-base coach Dave Oliver, hitting coach Jim Rice and pitching coach Al Nipper will return. Johnny Pesky will remain as a special assistant, helping Kennedy before the game and in the dugout.

The Red Sox also promoted three players to bring their major-league roster to 39, one less than the maximum. They are first baseman Ryan McGuire and left-handed pitchers Rafael Orellano and Rich Betti.

McGuire hit .333 at Trenton of the Eastern League last season, while Orellano was 11-7 with a 3.09 ERA for the same club. Betti had a 3-1 record with three saves for three Class A teams in the Boston system.

Pats release Hurst after Sunday's loss

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

FOXBORO — The New England Patriots cut cornerback Maurice Hurst on Monday, a day after he was burned on two 40-yard passes in a 24-10 loss to the Indianapolis Colts.

The seven-year veteran cleared out his locker before practice. Coach Bill Parcells made no mention of it in his morning news conference and neither he nor the players were available for comment after Hurst was informed.

"This has been pretty much a nightmare season. It seems things have gone totally wrong," Hurst said after Sunday's loss dropped the Patriots to 4-7 and all but eliminated them from the playoff race. "I keep myself going by telling myself it's not life and death."

For those who remain, the rest of the season seems nothing more than a matter of pride. It was a far different mood from a week ago, when the Patriots won their second in a row — and third out of four — to rebound from a five — game losing streak.

Last year's team won it's last seven games to finish 10-6 and make the playoffs, and as long as that record was within reach the Patriots weren't going to give up. Or so they said.

"It's really disappointing to play just the total opposite of how we played the week before," safety Terry Ray said. "Whatever the playoff picture is down the road, it doesn't matter for us. We've got to get back to playing the way we were."

New England is looking at a 9-7 finish — at best. That was good enough for four teams to earn a wild—card berth last year (three of them in the NFC Central), but the Patriots know they won't win even one of their last five if they play like they did on Sunday. "I just hope that guys take pride in how they finish up," linebacker Ted Johnson said. "I'd like to think we've still got some pride left."

Hurst had started every game for the previous three seasons and led the team in interceptions for each of the last six. With 27 career pickoffs, he was sixth on the Patriots all-time list and just three from being No. 2.

He had been considered one of the Patriots' most dependable defensive backs coming into the season. But he has just one interception this year — among the disappointments in the Patriots' disappointing season.

On Sunday, Hurst was burned by Sean Dawkins for a 40-yard pass in the second quarter that set up Indianapolis' second touchdown. He was the victim again in the fourth, when Jim Harbaugh hit him for another 40 yards to set up the TD that made it 24-10.

Hurst, who makes $1.4 million this season, was jeered by the fans as he left the field after the game.

"It doesn't really get to me," he said. "More than anything, I feel bad. We weren't, and I wasn't, able to perform at the level I wanted."

Reves threatens to let contract expire

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Not only are the NFL playoff races taking shape, so are the coaching vacancies.

This week's update: Wayne Fontes is still coaching in Detroit and looking like he might survive, but the Giants' Dan Reeves seems on the way out.

The biggest coaching splash this weekend involved Reeves, who now seems almost sure to be gone from New York after the season, not as much for his 3-8 record but for publicly airing his differences with general manager George Young.

Reeves says that unless he gets more power, he'll leave when his contract expires in two years.

Giants president Wellington Mara says: "He and George are both at the top of their professions. But all you have to do is look at our record — we are behind both expansion teams — and it invokes a lot of questions."

Reeves' feud with Young involves the same issue that got him fired in Denver after the 1992 season — his desire for total personnel control.

He said he didn't need it when he applied for the Giants' job (New York didn't seek him out). So after Dave Wannstedt and Tom Coughlin turned him down, Young went to Reeves and he went 11-5 (with Phil Simms at quarterback) in 1993, earned coach of the year honors and took Dallas into overtime of the season's final game before losing the NFC East title.

But his personnel decisions — and Young has ceded him many of the veteran signings — have turned the team into what has been mockingly called "the New Jersey Broncos." Some of Reeves' ex-Broncos have turned out well (Michael Brooks and Brad Daluiso), others haven't (Mark Jackson, David Treadwell, Mike Croel, Arthur Marshall) but the overall philosophy has turned the defense into a light unit that NFC East teams can run right through.

Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists. LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares. Call for great Spring Break packages.
HELLER TRAVEL
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berkley
Boston MA 02115 → 1-800-843-1544 - Toll Free

BIG GUY LIQUORS
BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE
•FULL LINE OF BEER, LIQUORS, & WINE•
BEER BALLS
Now Open Sundays
Nov. 26 - Dec. 31
Rt. 63 North Amherst
549-3555
KEGS

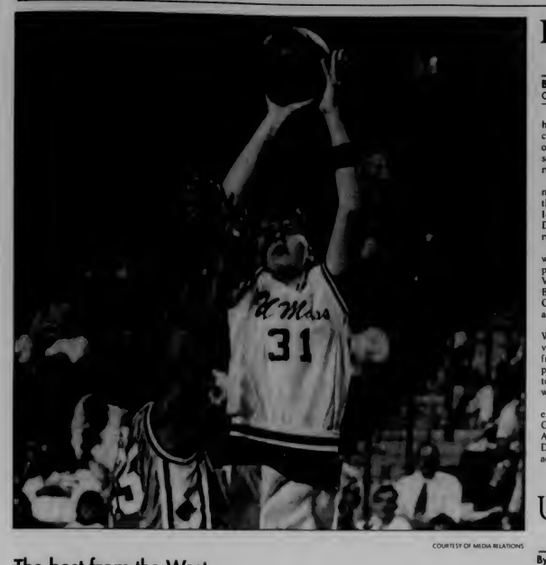
Bueno Y Sano
(Good and Healthy)
It's scary how good our food is.
At Bueno Y Sano, we use only the freshest ingredients in making the biggest burritos & tacos you have ever seen. Give yourself a filling and healthy treat and try us!
1 Boltwood Walk • Amherst, MA • 253-4000

Open Forum
The Campus Center/Student Union Commission invites you to an open forum. Come and share your ideas and suggestions that you may have to improve the current bulletin board system within the Campus Center/Student Union complex. All members of the campus community are invited to attend and participate.
DATES: Tuesday, November 21, 1995
Place: Campus Center Rm. 911-915
Time: 7:00 PM

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

Auto Glass Center
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
A CARSTAR Collision Repair Center
79 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-2880

SKI BOUSQUET
DAYS $20
Scheduled Grand Opening Friday, Nov 24, 9 a.m.
NIGHTS $15
Dan Fox Drive (413) 442-8316 Pittsfield, MA



COURTESY OF MEDIA RELATIONS

The best from the West

On Fri, Nov. 24, senior Melissa Gurile and the women's basketball team hosts nationally ranked Stanford at 1 p.m. in the Mullins Center.

■ women's swim

continued from page 10

we've just got to keep going."

Kristin Schambach was one of many swimmers on the day that provided a strong effort in the UMass victory.

"She stepped it up real well for us today," said Newcomb. "She swam the 1000 yard freestyle for the first time this year finishing third, and she had a good aggressive finish in the 500 yard freestyle."

Meghan Matacera had a fine performance this meet, in just her first year with this team.

"She won the 100 backstroke, and was second in the 200 backstroke at BU which is probably one of the finest backstrokers we'll face all year," said Newcomb. "She had a good day."

Julie Alexander, also a freshman, had two second place finishes in both the 100 and 200 yard breaststroke events.

"She had a great meet," said Newcomb. "She finished second to a women who was the East Coast Athletic Conference champion last year in both breaststrokes."

The divers of UMass had strong competition against the Terriers in both the one and three meter diving events.

"The divers are coming along," said Newcomb. "I was really impressed with the intensity of this meet, and they really responded well to it. Hats off to them."

Angelique Rodriquez picked up second place in the three meter diving event. Brooke Foley for BU took first in both events.

Ina Kossenko turned out first place finishes in the 100 and 200 yard fly, with very good times winning by over three seconds against BU in the 200.

Barbara Hickey, UMass' outstanding distance swimmer came in second in both the 500 and 1000 yard freestyles to Laura Tuck of BU, coming in only two tenths of a second behind in the 500.

UMass has outscored the competition in the past three meets 506.5 to 318.5.

The Minutewomen will have three practices this coming week before they take a much deserved Thanksgiving break. They will return to action at the beginning of December as they will head to the New England Championships being held at the University of Connecticut.

"This team is pumped," said Newcomb. "I say New Englands, watch out."

Donaghue takes home 50th in NCAA's

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

All season long, Massachusetts women's cross country harrier Rebecca Donaghue and success have gone hand in hand. It is only fitting that the final race of her season was the pinnacle of collegiate running.

Donaghue raced alongside the nation's elite yesterday, competing at the NCAA Championships in Ames, Iowa. Posting a time of 18:08, Donaghue placed 50th, out of 183 runners.

Perennial powerhouse Providence won the overall national title with 88 points. Colorado took second (123), Villanova placed third (151) and Brigham Young claimed fourth (164). Oregon rounded out the top five overall teams with 174 points.

Kathy Butler, a senior from the Wisconsin, laid claim to the top individual spot, posting a 16:51. Arizona freshman Amy Skieresz took second place, in 16:55. Third place belonged to Jennifer Rhines, a Villanova senior, with a time of 17:02.

Donaghue, the first UMass women ever to qualify for the NCAA Championships, has enjoyed unparalled success this year. As the top runner in this year's UMass program, Donaghue never failed to be the first Minutewoman across the line all season.

The Stowe native led the Minutewomen to a 7–0–1 record, while breaking her personal record three times. At the Thetford Invitational, she took second overall. The year's second meet against UConn and Maine presented Donaghue with her first serious challenge of the year, and she placed third behind the powerful Husky duo of Danyelle Wood and Katie O'Toole.

Donaghue claimed the top spot at the year's third meet, the UMass Invitational. With a new personal record time of 17:35, Donaghue cruised to victory, and was named UMass Athlete of the Week.

She only got better as the season progressed, taking 12th at the prestigous Paul Short Invitational, in Bethlehem, Penn. At Franklin Park, in Boston, Donaghue placed second overall at the New England Championships.

With a time of 17:38, Donaghue claimed second place overall at the Atlantic 10 Championships. Leading the team to the championship title, she was named to a spot on the All–Atlantic 10 team.

But the season all came down to the ECAC Championships, the national qualifier. Clocking a personal best 17:28 at Franklin Park, the sophomore sensation gained a berth to the NCAAs.

Donaghue's 50th place finish at the national championship meet put her ahead of St. Joe's Sue Yaagielski, the only person to place ahead of Donaghue at the A–10s.

UMass looks to shoot down Air Force

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Thus far the federal government furlough has extended to the Air Force Academy's hockey team.

The Falcons will fly into the William D. Mullins Center Friday and Saturday night on the heels of demoralizing 11–2 and 9–1 losses to RPI this weekend at Houston Fieldhouse.

Earlier in the season Air Force (1–6–3) split a weekend series with Division III Elmira, as the Falcons claimed their sole victory of this season 7–5 after falling to them 5–4 the night before.

Air Force played well in a pair of ties earlier this season against UMass–Lowell. The River Hawks played to 3–3 and 2–2 ties at the Falcons' Cadet Ice Arena. The two ties, and a 7–4 loss to UMass are the only blemishes on Lowell's 6–1–2 mark this season.

Last year the Minutemen emerged from Colorado Springs with a tie and a loss and will hope that their newfound winning ways will help them avenge the defeat.

The 1995 edition of the UMass hockey team has accomplished feats unheard of for the 1994 version. From opening night when it tallied a school record five power play goals at Army, UMass has witnessed an incredible turn– around, evidenced by its three Hockey East wins. UMass won only three league games all of last season.

A marked improvement in the Minutemen has been their ability to control the play of a game. The Minutemen have outshot their opponents in five of their seven games this year, equaling last year's total. Much of the shots have come on the power play, where UMass is 12 of 60 (20 percent) so far after working at a horrendous rate in 1994–95.

This weekend, at the Mullins Center in particular, UMass forced league–leading Providence to abandon its trapping defense and play a more up–tempo style.

* * *

Friday night's game at Providence was a record setting affair for senior Dale Hooper. Hooper tied Jaynen Rissling's single game assist record with three assists on the night. The three assists are made more impressive by the fact that Hooper spent such a small amount of time on the ice. Referees Steve McBride and Rich Fowkes whistled the Rye, New Hampshire native for a school record 24 penalty minutes, including a pair of 10 minute misconducts...UMass has compiled a 3–1–1 record against service academies since the reinstatement of the program...Rob Bonneau needs just one more goal to become only the third Minuteman to ever score 50 in a career. Bonneau is second amongst Hockey East players with a total of nine goals on the year. Boston University's Jay Pandolfo leads the league with 10.

Arts & Living
So you wanna write for arts.
But you don't know what it does.
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Seema or Laura.
They give you an assignment.
You take it and write.
You're happy
It's a lot like Nike – you just have to do it.

YOU'LL BE "THANKFUL" FOR ALL THE SAVINGS AT... LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink and Drive

BEERS
BUDWEISER CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK $14.39 + DEP.
KILLIANS RED CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $15.99 + DEP.
Miller CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK $11.49 + DEP.
GENESEE CREAM ALE, ICE & RED CASE OF 30-PACK CANS 30 PACK SALE $9.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $6.49 + DEP.
PETE'S WICKED ALE, LAGER, RED, HONEY WHEAT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES SALE $17.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$5.00 FINAL COST $12.99 + DEP.
BECKS CASE OF 2-12PK BOTTLES $16.99 + DEP.
ICEHOUSE & RED DOG CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS CURED $12.89 + DEP.
SAM ADAMS WINTER LAGER 6 PACK BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP.
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $12.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS BUD, LT, ICE, ICE HOUSE, RED DOG, MICHELOB, LT, & DK., LITE $39.99 + DEP.
O'DOULS NON-ALCOHOLIC CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS $12.49 + DEP.
COKE, DIET COKE & SPRITE 2.0L 99¢ +DEP

WINES
WINE OF THE MONTH
CHATEAU STE MICHELLE CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $8.99
CHARDONNAY 750 ML $6.99
WINE OF THE MONTH
COLUMBIA CREST CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $6.49
CHARDONNAY 750 ML $4.99
SEMILLON-CHARDONNAY 750 ML $4.49
FRANZIA BLUSH, BURGUNDY, CHABLIS, CHENIN, FRENCH COLUMBARD, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE 5.0 LT. BAG-IN-BOX $6.59
GALLO RESERVE CELLARS WHITE ZINFANDEL, SAUVIGNON BLANC, WHITE GRENACHE, JOHANISBERG RIESLING, CLASSIC BURGUNDY 1.5L $5.49
KENDALL JACKSON CHARDONNAY 750 ML $8.49
MARTINI & ROSSI ASTI SPUMANTE 750 ML SALE $7.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $5.99
FREIXENET CORDON NEGRO BRUT 750 ML SALE $4.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 FINAL COST $3.49
PAUL MASSON ALL FLAVORS 3.0L $6.49
BERINGER WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.99

LIQUORS
CANADIAN CLUB WHISKEY 1.75L SALE $15.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$5.00 FINAL COST $10.99
SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75L $13.49
BACARDI RUM LIGHT & DARK 1.75L SALE $13.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $10.99
DEWARS 1.75L $24.99
JIM BEAM 1.75L $12.29
Kamchatka 750 ML $11.99
BAILEYS IRISH CREAM & LIGHT 750 ML $13.99
SEAGRAM 7 WHISKEY 1.75L SALE $11.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$4.00 FINAL COST $7.99
GLENFIDDICH SINGLE MALT SCOTCH 750 ML $17.49
BEEFEATER GIN 1.75L $19.99

We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 11/16/95 THRU WEDS. 11/29/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

COLLEGE STUDENTS
Do You Need Some Extra Income For . . .
Books, Tuition, Room & Board?
If You Have an Affinity For Numbers, Some Keyboard Experience, Access to a Phone and Reliable Transportation . . .
RGIS Inventory Specialists Wants YOU IN JANUARY
as Inventory Takers in Retail Establishments
We offer paid training at a job that is:
• Unique • Flexible • Fast Paced • Challenging • Rewarding
Come join our team!
Call Before December 1st, Monday - Friday, 10am - 4pm
For Interviews
W. Springfield 413-737-7218 • Worcester 508-832-6153
Boston No. 508-657-5522 • Boston So. 508-821-5889
Boston Central 617-484-1788
Equal Opportunity Employer

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The airport shuttle Need to get to the airport? Call Valley Transporter 549-1356

University Productions & Concerts! We need you! Come see what concert production is all about at our general committee meeting in the campus center tonight at 6:00 in room COME GET INVOLVED

3-4 senior grad students looking for house/apt. in Amherst area for Spring semester. Call 549-9919

AUTO FOR SALE

83 Tercel hatchback AT AC, newer engine $850. Best offer 549-0588

1986 Ford Escort 4 spd standard 2nd owner excellent condition 70K or be Call Sabrina 549-8887

93 BMW 318 IS Black automatic w/rear package. Call Dave 525-1175. $25,500 negotiable

EMPLOYMENT

Accountant NYC CPA firm desires accountant with 2-4 years public experience. Our specialties: taxation and inbound foreign investment. Salary from $40,$50,000. Fax resume (212) 564-2030.

All students N.E. Collegiate painters now hiring mgrs for summer positions in Boston, Hartford and surrounding towns. No experience necessary, will completely train & support. Realistic summer earnings $8000 $10,000. Great resume builder. Possible internship. Call 1-800-569-9979

Bart's P/T counter staff must be available Nov. 24th and 25th to train for two 7am-2pm shifts per week and one night shift.

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $275-$375/week working to save the environment with Massprirg. Casual fun atmosphere. Call Tom at 256-8434

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hrs per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're in the Mt Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri (413) 586-8635. ABT Associates, telephone research center, Mt Farms Mall, Rte 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer.

National Parks Hiring Seasonal & Full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext. N-50012

Part time/Full time earn extra income. Work with people you like at your own pace. No investment or risk no travel no quotas no sales no inventory 586-0192 don't 9am-5pm

Score is looking for students to help with phonebank fundraising to help stop higher tuition and fees! $6/hr. minimum 5 hrs/week. Sun-Thurs nite 6:30-9:00pm. Nov 29-Dec 14th. Apply @ Score (420 Student Union) by Wed 11/22 by 5pm!!

We want you. Unique liquor related product. Retains for $200 inventory required $2,500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location - your profit $2,440 first year! 941-786-9001

You can earn $500 to $2,000 between now and Christmas. Call Hoby 1-800-881-7989

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

LOST

Lost on campus silver Zuni ring with turquoise inlay sentimental value. Reward call 545-4173

Red work ID Walt Disney World. Please call 6-1415, Lisa

PERSONALS

Heather M. of AXO I am psyched to be your big sister! We are going to have a blast together. Joy

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 548-2942

FOR RENT

Two 300 #s Be creative to earn big money. Call 253-5767

FOR SALE

Round trip airline ticket, Hawaii or Azores $900. 546-2072

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Used/reconditioned rack systems and separate components. Buy/sell/trade. Large selection, friendly advice, warrantee and great prices. Stereo/video exchange at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only, 9-5. Other days call 256-0941

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

LOST

Lost on campus silver Zuni ring with turquoise inlay sentimental value. Reward call 545-4173

Red work ID Walt Disney World. Please call 6-1415, Lisa

PERSONALS

Heather M. of AXO I am psyched to be your big sister! We are going to have a blast together. Joy

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 548-2942

ROOM FOR RENT

Room for rent on bus route, all utilities included. Male or female. $768 per month. Available Jan 1. Call Niki 253-7741

Available 1/96 Room in 4 bedroom/Belchertown prefer female $281+ Jennifer 253-0676

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate wanted to share a convenient, recently located (1/2 mile to UMass and center of Amherst), beautiful 3 bedroom, 2-1/2 bath condo at Amity Place Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen, and great sunset views. Must be responsible, cat loving, non-smoker. $425.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3866

Roommates wanted to share house in Hadley. $230+ bus route 10 min from campus. Call Nancy 582-9951

Roommates needed to share townhouse for spring semester 2 min from campus. Frank Day 413-568-9151ex 1225. Night 413-733-8079

Roommate wanted non-smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month. On bus route. Start Jan 1st. Call Anne 253-1805 heat & hot water included

Roommate wanted to share apt in Mill Valley. Heat & hot water incl. 253-1402

SERVICES

Economical manicures acrylics, nail art. Robert 548-1794

Free financial aid! Over $ billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. F50012

RESUME

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy - The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union. 545-2771

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silversmoke Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3374

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

Quicktype word processing professional word processing. Term papers, theses, dissertations, etc. Done quickly and professionally. Call Cherrel at 585-9763.

TO SUBLET

Large Room in furnished 2 bedroom apt on bus route, parking, gym. Kosher/vegetarian. $240. Lori 253-1657

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $745 r/t California $175 o/w Europe from $229 r/t. Cheap airfares to S. America, Asia, Africa, Middle East and Australia. Call (413) 587-0001. Air Tech New England.

SCRUISE SHIPS HIRING!
$$$ • free (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii!) Seasonal/permanent. No exper. necessary. Guide (919) 929-4398 Ext. C1040

"Free Travel Spring Break '96" Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group! Travel free! Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

JAMAICA

Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril- $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

180 woman friends for X country train trip, January, inexpensive. 546-1374

Spring break '96 Cancun from $399. Jamaica from $439. Florida from $99. Organize a group of 15 and travel free!!! Call Student Travel Services 1-800-648-4849 for more info. Or campus contact Liz at 546-7146, Jason at 548-5529 or Cameron at 549-7984

Winter Break Special Killington week $269. Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED TO RENT

Wanted to rent a 2,3,or 4 bedroom in Amherst. Call 549-8618

Wanted 2 or more bedroom apt or house near uptown or campus for spring. Jam Call 549-7089

Not everyone is Straight - and neither is the Collegian!

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Needs Writers...Gay Straight, and In-Between. For News, Editorials, Arts & Living, and News Analysis.

Contact GLB Editor Wendy Darling at The Collegian, 113 Campus Center.

Collegian Graphics

We just work here (and only on weekdays)

HOROSCOPE

BY JANE DIXON

Aries (March 21-April 19): Look to a more experienced individual for advice and inspiration. Tie up any loose ends related to an old project before starting a new one. You have fewer limitations than you think. Be creative!

Taurus (April 20-May 20): An excellent day to enjoy some of your job's fringe benefits. A phone call or letter could change the direction of your career. Make new investments.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): What looks like a grand opportunity so fill your wallet could empty it instead. Do not press your luck. Domestic chores should come before pleasure. Get busy!

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Opposing elements could make this day a veritable tug-of-war. Let your partner take the lead while you adopt a wait-and-see approach. Romance is best postponed. Stay home tonight and read a good book.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Pouring extra effort into your work could put you over the top. Time-honored virtues once again prove their worth. Refuse to be taken in by a clever manipulator. Spend more time on your own.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You benefit from favorable influences. Set a good example by putting your best foot forward. News from those at a distance keeps you on your toes. You are capable of dealing with any situation.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be wary of people who talk big but have little to offer. Their empty promises could lead you far afield. Go ahead with a household project. Family members will lend a helping hand if asked nicely.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Postpone an announcement if you have any doubts. Privacy will help you collect your thoughts. Proceed along customary lines when handling other people's money. Show good judgement.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance enjoys beneficial influences. Refrain from making impulsive changes in your lifestyle. Exaggerating or boasting could saddle you with new and unwanted problems.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An inspired idea comes to you from out of the blue. Haste could cause unwise decisions. Slow down. Love could appear in an unusual guise. Follow the dictates of your generous heart.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stick to the straight and narrow. Traffic and highway conditions require extra caution. Some exciting developments could brighten your outlook.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Look into moving to better quarter or buying your own home. Those who wield authority wisely will make valuable new friends. Some good financial news is featured this afternoon.

COLLEGIAN NEWS

Because it happens everyday.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

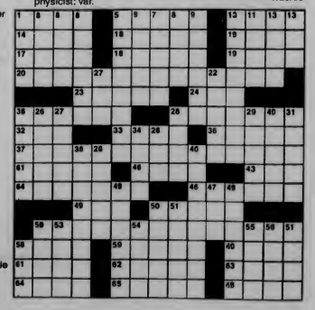
ACROSS
1 Tipper
5 Commuter's purchase
10 Kind of sash or lining
14 Emerald Isle
15 Playing marble
16 Composer Siegmeister
17 Swamp stalk
18 Popular salad dressing
19 Risqué
20 Claude's savings?
23 Regions
24 Neighbor of Para.
25 Small tower
28 Piece by Bach or Chopin
32 "A Chorus Line" number
33 As well
36 Wings of anges
37 Claude's preferred hue?
41 Prop for Claude
42 Gdynia native
43 Fruity drink
44 Germ-free
46 Convent leader
49 "All About —"
50 Bone: Comb. form
52 Claude's track technique?
58 Constitutional
59 Cordwood measure
60 Foster film
61 Jason's ship
62 — Pradesh
63 Slaughter of baseball
64 Bulgar
65 Russian weights
66 Forum wear

DOWN
1 Seed or spark
2 Lunchbox cookie
3 Piaf's "Je ne regrette —"
4 Make beloved
5 Kind of campus rule
6 Capital of Guam
7 Suit part
8 Engrave à la Piranesi
9 Listen anew in court
10 Mozart opera setting
11 Dash
12 Partner for promise
13 Otherworldly
21 Three, in Torino
22 Noted lutenist Julian
25 Ubiquitous bags
26 Doff the bowler
27 Della of jazz
28 Place for laps
29 Radii neighbors
30 Exploits
31 — Park, Colorado resort
34 Easy gait
35 Sign of a hit
38 1958 Nobel physicist: var.
39 Oil source
40 Coot covering
45 Abates
47 Busy buzzer
48 Place for 47 Down?
50 And — grow on
51 Valuable violin, for short
52 Lime-adding fertilizer
53 Masha's older sister
54 Maestro Klemperer
55 Prefix used by wine lovers
56 Plod heavily
57 Lohengrin's bride
58 "Who — That Lady?"

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

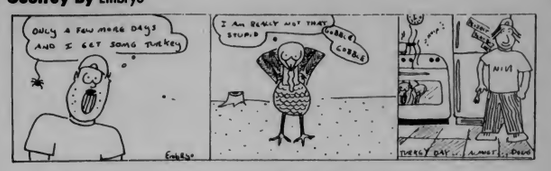
G	A	S		S	A	T	I	N		E	P	O	D	E
L	I	P		E	D	I	N	A		A	L	D	E	R
O	D	E		C	O	T	T	O	N	T	A	I	L	S
W	A	D	E		P	I	E		A	S	T	U	T	E
			M	E	T		R	E	I		Y	M	A
F	R	E	U	D	I	A	N	S	L	I	P
A	I	R		G	O	R	E	S		N	U	K	E	D
T	E	R	M	I	N	I		A	B	U	S	I	V	E
E	N	S	U	E		S	O	Y	E	R		E	O	N
			G	R	E	E	N	S	L	E	E	V	E	S
	S	A	G		A	N	E		I	D	E
A	L	L	I	E	S		N	A	T		L	I	K	E
D	I	V	E	S	T	M	E	N	T	S		C	A	D
A	M	I	S	S		I	S	O	L	A		O	L	D
R	E	N	T	E		A	S	N	E	W		N	E	Y

5/26/95



Garfield By Jim Davis

Geofrey By Embryo



The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

LOOK! SPIDER-MAN'S IN THE MAIN GAMBLING HALL!
GET RID OF HIM, GONJO--ANY WAY YOU CAN!
STAY BACK! HOLD YOUR FIRE! GONJO'LL TAKE CARE OF HIM!
SECURITY!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Bruno By C. Baldwin

SAD IS AUTUMN THE MOST DESOLATE PERIOD FILLED WITH NOSTALGIA AND NEAR TO DESPAIR.
...AND A PACE OF THROAT BURNING CIGARETTES...
YEAH FEELING SUCH IDLE SELF-PITY, ALMOST MASOCHISTIC TO JUSTIFY THE FEELINGS OF WORTHLESSNESS.
MENTHOL...
YOU KNOW, I FEEL LIKE JUSTIFYING MY WORTHLESSNESS BY DROWNING MYSELF UP WITH A CUP OF COFFEE.
WELL...I DON'T KNOW IF WE SHOULD OVERDO IT.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

HERE'S YOUR LATEST BUDGET CUTS. BUT PLEASE DON'T KILL THE MESSENGER FROM FINANCE, HA HA!!
I RECOMMENDED A 20% CUT. A QUICK GLANCE AROUND THE ROOM TELLS ME YOU'RE NOT ON THE SUCCESS VECTOR. ANYHOO, SO NOTHING LOST.
TOUGH ROOM

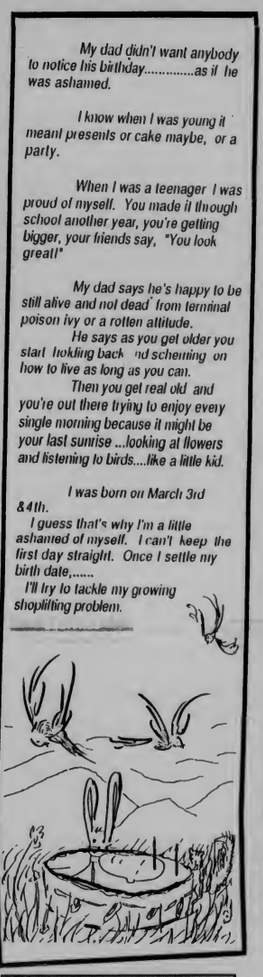
Lost Horizons By Douglas Cellineri

GOOD GIRL, ASHLEY. GOOD GIRL
TREE. T-R-E-E. ROCK. R-O-C-K
MY SISTERS. WE'N MEAGAN! GWYN? BECAUSE GWOME BABY? SHE WON'T MARRIED! WOMEN CAN RAISE CHILDREN ALONE NOW! WE DON'T NEED MEN ANY MORE.
BUG. B-U-G
CHAUVINISTIC, SELF-CENTERED, OBSTINATE. PIG. M-A-N
VOLUNTARY SINGLE PARENTING--YET ANOTHER ASSAULT ON TRADITIONAL VALUES.
GOOD GIRL!
CASTRATE. C-A-S-T-R-A-T-E

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

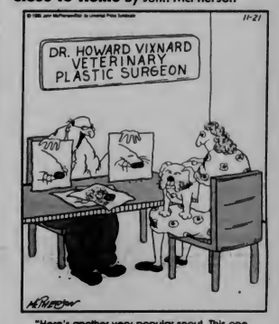


My dad didn't want anybody to notice his birthday.....as if he was ashamed.
I know when I was young it meant presents or cake maybe, or a party.
When I was a teenager I was proud of myself. You made it though school another year, you're getting bigger, your friends say, "You look great!"
My dad says he's happy to be still alive and not dead from terminal poison ivy or a rotten attitude.
He says as you get older you start looking back and scheming on how to live as long as you can.
Then you get real old and you're out there trying to enjoy every single morning because it might be your last sunrise ...looking at flowers and listening to birds....like a little kid.
I was born on March 3rd &4th.
I guess that's why I'm a little ashamed of myself. I can't keep the first day straight. Once I settle my birth date,.....
I'll try to tackle my growing shoplifting problem.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"We had child safety gates built into the house. The collar Jason is wearing activates the gate anytime he gets within 10 feet of the stairs."

Close to Home By John McPherson



"Here's another very popular snout. This one conveys an air of simple elegance that says, 'I'm a sophisticated dog of the '90s.'"

Sorry, no menus today call 545-2626

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Mike MacLean
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reily
Production Supervisors ..... KathrynGracia, Marc Dionne
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Surprises in the new James Bond movie

10. Bond and the bad guy have a final confrontation at the end of the movie, and... get this... Bond wins!
9. Chancellor Scott makes a cameo as 005.
8. In the face of the most dreadful danger, Bond utters witty anecdotes.
7. The whole movie is terribly realistic, completely lacking any form of sexism, and totally unpredictable.
6. The knife used in one of the fight scenes is O.J.'s.
5. Not one attractive woman is in the entire movie.
4. Bond finally takes care of the villains, and saves the world from a horrible fate... then his backup arrives.
3. The villainous woman is not given a suggestive name.
2. Entire script written by David Hasslehoff.
1. Bond scores!

Quote of the Day

"I don't know. They were both wearing a paper bag over their head."

–Yogi Berra after he had seen a streaker and was asked if the person was male or female

Sports

Volleyball hosts A–10 Championships at Cage

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

While many students are on Thanksgiving break enjoying some time off from their studies, the Massachusetts volleyball team will be thankful it is still on campus, as it earned a No. 3 seed in the Atlantic 10 Championships to be held this weekend at Curry Hicks Cage.

On Friday at 5:30 p.m., the Minutewomen will take on the No. 2 seeded Rhode Island Rams. That match is to be followed by a contest between George Washington (No. 1) and Virginia Tech (No. 4) at 7 p.m. The winners of both matches will play for the A–10 Championship on Saturday, at 7 p.m.

An A–10 championship would be UMass' first ever, and it would mean a spot in the NCAA Championship Tournament, whose Championships are to be held here at the Mullins Center on Dec. 14–16.

The team's position going into the A–10's is remarkably similar to last season's. In both years, UMass has had momentum on their side going in. Last season, the club had won 11 of 13. This year, the Minutewomen have managed 13 of 14.

> "This is the time of year you want to be playing well. We've had our backs to the wall since late September, but we've responded in a positive fashion."
>
> — Coach Bonnie Kenny

In both cases, UMass, who finished the season 24–10, 15–5 in the A–10, owned the number three seed. The only difference is last year six teams qualified for the postseason, as opposed to four this time around.

Last season, UMass's season ended with a loss to Rhode Island in the second round. Coach Bonnie Kenny is no doubt hoping that this is a trend that won't continue, and with the way her team has been playing of late, including a regular season–ending victory over the Rams, perhaps there's room for a little confidence.

"This is the time of year you want to be playing well," Kenny said. "We've had our backs to the wall since late September, but we've responded in a positive fashion. The chemistry is there, we're knowing what to expect from each other on the court."

UMass split the season series with the Rams, as they fell to URI at home on October 3rd, 3–1. So the 3–2 win on the road against them Thursday was an important one, although Kenny doesn't feel it gives her team an advantage.

"I definitely think it helps us," she said. "If we had not won [on Thursday] there would have been some doubt going in. But it doesn't give us an edge. The edge is the fact that we're playing at home. The win did show that we were capable of beating the No. 1 team in our conference, which Rhode Island was when we beat them."

Junior Giza Rivera led the team offensively on the season. The outside hitter averaged 4.865 kills per game on the season, along with 433 kills total. Both were team highs. What makes Rivera's feat so special is the fact that she missed nine games due to an ankle injury. Rivera was also second on the team in digs with a 3.146 average.

Junior Lesley Nolan also had a great year, as she averaged 3.703 k/gm, second on the team. Nolan led the team in digs, with 3.640 dg/gm. Senior Rachel Sky finished third on the team in digs, with a 3.043 average.

If UMass makes it to Saturday, chances are they will face GW, the defending champions. Not only have the Minutewomen dropped both matches to the Colonials this season, but their all–time record stands at a mere 2–12.

If Virginia Tech pulls off the upset, the odds may be a bit more favorable. UMass has split the season series with the Hokies, with the win coming at home.

"The team with the least amount of unforced errors can win the tourney," Kenny said. "Hopefully that team will be us. I think we have as good a chance as anybody to win it."

EMILY REILY/COLLEGIAN

This weekend, the No. 3 Massachusetts volleyball team hosts the A–10 Championship Tournament in the Curry Hicks Cage.

EMILY REILY/COLLEGIAN

Last weekend, the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team dropped the BU in Boyden Gym, beating the Terriers 161–139.

Women's swimming drowns Terriers

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

While this weekend the falling snow might have had some students excited to be outside, the real excitement was happening inside, as the women's swimming and diving team drenched Boston University Saturday afternoon.

The Minutewomen pulled off a spectacular victory over the Terriers in a duel meet at Boyden Gymnasium, by the score of 161–139.

"This has been one of the more satisfying wins in my 12 years here," said a soaked head coach Bob Newcomb, after being tossed into the pool by his jubilant team.

With the victory the Minutewomen remain undefeated on the year with a record of 3–0 heading into the New England Championships at the beginning of December.

"This team is riding high," Newcomb said. "Everything they're doing right now is so positive."

A soggy BU team will head back to Boston, with their mark of 1–1, and different thoughts about future encounters with UMass.

"They come in to swimming us, and it's almost a joke to them," said Newcomb. "Well, we have to swim UMass. I guess we'll just get this over with. We'll, its not a joke to them anymore."

UMass held a 31 point advantage early on after six events, but as expected this meet came right down to the final races.

Jessica Farley came away with a big victory in the 200 yard individual medley, one event before the last.

"That was a great swim for her," said Newcomb. "That was fabulous. She is developing into one of the best swimmers in the program."

Farley also picked up first place in the 200 yard freestyle and second in the 100, the two events that UMass dominated.

Speaking of domination, senior Sarah Baker continues to be outstanding in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events in which she took first place in again.

However, as big as those victories are, the biggest event was the last of the day, where Baker anchored the 400 yard freestyle relay.

Going into that event UMass held a 13 point advantage and needed a finish of second or better to prevent a tie of the meet.

Baker made up a slight difference in the final two laps to overcome BU and swim to the finish line first, enabling her relay of Amy Mullen, Kristin Schambach, and Barbara Hickey to gain first place and ultimately the victory over the Terriers.

"I just wanted our team to do everything that they can just to beat this team," said Baker. "I've had a rivalry with BU, and that's just one team that I wanted to beat this year, and I'm so psyched we did it."

The team effort throughout the year has been tremendous, and the team is confident of a good showing at the New England's in a couple of weeks.

"The team is practicing great together, and everybody is pushing each other, and that's what definitely helped," said Baker. "The way this team is swimming right now, if everyone stays healthy and focused, we're going to do it, it's going to be great."

What was also so rewarding about this victory was that UMass did it without four of their top swimmers.

Jessica Griffith and Jodi Walters were out with personal commitments, both of whom had two victories and two second place finishes respectively in the meet before.

Pam Perog was out of the meet, along with Karen Sonnwald (UMass record holder in the 500, 1000, and 1650 yard freestyle events) who has been out of action for the start of the year as she recovers from a broken foot. However Newcomb says they will be looking to remove her cast next week, and get her back going again. Her probable return will be sometime in January.

The effort that UMass put forth on Saturday is an excellent indication of how hard this team has been working and the types of abilities on this team.

"The way we're swimming races is smart," said Newcomb. "We're improving every week, getting better and better at the little things, and

Turn to WOMEN' S SWIM page 7

UM beats BU, Menton wins three

By Jay Warner
Collegian Staff

Watching the University of Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team battle a strong Boston University squad this past weekend, you would see a talented group of athletes in action. What you wouldn't know is, with key swimmers absent from the lineup, the Minutemen defeated BU by a score of 156–142.

Due to personal reasons, illness, injuries and prior commitment to the UMass water polo team, the swim team was missing personnel that have been proven contenders in the past. Despite those who were MIA, the Minutemen who were in action provided the drama, as the meet wasn't decided until the final relay race.

"I was expecting a close meet because we were down a couple of swimmers," said coach Russ Yarworth. "I always tell the kids not to focus on who's not here, focus on who's here. That's what we did and we won some nice, close races."

> "It was a good team effort and swimming is often thought of as an individual sport, but it is a team sport because everyone must step up and swim as well as they can, individually."
>
> — Coach Russ Yarworth

The Minutemen started the day off well as David Koritkoski, Chris Martin, Geoff Gear and Greg Menton took first place in the 200 yard medley relay with a time of 1:38.96. Yarworth made it clear that he felt the relay teams were a crucial part in winning the meet.

"It was a good team effort and swimming is often thought of as an individual sport, but it is a team sport because everyone must step up and swim as well as they can, individually," Yarworth said.

Senior tri–captain Jeff Little followed the relay win with a strong performance in the 1000 yard freestyle, winning in a time of 10:13.88. Freshman BJ Brannan was close behind Little, finishing in 10:14.45.

Perhaps the single most impressive swimmer of the day was junior Greg Menton, who, besides being a member of the 200 medley relay winning team, was an individual winner in the 50 yard and 100 yard freestyle events with times of :21.79 and :48.20, respectively. Menton later played a role in winning the decisive event of the match, the 200 yard freestyle relay, as the team posted a victorious time of 1:27.64.

With the spotlight on Menton, senior diver Justin Murphy quietly disposed of the competition by winning both the 1 meter and 3 meter events. Posting scores of 259.575 and 249.90 respectively, the points Murphy earned in each event proved to be the margin of victory for the Minutemen.

"He's got the talent and now he's proven that he can take that talent and put it to use," Yarworth said of Murphy. "He's confident, he's mature, and he's doing a good job."

The UMass freshman were once again brilliant, providing hope for the winning tradition to continue in the future.

Most notably, Gear and Brian Wisniewski placed second and third in the 200 yard freestyle with times of 1:48.65 and 1:51.20, respectively. Gear went on to win the 100 yard butterfly with a time of :52.89 and Wisniewski later placed second in the 200 yard backstroke with a time of 2:00.35.

"Our freshmen are doing a great job and I just want to see them continue to improve and gain experience," said Yarworth. "All in all, we put together a good meet, won the races that we had to win, and held them off at the end."

With three wins in as many tries, the Minutemen appear to be a force to be reckoned with at the upcoming New England Championship.

Yarworth is confident that, although the water polo Final Four is the same weekend and the injuries have stockpiled, the swimming and diving team will contend for the overall victory in the championship that takes place at the University of Connecticut.

"We've had a few curveballs thrown at us but we can hit the curves," said Yarworth.

ELIZABETH BROWN/COLLEGIAN

Last weekend, the Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team, led by junior Greg Menton, sunk the BU Terriers 156–142.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 55 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, November 27, 1995

Thomas is clutch in UMass upset
Senior forward Octavia Thomas was outstanding for UMass in their upset of No. 8 Stanford and their win against Detroit (See Sports Weekend, page 10).

Missing Student
P.J. Steverman, a New England College student, is missing after last being seen at a party last Monday in Scituate. The police are currently

"Elvis Ate America!"
U2 makes its woeful return as The Passengers on a new album, with Brian Eno and Luciano Pavarotti (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Expect clouds this morning with a chance of flurries and a light wind in the afternoon. Tuesday should be cloudy and mild with a chance of rain in the afternoon. Highs should be near

HIGH: 54 LOW: 42 | HIGH: 59 LOW: 40 | HIGH: 50 LOW: 35

Search committee names Bulger as top choice for president

By Martin Finucane
Associated Press

BOSTON — Like a superhero in a phone booth, Senate President William M. Bulger made an enormous change in what seemed like seconds — from president of the state Senate to the man who wants to rescue education at the University of Massachusetts.

It seemed to come from nowhere. From out of a smoke-filled room.

A deal. A fix.

But the chairman of the university trustees and the trustee who headed the search committee say the selection process was a deliberate and sound one, although Bulger appears to have been an inside favorite ever since he was nominated by "a number of people."

Bulger, who is likely to be named president of the university this week, was a leading candidate from the very outset, said Daniel Taylor, the trustee chairman.

"At each level of the process, it was always possible for the candidate or us to say, 'I don't think it's going to work.' And that was true every step of the way," Taylor said.

"It just happens that every time people looked at it, it looked like a better and better idea," said Taylor, who was also a member of the search committee.

Peter Lewenberg, the search committee chairman, also said people felt from the beginning that Bulger might be a good candidate, but the outcome wasn't a foregone conclusion.

"There's certainly a cynical view that says it was a 'done deal' from the very beginning. But I know the truth of what we did and how we did it. We made our selection based on the merits of the people and their ability to do the job we feel needs to be done," he said.

The committee began its work in late May. The committee seriously considered about 70 applications, Lewenberg said.

Bulger's name was submitted by a number of other people, not himself, Lewenberg said.

Bulger said publicly he was "intrigued" by the job, but never acknowledged that he was an active candidate until the night he was picked by the committee as the top choice.

His spokesman, Jim Julian, had no comment on why Bulger kept his cards so close to his chest.

But trustee and search committee member Dr. Michael Foley, who supports Bulger, speculated that Bulger wanted to avoid publicity, as he has done throughout most of his career.

"I think he's a man of substance and a man of great influence. And he had the insight to realize that his overt interest in the position could perhaps have spooked the process in some way," he said.

"I think he didn't want to tip the process for or against himself because he's such a lightning rod," he said.

Bulger, a Boston Democrat, has presided over the state Senate for 17 years. Critics say Bulger has a dictatorial leadership style, but Bulger this week styled himself as a consensus builder.

His current salary is $81,410 and he's looking at a big raise: the former UMass president, Michael Hooker, was paid $189,000.

Bulger, who is derided regularly by one Boston columnist as corrupt, has been embroiled in several scandals over his long career, but has emerged legally unscathed.

And although vilified by powerful attorney Alan Dershowitz as a racist, he has managed to make important connections beyond his power base of conservative South Boston.

Republican Gov. William F. Weld attacked him during the 1990 campaign as a symbol of what was wrong with Massachusetts politics, but the two later formed an amicable relationship, which apparently has served Bulger well.

The university trustees are all Weld appointees, though some were originally appointed by previous governors.

Several trustees who returned a reporter's phone calls this week emphatically denied being pressured or lobbied to back Bulger, who is renowned for his far-reaching political influence.

Weld set the tone, however, soon after Hooker's departure. He announced publicly that he felt Bulger would be a good choice. Taylor, the trustee chairman, who is friends with Weld from working together in a major Boston law firm, said Weld also told him privately in June that he felt Bulger "would be a very good president of the university."

Turn to BULGER, page 2

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

All that Jazz
Matt Weinshank, a trombone player for the University Jazz Lab Ensemble, performed on November 21 at the Hampden Theater.

Congress proposes cuts in direct loan lending

By Amy H. Parodysz
Collegian Staff

The good news about financial aid is that Congress revised a bill the weekend before last which will cut $4.9 billion. That's good because the original proposal was to cut $10.1 billlion.

The bad news is that the bill proposed cutting the direct loan program by two–thirds.

The direct loan program allows students to borrow directly from the federal government through their campus financial aid offices. It is currently used by 2 million college students at more than 1,350 schools, according to the U.S. Department of Education. The University of Massachusetts is one of those schools.

News Analysis

During the "government shutdown" the U.S. Department of Education greeted callers with an answering machine message explaining that the department was "closed due to lack of appropriations." Perhaps this is why Leo Kornfeld, who was answering messages, is concerned about budget cuts, including the ones which affect the direct loan program.

"Four hundred and fifty college presidents have said what a great program it is," said Kornfeld. "And it saves the federal government billions of dollars."

Currently, 40 schools in Massachusetts are part of or soon to be part of the direct lending program, but only four schools — all of which are private — will be able to participate if the proposed cuts are passed, according to Chris Lindstrom of MASSPIRG.

If the bill passes, UMass would lose its direct loan program.

The U.S. Department of Education wrote in their press release that a return to the old system, which involves shopping for a bank, would mean more paperwork.

"It will be very difficult [and] confusing," Kornfeld said.

However, Kornfeld said the lobbyists he had referred to were banks and the guarantee agencies, who do not make any profit from direct loans.

Lindstrom wrote that "cuts to direct lending give a virtual monopoly to the private sector, and students cannot benefit from competition, which results in a controlled market around loans with fixed higher interest rates."

As of Nov. 2, the House had voted to kill direct lending altogether in their budget reconciliation bill. Meanwhile, the Senate imposed a 20 percent cap on direct lending in their bill, which would mean that about half the students with direct loans would have to return to the old system, according to the U.S. Department of Education.

Although bill proposed last weekend is less harsh than these earlier proposals, it comes at the same time as a proposal to cut "$8.7 million in Pell Grants to students in Massachusetts immediately — not to mention more cuts to be instafed over a six–year span," Lindstrom wrote.

"Congress is pitting students against special interests," U.S. Secretary of Education Richard W. Wiley was quoted as saying in a recent press release. "Partisan politics and special interests are loving out over common sense and the best interests of students, schools and taxpayers.

"Returning to the old loan program means wasted time and hassle for students when they take out their loans, but it also means preserving billions of dollars in profits for all the middlemen that make up the old system."

In the same press release, Lawrence Lindsey, a Bush appointee to the Federal Reserve Board, agreed.

"As long as it is necessary to provide a profit to induce lenders to guarantee student loans, direct lending will be cheaper," he said.

Irish vote 'yes' on divorce referendum

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

DUBLIN — Defying the wishes of their church as never before, Irish voters decided to legalize divorce, but only by the narrowest of margins.

The first count Saturday was so close — 50.2 percent in favor of amending the constitution to 49.8 percent opposed — that Ireland's chief election official ordered an immediate recount. The results of that count showed a slightly higher "yes" vote: 50.3 percent.

The margin was only 9,118 votes out of the more than 1.62 million cast in Friday's referendum, making it the closest vote in Irish history. Turnout was put at 61 percent.

Ireland was the only country in the Western world to constitutionally ban divorce, and lifting the prohibition marks the country's sharpest break with its Roman Catholic traditions.

The amendment was to take effect immediately, allowing divorces for couples who have been separated for at least four of the previous five years and can show "no reasonable prospect of a reconciliation."

The government has already approved a host of related laws defining the rights of separated spouses, children and property.

The ban denied an estimated 40,000 couples in broken marriages the right to remarry. Prime Minister John Bruton, who led the campaign for ending the prohibition, said he was relieved by the outcome.

However, the government "must reflect on why there was such a large 'no' vote," he said. "It wasn't all because of negative campaigning."

He suggested a government commission should develop "a positive agenda to support the family," but he gave no details.

Appeals by Pope John Paul II and Mother Teresa spearheaded the campaign against the referendum in Ireland, where 92 percent of the 3.5 million citizens are baptized Catholics.

Friday's vote marks the most serious rollback in the state's overtly Catholic laws. Voters in a 1992 referendum decided to keep the ban on abortion but endorsed the right of Irish women to have abortions overseas. Lawmakers previously had loosened restrictions on contraceptives.

"I feel shattered," said Eleanor McFadden, organizer of a church-based anti-divorce group, Parishes for Life. "I've been canvassing for weeks, and this vote today is not like what we heard on the doorsteps of Dublin.

"Our group has been arguing the case for the common good and pointing out what goes wrong in divorce societies like England and America."

The first count released Saturday showed the constitutional amendment passing 818,112 to 810,592, a difference of only 7,520 votes.

The recount began immediately afterward, ending with a total of 818,843 - 809,725. The Initial count had misidentified one set "yes" votes as "no"s from suburban south Dublin, election officials said.

Turnout was higher in the key battleground of Dublin — where the "yes" vote was strong — than in rural Ireland, where traditionalists mostly voted "no."

However, all across the country the vote for legalizing divorce was stronger than in 1986, when the issue was first put to voters.

Two out of three voters said "no" then.

Opponents of divorce had been 20 points behind in opinion polls a month ago, but gained support with church leaders' help and with posters that claimed that "You Will Pay" through higher taxes to support broken families.

The shift since 1986 can be attributed to several factors, but political analysts emphasized two: the rising number of broken marriages, and the erosion of the Catholic church's moral authority following a series of sexual scandals.

"The influence of the church has waned substantially," said Roisin Shortall, a Labor Party lawmaker who saw the "yes" vote in her Dublin Northwest district shoot to nearly 60 percent, up 13 points from 1986.

"We aren't going back to a confessional state where people turned to their priests to tell them how to vote," said Shortall, one of 20 women in the 166-member Parliament. "People finally are saying they'll work out their own sense of morality and make their own decisions."

Jackson, Jr. vies for political seat

Namesake looks for Chicago's Reynolds' Congressional position

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press

CHICAGO HEIGHTS, Ill. — The stocky, bearded young man in a sleek gray suit leans over from his chair, surrounded by preschoolers who giggle and hang on his every animated word.

To the Head Start toddlers listening to him read a story, Jesse Jackson, Jr. is just a visitor.

But to almost everyone else he meets, he is The Son, the presumed heir to his father's activist legacy.

On Tuesday, the eldest son of former presidential candidate Jesse Jackson tests his own appeal to voters. He is one of five Democrats vying for a ballot spot in a special election to fill the 2nd Congressional District seat vacated by Mel Reynolds, who was convicted of having sex with an underage campaign worker.

Four Republicans are also campaigning for a chance to run in the Dec. 12 general election, although winning the Democratic nomination is considered tantamount to victory.

In his first bid for public office, the 30-year-old Jackson must make a delicate transition — shifting from years of identification with his father's social agenda to try to make his own mark, and from within the system he has been taught to challenge.

No matter what he does, Jesse Louis Jackson, Jr. learned early on that he cannot hide from his name. Nor does he want to.

"It's a name that's synonymous with public service, with helping people, and I've always striven to live up to that commitment," Jackson says with the practiced earnestness of a man who carries a Bible in his briefcase and passed his 21st birthday in jail for protesting apartheid in South Africa.

But the family name also "is a double-edged sword," he says.

"You inherit your father's friends, your parents' friends, and you inherit their detractors," he said.

Jackson, called Junior by friends, has traveled with his father to Cuba and Syria, met popes and presidents and broken bread with former Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega. He can boast he needs no introduction to Nelson Mandela or many members of Congress.

"Unlike other candidates in this race, I'm not going to Washington to get to know people," says Jackson, a member of the Democratic National Committee.

"He's been preparing for this all his life," says the elder Jackson, who was agitating for voting rights in Selma, Ala., the day his son was born. "It's a tender age, but he has a tough mind."

Jackson's name recognition seems to be paying off: A recent Chicago Tribune poll found he was the best-known of all nine candidates for Reynolds' seat, topping even Illinois Senate minority leader Emil Jones, a 22-year legislative veteran.

He led the Democratic pack with 33 percent support — but almost the same percentage of district voters had reservations about his lack of elective experience.

His name "may not get him to the finish line," says Paul Green, a political science professor at suburban Governor's State University, "but it gets him to the starting gate."

Supporters say Jackson is a dogged grassroots organizer who thrives on details and computer wizardry, a style distinct from his father's chaotic, seat-of-the-pants approach.

"He's very much into planning and organizing and building institutions," says Frank Watkins, Jackson's campaign manager and longtime aide to his father. "His dad has always been more of a mobilizer."

Jackson has promised to bring jobs to ravaged industrial areas of the 2nd District, which is 68 percent black and encompasses parts of Chicago's poverty-pocked South Side as well as middle-class and affluent southern suburbs.

Critics call Jackson a rookie — he and his wife, Sandra, a lawyer, moved from Washington to the South Shore neighborhood to establish residency only last year. And they say he offers little more than snappy slogans, a much-stamped passport and years spent working for dad as national field director of the Rainbow Coalition.

Jackson was recently put on the defensive by disclosures that his salary was paid by the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union, which settled federal racketeering charges this year by agreeing to rid itself of mob influence. Jackson insists he was unaware of the alleged criminal connections and says the Rainbow Coalition worked legitimately with the union on organizing projects.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor.

Monday, Nov. 27

Fill-A-Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill-A-Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545-3327.

Support Group — "Changing Roles" is the subject of REFLECT's support group at 7 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center. REFLECT is the Five College student organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of a friend or family member.

Tuesday, Nov. 28

Fill-A-Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill-A-Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545-3327.

Meeting — "Being Whole GLB: Speaking Out in the Latino Community" will take place in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. For more information call 545-2073.

Wednesday, Nov. 29

Fill-A-Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill-A-Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545-3327.

Poetry Reading — The Globe Bookshop in Northampton is sponsoring a reading by Carl Phillips and Timothy Liu at 7:30 p.m. as part of their "Readers and Writers, Live" poetry series. The reading is free and open to the public. For more information call 584-0374.

Workshop — An "Arts & Crafts" Mural Contest will be held in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. For more information call 545-2073.

Meeting — The Student Nurse Association is holding a meeting at 5 p.m. in Morrill 4N 403. The meeting will discuss a blood drive.

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits began Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177–178. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5-6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi-lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587-9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five-College students are encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545-2240.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253-9622.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five-College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545-3490 or 545-6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10–11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8–10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323–6330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1–800–750–2016. The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1–800–696– 7752.

Domestic Exchange — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding information sessions on Tuesdays and Wednesdays throughout November and December in Campus Center Room 811, from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. For more information, contact the Domestic Exchange Office, F– 26 Machmer Hall, 545–5551.

Campus Police Log

Vandalism

Nov. 19

An individual on Sylvan Dr. reported damage to her vehicle in Parking Lot 44.

There was graffiti on a resident's door in Baker Residence Hall.

An individual reported a bumper stolen from his vehicle in Parking Lot 44.

Larceny

Nov. 19

There was a backpack stolen from the lobby in John Adams Residence Hall.

Burglary/breaking & entering

Nov. 19

A vehicle in Parking Lot 44 was broken into and a stereo system was stolen.

Medical emergency

Nov. 19

An individual who was having a reaction to medication was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Warrant service

Nov. 19

David J. Garappolo, 20, of 977 North Pleasant St., Amherst was arrested on a warrant.

Maglie Edouard, 21, of 341 Lincoln Ave., University of Massachusetts, was arrested on a warrant.

Annoying behavior

Nov. 19

There was a report of bottles being thrown from the 8th floor of Brown Residence Hall.

Noise complaint

Nov. 19

There were individuals playing football in the Quad area on Thatcher Way.

Several politicians discuss plans to challenge the 2-party system

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven prominent politicians, including New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley and former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas have been secretly planning an independent presidential campaign, according to a published report.

The seven, five Democrats and two independents, have discussed in telephone conference calls the need for a new voice to challenge the two-party system, according to Time magazine.

A spokesman for Bradley confirmed Sunday that the seven have been discussing issues — but not an independent presidential candidacy.

"I don't think the discussions have focused on that, but I don't know that for a fact," said Bernie Toon, Bradley's chief of staff.

In editions going on sale Monday, Time identified the seven as Democrats Bradley; former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart; former Colorado Gov. Dick Lamm and former Minn. Rep. Tim Penny, as well as independents former Connecticut Gov. Lowell Weicker and Maine Gov. Angus King.

Toon confirmed the names, saying Bradley "has been participating with that group, discussing issues facing the country generally."

Dennis Bailey, a spokesman for King, also confirmed the governor had participated with the group in "just general discussions about problem-solving and the direction of the country," but not a presidential race.

"I can't say anything about it. I just can't," said Lamm, when asked for comment.

None of the others mentioned in the Time story were immediately available for comment.

Several members of the group have expressed interest either in running for president or backing an independent candidacy, but it would be unusual for so many political figures with diverse ideological backgrounds to discuss it together.

Both Hart and Tsongas unsuccessfully sought the Democratic presidential nomination. Weicker was originally a Republican.

Time said the group's next meeting, scheduled for next Sunday, would go a long way toward deciding which of the seven might run for president.

"I don't know if that's what they've really been talking about," said Bailey, adding the talks were mainly about "the direction of the country."

"Government reform, the economy and job creation have come up in this group," said Toon, Bradley's aide.

Time reported that the group's first conference call, on Oct. 22, lasted nearly two hours and that the participants agreed to write position papers to be circulated among themselves.

In their second two-hour conversation last week, according to Time, the group debated the papers and agreed there is a "huge" hunger for a party that is fiscally conservative, socially liberal, pro-environment and favoring campaign reform.

The article noted that none of the group's participants wanted to join Texas billionaire Ross Perot's fledgling independent party for fear of seeming a Perot puppet.

■ Bulger

continued from page 1

But Taylor said, "I've personally never encouraged anybody and no one has encouraged me" to support Bulger.

Trustee Robert S. Karam pointed to the unanimous vote of the search committee, which included non-trustee members from the faculty and the UMass alumni association.

"You know faculty," Karam said, "you don't pressure faculty." And, as for the alumni representative, "he marches to his own drum, which is the alumni."

Karam, a businessman and radio station owner, said he was excited the moment he learned of Bulger's candidacy.

And he asked why being president of the state Senate would be considered a drawback, rather than an advantage, for a university president.

"Why shouldn't the president of the state Senate be a front runner?" he asked. "The president of the state Senate is not a bozo."

Andrew Sorensen, a top official at the University of Florida in Gainesville, dropped out of the competition because he saw the writing on the wall — and it spelled out Bulger's name. Sorensen said he worried that some people on the search committee had already made up their minds for Bulger.

"I think their enthusiasm was for considering the political situation of the candidates as opposed to experience as academic administrators," he said.

Julger is the recommended choice and appears to have plenty of votes, but two other names were to be considered by the full board of trustees Tuesday.

Michael Baer, senior vice president for academic affairs and provost at Northeastern University, had no comment.

Charles Manning, chancellor of the university system of West Virginia, reacted philosophically to the Bulger recommendation.

"It's not an unusual to find an inside candidate that has a favored status. It looks like that's the situation this particular time and that's the way it is," he said.

World AIDS Awareness Week
November 27 - December 1, 1995

VISUAL AIDS

Visual AIDS is an international exhibition that promotes public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS by illustrating how people the world over are coping with the epidemic. The posters reflect the social and sexual attitudes of their diverse sources regarding safer sex, research funding and social justice issues. The curatorial theme of this travelling exhibition highlights the tension between erotic and anti-erotic approaches to life in the Age of AIDS.

Opening Reception: Tuesday, November 28 5:00 - 7:00 pm.
Wheeler Gallery Hours: Monday - Thursday 4:00 - 8:00 pm.

UMASS Panels of the 5-College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt
November 28 - December 14
9:00 AM - 11:00 PM (Monday - Thursday)
9:00 AM - 7:00 PM (Friday)
Graduate Lounge, UMASS Campus Center

HIV/AIDS Awareness Tables
staffed by Peer Health Educators
November 27 - December 1
10:00 AM - 3:00 PM
UMASS Campus Center

AIDS and the ARTS
Wednesday, November 29
Wheeler Gallery 4:30-6:00 PM
tour of the Visual AIDS exhibition with James Miller, Curator and Professor from the University of Western Ontario

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Quilt Panel
Thursday, November 30
7:00 PM - 9:00 PM
Mary Lyons Classroom
students are invited to remember and honor those lost and to create a GLBT quilt panel to be carried at the Candlelight Vigil

World AIDS Day Candlelight Walk and Vigil
Friday, December 1
6:00 PM
from Student Union Steps to Wheeler Gallery
Music, Open Forum and Commemoration of "A Day Without Art"

Visual AIDS is a project of the Five College Sexuality Education Committee and is sponsored in part by the UMASS Arts Council. A portion of the collection will be exhibited simultaneously at each college as a visual backdrop for World AIDS day activities. For more information, please call the University Health Services, Health Education Division Office, 549-2671 x181.

NCAA®
1995 DIVISION I WOMEN'S
VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP
December 14 & 16
Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts
For tickets, call
413/545-0810

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Home from the Holidays

Andrea Berrospi, a sophomore, unpacks her books from the Thanksgiving break.

Israeli officials admit neglect

Authorities hospitalized 900 Holocaust survivors for 50 years

By Dianna Cahn
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli authorities may have needlessly kept hundreds of Holocaust survivors in psychiatric hospitals for nearly half a century, health officials admitted Sunday.

Dr. Motti Mark, head of the Health Ministry's mental health department, said 900 people — nearly a fifth of Israel's institutionalized mental patients — were Holocaust survivors.

Most arrived without families in the late 1940s and were hospitalized immediately for depression and a variety of other trauma-related illnesses. With more sophisticated treatment, Mark admitted, some might have been able to begin normal lives.

"It definitely did not have to be like this," he said. "These people came to Israel alone and got help, but when the treatment ended there was nobody outside to receive and support them...we, Israeli society, did not become their families."

A report on Israel's Channel 2 television on Saturday alleged systematic, decades-long negligence in dealing with the trauma of some immigrants who had survived Nazi Germany's slaughter of millions of Jews.

Mark attributed the neglect to a longstanding failure to confront mental heath issues despite Israel's emphasis on studying the history and lessons of the Holocaust.

Dr. Henry Schorr, head of the outpatient clinic in the Abarbanel mental hospital near Tel Aviv, said many patients' official files did not even mention that they were Holocaust survivors.

Schorr said there was "a conspiracy of silence" among health authorities that kept the issue out of public scrutiny.

In the TV report, workers at the hospitals said that in many cases the hospitalizations appeared unnecessary.

"I have the impression that people were hospitalized for long periods of time without any specific treatment or check of their progress," said Pnina Turner, a social worker at Abarbanel.

Mark said the Health Ministry plans to build special hostels to enable about 300 patients to live outside the hospitals and still receive some psychological and medical services.

John Lemberger, director of the Amcha support organization for survivors and their families, said he doubted whether the now-elderly patients could adjust after decades in mental institutions.

Mark bristled at such suggestions.

"I am sorry it took so long, but heaven help us if we say it is too late... It is never too late, not until people die," he said.

500 remember missing college student

SCITUATE (AP) — A crowd of 500 gathered at St. Mary of the Nativity Roman Catholic Church on Saturday for a Mass for Paul "P.J." Steverman, the New England College student who disappeared after a party a week ago.

"We gather here on behalf of P.J. and pray that God is with him this moment," the Rev. Eugene P. McNamara said as he opened the service.

McNamara said he had expected less than 100 people to attend, but judging from the turnout, "if this kid were running for president, he'd be president tomorrow," he said.

The Mass was held in the parish center on Scituate Harbor. The room filled quickly and the overflow huddled under umbrellas and peered through windows as a light drizzle fell.

Most wore yellow ribbons, which have been hung throughout the town as a show of support for the family.

Many cried and held onto one another as McNamara prayed for answers.

The 20-year-old Scituate resident was reported missing in Henniker, N.H., on Monday, touching off a search that brought in upward of 400 volunteers. Steverman was last seen early Sunday morning outside a rented home dubbed the Outback, where he had attended a party.

Most of the volunteer searchers were sent home by authorities on Wednesday, after divers came up empty in searches of three area ponds. The Steverman's went on looking on their own, though.

Ryan Yeats, 20, a friend of Steverman, was among those who took part in the search.

"It's been a week with no sleep and what we want is answers," Yeats said after the Mass. "Where is he?"

Steverman's parents remained in New Hampshire on Saturday and did not attend the service.

Investigators are piecing together what happened at the party Steverman attended that night. They have spoken to some students, but others left for the Thanksgiving break. State police detectives plan to talk to those students when classes resume Monday.

Police said he had been drinking a lot of beer, had a scuffle with another student, and left. He was last seen jogging slowly past the house.

"We pray tonight for P.J.," McNamara said, "and that the Lord will bring him home."

Model's body found, identified by family

By Michael White
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — After looking at photographs of human remains Saturday, the family of a missing model said it was her body that was exhumed from a shallow forest grave.

"The family, in general, identified the photos," said sheriff's Deputy Jim Hellmold. "The actual identification will come from the coroner's office, after the autopsy."

Detectives were led to the grave Friday by a suicidal photographer who said he killed Linda Sobek by accident. A criminal anthropologist was called in Saturday to help.

Sobek, a 27-year-old former Los Angeles Raiders cheerleader, was last seen on her way to a photo session with Charles E. Rathbun on Nov. 16. His cheesecake-and-car shots appear in automotive magazines.

The photographer told investigators Wednesday that during the photo shoot in a dry lake bed, he wanted Sobek to do "doughnuts" — rapid turns to make the rear end spin — with a new Lexus sport utility vehicle. He said she got out of the car to watch his demonstration and he struck her accidentally. He tried unsuccessfully to revive her, then panicked and buried her body in the mountains, Hermosa Beach police Lt. Mark Wright said.

Small amounts of blood as well as hair similar to Sobek's were recovered from the Lexus, Wright said.

Rathbun, 38, led detectives to the grave near dusk Friday, several hours after he slashed his wrists in his cell with a jail-issue razor. He was treated for the superficial cuts, then loaded into a helicopter to join the search for Sobek's body.

It was the second day that Rathbun had guided the search through the rugged 694,000-acre Angeles National Forest. Authorities said he was having trouble remembering just where he drove after Sobek's death.

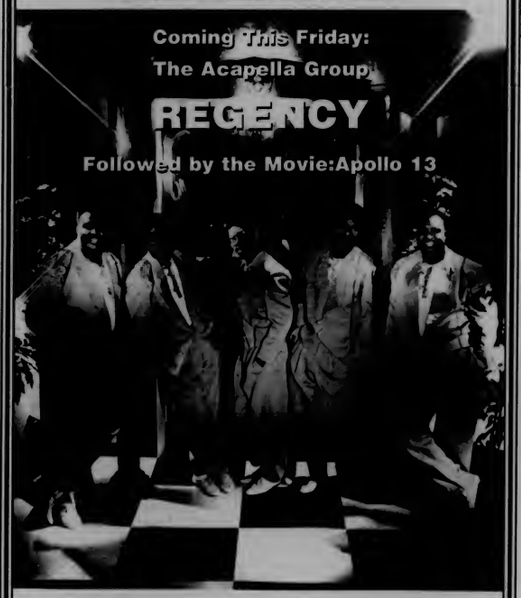
The grave lies near a mound of dirt and rocks off a mountain road about 25 miles northeast of Los Angeles, on the north side of the San Gabriel Mountains, which separate the Los Angeles Basin from the Mojave Desert.

Authorities said Rathbun was already a suspect when police responded to a shooting at his house on Wednesday. Rathbun had tried to kill himself but was thwarted by two friends, deputies said. He was booked for investigation of murder and expected to be arraigned Monday.

Even with Rathbun's admission, investigators remained skeptical about his story.

"This entire case is suspicious," said sheriff's spokesman Deputy Brian Jones. "Everything he's done has been suspicious."

The University of Massachusetts' Campus Activities Office Presents
Something Every Friday
A WEEKLY PROGRAM SERIES OF EVENTS



Bluewall Cafe
December 1, 1995 • 8 p.m., FREE
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice3 Chancellor for Student Affairs.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

When Appearance Counts,
Count on Jonathan Reid
for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

SNOW HAPPENS
We just work here.
Collegian
· Graphics

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mk Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Davinson Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chac Systems Manager
A.L. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Just friends... so far, anyway

I think when Moses was doing that whole Ten Commandments thing (I'm not very religious but I've seen that movie with Charlton Heston), one of the ten virtues somehow got lost along the way. It would be the one that reads something like this (I'm paraphrasing) — "No woman and man shall be able to sustain a completely platonic relationship without sex or bad feelings somehow getting in the way."

For years, I have been a firm believer that women and men cannot co-exist in a relationship that is solely based on friendship and does not include any sexual or emotional hurdles whatsoever. Blame it on getting older, but as of late I'm beginning to change my tune. Granted, I still don't think that a male—female friendship can ever possess the same qualities that a friendship between two guys can. (Try to picture a guy and girl both getting loaded out of their gord, throwing up all over each other while giving each other high fives — it just doesn't happen.) But I am beginning to see the male–female friendship thing in a whole new ligh.

Matt Audette

Yes, as you probably can tell, I have a friend that is a girl. In fact, I would even go as far as to say that (gulp!) she is my best friend. This may not seem like such a revelation to most, but for me it is quite a large step in my life. I have always been weary of being close friends with the female gender. Everytime, something really, really bad has happened. It seems as though one person in the relationship always falls for the other, or that nasty little trouble maker — sex — rears up its ugly head.

But this time around things are different... well, sort of. We're the best of friends, hang out a lot, even get borderline intimate at times, but refrain from sex–type–things because we're aware that it would be the death of us (either that or she thinks I'm gross). I'm cool with the way things are between us. She's cool with the way things are between us. It's the rest of the world that seems to have a problem with the whole deal.

Now, maybe this is just because we live in a society that is so geared towards sex that we can't fathom two people of of opposite genders being able to share a somewhat emotional relationship that doesn't involve the removal of clothing. Maybe I'm a freak — the verdict isn't in yet. Regardless, I'm annoyed by the constant barrage of remarks that I get from friends and acquaintances about the matter. For example, here are a few of my favorites:

1.) Dude, you gettin' some or what?
2.) You banging her?
3.) I bet she's a real wild one, right?

The list could go on and on, but due to space restraints I'll spare you. Every time I have to answer these Neanderthal– like questions with my usual, "We're just friends" and a smile, I get either a look of pity ("I'm sorry dude, she just won't put out, huh") or a look that says, "I didn't know you were one of those homosexuals!" The simple fact of the matter is, I am sexually attracted to her. It would be hard not to be. She's very pretty and I am indeed a male with a pretty normal testosterone level. But, the difference is now I am able to look beyond animal instincts and see that it really wouldn't be worth it. We would kill each other if we were romantically involved, and if our relationship became sexual, I know there would suddenly be a real lack of things to say.

Believe me... this isn't easy. At times it takes tremendous will power and restraint not to start slobbering all over her like some deranged and horny 13–year–old — I am only human after all. But, I just keep trying to be a good person and ignore the remarks from my peers. Don't get me wrong — I still don't trust male-female relationships and I still think that something is always bound to go wrong. Hey, even the characters in When Harry Met Sally eventually had sex, I'll keep you posted.

Matt Audette is a Collegian columnist.

A lesson in friendship

They used to be inseparable. They didn't actually go to the same high school, but after the school bells rang, Todd, Allen and Ed were always together. Best friends, blood brothers, one for all and all for one. You know... pals.

They'd hang out on weekends, play pool, chase girls and smoke cigars, do things best friends do.

They swore that no matter what, after high school, the friendship bond would stay just as strong, no matter where their paths led them.

Ed graduated first, but stayed close to home at a community college, so it was like he had never left. Todd graduated a year later and headed off to the University of Massachusetts. Allen, who hadn't graduated yet, and Ed stayed around, as close as ever.

Todd drifted, though. While he didn't forget his two close friends, there always seemed to be some commitment which was too pressing to go home and just hang out.

By the time Allen finally graduated, he was tired of living in Massachusetts and the East Coast in general. He packed what little he had into his 1978 Chevy Malibu and headed across the country to live with his father.

Six months later, fed up with his lack of success as a student, Ed decided to rejoin his pal in Colorado. For the next four months they worked together at a hotel during the day, and at night they'd hang out, smoke cigars, play pool, chase girls. You know, doing the things best friends do.

Matt Vautour

On the other side of the continent, Todd had made new friends. He had gotten involved in a variety of activities and had truly found his niche at college.

One night near midnight, Todd got a phone call from Ed. The two spent over an hour on the phone reminiscing and catching up on each other's lives.

"It's a different way of life out here," Ed said. "You should really move out here."

Todd sat up for a while after the two got of the phone, deep in thought. While he didn't say it to Ed on the phone, Todd realized that he didn't want a different life. He liked the life he had. He also realized that Ed was different now, and from the sounds of it, so was Allen.

Three more months went by, and as much as they liked Colorado, money got tight for Allen and Ed and they decided to come home.

Not long after they did, the duo decided it was time to visit Todd at school.

The old Chevy had found the junkyard in Colorado, so Allen and Ed jumped into Ed's station wagon and made the trip to Amherst.

When they arrived at his door, Todd's jaw dropped. His two old friends stood in front of him dressed like cowboys. From the leather boots to the black wide brimmed hats on their heads.

"Wow, you guys look different," Todd said surprised.

They not only looked different, they were different. As the reunited threesome picked up Todd's girlfriend Cary and drove to dinner, he was horrified as Ed flipped to a country station.

Todd laughed thinking that Ed was kidding. But when he and Allen started singing along, Todd realized this was real. His friends had turned into... well... hicks.

"Oh I almost forgot," said Allen, reaching into the back of the station wagon. "Now we can be like three musketeers again."

In Allen's outstretched hand was a black cowboy hat. Todd tried to fake enthusiasm.

"Thanks," Todd said weakly, forcing a smile. "What the hell am I going to do with a cowboy hat?" he thought.

The plan for the night had been to meet Todd's friends at a bar after dinner, but he was having second thoughts.

As bad as he felt about it, Todd realized that he was embarrassed about his old friends.

"They'll never fit it with my new friends," he thought with a guilty lump rising in his throat. He voiced his concerns to Cary.

She would hear none of it.

"I can't believe you're even thinking this. They're your friends and you promised them you'd show them around."

Grudgingly, Todd agreed, but when he got to the bar the same feelings of embarrassment came back as he introduced Allen and Ed to his college friends. He began talking more to his new friends and putting distance between himself and Allen and Ed.

As the night wore on, two drunk guys started bothering Cary. When Todd came over to help her, he was sucker–punched in the face. As he hit the floor, he saw two images out of the corner of his eyes.

While his new friends sat confused by the chaos, Ed and Allen jumped from their seats. Ed jumped over the bar and tackled one of Todd's assailants, while Allen pulled Cary out of harm's way, punching the other attacker on his way.

After they had all been kicked out of the bar, Ed and Allen laughed about their heroics, while Cary tended to Todd's swollen nose.

His nose would heal, but in his own mind, Todd still felt ashamed, this time of himself. He turned to his friends and said a humble, "Thanks."

"Well, clean up your face and let's go," said Allen, smiling as he looked at his watch. "It's only 12:30. The night is still young. Let's find another bar."

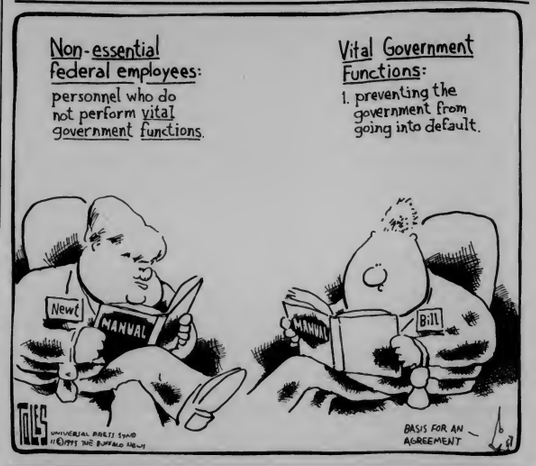
Todd smiled as his friend helped him to his feet.

"Before we move on, let me get something," he said walking toward the station wagon.

Todd reached into the car and put his new cowboy hat on his head. For the rest of the night, the three friends drank beer, smoked cigars, played pool and even listened to a little country music, doing the things best friends do.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial



Letters to the Editor

Internet incident out of control

To the Editor:

This letter is regarding the uproar about the four idiots from Cornell, and their wonderful piece of prose.

It's very simple. The entire issue is a lot of bollocks. The authors obviously wanted attention, and they got more than they bargained for, thanks to the miracle of propagation. Some people think that the students should be reprimanded, or even face legal repercussions. This is also a lot of bollocks. The offending students wrote and e–mailed the list to only a few close friends, who in turn passed it on until it reached the eyes of someone who didn't think it was funny.

This is not illegal, nor is it offensive. The people who were offended by the list were in no way compelled to read the whole thing, and had every right to e–mail the authors at Cornell, telling them to piss off. I've even heard talk of mailbombing the entire Cornell computer network. Some people, it seems, have no sense of restraint.

Had the four Cornell students mailed the list to a groups of women that they knew would not appreciate it, in order to elicit a specific response, that could easily have been viewed as a case of harassment. However, this is not so.

Yet, Cornell administrators are debating whether or not to discipline the students. If they were to take a disciplinary course of action, that would be a clear cut case of harassment of the four students.

It is not illegal to post a message on the usenet. It is not illegal to write e–mail to friends, no matter what the content. It is not illegal to make jokes about rape. There is no ban on hate speech in this country. When dealing with concepts such as free speech, there are such things as "necessary evils." People are allowed to be stupid. I love America.

In conclusion, there are two questions: One, was the top 75 list e–mailed specifically to people who would not appreciate it? And two, did the contents of the top 75 list place any individuals in immediate clear and present danger? The answer to both of these questions is no. Thus, no law was broken, and no disciplinary action should be taken against the four students. They are guilty of nothing except shortsightedness.

Michael Toole
Orchard Hill

Scott praises debate format

To the Editor:

It was with great interest that I read Michael Thelwell's column in the Nov. 14 issue regarding the upcoming campus appearance of Charles Murray, co–author of "The Bell Curve," per the invitation of the Distinguished Visitors Program.

While I am not pleased that someone who espouses theories of racial inferiority will have an opportunity to air his views on the campus, I am encouraged to see that the students responsible for the Distinguished Visitors Program have chosen a debate format. Dr. Murray will debate Dr. Alvin Poussaint, a noted Harvard psychiatrist. Also known for his work as a consultant for Bill Cosby's television show, Dr. Poussaint will challenge the premise of "The Bell Curve" not only with his words but also with the reality of his presence as a scholar.

I hope that the debate format will also allow for members of the audience to address their questions to the speakers, as well. What I have always stressed to the campus community is that if we are to look at the unpalatable or the controversial, we should do so in the context of real discussion. At times the campus has felt it necessary to offer forums outside the appearance of a single speaker to enable the community to engage in such real discussion. It is only through such frank, open exchanges that the real worth of ideas can be examined.

Chancellor David Scott

Speakers should not be here

To the Editor:

In spite of the fact that I totally disagree with the message of Charles Murray's book, The Bell Curve, it is about time we invite some ignorant white racists. The Afro–American community has been very pleased to invite racists like Tony Martin and Louis Farrakhan, who has been compared to Mark Fuhrman publicly by Colin Powell, to speak at this campus. It is disgusting to attend any of these events because it brings out the ugliest in everyone.

Some people believe that this fosters useful dialogue between groups. I think there are much better ways to foster dialogue without spending thousands of dollars on racist speakers. The way the Afro–American community can applaud racists of their own color and protest racists of other colors is ridiculous. It is a perfect example of the hypocrisy and reverse racism on this campus.

People cannot allow themselves to get drawn into these speeches by emotions of hate and a mob mentality. Every ethnic and religious group has been wronged and had wronged others. There is no need to decide who had it worst.

To say any one person died because of religion or color means that one person too many died. We have to engage these issues as individuals, not groups, and conclude that it is absolutely foolish to judge people by color or religion.

It is completely foolish to justify racism by any means scientific, historic or religious. Rather than justify it, we should invite speakers who work towards ending it such as Maya Angelou and Elie Wiesel. Folks, who is next? David Duke?

Justin Siegel
Amherst

Letters to the Editor and Columns

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e– mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545–1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Arts & Living

U2 returns with Eno, renamed as the Passengers

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

THE PASSENGERS
Original Soundtracks I
Island

U2 is back — well kind of. Teamed up with Brian Eno and several special guests they rename themselves the Passengers while shedding their rock roots once again for a more experimental, electronic sound. It is hard to imagine that the same band that once wrote, "Bad" and "Pride (In the Name Of Love)" could contribute to a song such as "Elvis Ate America" which deserves a nomination for Worst Song of the Year.

A concept album of sorts, Original Soundtracks I contains fourteen songs written as soundtracks to recent independently produced movies. An interesting idea, yes. Does it work? Not especially. Too often the songs feel as if they were written just in an attempt to be new and experimental. Yet still, in the world of electronic music this album offers little that is groundbreaking or original.

One of the few genuine highlights of the album is "Your Blue Room" a haunting ballad sung by The Edge which bears a slight resemblance to "One", the standout track on U2's 1991 release Achtung Baby. Bono adds his trademark falsetto on backing vocals. This is one of the few songs on the album that doesn't depend on a barrage of electronic noises.

Luciano Pavarotti is the most recent international superstar to sing with Bono. On Rattle and Hum, B.B. King sang along on "When Loves Comes To Town" while on Zooropa Johnny Cash shared vocal duties on "The Wanderer." Here on the Original Soundtracks I, Pavarotti spices it up on "Miss Sarajevo" which features riveting vocals from the world's leading opera star. Bono's voice may be powerful and moving, but he falls flat on his face when side by side with the master.

Other guest stars include Mo'Wax maestro Howie B and the Japanese vocalist Holi. Howie B co–wrote the track "Elvis Ate America" which is outright embarrassing. Holi's two contributions — "Ito Okashi" and "One Minute Warning" — don't fare much better. The latter song sounds more like a duet with R2D2 from Star Wars than a U2 composition.

Almost forgotten from the record and the hype is Brian Eno, the avant garde producer/musician extraordinaire. Although he may have helped U2 greatly on the recording of Achtung Baby, he has since guided the band away from their old sound into a more experimental world, largely due to his obsession with electronics.

Bono, The Edge, Larry Mullen, Jr. and Adam Clayton will never be accused of fear of the unknown. Ever since releasing the magnificent Joshua Tree album in 1987, the band has consistently strayed off the beaten path. The follow–up to their 1987 masterpiece was the full length movie Rattle And Hum and it's accompanying soundtrack. Both the movie and soundtrack explored the band's obsession with American music and culture. At the time, it was the band's most disappointing work.

COURTESY RICHARD MAUGHTON

Bono and Luciano Pavarotti croon together on Passengers: Original Soundtracks 1.

Expectations were high for Achtung Baby and on many levels the band outdid themselves once again. Amazingly the band successfully took a giant leap into their future by greatly expanding their sound using hi–tech electronics without forgetting their past. The album is a true testament of the band's creative greatness.

Unfortunately, the past four years have seen the band stuck on a downward spiral. First they toured endlessly around the globe in their over–ambitious ZooTV tour where Bono transformed his personality into "The Fly." Then in the tour's aftermath, the band released Zooropa, their most recent studio album. Both this and the Passengers Original Soundtracks I are too caught up in the idea of experimentation, often forgetting that true music is from the soul not at a touch of a synthesizer keyboard.

At the moment U2 is recording in their hometown of Dublin, and don't worry — Bono bills the upcoming record as "a rock 'n' roll album." Perhaps Original Soundtracks I is the album that U2 has been longing to make, but most likely it is not the U2 album you have been longing to hear. D

Reggae show at Horse tonight

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

The Iron Horse Music Hall will be the sight of one hot reggae act who will certainly heat up the cold winter night. Hailing from the parish of St. Catherine in Jamaica, Culture is considered by many to be one of the most talented harmony groups the reggae world has seen.

Culture first gained international recognition with the release of their 1977 album, Two Sevens Clash. Rolling Stone went as far to rank it as "one of the best reggae albums ever made". According to the Chicago Tribune, Two Sevens Clash "with its mix of apocalyptic imagery and revolutionary pronouncements greatly influenced the rise of punk in Britain."

Ever since the release of their landmark album, Culture has been a popular reggae favorite though they have been criminally ignored Statewide. To this day, over 15 years later, the band has kept with its roots avoiding the recent fad of dancehall. Their records have also remained true to their African roots and the doctrine of Rastafari. Their lyrics from songs such as "Capture Rasta" sing praises of love, community and praise — traditional Rastaferian values.

Since its beginning, Joseph Hill has led the band. Originally a drummer/percussionist who performed with several bands, he recorded his first solo album in 1972, Behold The Land. Today he stands as the heart and soul of the band. The Washington Post wrote that, Joseph Hill, "not only brings an Old Testament prophet's quality to his songs about economic oppression and spiritual redemption, but also brings the punchy horn riffs and lyrical, resonant vocals of Memphis soul music."

Tonight's show at the Iron Horse should be filled with amazing vocal harmonies and some of the sweetest reggae tunes to pass through the Valley this winter. Don't miss this opportunity to be cultured by one of the best.

Culture plays the Iron Horse Music Hall tonight. Doors open at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 at the door or in advance from the Northampton Box Office.

Mariah Carey's concert to air on Fox

Special will include exclusive interviews, old & new music

By Mary Campbell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mariah Carey has had so many hit records it would be hard to predict which would get the most applause in a concert.

At the Oct. 10 concert which was shot for her second TV special, it was "One Sweet Day" and the surprise announcement that Boys II Men was there to sing it with her.

The special, "Fantasy: Mariah Carey at Madison Square Garden," airs at 9 p.m. EST Wednesday on the Fox network.

Twice, a song had to be repeated and sometimes there were pauses for scenery changes. To entertain the audience, Carey said, she brought one of her four dogs on stage — Jack, a tiny Jack Russell terrier. She held up a small stuffed animal, said, "Get it, Jack," and he jumped.

"They filmed it. I'm trying to fit it in there," she says. Most of the special will be her singing at the concert, the hits since she started making records five years ago and songs from her new album, "Daydream."

The last song will be "Joy to the World," filmed last Christmas when she sang it at New York's Cathedral of St. John the Divine to benefit the Fresh Air Fund.

There also will be brief interviews and footage of the singer with children at Camp Mariah last summer. The camp was named after her after she pledged $1 million to the Fresh Air Fund's camp at Fishkill, N.Y.

Carey said her televised concert couldn't be only new songs. "We have to do certain songs the fans really want to hear. When I'm watching an artist I like, and they don't do my favorite song, I'm disappointed," she said.

Some of the hits were given new arrangements for TV, Carey says. Backup singer Melanie Daniels arranged for the choir from La Guardia Performing Arts High School to sing on "Hero."

Carey says, "A lot of kids tell me they're inspired by that song. It has been done at graduation ceremonies. I think the song is for anyone who feels like they need a little bit of strength and they need to look inside themselves and find it because they're not getting it from any outside sources."

Though she wasn't affluent growing up, Carey says, "I did have my mother who really encouraged me to pursue my dreams. A lot of people don't have that."

She adds, "My mom is a vocal coach. She got me started singing. Now I do what I feel."

She keeps concert tours short, to keep from straining her voice. Next year she'll tour in Japan, Europe and America.

She feels no pressure because she is the best-selling female recording artist of the 1990s, she says. "It makes me feel great and happy that people are responding to what I'm doing. It really is a dream. I can only do the best I can do."

Carey resents suggestions that her marriage to Sony Music Entertainment President Tommy Mottola has led to her success. She would prefer that her talent and her songs speak for themselves on the special.

"I've always been very focused and tried to stay as down-to-earth as I can and not let the person inside of me change just because my life has changed," she said.

Tha Dogg Pound is all bark and no bite

By Josh Wardrop
Collegian Staff

THA DOGG POUND
Dogg Food
Death Row/Interscope

So this is it? Dogg Food was one of the most eagerly awaited rap records of the year.

Dogg Food was delayed since mid–summer because of a wave of gangsta rap protest, which is even now causing Time–Warner/Turner/whoever to reconsider the future of rap records of any kind on their subsidiary label, Interscope Records. (One can only assume that Ted and Jane don't know, don't plan to know and don't want to know what a "G Thang" is.) Dogg Food, is the debut of the Dogg Pound, Dr. Dre's latest proteges, who are supposedly the new bad boys of the G–funk era.

So this is Dogg Food, eh? So what?

Much to my surprise, this was the only reaction I could come to after hearing the 71 minutes of almost boredom that Dogg Food delivers. A shame indeed, because this album certainly had potential.

It is mixed and produced by Dr. Dre (back behind the sound board where he seems truly comfortable) and features the one and only Snoop Doggy Dogg as a songwriter/vocalist on a number of tracks. It would seem that all Dogg Pound had to do was sit back and let their mentors make them look good.

What worked so obviously well on paper, however, fails miserably on this record, as the album progressively sinks deeper and deeper into a morass of all too familiar concepts and monotonous rapping. Ideas from previous Dr. Dre projects, such as the fictional "W–BALLZ" radio station, which are used to link certain tracks together, just seem tired and forced here.

COURTESY DEATH ROW RECORDS

Tha Dogg Pound's new album isn't even fit for the dogs.

There are no real standout tracks either. The phat basses, cool and spooky keyboards and clever rhymes are in woefully short supply — and there is nothing groundbreaking here to replace them. Rappers Kurupt and Dat Nigga Daz don't bring across the charisma of Snoop, an Ice–T, or a Flavor Flav — something necessary in order to defuse the almost inevitable tendency of rap songs to blend into one another.

Tha Dogg Pound certainly need more work under their belts before they can be fairly assessed as a band. Dogg Food, however, is largely what its title implies — mostly filler and recycled chunks of Dr. Dre's The Chronic and Snoop Doggy Dogg's Doggystyle. Better luck next time. D

GET MORE FOR YOUR MONEY WITH METPAY.
WE'VE GOT SOME OF THE BEST RATES IN TOWN.

Getting more value from your auto Insurance is easy for University of Massachusetts employees. With METPAY, you can take advantage of:

- A 5% group discount off Massachusetts state-mandated auto rates.
- The convenience of payroll deduction with no down payment, interest or service charges. This option may not be available to non-benefit-eligible employees.
- Person-to-person contact with full-time, on-site METPAY Account Consultants.
- Free Massachusetts registry service to verify your auto registration renewals or process registration forms for newly purchased cars.

Isn't it time you got more for your money? Call METPAY at 5-9465 (Amherst Campus) or visit Debbie Bowker, located at Lot # 41 trailer next to the Physical Plant. Free parking is available.

METPAY is underwritten by Metropolitan Property and Casualty Insurance Company and Affiliates / 3M P&C™ | Warwick, RI

Met P&C
Metropolitan Property and Casualty Insurance Company and Affiliates, Warwick, RI

85111(0/96)-9988)MPC-LD PEANUTS © United Feature Syndicate, Inc

COLLEGE STUDENTS
Do You Need Some Extra Income For . . .
Books, Tuition, Room & Board?

If You Have an Affinity For Numbers, Some Keyboard Experience, Access to a Phone and Reliable Transportation . . .

RGIS Inventory Specialists
Wants YOU IN JANUARY
as Inventory Takers in Retail Establishments

We offer paid training at a job that is:
• Unique • Flexible • Fast Paced • Challenging • Rewarding

Come join our team!
Call Before December 1st, Monday - Friday, 10am - 4pm
For Interviews
W. Springfield 413-737-7218 • Worcester 508-832-6153
Boston No. 508-657-5522 • Boston So. 508-821-5889
Boston Central 617-484-1788
Equal Opportunity Employer

Don't miss the boat!
Write for the Collegian

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

■ women's basketball

continued from page 10

national spotlight. This season was expected to be the season it happened. Friday afternoon the Minutewomen served notice to the rest of the nation that the time had come.

Perhaps the play of Octavia Thomas best summed up what had happened. Throughout the entire game, she weaved her way fearlessly through players much bigger than herself and came away with baskets. The Minutewomen took on a program with a ranking, a reputation, and expectations much bigger than their own, and they too, came away successful.

"A win like this puts you on the national scene," O'Brien said. "Now I'll go home and get about 300 messages on my answering machine from people who saw the score on CNN."

While the season is still in its infancy, this win will have lasting effects.

"If you start thinking about March... not that we're thinking about it," O'Brien began. "You have to have wins like this and you have to have people pay attention to you."

Another group of people will have to start paying attention to UMass... pollsters. The Minutewomen will find out tomorrow whether or not the win vaults them into their first- ever Top 25 ranking.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

■ basketball

continued from page 10

inbounds pass for an easy layup with 5:50 to play to put UMass up by eight.

"It seemed like we were all in a zone there for a while," Kraft added.

"Kuzmeski only scored nine points but that's the best overall game she's played since she's been here," O'Brien said. "She did a lot of good, solid things that don't show up on a stat sheet. Her intelligence and helping everybody out with what they were supposed to do was incredible."

Stanford showed a lack of poise, committing one of 15 turnovers (on a double-dribble) which led to a drive to the basket for an easy layup by junior point guard Sabriya Mitchell. The basket gave UMass its biggest lead of the day at 10 points, and capped off a 7-0 run in 1:10.

Mitchell was a steadying force for UMass as she contained Wideman and chipped in 11 points, five assists and five rebounds to the Minutewoman effort.

Nygaard led a Cardinal comeback as Stanford closed the gap to three at 59-56 with 2:03 to play. The sophomore forward shattered her career-high (11 points) with 25 points on the day, leading all scorers.

Stanford would come no closer though as Thomas drove for two of her 12 on the day. A key turnover by Wideman and a pair of Gurile free-throws with :36 seconds remaining secured the upset.

"I was proud of they way they hung in," O'Brien said. "It might have been easy, when they started coming back, to give into it and we didn't. We stepped up and made plays when we needed it. That's what we've been missing in the past, and hopefully its a sign of things to come."

Minutewomen drop Detroit

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

Riding the crest of the momentum wave, the Massachusetts Minutewomen basketball squad entered yesterday's match-up against the Detroit Titans looking to complete an already successful weekend.

UMass (2-1) was coming off it's biggest win in school history, upsetting the eighth nationally ranked team in the country in Stanford on Friday.

The Minutewomen were able produce a second half similar to the upset, and pulled off the 67-61 victory in front of 1,327 fans.

Things were not always comfortable on the Minutewomen side trailing the Titans (0-1) by as many as 13 in the first half. Detroit forward Faith Cyr made her presence known on the court, hauling down eight of her 11 rebounds in the first half. Also for the Titans, guard Autumn Rademacher contributed largely to the first half Minutewomen deficit, pouring in nine of her 17 points. After a key UMass timeout with 7:52 remaining in the first half, the Minutewomen were able to buckle down and gain some ground, concluding the second half down by four, 36-32.

"I thought the first half we played very flat. We had come in so high, but you are going to come down emotionally," said UMass coach Joanie O'Brien. "We easily could have been down 10 to 12 points at half. But we survived."

The beginning of the second half looked as dismal as the first half. The Minutewomen were down by 46-38 with 15:27 remaining in the game, and senior co-captain Melissa Gurile (10 points, six rebounds) had just received her third personal foul.

O'Brien looked to senior Tricia Hopson to fill the void Gurile had left on the floor. Hopson (six points) stepped up and sparked a Minutewomen rally. A slashing drive through the lane converting the basket, and the one free-throw she recieved for being fouled on the play, brought UMass within five.

"Joanie had told me in the past, I played not to make mistakes," Hopson said. "This time I just played, without thinking."

Detroit tried to off-set the Minutewomen momentum when Titan forward Julie Terenjuk hit a quick lay-up. However, Hopson was not finished. On the very next possession, she made the most of an open three-point shot nailing it with 11:21 left and bringing UMass to within four.

"I think we lacked intensity the whole game, until Tricia went in the game and made a couple key baskets. Then we picked it up," said senior co-captain Octavia Thomas.

The score remained close for the remainder of the half until the Minutewomen applied intense pressure forcing Detroit to fold.

"I think the last seven or eight minutes we really put the pressure on. I think [Detroit] got a little tired because the shots they were knocking down earlier, started coming up a little short," O'Brien said. "I've always felt the game of basketball is not about playing great, it's about making great plays."

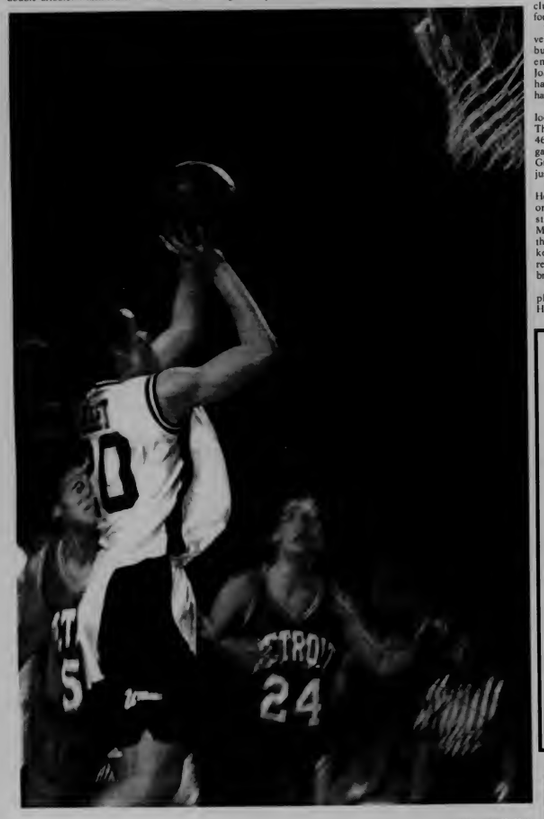
With 1:53 remaining in the game, a Gurile jump-shot knotted the game at 61.

Then it was all Thomas.

The following Minutewomen possession, Thomas who led all scorers with 22 points, took the ball at the top of the key and was fouled penetrating the hoop.

Thomas clearly had ice in her veins, hitting those two and converting six straight free-throws putting the game away in favor of the Minutewomen, 67-61. Four of the six shots resulted from defensive rebound fouls.

"I really wasn't in a zone," Thomas said modestly. "I just took my time, took deep breaths, relaxed and that's it."



DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Beth Kuzmeski scored nine points, dished out three assists and notched three steals to help lead the Minutewomen to a 67–61 victory over Detroit.

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Tez Kraft scored a team–high 14 points in the Minutewomen's 65–56 upset of Stanford on Friday and scored another 12 in yesterday's win over Detroit.

MASSACHUSETTS
DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Collegian Graphics:
We boldly go where
no one has gone before...

Collegian Graphics:
We boldly go where
no one has gone before...

Decide for Yourself!

If your dream is to become a medical doctor, don't let someone else decide you can't do it. Decide for yourself! Call us today to find out what your options are at the UAG.

800-531-5494
Universidad Autónoma de Guadalajara
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS,
AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT

MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK

- OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
- FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
- INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
- PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING

256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the Big Y SHUTTLE

MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
3:30pm	Garage	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y	5:30pm	Morrill*	5:38pm	Orchard Hill	5:43pm	Southwest
6:00pm	Big Y	6:15pm	Morrill*	6:23pm	Orchard Hill	6:28pm	Southwest
6:15pm	Big Y	7:00pm	Morrill*	7:08pm	Orchard Hill	7:13pm	Southwest
7:30pm	Big Y	7:45pm	Morrill*	7:53pm	Orchard Hill	7:58pm	Southwest
8:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Morrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:13pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Morrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Morrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Morrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Morrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Morrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

"I wasn't happy how we played [Friday night] and I told the guys this team is built on speed, size and courage," said Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen. "We started to show that towards the end of [Saturday's] game, once we played what I consider UMass speed."

With the domination the Minutemen exhibited in the second half of the 7-1 blowout, the confidence in the UMass locker room was evident.

"I think we're definitely heading in the right direction," said senior Sal Manganaro. "It's nice to get two wins this weekend, two decisive wins, and get some momentum going for next weekend. It's going to be a big weekend for us. I'm really looking forward to it."

Now comes the opponent which most of the country hates to see when they look at their schedules — BU. The Terriers are 6-1-1 on the season and haven't moved from their No. 1 penthouse, which they could rename the doghouse for the amount of time they spend at the top of the polls.

Last season the Terriers outscored UMass 19-5 in their three meetings, and had outclassed the Minutemen with experience. This time around the newest edition to the most competitive college hockey conference in the United States feels they are up to the challenge, and are ready to flex their muscles.

"Being able to play the body," Mallen said. "There are a lot teams in Hockey East that don't like to play us. Because talking to the guys from different schools over the course of the summer told us, 'You guys really took it to us with the body'.

"There are some teams that come out and play just a wide open game, up and down [the ice]. So when they come out of the game they don't feel like they played in a hockey game. But when you play us you feel like you just played in a hockey game. We're not intimidated by BU, not at all."

Mallen's players share the same sentiments.

"Nothing scares me about BU. It's just another hockey team," Manganaro added. "I don't think any Hockey East team scares anyone on our team. We just gotta go out and play the right system, play hard and give 110 percent."

Last season when the Minutemen did just that it led to top-ranked Maine falling in the Mullins Center. With even more experience, it could very well happen again.

Patriots come from behind to defeat Buffalo

By Bucky Gleason
Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Every time it appears the New England Patriots are through for the season, they give people a reason to wonder why they haven't been winning every week.

New England scored 15 points in the final 1:23 and came from behind to beat the Buffalo Bills 35-25 on Sunday. The Patriots further baffled those who first picked them to win the division, then counted them out.

"You never know what you're going to get with this team," said Drew Bledsoe, who threw three touchdown passes to Ben Coates. "When we run the ball, we win. When we don't, we have trouble. We have to have consistency."

New England established a running game and blew a lead before scoring 22 points in the fourth quarter for the victory. The Patriots swept the Bills this season and stopped Buffalo's three-game winning streak.

The winning score came when Bledsoe hit Coates with a 15-yard pass over the middle to cap an 80-yard drive with 1:23 left. Chris Slade put the game away when he returned an interception 27 yards for a touchdown with 57 seconds remaining.

New England (5-7) has won three of four after falling to 2-6. Last season, the Patriots won their final seven games to make the playoffs. They'll need a similar finish to have a shot at getting there again.

"Everyone had written us off already," said Patriots linebacker Vincent Brown. "We still have some games to play. This was a big win for us. We have to put it behind us and get ready for the next game."

Rookie Curtis Martin rushed for 148 yards on 27 carries and surpassed 1,000 yards for the season. Bledsoe completed 21 of 45 passes for 265 yards, the three TDs and three interceptions.

Buffalo takes a 12-point lead in the game and a chance to take a commanding lead in the AFC East. The Bills (8-4) lead Indianapolis by one game, plus a tiebreaker in the division. They have a two-game lead over Miami.

The Bills let a 25-13 lead slip away after Thurman Thomas scored from the 1-yard line on the Bills' first drive of the second quarter. Buffalo, which has won six games by six points or less, watched its offense stall repeatedly for the rest of the game.

"We just don't seem to have the killer instinct that we need to put games away," said Bills quarterback Jim Kelly, who completed 14 of 29 passes for 181 yards and three interceptions. "You can't come down having these games end like that."

Coates brought New England to within 25-20 when he caught a 4-yard pass on the first play of the fourth quarter, and the Bills defense was unable to stop New England on its final drive. Martin gained 6 yards on third-and-2 at the Buffalo 37, and Bledsoe hit Vincent Brisby with 16-yard pass to set up the winning score.

"If we can acquire a maturity that doesn't allow those valleys, then we might have a solid football team," said Patriots coach Bill Parcells. "I think we're capable of playing competitive football with anybody in this conference. Today is a good example."

New England, which has been inconsistent most of the season, had its running game going in the first half but still found itself in a 19-10 hole after Bennett intercepted Bledsoe and ran 69 yards for a touchdown with 33 seconds left in the second quarter.

Buffalo was trailing 10-3 before it got moving midway through the second quarter. The Bills drew within 10-9 on Kelly's first touchdown pass, a 32-yarder to Bill Brooks after a breakdown in New England's secondary.

New England scored on two of its first three possessions, including a 6-yard TD pass to Coates. Bahr made a 29-yard field goal after Kelly was intercepted by Myron Guyton on the previous possession. Christie opened the scoring on Buffalo's first possession with a 51-yard fiel goal.

Marino sets record, but Dolphins fall to Indianapolis

By Steve Herman
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Jim Harbaugh did it to the Miami Dolphins again. Now he's only 273 career touchdown passes behind Dan Marino.

Already the NFL career leader in passing yardage and completions, Marino passed for four touchdowns to break the career record of 342 he shared with Fran Tarkenton. But three TD passes and a 1-yard touchdown run by Harbaugh gave the Indianapolis Colts a 36-28 victory on Sunday.

"I know it's tough for him to get a record and lose a game, because I know what matters most to him is winning. To be honest with you, it's just an honor to be on the field with him," Harbaugh said. "I'm never going to be a threat to Marino's record. He's the best in the business, without a doubt. He's a class guy, too."

Harbaugh, the league's top-rated quarterback, was 12 of 18 for 180 yards. In the first game against the Dolphins this season, he was 25 of 33 for a career-high 319 yards and three TDs as the Colts came from 21 points down to win 27-24 in overtime.

He didn't need a rally this time, though, as the Colts took sole possession of second place in the AFC East, one game behind Buffalo, and a big step toward their first playoff berth since 1987.

The three TD passes by Harbaugh gave him 14 this season and 73 for his nine-year career.

"I do pinch myself a lot," Harbaugh said of his success this season. "But I try to stay in that compartment of my brain where I keep doing the same thing, keep believing in myself and my teammates."

Indianapolis (7-5) scored on its first four possessions, sacked Marino four times, forced him to fumble once and made one interception. One of three sacks by Tony Bennett was in the end zone for a third-quarter safety.

"I made up my mind it was time for me to get something accomplished," Bennett said.

"The safety was just on a one-on-one block. I saw Marino back there for a second and I got a hand in my face. When I opened my eyes, he was still there. I didn't know he was in the end zone at the time. I knew he was close, so when I fell on him it was a safety, and I think that was one of the turning points for the defense," Bennett said.

Wuerffel clouds race for Heisman trophy

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Hold on, Tommie Frazier and Eddie George. Don't clear out space in the trophy case just yet. It might be prudent to wait another week before working on those Heisman acceptance speeches.

A two-man race for the Heisman has added a contender.

Florida quarterback Danny Wuerffel, who just a few days ago was thought to have only a slim chance, pushed his way back into consideration with a remarkable performance Saturday.

While George and Frazier were being held in check, Wuerffel picked apart Florida State, completing 25-of-40 passes for 443 yards and four touchdowns as the second-ranked Gators moved closer to their first national championship with a 35-24 victory.

"Wuerffel was tremendous," said Florida State coach Bobby Bowden. "Every time we would start getting momentum, he'd put us away again."

There are still plenty of voters who won't pick Wuerffel no matter how many yards he throws for, no matter how many of his passes wind up in the end zone. They call him a product of coach Steve Spurrier's "Fun-n-Gun" offense, just another clone throwing for 300 yards every week.

"I don't care about that," Wuerffel said of his Heisman chances. "If people want to talk about that, let 'em. I don't bother with that."

But it may be time to give Wuerffel his due. Consider this:

• He's one of only two Heisman contenders playing on an unbeaten team. If the Gators (11-0) defeat Arkansas as expected for the Southeastern Conference championship Saturday night, they will meet Frazier and No. 1 Nebraska (11-0) for the national championship in the Fiesta Bowl.

• Wuerffel's numbers may be aided by the Spurrier system, but they are staggering nonetheless. With his performance against Florida State, he has completed 64 percent for 2,990 yards and an SEC-record 33 touchdowns. He also has 73 TD passes in his career, another conference record even though he is only a junior.

• Wuerffel has been at his best in big games. In Florida's 62-37 victory over Tennessee, he passed for 381 yards and six TDs. Against Auburn, he had four touchdowns and 380 yards in a 49-38 victory. Saturday, he went over 400 yards for the first time this season.

Wuerffel didn't have it easy against Florida State. The Seminoles blitzed him mercilessly and wound up with six sacks against an offensive line that had given up only 15 all season.

"You always want to have big games against big teams," Wuerffel said.

His latest big day came at an opportune time.

Frazier, who is 32-3 as Nebraska's starting quarterback, threw for 128 yards and one touchdown and ran for only 35 yards in a 37-0 victory over Oklahoma Friday. While Frazier's candidacy isn't built on statistics, it wasn't the kind of performance he needed in his final outing before the Heisman votes are counted.

At least Frazier's team won. George, Ohio State's star runner, rushed for 104 yards in a 31-23 loss to Michigan and was overshadowed by Tshimanga Biakabutuka, who gained a career-high 313 yards. Biakabutuka has hardly been mentioned for the Heisman, but he wound up the season with 1,724 yards — only 102 less than George.

Other Heisman candidates include Northwestern running back Darnell Autry (1,675 yards rushing), Tennessee quarterback Peyton Manning (2,954 yards passing) and Iowa State running back Troy Davis, who became only the fifth runner in NCAA Division I history to run for more than 2,000 yards.

Stanford rebounds against Friars

By Tim Whitmire
Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Two days after a stunning, season-opening upset loss to Massachusetts, the real Stanford showed up Sunday in an 81-58 blowout of Providence.

The win sent No. 8 Stanford, a perennial women's basketball power and Final Four participant four of the last six years, back to the West Coast with a 1-1 record and gave interim coach Amy Tucker her first win.

"This was a much better team effort," said Tucker, who is filling in for U.S. Olympic coach Tara VanDerveer. "We want to see this type of effort."

Providence (0-1) stayed close for most of the first half, but a horrific 12:14 scoring drought allowed Stanford to score 21 straight points. Kate Starbird led the Cardinal with 23 points, 20 in the first half.

A free throw by Nadine Malcolm with 2:44 left in the first half cut the Stanford lead to 44-40. By the time another Providence shot slipped through the net — Sarah Miller's 17-footer to cut the Stanford lead to 65-42 — there was 10:30 left in the game. Providence coach Bob Foley said his team gave up after 20 minutes.

"We came out unprepared in the second half," he said. "We were playing with no emotion, no intensity. We had a good crowd, but we let them down. We let ourselves down."

Bobbie Kelsey and Olympia Scott each had 14 points for Stanford. Julie Wheeler led Providence with 15 points.

Tucker said she talked to her players about their lack of intensity in the loss to Massachusetts.

"More than anything, I think we were disappointed in the effort," she said. "If you can't be excited about the first game, it's going to be a long year."

The difference showed from the opening tip, as Stanford scored the first six points and forced the Lady Friars to play catch-up throughout the first half.

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service

1. We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2. Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member.
3. Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometry examination at UHS.
4. We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5. On-site contact lens specialist.
6. Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7. Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you, free postage for normal delivery.
8. Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory.
9. We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10. Convenient hours and location.

University Health Services
549-2671 X244

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10. otherwise

Obey the Voice of the Collegian...You WILL work happily for Graphics

OOPS!
Free Loaner Car
• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

Win a Dinner for Two at Judie's!

From the UMass Recycling Program

It's simple. Just submit a mascot or slogan proposal to the UMass Recycling Program and if your entry is chosen you will receive a gift certificate for $50.00

Your entry should be photo ready if possible; a finished product that can be reproduced easily is preferred. All mascot and/or slogan entries will become the property of the UMass Recycling Program. Students, faculty, and staff are eligible and should submit their entries to the UMass Office of Waste Management, Physical Plant in care of April.

All entries must be recieved by December 1st to be considered for the award.

Questions? Call the Office of Waste Management at 5-6528

Kaplan prepares more students... one student at a time.

NUMBER OF PRE-GRADUATE STUDENTS PER YEAR*

Princeton Review	Other Companies (combined)	Quickie University Courses	KAPLAN
21,000	25,000	30,000	70,000

Here's Why.

Kaplan teachers are dynamic, experienced and highly effective. Using Kaplan's unique, customized prep system, they'll create an individualized study plan that focuses on your needs.

Don't risk your future with an inferior prep course. At Kaplan, we'll make sure you get a higher score.

LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
549-5780
KAPLAN

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Felt Craft Bazaar Hampshire College Thurs Nov 30 10:00-5:30

ANNOUNCEMENTS

3-4 senior grad students looking for house/apt in Amherst area for Spring semester. Call 549-9618

AUTO FOR SALE

86 Subaru Four wheel drive. Brand new brakes, muffler, water pump. $1,200 o.b.o. Call 582-8105

EMPLOYMENT

Bart's P/T counter staff must be available Nov. 24th and 25th to train for two 7am - 2pm shifts per week and one night shift

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $275-$325/week working to save the environment with Mass Pirg. Casual, fun atmosphere. Call Terri at 256-6434

Exotic Dancers Flex hours. No exp 413-536-0500

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours. Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday 11am-5pm and Sundays 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hrs per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're on the Mt Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri (413) 586-8635. ABT Associates, telephone research center, Mt Farms Mall, Rte 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer

National Parks Hiring. Seasonal & Full time employment available at national Parks, Forests & Wildlife Preserves. Benefits and Bonuses! Call 1-206-545-4804 Ext N50012

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45/hr. teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

We want you Unique liquor related product. Retails for $200. Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location your profit= $32,400 first year! 941-766-9001

You can earn $500 to $2000 between now and Christmas! Call Holly 1-800-692-7989

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn BIG money. Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Raised trip joining ticket Hawaii or Alaska $800. 546-2072

STEREO EQUIPMENT
Used/reconditioned rack systems and seperate components. Buy/sell/trade. Large selection, friendly advice, warrantee and great prices. Stereo/video exchange at Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only, 9-5. Other days call 256-0541

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2942

ROOM FOR RENT

Available 1/96 Room in 4 bedroom/Belchertown prefer female $281+. Jennifer 253-0676

One bedroom in a five bedroom house. Smoking OK. $270 per month. 256-4295

Room for rent on bus route, all utilities included. Male or female. $288 per month. Available Jan 1. Call Nikki 253-7741

Room for rent Northampton on bus route 1 of 3 bedrooms available. Only $237.50. 584-2146

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located 1½ mile to UMass and center of Amherst) beautiful 3 bedroom 2-½ bath condo at Amity Place. Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen and great sunset views! Must be responsible, cat-loving, non-smoker. $425.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3866

Roommate wanted non-smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month. On bus route. Start Jan 1st. Call Anne 253-1605 heat & hot water included

Roommate wanted to share apt in Mill Valley. Heat & hot water incl. 253-1402

SERVICES

Economical manicures (acrylics nails) Janet Robert 548-1794

Free financial aid! Over 6 billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6499 ext. FS0012

Foreign Students: DV-1 greencard program assistance 1-800-800-7187

Honeyboo and Butterfield's hosts jewelry parties. Hemp, beads, accesories. In time for holidays. Soronites encouraged! 548-9786 appt.

RESUME
Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union. 545-2211

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eye glass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3224

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $245 r/t California $175 o/w Europe from $229 r/t. Cheap airfares to S. America, Asia, Africa, Middle East and Australia. Call (413) 587-0001. A+ Tech New England

$CRUISE SHIPS HIRING$
$$$ + Free (Caribbean, Europe, Hawaii) Seasonal/permanent. No experience necessary. Guide (919) 929-4398 Ext. C1040

Free Travel Spring Break '96 Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group! Travel free! Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

Port Antonio, Jamaica Oceanview cottages, great neighborhood. Walk to beaches, restaurants, dancehall clubs. $150/week. 413-367-9350

JAMAICA
Go with whom you know. Spring break in Negril. $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437. Trust our experience.

Spring break Bahamas or Florida Keys. Spend it on your own private yacht! One week only $385.00 per person including food and much more. Organizers go for FREE! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters 1-800-383-4001. See us on the net http://www.shadow.net/~erisa

Spring break '96 Cancun from $399. Jamaica from $439. Florida from $99. Organize a group of 15 and travel free!!! Call Student Travel Services 1-800-648-4849 for more info. On campus contact Liz at 546-7146, Jason at 548-5929 or Catherine at 549-7594.

Winter Break Special Killington week $289! Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437.

WANTED TO RENT

We are two females looking for 2 rooms in which to rest our heads from Jan or Feb 1st (or if Fall until June 1st). Will also consider 1 large bedroom. Apt or house is fine. Bus route would be ideal. Please call Stacy or Renee evenings at 546-4868.

Keep your finger on the pulse of UMass and build your resume while you're at it.

Write for the Collegian News Department

Contact Chris Conner

113 Campus Center Basement
545-3500

Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian

Write for GLB Issues

Let your voice be heard

Contact Wendy Darling

113 Campus Center 545-3500

Collegian Graphics

We're up all night putting together New England's largest daily college newspaper!

When our job is done – your day is just beginning.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

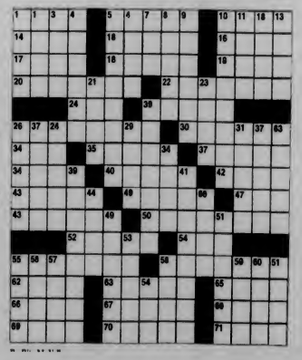
ACROSS
1 Unescorted partygoer
5 Perfect image
10 Great ceremony
14 Secret language
15 Oslo natives
16 Hautboy
17 Ice-cream thickener
18 Sleeveless garments
19 Phone or photo start
20 Climbing rose
22 Composition writer
24 Electrified particle
25 Upright
26 Sorted
30 Perches
34 — mode
35 Range orphan
37 Dogma
38 Four gills
40 Breaches of friendship
42 Seeing red
43 Chris of the courts
45 Locations
47 Take advantage of
48 Vacation spot
50 Glued firmly
52 Analyze grammatically
54 Devotee: Suffix
55 Dewey — system
58 Caught
62 Rocker Clapton
63 Country estate
65 Too
66 The Charles' canine
67 Mideast title
68 Musical sound
69 Film unit
70 Principal roles
71 Flock females

DOWN
1 Cicatrix
2 Bacchanalia costume
3 Eden resident
4 Popular pet
5 Bell or Edison, e.g.
6 Activist
7 Hesitant sounds
8 Fall bloom
9 Smaller amount
10 Spuds
11 Follow orders
12 Lawn pest
13 One's equal
21 Burden
23 Edinburgh citizen
25 Imposing structure
26 Escapade
27 Martini enhancer
28 Country routes
29 Sponsorship
31 Piglet's nose
32 Concise
33 Beautiful horse
36 Kitchen add-on
39 Describing a rain forest
41 Educational meetings
44 Soho streetcar
46 — precedent
49 Globe-trot
51 Deny
53 Gooey stuff
55 Loved one
56 Gaelic
57 Refer to
58 Santa's chariot
59 Shine
60 Medieval toiler
61 Mother rabbits
64 Meadow

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	D	E	L	A		T	A	M	P	A		S	A	P
E	R	R	E	D		A	B	D	R	T		A	R	E
S	A	N	T	A	I	S	A	B	E	L		N	E	W
O	W	E		M	A	S	C		S	A	N	T	A	S
P	A	S	S	I	M		A	G	E	N	D	A
			U	T	A	H		U	N	T	U	C	K	S
B	A	S	I	E		E	V	I	T	A		R	A	E
U	P	A	T		S	A	I	L	S		J	U	T	E
M	I	N		D	A	R	E	D		S	U	Z	Y	S
P	A	T	I	E	N	T		S	E	T	A
		A	G	A	T	H	A		D	O	N	N	E	R
P	A	Y	O	L	A		R	E	A	P		A	M	E
A	D	A		S	A	N	T	A	M	O	N	I	C	A
T	I	N		I	N	A	I	D		F	I	V	E	R
E	T	A		N	A	M	E	S		F	L	E	E	S

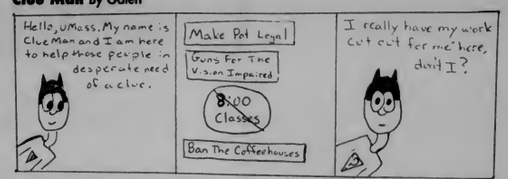
12/27/94



Bruno By C. Baldwin

SO I HIT HIM IN THE FACE AGAIN AND HIS FRIENDS WERE COOL. THEY DIDN'T BOLT, THEY WERE SHOUTING "TELL HIM YOU'RE SORRY, MAN". BUT THIS GUY JUST SHOULDN'T TELL ME HE WAS SORRY, SO I HIT HIM AGAIN.
OH, SO YOU'RE THE SAME KIND OF STUPID OX THAT USED TO BEAT ME UP IN HIGH SCHOOL.
HEY, THAT'S NOT COOL TO INSULT A GIRL, OR EVEN A WEIRD GIRL. JUST PEOPLE WHO DESERVE IT, LIKE DUMB FRESHMAN FRAT JOCKS AT THE LOCAL UNIVERSITY.
OH, I'M JUST RIDDLED WITH FEELINGS OF SECURITY, KNOWING A BRUNO LIKE YOU IS DECIDING WHO DESERVES VIOLENT ACTS AND WHO DOESN'T.

Clue Man By Galen



Hello, UMass. My name is Clue Man and I am here to help those people in desperate need of a clue.
Make Pot Legal
Guns For The Vision Impaired
$400 Classes
Ban The Coffeehouses
I really have my work cut out for me here, don't I?

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Loeid By Roger & Salem Salloom

Dear Dale,
I know you just broke up with your sweetie. I'm sorry.
You're not alone.
I absolve you of whatever you did anyway.
And you can absolve me of anything I've ruined.
OK? Now we're both innocent again.
"The truth will set you free but first it'll make you miserable."
Lighten up pal, and .....
I'm not only a decent friend, I'm also broke.....
Can I borrow a $20.?

Close to Home By John McPherson

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

WOW! SOME GREAT SHOW YOU PUT ON!
I WANT AN AUTOGRAPH!
HEY, I WAS HERE FIRST!
STAY BACK! THIS IS FOR REAL!
YOU CAN SAY THAT AGAIN!
GONZO!

Loser Crow Comics By Mike Krozy

Close to Home By John McPherson

OK, NEXT STUDENT, BRAD VALMONT.
I'LL BE HITTING HIM WITH A TRIG MID-TERM ON THE MONDAY AFTER VACATION!
DITTO FOR ME! MASSIVE PHYSICS TEST, 9AM MONDAY!
I GAVE HIM A 30-PAGE TERM PAPER DUE THE DAY WE GET BACK!
HE'S NEVER GONNA SEE THE LIGHT OF DAY! I'M MAKING HIM READ SIX NOVELS AND GIVE AN ORAL REPORT ON EACH ONE!

How teachers prepare for an upcoming school vacation.

Ali People By Ali

This is my friend Max Grinberg...
At dinner... After Max has eaten, he always gets the hiccups... But he only does one loud one. We always wait for another hiccup to come, but it never does...
We just don't get it.....

50,000 eyes will look at your ad if placed in the COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS.
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
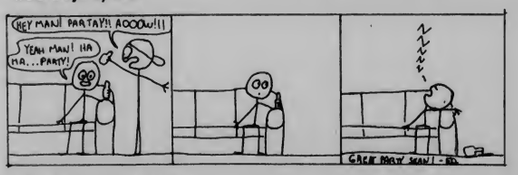
Ask for our specials.

Molson Spice By Derek Oleson

What are you eatin'?
Bean Salad
WHY MUST EVERYTHING CARE FOR BE DESTROYED
I'm sorry, but my cousins are beans and my dinner is a head of lettuce.

308 Boyz By Skid



Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Don't Go There By K + Justine

HI, I'M JUSTINE AND I'M ROOMING WITH THE FIRST DAYTIME SHE WAS HERE, SHE BROKE MY LAMP (BUT SHE BOUGHT ME A NEW ONE)
I'M REALLY LOVIN' WHEN I HAVE SO MUCH TIME TO MYSELF
THERE'S THIS GUY THAT LIKES ME SINCE, BUT HE WAS GREEN HAIR, UGH!
HI, I'M KELLY AND I'm A COSTUME MAJOR
I LIKE SAM
-JUSTINE BROKE MY BOWL
- I LIKE FRINGES
I HATE THE BEATSIE BOYS
I'm SO PREPARE
SIMPLES
HEY KELLY, THANKS FOR THE BREASTS!
NO PROBLEM DON'T FORGET TO SMILE

"Sometimes you gotta get a little crazy. Sometimes you gotta break a few rules. And it is during those times that you know ... There's no going back."

Collegian Graphics, our day ends when yours is just beginning.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that you need to relax

10. You take these lists seriously enough to write a huge letter to the editor.
9. When speaking privately with a nurse regarding your blood pressure, you overhear your doctor say, "...walking time bomb."
8. You were arrested last week for trying to build a bird's nest on top of the W. E. B. DuBois Library.
7. A pack of cigarettes and four cups of coffee just barely gets you through the day.
6. You let out a nervous laugh when people ask "Are you okay?"
5. Every time you try to relax you end up killing someone.
4. The "voices" are especially irritating lately.
3. People use words "that nut-case" in reference to you.
2. A week ago you had a full head of hair, now you're Mr. Clean.
1. Resting pulse? 120.

Quote of the Day

"You are partly one hundred percent right."

–Samuel Goldwyn

Sorry! Once again the Dining Commons menu has eluded us.

To find out more about the mystery of what's for dinner, dial 545-2626 and speak to secret agent "Mindy."

SportsWeekend

Inside this issue:

- The volleyball team fell to Rhode Island 3–0 (15–8, 15–5 and 16–14) in the Atlantic 10 Tournament semi–finals on Friday. Junior outside hitter Giza Rivera led the Minutewomen with 15 kills and 16 digs, and was the only Minutewoman named to the All–Tournament Team.
  George Washington took home the A–10 trophy with its 3–0 win over URI on Saturday, 16–14, 15–13 and 15–12. See tomorrow's Collegian for the complete story.
- The women's basketball team, fresh off its upset of No. 8 Stanford, defeated Detroit yesterday at the Mullins Center 67–61 (See story, page 6).

Minutewomen pull off major upset, beat Stanford

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

"This is one great win," Massachusetts women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien said after her team stunned No. 8 Stanford on Friday at the William D. Mullins Center.

"It puts you on the national scene. Everyone's going to see the score on CNN, and that's great," she said. "That's what we're trying to do. You have to have wins like this and have people pay attention to you, which is what this game does."

Entering the long–awaited senior season of Melissa Gurile, Octavia Thomas, Tricia Hopson and Nicole Carter, O'Brien expected her team to take their play to another level and enter the national arena.

Massachusetts	65
Stanford	58

Following a record–setting 19–11 season, and with all five starters returning from the squad which was selected to the National Women's Invitational Tournament, visions of a first–ever trip to the NCAAs danced through the players heads.

The Minutewomen took a gigantic first step towards their goal with Friday's 65–56 thumping of the Cardinal, before an exuberant school–record crowd of 4,110.

Trailing by two at the half, the driven Minutewomen shot an astounding 61 percent from the floor in the second half to take command of the game. Stanford, which reached the 1995 Final Four where it lost to undefeated Connecticut, crumbled as the Minutewomen escaped a late Cardinal charge to win convincingly.

"UMass played a great and very inspired basketball game," said Stanford coach Amy Tucker. "They came out very intense. They were not intimidated and got to us right from the get go."

"I think [UMass] played very well," said Stanford guard and Amherst native Jamila Wideman. "They came out very relaxed, and that's a sign of a top program. They're pursuing a national reputation and they just did that."

The Cardinal flew out of the gates early as Vanessa Nygaard poured in four of her seven three–pointers on the day in the opening 5:06, as UMass found itself down by as many as 10 points. Throughout the game, Stanford relied on the three, attempting a school record 30, including 15 by Nygaard.

A late run, keyed by six Beth Kuzmeski free throws and a nifty three–point play by Thomas, brought the Minutewomen to within a bucket, at 26–24, as the half drew to a close. UMass ended the half on a 10–2 run as the Minutewomen carried much of the momentum into the locker room.

"The second half we came out more relaxed," said UMass forward Tez Kraft. "The first half we saw that we could stay with them and were only down two points. We figured that if we came out and played just as hard as we did in the first half, and get into our rhythm, that things would start falling for us."

Kraft came off the bench to spark the Minutewomen, scoring a team–high 14 points in her 16 minutes of action. After the Cardinal took its final lead of the game, 37–36 as Charmin Smith squeezed out a jumper with 13:07 to play, the sophomore poured in eight points in a pivotal 13–5 run that would ultimately decide the game.

Kraft's play was contagious as the Minutewomen increased their efforts as crunch time neared.

Kuzmeski found Thomas underneath the basket on an

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Octavia Thomas (12 points) picked up her play down the stretch in helping the Minutewomen upset Stanford on Friday. She scored a team–high 22 points in yesterday's win over Detroit (See story, page 6).

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 6

Friday's match is a sign of things to come for UM

As the second half wore on, the Massachusetts women's basketball fans grew cautiously optimistic. Here was their team leading by as many as 10 over perennial power and nationally ranked No. 8 Stanford, as the clock continued to run.

Matt Vautour

But somewhere in the back of the minds of the 4,110 in a attendance (a new UMass women's basketball record), there was doubt. This Stanford team was obviously good, and with sophomore forward Vanessa Nygard bombing three– pointers (seven in the game), there was always a feeling that the Cardinal would could kick it into high gear and take over.

But that wasn't the case Friday afternoon, because Massachusetts did what a lot of upstarts fail to do — defend the lead.

Stanford did try to make a late run as it cut the lead to three points, on back to back three–pointers, but senior Octavia Thomas drove through the forest of Stanford six–footers for a lay–up. The crowd went crazy as the shot fell through, sinking the Cardinal.

"I was proud of the way we played," said a considerably hoarse Joanie O'Brien after the game. "When they started coming back it might have been easy to give in, but we didn't. We stepped up and made plays when we needed it. That's what's been missing in the past. Hopefully, it's a sign of things to come in the future."

This wasn't supposed to be much of a game. Perhaps the only reason that the Cardinal even included a stop in Amherst on their 1995–96 schedule was for point guard Jamila Wideman's homecoming.

Wideman, a native of Amherst, went to Stanford after a colorful high school career that earned her All–America honors. She scored six points and handed out five assists while playing the entire 40 minutes in her return. The nice story that was supposed to come out of the Stanford–Massachusetts match–up was Wideman's homecoming. Nobody counted on the biggest upset of the early season coming into play.

Wideman's return renewed a high school rivalry with Massachusetts guard Beth Kuzmeski, a native of Northampton. While Wideman's return drew the spotlight, it was Kuzmeski who stole the show. While she only had one basket from the field, she hit key free throw after key free throw, including the final two points of the game. She also played excellent defense in the game.

"That was probably Beth's best overall game since she got here," O'Brien said. "She did a lot of good things that obviously don't show up on the scoreboard."

"I haven't been playing as well lately, so I tried to pick myself up," Kuzmeski said. "I knew a lot of attention would be placed on Jamilia's homecoming."

Massachusetts women's basketball has taken great strides in the past few years but it still lacked a spark plug, something to jump–start the program into the

Turn to WOMEN'S BASKETBALL, page 6

Minutemen hockey sweep Air Force, improve record to 6–3

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

For the first time since making the jump to Hockey East, the Massachusetts hockey team was in the precarious position of possibly overlooking a Division I team.

With defending national champion and current No. 1 Boston University on the horizon, 1–6–3 Air Force seemed to be merely a speed bump in between league contests for the surprising Minutemen.

Massachusetts	4
Air Force	2

The Falcons were hardly overlooked, though, as UMass cruised to a weekend sweep by downing Air Force 4–2 and 7–1 at the William D. Mullins Center.

With the win, the Minutemen improved to 6–3 on the year, equalling their win total for the entire 1994–95 season.

Massachusetts	7
Air Force	1

Saturday night the Minutemen used a solid team effort to defeat the Falcons 7–1. Six different Minutemen scored and the defense held Air Force to just 18 shots, many of which were not quality shots.

This made for a light evening for junior Rich Moriarty, who saw his first action of the season in the UMass net. Moriarty was tested early on a breakaway by Todd LaFortune, but slid to make his only dramatic save of the night. Most of Air Force's shots came feebly from along the perimeter of the offensive zone.

"It's good to know that I can feel comfortable going with any of three guys, especially coming off the bench," said UMass coach Joe Mallen. "If someone doesn't start off too well, being able to jump to another one and have an easy transition, then our team will have confidence in those guys."

"The team was unbelievable [Saturday]," Moriarty added. "We held them to 18 shots and when the team can do that we are going to win a lot of hockey games."

Sal Manganaro notched the night's first goal just 6:36 into the game as he collected a feed from Mike Gaffney in the neutral zone and broke in alone on a helpless Pat Kielb.

Keith O'Connell notched his first goal of the season at 4:09 of the second, and after the Falcons' lone goal of the game, Tom Perry scored on a power–play wrap–around to make it 3–1.

Manganaro scored his second of the night at 18:05 of the second period to extend the UMass lead to 4–1 as he again deked Kielb.

In the third period, Jon Jacques scored his third of the season, while Blair Wagar scored shorthanded and Rob Bonneau tallied on the power play to close out the scoring.

It was the 51st goal of Bonneau's career, placing him in second place on the all–time UMass list.

"A lot of guys work hard all year and its good to see different guys getting into the scoring," O'Connell said. "Something like that will give some other guys more confidence and hopefully that will play a key role for the guys that contributed tonight."

The effort was pleasant after narrowly escaping a Falcon comeback attempt in Friday's 4–2 win.

Perry opened the scoring on the power play at 6:54 as Warren Norris sent a pass from behind the net to an open Perry in the slot.

Norris extended the lead to 2–0 on a 20–foot wrist shot 7:36 into the second, but the lead was nearly trimmed when Dennis Wright covered up a puck in the UMass crease, giving Air Force a penalty shot 13:49 into the period.

Mark DeGironimo took the shot and deeked it meagerly to his left, where goaltender Brian Regan's right pad awaited.

Air Force did get a goal from Steve Maturo before the end of the second, but a pair of third period goals from Wagar and an empty–netter from Bonneau secured the win.

UMass slumped to the Falcons' level for much of Friday's game, before returning to a level of play more consistent with the typical Hockey East team on Saturday. The speedy, aggressive play exhibited by UMass in that game will have to be duplicated for success in this weekend's showdown with the Terriers.

The penalty killing was strong for UMass, permitting the Falcons just one power play goal in 10 chances, and will have to maintain its strong play Friday night when No. 1 BU invades Mullins, hungry after a rough weekend.

The Terriers had some trouble with ECAC teams this

Massachusetts confident after wins; prepared for BU

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

Last season when the Massachusetts hockey team traveled to Air Force in mid–November, the Minutemen were five games and five losses into their season.

It was to be a weekend to try to gain some confidence looking to the following home–and–home series with the eventual National Champions, Boston University.

Flash forward to this current campaign and the situation is markedly different. Heading into this weekend's series against Air Force, once again the predecessor of the clash with the currently top ranked Terriers, these two games were a chance to keep the surprise season going.

Coming off back–to–back losses to Hockey East leader Providence, the Minutemen were hungry to get back on the ice and put two more in the win column. They were able to do just that, as they won a choppy 4–2 decision on Friday and finally broke out Saturday scoring five goals in the final 30 minutes to paste the Falcons, 7–1.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

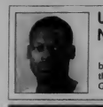
DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen ran their record to 6–3 with their sweep over Air Force this weekend and head into next weekend's series against Boston University with confidence.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 56 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, November 28, 1995



UMass meets No. 1 Wildcats

Tonight at 9 p.m., the men's basketball team faces the Kentucky Wildcats at the Palace at Auburn Hills in Direct TV's Great Eight. (See story on page 7).

Bulger favored for UM president

Massachusetts Senate President William Bulger is still considered the top contender for the vacant UMass president position (See story, page 3)

Down in the Depp

Johnny Depp is a desperate father trying to save his daughter in John Badham's Nick of Time (See Arts & Living, 6).

– Extended Forecast

Today will be cloudy with a chance of drizzle. Tomorrow there will a chance of snow with temperatures becoming considerably colder. Thursday will continue with more of the same.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 30	HIGH:40 LOW: 30	HIGH:30 LOW: 15

Food drive hopes to deliver aid this winter

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

The VIVA Community Service Council and the Panhellenic Council, a member of VIVA, plan to "Fill–a– Bus" with donations of food, clothing and toys to benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center.

The Food Bank served 100,000 people, or 15 percent of the population of Western Massachusetts, last year.

"Half of the people who were served were children," said David Sharken, executive director of the Food Bank. "These are kids who obviously are in need through no fault of their own.

"There is an image of a down–and–out hobo in a soup kitchen," Sharken said, "but...these are mostly families that can't make ends meet at the end of the month."

The "Fill–a–Bus" donation drive, which began before Thanksgiving, will continue until Friday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily.

A PVTA bus is parked outside the Student Union. Volunteers from VIVA and the Panhellenic Council will be there at the scheduled times.

Additional drop off locations exist in several campus buildings including Whitmore (near the Herter Hall entrance) and Coolidge Residence Hall.

"As a student, sometimes it's hard to get your voice out, but by doing things like this you're able to accomplish something big," said Heather Korzenowski, a junior from Alpha Chi Omega.

For example, the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts distributes food to more than 330 programs that directly feed those in need. Last year they distributed 2.5 million pounds of food.

There are member agencies of the Food Bank in Berkshire, Franklin, Hampden and Hampshire counties. Agencies in town include the Amherst Survival Center, Mark's Meadow School, A Better Chance, Almadan, Center for Human Development, the First Baptist Church, Amherst Community Child Care, Amherst Family Center, Meridian and ServiceNet.

"We're on campus, and unfortunately, we're sheltered," Korzenowski said, referring to University students.

The need for these supplies is highest during the winter, especially for warm clothing, said Lauren

EMILY RELY / COLLEGIAN

Sara Levine, a junior journalism major, gives dry food to Julie Lakoff, a junior communication disorders major and sophomore communications major Deana D'Orazio at the Fill–A–Bus outside the Student Union Monday. All proceeds go to the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center.

May, a sophomore from Alpha Chi Omega.

Blankets, for example, are welcome, she said.

The Food Bank needs "any kind of high protein items" such as peanut butter, tuna and canned meats, Sharken said.

"Canned fruit also moves pretty quickly out of here," he said.

Donations to the Food Bank are distributed throughout Western Massachusetts, as opposed to donations to specific local programs, Sharken said. This will be the case with the food items in the bus.

The food drive is in a bus "because you can put a lot in there and it's portable," said junior sorority volunteer, Julie Lakoff.

"It's an attention getter," said Heather Korzenowski, a junior from Alpha Chi Omega. That's one reason why the drive was successful last year, she said.

Next UM president to be decided as trustees meet today

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The decision of who will be the next President of the University of Massachusetts system will be decided today, as the board of trustees meets at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester at 9:00 a.m. A press conference to announce the selection will follow at 10:00 a.m.

As of last week, the pool has been narrowed to three candidates: Executive Vice President and Provost of Northeastern University Michael Baer, Massachusetts Senate President William Bulger and West Virginia University Chancellor Charles Manning.

There has been much speculation that Bulger is the front contender, yet neither Bulger nor administration officials will make any comment.

The search committee will make its recommendation to the board and will then make their decision.

When asked earlier last month about the decision process, Search Committee Chairman Peter Lewenberg, in charge of all inquiries about the race, refused to comment on the particular candidates and their competency, due to rules of confidentiality.

"They are all excellent candidates in the field," Lewenberg said. "We are still conducting interviews and we hope to hold to schedule. We hope to have a decision by the end of December, but maybe even at the beginning of December."

However, Lewenberg did say the next president will hold all of the qualifications as leader and champion of the University.

"We are looking for a person with leadership capabilities, to advocate for the University as a system within the state legislature, the business [world], federal government and the alumni constituency," he said.

Many, if not all officials or those involved in the decision–making process have been tight–lipped about the possibility of Bulger becoming the next president. Bulger himself would not make any comment when contacted earlier this month.

As of yesterday, many students in the Campus Center said they have little or no knowledge of the race itself or of the possible candidates. None knew enough about Bulger or his record to say whether they liked or disliked the idea of him becoming the next president.

One student said Bulger would be a good choice because of his favorable ties to the Massachusetts legislature, possibly meaning more money for the University.

But not all of the public is in favor of a Bulger presidency. Attorney Alan Sisitsky served on the state senate for 17 years from 1973–1982, and with Bulger for 10 years.

Sisitsky said Bulger would undermine the diversity of a university, and is known for the "quick and absolute gavel."

"When you apply that to a college environment, it's explosive," Sisitsky said.

In response to Sisitsky's comments, a spokesman from Bulger's office and UMass alumnus said Sisitsky was formerly expelled from the senate by Bulger. He said this may be the reason for Sisitsky's ill feelings toward the senate president.

Lewenberg said yesterday the decision–making is not in any way secretive and has been a very open process.

Interim President Sherry Penney would not comment on Bulger's status as future president. A spokesman for her office said all inquiries about the presidential race are being handled by the Trustees' office.

Student Trustee Dan Rivera, who is one of the 21 board members to make the decision, also could not be reached for comment yesterday.

Groups expand on LBGA mission to reach students

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

At a university the size of the University of Massachusetts, it is hardly surprising that some students feel lost in the crowd. This is especially true for gay, lesbian and bisexual students, many of whom find themselves feeling isolated in an atmosphere where heterosexuality predominates and openly GLB people are hard to find.

This semester the UMass Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance has launched a campaign to alleviate this situation. Besides continuing its weekly Info–Socials, which draw between 30 and 40 people, the Registered Student Organization has helped to organize several "sub–groups" that meet for smaller discussions and activities.

Currently the LBGA serves as the umbrella organization for three smaller groups, said Eric Cammer, the group's facilitator. All of the groups meet once a week in the LBGA office in the Student Union Building and draw between five and 12 people per meeting.

One group, the Bi Rap Group, has been operating for several years, while the other two groups, Reach Out and Let's Talk About Sex, Baby, have been formed this semester. Two other sub–groups have discontinued their meetings for this semester, Cammer reported.

"I'm really impressed that we have these three groups still running," said Cammer, adding that attendance levels for all three groups have been higher than expected.

"I'm looking forward to seeing these groups continuing through to next semester and growing even larger," Cammer said.

Three groups running strong

The Bi Rap Group provides bisexual men and women with an opportunity for discussion they might not find at Info– Socials. While the Tuesday night meetings are large, fairly structured and sometimes intimidating for newcomers, the Bi Rap Group's Monday night meetings are smaller and more informal, Cammer said. People often find it easier to ask questions and meet new people in such a setting.

The biggest success of this semester has been Reach Out, a group for gays, lesbians and bisexuals who have either just come out or would like to discuss the ways they face coming out every day.

"People keep showing up," said Derick Cheeseboro– Weaver, one of Reach Out's two facilitators. Eight or 10 people gather every Thursday night, drawn to the LBGA office by word of mouth, he said.

Cheeseboro–Weaver said he finds himself surprised and happy about the way things have worked out for the group he and fellow junior Mike Sheehan began. Not only have people continued to come week after week, but "new faces" arrive on a regular basis.

Some are those who attend regular LBGA Info–Socials, while others are at a stage in their lives where a smaller, more intimate group is better suited to their needs.

So far this semester, discussion topics have ranged from dealing with family members during the Thanksgiving break to encountering racism in the GLB community, Cheeseboro– Weaver said.

The third group, Let's Talk About Sex, Baby, was formed three or four weeks ago by UMass undergraduate Louise Godchaux. People who gather at meetings of this group start talking about a topic "thrown out" by Godchaux and move on to other subjects as the meeting progresses. Conversation revolves around GLB sex and sexuality, Cammer said.

EMILY RELY / COLLEGIAN

Student pleads guilty for local heroin death

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

A former University of Massachusetts student pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in Hampshire County Superior Court a week ago today. He was accused of selling the heroin which led to the death of an Amherst Regional High School student.

John Ciarametaro, 23, of Rockport, was sentenced to two–and–a–half years in the Hampshire County House of Corrections.

In Hampshire County, this is the first time someone has been incarcerated for involuntary manslaughter due to the sale of heroin, according to Assistant District Attorney Michael Goggins.

Ciarametaro will serve that sentence starting Jan. 2. After his release, he will face five years of probation.

Police and medical examiners determined that 17–year–old Harrison "Ozzy" Klate overdosed on a lethal batch of heroin, according to Goggins.

The night Klate died, Dec. 15, 1994, Ciarametaro sold three packets

Turn to STUDENT page 3

It's all very simple

Junior Finance major Seth Appel tutors Matthew Lowe, a Junior Operations Management major, in the art of Finance at the Tutoring Center on the 10th floor of the UMass Library last week.

Group sets sober goals

By Melanie B. Arruda
Collegian Correspondent

A unique social model of philosophy that puts the responsibility of recovery on the individual constitutes the substance abuse recovery program at the Hairston House.

Hairston House, part of the Behavioral Health Services of Cooley Dickinson Hospital, is a residential recovery program housing 15 male substance abusers. Their philosophy is achieved through self–help, 12–step programs and living in a structured group setting in a sober environment.

"Teamwork in helping one another is the backbone for the men's recovery program," said Philip Rugo Director of Hairston House Recovery Program.

Rugo stressed the positive outcome of group activities on program members.

"The model is integrated as part of a community philosophy," he said.

Members hold Springboard Meetings to discuss daily hardships and temptations and create Service Plans stating goals and objectives during their stay at the halfway house.

"We want people to achieve an independent lifestyle," Rugo said.

Residents keep busy by organizing events, performing assigned chores, attending daily meetings and tending to various financial responsibilities ranging from money contributed to Hairston House to child support payments.

The self–confidence and self–reliance gained by members prepares them "for the next stage after recovery in becoming independent," Rugo said.

Some of the tools provided by the program in order to help member's lead a clean and sober life depend on an individual's educational background.

The typical scenario are members with or without a General Education Degree. Such tools include preparing resumes by computer, teaching assertiveness, requiring member participation in group activities, requiring members to meet their financial commitments and having members organize events such as the Sober Dance, held this past Friday.

Rugo said the organization prioritizes four groups as incoming members such as the homeless, intravenous drug users, H.I.V. identified participants and persons with disabilities. He recognized the program's benefits as being the psychological socialization of members organizing house activities and the financial profit raised at organized events for Hairston House's budget.

The success of the program is defined as a progression to leading a clean and sober life with or without short relapses, Rugo stated.

Not everyone benefits from a social model without formal counseling emphasizing relationships among participants rather than with specific staff members, Rugo noted. Some substance abusers need more structured programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous.

"The average stay is approximately four and one–half to five months," Rugo said. Stays vary from three months to one year.

Graduating members are encouraged to stay in contact with other people who have recovered upon leaving Hairston House.

World AIDS Awareness Week
November 27-December 1, 1995

VISUAL AIDS

Visual AIDS is an international exhibition that promotes public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS by illustrating how people the world over are coping with the epidemic. The posters reflect the social and sexual attitudes of their diverse sources regarding safer sex, research funding and social justice issues. The curatorial theme of this travelling exhibition highlights the tension between erotic and anti-erotic approaches to life in the Age of AIDS.

Opening Reception: Tuesday, November 28 5:00 - 7:00 pm.
Wheeler Gallery Hours: Monday - Thursday 4:00 - 8:00 pm.

UMASS Panels of the 5-College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt
November 28 - December 14
9:00 AM - 11:00 PM (Monday - Thursday)
9:00 AM - 7:00 PM (Friday)
Graduate Lounge, UMASS Campus Center

HIV/AIDS Awareness Tables
staffed by Peer Health Educators
November 27 - December 1
10:00 AM - 3:00 PM
UMASS Campus Center

AIDS and the ARTS
Wednesday, November 29
Wheeler Gallery 4:30-6:00 PM
tour of the Visual AIDS exhibition with James Miller, Curator and Professor from the University of Western Ontario

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Quilt Panel
Thursday, November 30
7:00 PM - 9:00 PM
Mary Lyons Classroom
students are invited to remember and honor those lost and to create a GLBT quilt panel to be carried at the Candlelight Vigil

World AIDS Day Candlelight Walk and Vigil
Friday, December 1
6:00 PM
from Student Union Steps to Wheeler Gallery
Music, Open Forum and Commemoration of "A Day Without Art"

Visual AIDS is a project of the Five College Sexuality Education Committee and is sponsored in part by the UMASS Arts Council. A portion of the collection will be exhibited simultaneously at each college as a visual backdrop for World AIDS day activities. For more information, please call the University Health Services, Health Education Division Office, 549-2671 x181.

For Your Information

PIPs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Tuesday, Nov. 28

Fill–A–Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill–A–Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545–3327.

Meeting — "Being Whole GLB: Speaking Out in the Latino Community" will take place in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. For more information call 545–2073.

Opening Reception — "Visual AIDS" Exhibition has an opening reception in the Wheeler Gallery, 5 p.m. – 7 p.m.

Lecture & Tour — James Miller, professor and curator, will lead a lecture and tour of the "Visual AIDS" exhibition in the Wheeler Gallery, 5:45 – 6 p.m.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 p.m. – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

HIV/AIDS Awareness — Peer Health Educators are providing information about HIV and AIDS at a table on the Campus Center Concourse.

Wednesday, Nov. 29

Fill–A–Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill–A–Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. – 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545–3327.

Poetry Reading — The Globe Bookshop in Northampton is sponsoring a reading by Carl Phillips and Timothy Liu at 7:30 p.m. as part of their "Readers and Writers, Live" poetry series. The reading is free and open to the public. For more information call 584–0574.

Workshop — An "Arts & Crafts" Mural Contest will be held in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. For more information call 545–2073.

Meeting — The Student Nurse Association is holding a meeting at 5 p.m. in Morrill 4N 403. The meeting will discuss a blood drive.

HIV/AIDS Awareness — Peer Health Educators are providing information about HIV and AIDS at a table on the Campus Center Concourse.

Thursday, Nov. 30

Fill–A–Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill–A–Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. – 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545–3327.

Workshop — The W.E.B. Du Bois Library is sponsoring a workshop on obtaining Internet resources related to Latin America at 9 a.m. Contact Lori Mestre in the Reference Department at 545–6851.

Movie — "Erendida" will be shown in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. For more information call 545– 2073.

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a gendarma evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel–chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542–5896.

AIDS Quilt Making — GLBT faculty, students and staff are encouraged to make quilt squares for the UMass AIDS Quilt in preparation for World AIDS Day. The quilt making will be held in the Mary Lyon classroom at 7 p.m. For more information contact The Stonewall Center at 545–4824

Notices

Yearbook — Index Yearbook Senior Portraits begin Oct. 31 in Campus Center 177–178. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule your free appointment. Portraits will be in color, so bright clothing is encouraged. Yearbooks will be on sale at the sittings for $40.

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5 p.m. – 6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545– 4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Ianet at 587–9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

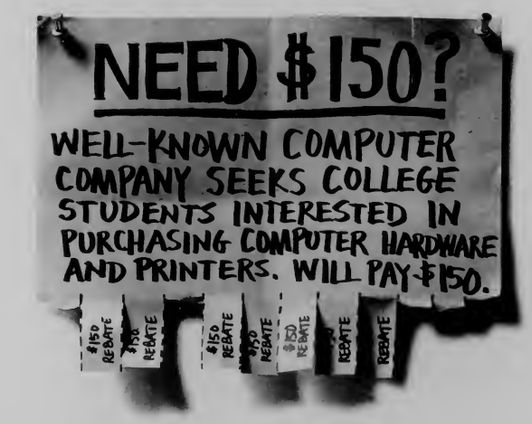
Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five–College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10 a.m. – 11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8 p.m.– 10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323–6330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1–800–750– 2016. The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1–800–696– 7752.



NEED $150?
WELL-KNOWN COMPUTER COMPANY SEEKS COLLEGE STUDENTS INTERESTED IN PURCHASING COMPUTER HARDWARE AND PRINTERS. WILL PAY $150.
$150 REBATE

Macintosh Performa 636CD
8MB RAM/250MB hard drive, CD-ROM drive, 15" color monitor, keyboard, mouse and all the software you're likely to need.

Looking for a great deal on a computer and a printer can be a whole lot easier than finding a roommate. Because right now, when you purchase a Macintosh® Performa® from the 630 series and an Apple® printer, you'll get $150 back. Just think about it. You can get your work done faster, it will look great and you can receive an extra $150 at the same time. So take a moment to look into the power that can keep you ahead. The power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.® Apple

Personal LaserWriter® 300
Toner cartridge and cables included.

Stop By The University Store Computer Department For More Information

UNIVERSITY STORE ☆ Campus Center 545-2619 Mon. - Fri. 9-5 Sat 11- 3

Purchase any Apple Macintosh Performa 630 series or 640CD DOS compatible computer along with any Apple printer and receive a $150 mail in rebate. Offer valid through January 15, 1996, while supplies last and subject to availability. If you have any questions about the "Performa - Printer = Payback" offer, please call (800) 950-6354 or see stores for a complete list of details. ©1995 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the apple logo, Macintosh, Performa, StyleWriter and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. PowerPC is a trademark of International Business Machines Corporation, used under license therefrom. CardExp Plus is a registered trademark of Kinetech. All Macintosh computers are designed to be accessible to individuals with disability. To learn more (U.S. only), call voice (800) 769-2760 or TTY (800) 755-0601.

Campus Police Log

Accident — property damage
Nov. 21
A vehicle operated by Melissa McCormack, attempting to avoid a vehicle exiting Hicks Way, skidded on wet pavement and collided head on with a truck which was stopped to make a left turn into Hicks Way. Ms. McCormack was checked by an Amherst Fire Department ambulance crew and was advised to seek treatment at Health Services.

Parking complaints
Nov. 21
Parking complaints were reported at Campus center way, Southwest Circle, Butterfield Terrace, Sunset Ave. and Stockbridge Road.

Annoying Telephone Calls
Nov. 21
Annoying telephone calls were reported from a resident of Eastman Lane.

Burglary/Breaking & Entering
Nov. 21
A vehicle was broken into in lot 13. A tool box, speakers and an amplifier were stolen.

Vandalism
Nov. 21
Furniture was tipped over and obscene graffiti were left on the 16th floor of the Lederele Graduate Research Center.
Graffiti was left with specific reference to a staff person in Field Hall.
A window was smashed on a vehicle in Lot 80.
A soda machine in Johnson Hall was damaged, contents and money were stolen.
Nov. 22
Tires were slashed on a vehicle located in Lot 49.

Suspicious Person/Vehicle
Nov. 21
A suspicious vehicle was reported on Massachusetts Avenue
A suspicious person was reported on Campus Center Way.
A suspicious person was reported on Orchard Hill Drive.
Nov. 22
A suspicious person was reported on Infirmary Way.
A suspicious vehicle was reported on Stadium Drive.

Larceny
Nov. 21
An individual in Machmer Hall reported her purse stolen.
Nov. 22
An individual in Chadbourne Hall reported cash stolen from her room.
A tire and rim were stolen from a vehicle in Lot 11.

Traffic stop
Nov. 21
Xiaozhou Liu, 38, of 1004 North Pleasant St. Amherst, and was charged with operating with a suspended license and operating a motor vehicle with a flashing yellow or red light.

Health/safety hazard
Nov. 22
A car battery was abandoned in Lot 49 and removed by Environmental Health and Safety.

Intoxicated person
Nov. 22
An intoxicated individual was reported yelling outside of Webster Hall.

Bulger still favored for UMass president

By Robert W. Troff
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — The forgotten names at the University of Massachusetts this week are Michael Baer and Charles Manning — the OTHER candidates for the UMass presidency.

For months, speculation has swirled that Senate President William Bulger, for years one of the state's most powerful politicians, will take over the five UMass campuses.

But when the school's trustees vote Tuesday at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester, they will have three candidates to consider: Bulger, Baer and Manning.

Baer is senior vice president for academic affairs and provost at Northeastern University. Manning is chancellor of the university system of West Virginia.

But on the eve of the vote, Bulger's path seemed clear. "I would say that it is a done deal, with much assuredness," student trustee John Okray said Monday. "I would be very surprised if William Bulger did not get the presidency."

After emerging from a meeting with Gov. William F. Weld, Bulger and other legislative leaders, House Speaker Charles Flaherty agreed that Bulger seemed to have heavy support among the trustees.

"There's no doubt in my mind whatsoever if they vote on the merit of it that they'll select the Senate president," Flaherty said. "Now, whether or not he'll accept is another question."

"Mostly the conversation centered around visiting professorships and honorary degrees," the speaker joked.

Bulger, however, couched every reply to reporters' questions by saying it was "presumptuous" to assume he would win Tuesday's vote.

"It's a big if. I come from a very superstitious sort of background where you don't buy the booties until the baby is born," Bulger said. "But nevertheless ... I find it a very interesting prospect, certainly worthy of committing all of your energy to."

Over the last few years, word that Bulger was tired of running the Senate has steadily increased at the Statehouse. At various times, rumors put him at Boston College as a professor, in a high-powered Boston law firm or back on Beacon Hill as a powerful lobbyist.

Finally, in May, Michael Hooker announced that he was stepping down as UMass president to the same post at his alma mater, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Immediately, Bulger emerged as the leading candidate to replace him.

Weld offered periodic endorsements, and Daniel Taylor, the trustee chairman, said the Democrat from South Boston was a leading candidate from the beginning.

"I think he's up to the job and I would look forward to working with him quite a bit — if the trustees vote him in on the 28th," Weld said last week.

Okray — a 21-year-old sociology major who attends the UMass-Boston campus, which is in Bulger's Senate district — said Beacon Hill clout was his top concern.

"UMass is dependent on the state Legislature for its funding, and I don't know of a better person to work with the Legislature on funding," he said.

State support for the five-campus system reached $352 million in 1988, before dipping to $271 million during the recession four years later. It now stands at $344 millionThe faculty has dropped by about 300, to 1,200, during the same period.

■ student

continued from page 1

of heroin to him at their place of work, the Classé Cafe in Amherst.

"Heroin kills. It's playing Russian roulette," said Goggins. "Any strength of heroin is enough to prosecute someone who sells it for manslaughter if the person to whom it was sold dies."

Four days after Klate's death, the UMass Police Department searched Ciarametaro's room in Butterfield Residence Hall on a warrant and found evidence of heroin and marijuana, including five glassine wrappers, three razor blades and one plastic straw, according to court documents.

At Tuesday's disposition, two witnesses, who are acquaintances of Ciarametaro, testified for the prosecution. Eliza Smith said she snorted heroin with Klate the night of his death. The other, Adam Turner, said that he traveled with Ciarametaro and his brother Mark to Lynn to buy heroin. In exchange for their testimony, the witnesses were granted immunity from prosecution, according to The Daily Hampshire Gazette.

Mark Ciarametaro, although not accused of involuntary manslaughter, awaits trial for possession of heroin, cocaine and marijuana. At the time of Klate's death, the Ciarametaro brothers were roommates in Butterfield Residence Hall. Twenty–two–year–old Mark has pleaded innocent to all charges, according to the Gazette.

John Ciarametaro was reached at home yesterday, but refused to comment on the advice of his lawyer.

Everyone seems to be "... satisfied with the charges," said Goggins, who hopes Ciarametaro's community service will include speaking publicly about heroin.

"I don't think anybody can be satisfied," said defense attorney Thomas Whitney. "How could anybody be satisfied... What they'd [Klate's parents] really like is to have their son back, and that's not really possible."

However, "... the family wanted him [Ciarametaro] incarcerated," Goggins said.

Ciarametaro was not a candidate for the state prison because of a lack of prior record, his youth and "his appropriate steps to deal with his addiction," explained Goggins.

Ciarametaro received the maximum sentence which may be given through the House of Corrections.

Since Klate's death, Ciarametaro has battled with depression. "He thought about committing suicide," Whitney said. Ciarametaro has also attended drug abuse clinics.

"He made a big mistake," Whitney said. "He'd love to take it back, but he can't."

WOMEN making WAVES

The system works

Last week, former welfare recipient Karen Charbonneau, became Massachusetts' first welfare recipient to take advantage of a new state program that subsidizes companies that hire parents on public assistance.

The Full Employment Program, which is limited to 2,000 jobs statewide, is a key element of the state's controversial welfare reform law, which went into effect on Nov. 1.

Charbonneau is an example of how a welfare mother can successfully enter the workforce.

She is among the 1 percent of Bay State welfare recipients who have four–year college degrees. She found a job after taking a position as an unpaid intern with the Boston digital photography studio.

Under the Full Employment Program, 318 subsidized slots in Boston will be available this fiscal year. Companies must apply to the Department of Transitional Assistance to receive the subsidies, which are available to any business that creates a new, full–time post for a mother or father on welfare. The stated will then match them with a qualified recipient.

Smart spending

Twenty seven year–old Margot F. Duzak's goal in life is to eventually purchase a condo.

To do so, this gift shop manager has developed a way to save her money and to spend wisely.

Duzak, who makes $27,000 a year, currently has $33,000 in savings ($23,000 of which is in stocks) and no monthly debt. She pays $615 a month in rent and $133 a month for car insurance.

How does she do it all? Her parents paid her way through college and, at graduation, bought her a car. On her 23rd birthday, she bought herself a new, $14,000 Honda Civic in cash.

Duzak shops with coupons and never uses the ATM machine. When she uses her Citibank credit card, she pays it off almost immediately.

On payday, she deposits her check and, thinking about what she has planned for the next several days, takes out just enough to cover her expenses. She doesn't go back to the bank until she has just one dollar.

"I have this fear of going into debt," she says. "I always managed to save my money and try and pay cash for everything," she said.

Prenatal counseling

Psychologist, Deborah Issokson, a licensed psychologist from Watertown, guides her pregnant clients—many of whom, she says, feel frightened, alone and overwhelmed—through the complex issues surrounding pregnancy.

Issokson, who trained in California, described her practice as "regular old talk therapy with visualization, birthing plans and discussions of birth problems, as well as pregnancy and loss."

The women she helps include mothers–to–be who are new to the community and want to meet other pregnant women. She also helps women who are frightened about their first labor and delivery, and who have lost babies in childbirth or who are weeks overdue.

"Women are not programmed about our bodies being strong enough to give birth," she said.

Don't miss the boat!
Write for the Collegian

HUGE SAVINGS!

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

T-Shirts • Sweatshirts • Shorts • Hats • Children's Clothing

New Merchandise From Famous Makers Added Daily

Champion, Gear For Sports, University Square and others!

University OUTLET Store

Lower Level Student Union/Convenient Parking In The Campus Center Garage

Hours: Monday - Friday 9:30am to 4:30pm

Savings Up To 50% And More!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Marni E. Heffner Managing Editor Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor

Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosaria Navarro Classifieds Manager
Like A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the Village Squeal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

President nominee has a dirty past

Tomorrow the Board of Trustees will make a decision on who will be the next president of the UMass College system. Since the process began, Senate President William Bulger has been the front runner for the job. The problem I have is that there are so many things Bulger has done in the past and present that are questionable. To just give him a job without real review is wrong.

Bill Bulger is an autocratic leader who leads through intimidation, blackmail and influence peddling. In 1978, James Powers had Bill's brother, Whitey, taken off the payroll of the Suffolk County Court. Whitey was a custodian at the court and had been on an unpaid leave for nearly seven years.

This wasn't a major political move. Bill had just became Senate President. To get revenge on Powers, Bulger saw to it that he and his staff didn't get raises for five years.

In 1982, Bulger tried getting a job for a friend's son, Governor's Council Sonny McDonough, as a clerk in the Boston Housing Court. According to Bulger, Judge George Daher had promised a job to Sonny, but according to Judge Daher, McDonough was vastly under qualified for the job and hadn't even graduated from High School.

What was Daher's punishment? In the following fiscal year, and ever since, the Housing Court has received no funding from the Senate, and Daher's salary was cut $2,500. At the same time the court's power was totally diluted.

This raises an important question. What will Bulger do if he has opposition to one of his cronies getting hired at the University? Could a single campus get punished for disagreeing with the President? Bulger, in the past, has taken his anger out at a senator by taking funding away from a college in that person's district.

During a confrontation with Senator Paul Harold of Quincy, Bulger stepped down from the president's podium, walked up to Harold, and put his finger in to Harold's chest and said, "You know that money for Quincy Junior College? It's gone." Funding for Quincy was cut in half.

Directly against UMass here in Amherst, Bulger held up funding for the Mullins Center in a committee because of a disagreement with former Speaker of the House, George Keverian.

Bulger, during the busing problems in South Boston, was staunchly against it. He and others were crying that the papers should print the crime statistics for black neighborhoods, saying it wasn't safe for whites to go there. During some of the toughest of the demonstrations, Dick Leviton of WEEI radio said he heard Bulger blame the "Jewish media" for the problems in South Boston with busing.

Again fueling some speculation that Bulger is less than politically correct, he used anti-Semitic toned language to attack Alan Dershowitz and Harvey Silvergate when they attacked Bulger's friend for a District Court Judgeship. Dershowitz and Silvergate suggested all Bulger nominees get held up for positions until the investigation of 75 State Street is over.

Bulger, to protect his South Boston from blacks moving in, held up the strengthening of the Fair Housing Commission. This would have given the commission the power to protect peoples' civil rights. Bulger lobbied hard, and according to Representative Diane Wilkerson, asked people who were committed to her not to come to the vote, and they didn't. Since those infamous days, Bulger has had to answer to no one. It is his South Boston constituency that elects him to the Senate.

In 1980, a Vice President at First National Bank made a disparaging comment about Bulger. Word got around quickly, and a Board of Directors meeting was called to figure out what to do. There was a lot of fear because the senate was about to vote on an important piece of banking legislation, and if they made Bulger mad it might have gotten voted down.

At first they were going to fire the V.P., but that was too drastic. Members of the Board of Directors ended up going to a fund-raiser and giving modest donations. It's not known if Bulger would have killed that bill, but this does illustrate what fear can do.

In 1987, Tom Finnerty was hired by Ms. Teebagy, a 75- year-old woman, to get the rest of her family to sign a paper freeing her to sell a piece of land on Vernon Street, Boston. Unfortunately, all her family members weren't able to sign the paper on time, and the initial deal worth $220,000 fell through. At the same time, across the street from this sight a major housing project was going to be built.

Finnerty is Bulger's former law partner, and all this land was in Bulger's district which he would have to know if the project was going in. It would be this group that would buy the land for $30,000 less because Finnerty didn't get the job done. In this same deal, Finnerty fronted Bulger's part of the investment of $49,900. According to Bulger, this money was owed to him by Finnerty.

But why was this money owed? That is a question still not answered to this day. So this old lady with wolves breathing down her neck was forced to sell. How much money Bulger and Finnerty made is not clear because I could not find anything on the resale of the property after Bulger's group bought it.

75 State Street was where Harold Brown was going to build a big building, and to make sure the project went through he bought Tom Finnerty. Finnerty sued Brown for $1.3 million for back legal expenses when he didn't get paid quick enough. Brown sued claiming he had been extorted out of $500,000 that went to Bulger. Actually only $240,000 went to Bill, which according to Finnerty was an advancement for legal work done for the Quirks family.

Yet, amazingly no records show of Bulger going to court at all. Three Attorney Generals found no cause for a trial. Brown settled out of court for $200,000 and Finnerty won. There's a question in my mind. Why would Brown sue for extortion if it wasn't true? Maybe Bulger didn't know. I think it was put to Brown like this: If you don't drop this, you won't do business in Boston any more. That's the kind of fear Bulger can create without ever being there.

James Michael Curley and Bill Bulger are nothing alike. They are often compared, but the major difference is when Curly left office he was poor because all he wanted to do was help the people. When Bulger leaves office I doubt he'll be much less than a millionaire.

While researching for this article, I spent many hours going through over a hundred articles about William Bulger and his brother Whitey. In retrospect, Bulger's one redeeming value is his loyalty to his family and friends. His brother Whitey's faults are his, and should not be pinned on or held over Bill's head. And the only last two questions to be asked is: Did Bill tip his brother off of the indictment to get him out of Boston and save his hide? And who's going to write the book on Bulger's life once he's out of the Senate? It will be a great one.

Joseph Fountain is a Collegian staff member

Jason Fountain

The ups and downs of gift giving

That dreaded season is upon us again. You don't need a calendar to tell you it's time to start buying gifts. Department stores are opening earlier and closing later in an attempt to capitalize on our tradition of giving gifts during the holiday season. What was originally a time of happiness and closeness has become as commercial as the companies who encourage it.

It's about time we take back the most wonderful time of the year and restore it to what it once was.

Over the years we've lost a lot of the meaning behind the gift giving season. Now, the season amounts to nothing more than a big headache. Who gets what? How much can I afford to spend on her? What will we do if he surprises us with a gift? Oh no, we forgot the mailman again!

The stress that accompanies the holiday alone should push us in the direction of change. It seems to me that for all the time and effort we invest, the end results fall quite a bit short of what they should be.

I have a hard time remembering many of the gifts I received as recently as last year, yet people probably agonized over what to get me and spent a good deal of money in the process. We have to ask ourselves whether the holiday season, as it is, is really worth all the fuss.

I realize the traditions we've established are rooted deeply in the core of society and to change them is next to impossible, but I also think it's time we take a serious look at our motivations for keeping with those traditions. The act of giving a gift is something that should be enjoyed and encouraged. When a gift is given merely to get someone out of the way, the act loses most of its significance, amounting to nothing more than a waste of money. What had originally been a good idea is now just a token gesture.

People talk about the holiday spirit, of which giving gifts is an integral part. What we are actually doing is purchasing the gratification that helps us to enjoy the season and losing sight of the actual gift giving act in the process. Most people don't buy gifts because they really want to, but because it is impossible for them to enjoy the holiday season without doing so. Society has been forcing us into these "generous" acts for as long as I can remember, and it seems no one has really even noticed.

People talk about the holiday spirit, of which giving gifts is an integral part. What we are actually doing is purchasing the gratification that helps us to enjoy the season and losing sight of the actual gift giving act in the process.

Mark McGrath

To change the established trend is impossible, because it would require everyone involved to agree to stop giving frivolous gifts. If some were to continue, then everyone would be unhappy. The givers would be upset at not receiving, and the non-givers would be embarrassed for not having given anything back. We are stuck in an irreversible cycle.

I'm not trying to say that gift giving is bad, but I am saying that the manners and motivations of gift giving have some very evident flaws. If every gift was given from the heart and out of pure generosity, then there would be no problems, but unfortunately, that is not the case.

To get away from the trend, we should first consider what constitutes a good gift. The amount of money spent has nothing to with the quality of a gift. To buy an expensive gift shows nothing more than that a lot of money was spent. The best gifts, it seems, cost very little money at all.

A hug is a precious gift, yet it costs nothing. Neither does a compliment, but both can do a world of good for their recipients and can be given over and over again with the same results. Little gifts like these are overlooked in our society. If you want to know the truth, I'd take a hug over a fruitcake any day.

Giving these "little" gifts lifts everyone's spirit, whether it is an old lady on the bus or your mother. Given frequently enough, they can help bring a general spirit of happiness to a season which has been growing further and further away from that ideal.

This holiday season, don't let the advertisers tell you what would really make your loved ones happy, make your own judgements. If those choices aren't expensive or aren't commonly accepted as good gifts, don't sweat it. At least you can take comfort in knowing it is a gift given in the true sense of the word.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

WELL, YOU'VE GOT AN INTERESTING MANUSCRIPT ON THE OJ CASE, BUT UNFORTUNATELY YOU DIDN'T PLAY A KEY ROLE IN THE TRIAL.
Blockbuster Books
Marcia
Johnny
NEITHER — DID OJ
©1995 THE BUFFALO NEWS

Letters to the Editor

Articles defame a great leader

To the Editor:

In reading through two of Mr. Hussein Ibish's columns, which appeared in the Collegian this November, I was struck by the amount of effort which the author undoubtedly invested in penning his articles.

The image of Mr. Ibish paging through history books (pamphlets?) of questionable objectivity in order to defame a dead man whom the rest of the world, including the leaders of the Palestinian and Arab people, regard as a champion of peace, is quite sad. Printing two such articles in the Collegian is an exercise in poor judgement.

Rising above a point by point refutation of Ibish's (largely false) accounts of the "crimes" of Yitzhak Rabin and the State of Israel, the fact that such Arab leaders as Yasir Arafat, Chairman of the PLO, Hosni Mubarak, President of Egypt and King Hussein of Jordan travelled to Israel (and Jerusalem!) to publicly pay their respects to Mr. Rabin, indicates their esteem for the late Prime Minister.

These Arab leaders clearly recognized Rabin was a man who shared responsibility for laying the foundations of a new Middle East which will be safer for both Israelis and Palestinians, our brothers and sisters, as well as those of Mr. Ibish.

Dan Holin, Director, Department of Public Affairs
Samuel Schwartz, Academic Affairs Officer
Consulate General of Israel

Employees deserve pay increases

To the Editor:

More than 2500 union employees at UMass are still working without a contract. We are its lowest paid, hardest working employees: the secretaries, store clerks, technicians of the University Staff Association and the food service, laborers, and maintenance workers of AFSCME.

University administrators spout ad nauseam politically correct rhetoric about commitment to diversity and opposition to racism, sexism, anti-Semitism, homophobia, ableism. Yet they offer an economic package that does nothing but confirm their hypocrisy surrounding that most pervasive -ism: classism. We now do the work previously done by two or more employees.

We watch our co-workers get laid off. Our jobs increase, not only in volume, but in complexity and responsibility. Many take second, even third jobs to survive. Some are one paycheck away from homelessness.

We are the people who have been typing their memos, answering their phones, processing their paychecks, emptying their trash, cooking their lunches and cleaning their toilets without a pay increase for over four years. We are their poorest employees, but they care not at all, offering an economic package substantially less than what the other unions signed into contract.

UMass faculty average $60,680; $1,167 weekly. After working 12 years at UMass, I take home $352 per week. How long has it been since they have lived on that? Can they imagine supporting a family on $352 a week? Yet they wonder why their secretaries don't put on happy faces or why janitors forget to empty their trash. We are tired of Spaghetti O's for dinner every night, and worn out from night jobs at McDonald's.

Over the next three years, the faculty will receive a 9.5 percent salary increase, amounting to an additional $5,765 annually, $110 weekly. professional staff will get 9.75 percent. UMass has offered USA just a 5.5 percent base adjustment, which means my salary will increase just $25 per week. Why is it that the people who need the most are being offered the least?

Members of USA and AFSCME are the most diverse group of employees on campus — of many races, ethnicities, religions, sexual orientations and abilities. What we share is our low morale, depressed economic status and our anger at the injustice we are receiving from UMass. We want to see some of that commitment and support they are forever mouthing directed toward negotiating a fair and equitable contract.

Barbara McGlynn
Journalism Department

Actions speak louder than words

To the Editor:

On the Nov. 19 edition of the campus news show "UMass Update" on UVC TV-19, I presented a report on multiculturalism at the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. The report was more than seven minutes long, unusually lengthy for a television news piece. The reason for the exceptional length was because of the inflammatory nature of the subject.

For the report, I interviewed more than eight Collegian staffers with opposing viewpoints and varied opinions, and for the sake of "journalistic objectivity," I tried to voice all of the viewpoints that had been presented to me. I attempted to avoid editorializing, and the bulk of my report was presented by Collegian staff members in their own words.

The aftermath of the broadcast of my story was, quite simply, hell. I was descended upon by my supervisor, Collegian staff, student leaders, ALANA students, random people I had never spoken to before in my life. White Collegian staffers accused the report of being biased toward disgruntled ALANA students, and that I had not allowed leadership at the Collegian to fairly defend allegations of racism. ALANA students, many of them also Collegian staff members, told me I had "sold out," and my report did not even come close to presenting the harsh reality of racism at the Collegian. So much for "journalistic objectivity."

My job as part of a campus news organization is not to make judgements about the issues I am reporting on. My job is to present the issues, and as many sides of the issues as I can. It is your job, UMass students, to pick up on the issues that are important to you, make your own judgements, and act accordingly.

White students, if you feel minority students are misunderstanding you, then talk to them and try to clear up the misunderstanding. Ask yourselves if you are doing anything to encourage misunderstanding. ALANA students, if you feel you are being misrepresented, take action. Write for the Collegian, send in editorials, join an active organization such as the Black Student Union or Student Government Association. All students, make your voices heard and get people to listen.

This is your campus. The Collegian is your paper, and these are your organizations. If you are unhappy with them, do something to change them. If you don't, nobody will hear you complain except yourselves.

Helen Hac Seung Hong
Amherst

Conservatives will hurt this country

To the Editor:

On Nov. 20, an article titled, "When will they learn" by Matthew Pugh was published. "They" meaning liberal people. Matthew Pugh is extremely conservative. His article was anti-liberal and pro-Newt Gingrich. In the article, Mr. Pugh described an "unstoppable train of prosperity" which the conservative platform offers America.

Matthew Pugh's article was full of ignorance. The article arrogantly displayed many self-centered conservative views. The conservative platform has no regards for the consequences of the drastic cuts it wished to make. If financial aid is cut, then this country is not longer the "Land of Opportunity." Instead, this country becomes the land where the wealthy are the only people that can afford an education.

In Matthew Pugh's "land of opportunity" everyone who gets a job can make it in today's world. This in not the case. Jobs that pay well are not readily available to college age people. Most of the jobs that are available to college students pay five to eight dollars per hour. It is impossible for a college age person to pay living expenses and a school bill on this amount of earned money.

In the past, the government made a decision in the interest of the country to fund education. Education does not bring poverty and crime. Ignorance does. If the average American can't afford an education, then the "unstoppable train of prosperity" will only be selling tickets to the wealthy upper class. It will be a society where the rich get richer and the poor go nowhere.

Today's conservative platform is thinking of me, me, me, now, now, now. It has no regards for the future consequences. America deserves a chance to become the greatest country in the world once again.

To do this, America must be a land of "equal" opportunity. Matthew Pugh's article suggests that Americans jump on the coattails of the conservative platform. The conservative platform offers opportunity to only those who can afford it. Don't jump on the coattails of ignorance.

Kahlin Clark
Amherst

A lecture series idea

To the Editor:

It is not unusual to find the STPEC student advisor bursting with excitement as he drives his car and beats on the dashboard about some secret information that very few other people know concerning The Beatles.

Recently, on one of these drives he attempted to initiate a discussion of this kind, but unfortunately made no attempt to gage his interlocutor's interest in the subject upon which he was soon expounding. He suggested that the University community might benefit from a class or seminar wherein he would organize and enunciate upon his vast store of accumulated knowledge in reference to this topic.

As well as being a valuable service to the community and providing a forum for the study of a significant cultural event, a lecture series of this type might keep him from continuing to sound like a broken record each time I catch a ride in his car.

Brian Morgan
Northampton

Arts & Living

AIDS poster exhibit to bring awareness

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Five College Sexuality Education Committee will present "Visual AIDS," a traveling exhibition of international AIDS posters in Wheeler Gallery on the University of Massachusetts campus. The exhibition, which opens tonight at 5 p.m., will coincide with World AIDS Day on December 1.

The theme of "Visual Aids" is the tension between erotic and anti-erotic approaches to life in the Age of AIDS, as reflected in contemporary responses to AIDS–related issues such as safer sex, research funding and social tolerance.

The exhibition, which was put together by Professor James Miller of London and Ontario, represents over 50 countries, creating awareness of cross–cultural responses to AIDS.

The posters reflect the social and sexual attitudes of their diverse sources: national and local governments, gay action groups, international health agencies as well as churches and private charities. The posters are further deconstructed into the concepts of death, defiance, desire and dissent.

In addition to the posters collected by Miller, each campus site will also exhibit a portion from the "Beyond the Names Quilt" project. Several will offer viewers participatory opportunities to create images of their own or to respond in other ways. Winners of the annual Smith College "Safer Sex" poster contest will have their posters displayed at Smith. In addition, undergraduate UMass students from the graphic arts will contribute images for the UMass site.

According to the committee, "The main object of the exhibition is to heighten public awareness of the AIDS crisis and to deep compassionate concern for people living with AIDS by illustrating how people all over the world are coping with the epidemic."

The exhibit will be on display from November 28 to December 12 at Wheeler Gallery. Wheeler Gallery is located in the Central Residential Gallery.

~ MOVIES ~

De Niro & Pesci a sure bet in Scorsese's Casino

Stone shines in Scorsese's latest flick; time runs out for Johnny Depp in 'Nick Of Time'

By Laura Stack &
Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Staff

CASINO
Directed by Martin Scorsese with Robert De Niro, Sharon Stone, Joe Pesci
Playing at Mr. Forms Four

There is no better vehicle to use to unveil the brutality behind the money-strewn and marquee-illuminated strip of Las Vegas than the mob. And, no better man to make these revelations than Martin Scorsese.

Scorsese's capability to authentically portray the gory days when gangsters reigned supreme remains undaunted. With Casino, his directorial prowess reaches a new level of bravery and mastery in the genre.

The mysticism behind the mob is dispelled as this movie reveals the internal destruction and downfall of the Kansas City mob in Las Vegas.

Purchased with money stolen from the Teamster's Union, the mob makes its fortune from skimming money off the top of the casino's monthly earnings — no questions asked. To insure that there be no interference with their steady siphoning of money, they install men they can trust into positions of power at the casino.

That is where Sam "Ace" Rothstein (Robert De Niro) steps in. He's smart, he's quick and he knows how to run a casino. Ace's job is to keep an eagle's watch over the entire gambling complex.

Ace's compulsive behavior keeps him on top of the business at the casino, that is, until he falls in love with someone who proves to be the bane of his existence — a trashy ex–hooker named Ginger, played by a gritty yet vulnerable Sharon Stone.

In her best performance yet, Stone exceeds her own limits of talent in her daring depiction of a woman who's sole reason for living, and loving, is money. Although she can't shake her feelings of devotion to a slimy pimp (played by James Woods), or her habits of drinking and snorting coke, she marries Ace for his gift of a million–dollar safe deposit box full of jewelry and money.

While Ace provides the brains behind the casino's operation, a ruthless and psychotic Joe Pesci provides the brawn. He's Nicki Santoro and though he may be short and speaks with that squeaky little voice, he racks up the biggest death toll.

Nicki and Ace are childhood friends, but like every other relationship in the movie, theirs deteriorates when Nicki develops his own agenda in the desert, which clashes with Ace's.

De Niro centers the movie, as he is engulfed by Ace's persona. The stress he feels is tangible, as highlighted by a scene where his periwinkle leisure suit perfectly matches his trusty bottle of Mylanta, from which he takes frequent sips.

COURTESY BRUCE W. TALAMON

Johnny Depp is in a race against time in Nick of Time.

The usage of music in Casino is one of the most effective in film today. Unlike films that sell themselves on their soundtracks and let the music dictate the movie, it is obvious that the songs in Casino were carefully selected to reveal insights to the characters' personalities and the plot.

Though criticized for its amount of violence, Casino doesn't drown in its own bloodbath. It is not as mentally disturbing as it is physically uncomfortable to watch, and it is also utilized effectively. The types of violence are also fairly basic in terms of gangster films (no horse heads, though), and carefully spread out over the entire film.

It is fair to challenge Scorsese by saying this film is similar to his Goodfellas, because that great success set the precedent for gangster films such as Casino. He must have something a little better than luck, though, to hit the jackpot twice. A (Laura Stock)

NICK OF TIME
Directed by John Badham with Johnny Depp, Christopher Walken, Charles S. Dutton
Playing at Amherst Cinema

Johnny Depp became a teen heartthrob in the '80s with "21 Jump St." From there he went on to prove himself as a reputable actor in Edward Scissorhands, What's Eating Gilbert Grape? and last year's Ed Wood. But can Johnny Depp become an action hero?

In Nick of Time, Depp plays an unlucky accountant whose daughter is kidnapped by Christopher Walken. Unless Depp assassinates the governor, who is campaigning at a L.A. hotel, Walken will kill his daughter.

Christopher Walken, still maniacal despite a cheesy moustache, forces Depp from his white collar, pencil pushing job into a world of corruption and murder. What Depp soon finds out is that everyone he runs to for help is in on the assassination — everyone but the lowly shoe–shine man, played by TV's "Roc," — Charles S. Dutton.

The plot is thin and the characters are rehashed from every other political–crime thriller much like John Grisham novels– turned movies. The only unique and interesting key to the film is that the plot is unravels in real time: Depp has an hour and a half to kill the governor and the audience has an hour and a half to see how he handles his predicament.

Alfred Hitchcock fared much better tackling real time with his 1948 classic Rope than veteran director John Badham. To Badham's credit, however, Nick of Time does have some fresh ideas.

Depp's character is timid and stiff. He doesn't possess the traditional qualities of an action star. Even Keanu Reeves in Speed was able to come across better as an action hero than Depp. As Edward Scissorhands and Ed Wood, Depp was able to shine and capture his character. He works best as a unique individual, not a replicated hero.

Nick of Time does not have enough excitement to satiate the action movie viewer ending ambiguously, offering the possibility for a sequel. A sequel that, hopefully, will never surface. C– (Justin Daniel Smith)

Auto Glass Center
American & Foreign
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
A CARSTAR Collision Repair Center
79 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(Only Mile from UMass Bus Route)

Rabbi Debra Orenstein
Teacher of Judaism, spirituality, and gender studies at the University of Judaism in Los Angeles; popular lecturer; and editor of Lifecycles, a book addressing issues of Jewish Women in religious life.
will talk on
Thursday, November 30
Hillel House
388 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
FREE
4pm - "Creating Your Own Jewish Rituals"
7:30pm - "Judaism and Sexuality"
Sponsored by UMass Hillel, UMass Judaic and Near Eastern Studies Department, Chabad and KOAH (a program of the United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism)

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
THEY WORK 545-3500

Judies
Munchie Madness
Monday - Friday 2-6
$2 Price Munchie Menu
Lite-Weigh Potato Skins $6.99 $3.50
Basket of Sweet Potato Fries $4.99 $2.50
Fried Cheese and Onion Rings $5.95 $2.98
And More!
51 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst • 253-3491

• Haircutting
• Tanning
• We Take Your Hair Seriously.
REGENCY HAIRSTYLES
253-9526 • 189 N. Pleasant St.

BEFORE YOU GO INTO DEEP STUDY MODE, CHECK OUT THESE LAST MINUTE OPPORTUNITIES AT THE CAREER CENTER:

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns THE UMASS CAREER CENTER Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

• Campus Interviews for December and Spring Grads
C.W. Costello & Assoc., Programmer/Analyst Interviews: December 1
Jarvis Airfoil, Manufacturing Engineer Interviews: November 30
Polaroid Corp., Process Development Engineer Interviews: December 1
Turning Point Software, Software Engineer Interviews: November 30
U.S. Postal Service, Requirements Analyst Interviews: November 30
These are OPEN SIGN-UPS. If you are an active Job Line User, CALL TODAY! For more information, contact Lisa Vickery, Employment Options Office, Career Center, 545-6261.

• Spring Co-op and Internships for Sophomores, Juniors and First Semester Seniors
Cigna (Accounting, Corporate Communications, Systems)
Mass. Municipal Wholesale Electric (Engineers)
The National Zoo (Wildlife Researchers, Exhibit Guides - All Majors)
Pratt & Whitney Aircraft (Training Department, Business)
Orion Research (Biology and Chemistry fields)
GE Plastics (Mechanical Engineers)
It's not too late to spend the Spring semester gaining valuable work experience. Contact the Field Experience Office of the Career Center, 545-6265.

• ACTIVE JOB LINE USERS - TIME TO UPDATE YOUR REGISTRATION DISK AND BEGIN HEARING ABOUT FANTASTIC SPRING INTERVIEWS
- Enter your ANTICIPATED spring class schedule on your registration disk
- Drop by the Career Center for a few minutes AFTER DEC. 1 and we'll quickly upload your new information
- Call the Job Line to hear spring recruiting visits and start signing up!
Many Companies have mid-January deadlines.
The Job Line is YOUR key to great employers. GET ACTIVE!
Contact Lisa at 545-6261 if you are not completing an undergraduate or graduate degree this year and haven't registered for The Job Line.

• REMEMBER THE CAREER FAIR, FEB. 14 AND THE CO-OP FAIR, FEB. 15 10am - 3pm, Campus Center Auditorium.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Come to Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority open rush party Wednesday night Nov. 29th 10pm 8pm to 10pm. All university women welcome. Freshman intelligized. Come celebrate the holidays with us for a couple of hours. 3C Nutting Ave. (Sorority contact Genya or Lee 549-7649)

CRAFT BAZAAR
Fall Craft Bazaar Hampshire College. Thurs. Nov. 30, 9:00-5:30

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Iota Gamma Upsilon invites all University women to end of the semester rush. For more details call 549-7504.

3-4 senior grad students looking for house/apt in Amherst area for Spring semester. Call 549-9919

University Productions & Concerts! We need YOU! Come see what concert production is all about at our general committee meeting in the campus center tonight at 5:00 in room . Come Get Involved!

AUTO FOR SALE

BLUE '86 SUBARU
86 Subaru Fits wheel drive. Brand new brakes, muffler, water pump. $1,200 o.b.o. Call 582-9109

EMPLOYMENT

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $315-$375/week working to save the environment with Mass Jobs. Casual, fun atmosphere. Call Jenna at 256-6434.

Exotic Dancers Flexhours. No exp. 413-536-0502

Travel Abroad and Work Make up to $25-$45/hr teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S.Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

We want you Unique liquor related product. Retail is for $100. Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location your profit $37,400 first year! 941-756-9001

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn Big money. Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Big dorm size fridge $130 or bo. Call Kalina @ 665-5093

STEREO EQUIPMENT
Used/reconditioned rack systems and separate components. Buy/sell/trade. Large selection, friendly advice warranteed and great prices. Stereo/video exchange at Jackson's Free Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Open Sundays only, 9-5. Other days call 256-0941.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

PERSONALS

My girls- You guys rock my world. I feel empty when I can't be with you two and I think ridiculous thoughts about Yael's Grave. But I have a premonition that the icicle melts in my dreams that linger. But really, I love you guys. Why should I blame him? for the frilled my days with misery. Love, William Butler

Jens S I've taken you on a roller coaster ride, who's your big baller-can you decide? Soon you will know who I am, One last hint my name means the same as our baby Pam. Sigma Love ?????

To all my crazy table dancing sisters Good thing those things were sturdy

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7942

ROOM FOR RENT

Available 1/96 Room in 4 bedroom/Balchartown prefer female $281+. Jennifer 253-0676

One bedroom in a five bedroom house. Smoking OK. $270 per month. 256-4295.

One bedroom in vacant two bedroom apartment as of December 22 until January 25th. Call Kalina at 665-5093

Room for rent on bus route, all utilities included. Male or female. $768 per month. Available Jan 1. Call Nina 253-7741

Room for rent Northampton on bus route 1,2 bedrooms available. Only $237.50 584-2146

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located (17) mile to UMass and center of Amherst, beautiful 3 bedroom, 2-1/2 bath condo at Amity Place. Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen, and great sunset views. Must be responsible,cat-loving non smoker. $475.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3866

Roommate wanted non smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month. On bus route. Start Jan 1st. Call Anne 253-1605 heat & hot water included.

Roommate wanted to share apt in Mill Valley. Heat & hot water incl. 253-1402.

SERVICES

Free financial aid! Over $ billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. FS0012

RESUME

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union. 545-2771

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $245 r/t California $175 o/w Europe from $229 r/t Cheap airfares to S. America, Asia, Africa, Middle East and Australia. Call (413) 587-0901 Air Tech Now England

Free Travel Spring Break 96 Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group! Travel free! Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800 426-7710

Port Antonio, Jamaica Oceanview cottages, great neighborhood. Walk to beach, restaurants, dancehall clubs. $150/week 413 367 9350

JAMAICA
Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril. $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

Winter Break Special Kilington week $769 Intrasnasti? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

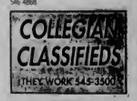
TO SUBLET

Apartment to Sublet Jan 1st Putnon 1 bedroom heat/hot water included $505/mo. 549-9180

WANTED TO RENT

We are two females looking for 2 rooms in which to rest our heads from Jan or Feb 1st (prefer Feb) until June 1st. Will also consider 1 Large bedroom. Apt or house is fine. Bus route would be ideal. Please call Stacy or Renee evenings at 546-4868.

The University of Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
First on your list and ours



HOROSCOPE

BY JEANE DIXON

Aries (March 21-April 19): Growth and expansion are today's keynotes. Pay attention to what new business allies have to say. Any financial agreements should be put in writing.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): An enthusiasm for your work will gradually yield to more romantic impulses tonight. Take the initiative in both departments. Greater harmony is possible on the home front.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): An enthusiastic attitude will help counter negative forces at work. Your personal finances improve in ways you had not expected. A job change is best postponed. Play for keeps in both business and romance.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Decisions must be made. It pays to see both sides of an issue. Do not sacrifice yourself to someone else's wishes. Intelligent compromises can be worked out. An older person plays a key role.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Your leadership can get a derailed project back on track. Co-workers welcome your optimistic attitude. Meet a career challenge by asking questions and assessing all available information.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid taking on too much at once. Positive developments connected with your career or finances are predicted. Be on the lookout for innovative new concepts.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone may give you a hard time about a project. However, those who know your work, value it. Others will be swayed by your convincing arguments.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A stimulating, unconventional acquaintance adds a dash of spice today. Do not neglect business matters. Numerous tasks and errands need handling. Learn to delegate routine chores, freeing yourself for creative work. Romance delights you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Smarten up! Be realistic about long-term goals. An older person is willing to pull some strings for you, but progress remains slow. Do not get discouraged. Take the time to make wise decisions.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A change of personnel works to your advantage. Welcome new work assignments, they will give you an opportunity to show off your special talents. Rid your life of negative influences. Guard against impulsive spending.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Enormous psychic energy will be released around you today. Spend quality time with children. You need to think before acting on a money matter. Let go of silly doubts. Take care of home repairs.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Business trips should be profitable this week. One-on-one meetings are vital when negotiating contracts. Be suspicious of fast talkers. Wait until all the facts are known. You find yourself enjoying simple pleasures tonight.

The Daily Collegian, we bring you the weather

HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS?

If you want to earn some money during your holiday vacation, come to work for the Barnes & Noble College Division. To determine which of the more than 30 college bookstores in Massachusetts and New Hampshire will be closest to where you will be spending your holidays, please call Barnes & Noble Regional Office at (508) 934-6430.

Full and part-time jobs, immediate hires, flexible scheduling, and store discount up to 35%, friendly work environment.
We are an equal opportunity employer.

BARNES & NOBLE COLLEGE DIVISION

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

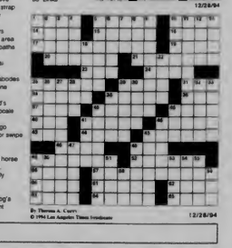
ACROSS
1 Give off light
5 Flavor
10 Famous Lahr
14 Lacoste or Lacorne
15 More than pleasingly plump
16 Bluish green color
17 Churchill Downs, for one
19 Club fees
20 Stations
21 Brag's pride
23 Haggard title
24 Playthings
25 Serpentine stone
29 Humed
31 Biblical pronoun
34 Western wear
36 Harrowing
36 Antique auto
37 Flute
38 Track types
39 Jockey's wear
40 Affirmatives
41 Saddle strap
42 — Door Johnny
43 Heim tim
44 Church area
45 Steam baths
46 Jockey Dey et al.
48 Money
49 Alpine abodes
52 Nasty one
56 Fasten
57 England's Derby locale
60 State
61 Way to go
62 Broke or swept alert
63 Sassy
64 Spirited horse
65 Enough, poetically

DOWN
1 Watchdog's comment
2 Pencil part
3 Farry-tale beginning
4 Boohoo
5 Calm
6 Take advantage of
7 Through
8 Grass mountain
9 Comes on stage again
10 Wrongly
11 Rider
12 Regretful one
13 Ice— Russian news agency
18 Pricey
22 Kingfisher kin
25 Toss the line
26 Reads studiously, with "over"
27 Equine exerciser
28 — a boy!
29 Fry quickly
30 Important point
32 Hägar's wife
33 Links
35 — d'oeuvre
36 Track types
39 R-V connection
41 Blarney area at 17 Across
42 Mixed greens
45 Appeared
47 Worn
48 Overplay a part
49 Applaud
50 Own
51 Tea drinker's portion?
53 Winning margin at Belmont
54 Victor's cry
55 Conductor Akiro
58 "Peggy — Got Married"
59 Stitch

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	T	A	G		I	D	E	A	L		P	O	M	P
C	O	D	E		N	O	P	E	S		O	R	I	O
A	Q	A	R		W	E	S	T		T	E	L	L	E
R	A	M	B	L	E	R		E	S	S	A	Y	E	D
E	N	D		I	O	N		R	I	C
C	O	L	L	I	A	T	E	D		R	O	D	O	R
A	L	A		D	O	G	O	T		E		M	E	T
P	I	N	T		R	I	F	T		S	O	R	E
E	V	E	R	T		S	I	T	E	S		U	S	E
R	E	D	O		C	E	M	E	N	T	E	D
		P	A	R	S	E		L	I	T	E
D	E	C		W	A	L	L		S	N	A	G	G	E	D
E	P	I	C			V	I	L	L	A		A	L	S	O
A	R	I	A		E	M	S	E	E		T	O	N	I	E
R	E	S	L		L	E	A	D	S		E	W	I	S

12/28/94



CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character , space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

"EVERY DAY, A NEW COLLEGIAN TO READ. LIFE JUST CAN'T GET BETTER THAN THIS DAVE."

"IT SURE CAN'T MARC, IT'S EXCITEMENT IN ITS PUREST FORM."

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

PEOPLE KEEP TALKING ABOUT OPENING MORE WILDERNESS FOR DEVELOPMENT
WE SEEM TO UNDERSTAND THE VALUE OF OIL, TIMBER, MINERALS, AND HOUSING, BUT NOT THE VALUE OF UNSPOILED BEAUTY, WILDLIFE, SOLITUDE, AND SPIRITUAL RENEWAL.
WE NEED TO START PUTTING PRICES ON THE PRICELESS.
YEAH, IF OUR WOODS ARE WORTH A TRILLION BABILLION, THINK WHAT ALASKA IS WORTH

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

IT'S FREEZING IN HERE!! WHY CAN'T WE CRANK UP THE THERMOSTAT?
CONSUMING LESS FUEL IS BETTER FOR THE ENVIRONMENT AND IT SAVES MONEY
OH.
AND BEING COLD BUILDS CHARACTER
I KNEW IT!!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

ROGART'S KEEPING SANDRA STENART PRISONER IN ONE OF THESE ROOMS!
MY SPIDER SENSE--TINGLING LIKE MAD! THIS IS THE ONE!
IT'S LOCKED! AND HERE COMES GONJO!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

ACTUALLY, I'VE BEEN DOING SURPRISINGLY OKAY. I'VE CONVINCED MYSELF ALMOST STABLE RIGHT NOW.
SO... YOU'VE BEEN SO BUSY THAT YOU HAVEN'T HAD MUCH TIME TO CONTEMPLATE YOUR LIFE?
I GUESS... (GRUNT) YOU DO YOU GUESS THINGS? IS IT THAT OBVIOUS OR ARE YOU JUST BRILLIANT?
NO, BRUNO, YOU JUST REFUSE TO ADMIT TO YOURSELF THAT LIFE IS THAT SIMPLE. YOU LIVE TO STRUGGLE.
AND NORMAL PEOPLE DON'T DO THAT, DO THEY? YOU SURE YOU GOT THE RIGHT PLANET? THIS IS EARTH, THIRD FROM THE SUN.

Milkweed By Neil Golden

SUNRISE... AND ALL IS AS IT SHOULD BE IN A TOWN CALLED MILKWEED.
THE CHILDREN ARE SOUND ASLEEP...
THE ANIMALS ARE AWAKENING, FROLICKING ABOUT IN THE DEWY... Um... What are you guys watching?
"THE MATING RITUALS OF THE BACK-BILED PLATYPUS."
THAT'S DISGUSTING!
NOT REALLY.
IT'S A COMEDY.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

THIS SUCKS... I HATE DRIVING HOME FOR THANKSGIVING
ALL THEIR FAMILY MEMBERS TOO HATE TO SEE... OVER-STUFFING YOURSELF WITH FOOD...
HEY! SHUT UP DOWN THERE!!
IF ANYONE'S GOT A RIGHT TO BE BITCHING I'D SAY IT'S ME!

Generation X By Chris Lehman

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11
DING!
ALL RIGHT, WHO'S THE LAZYBUTT WHO CAN'T TAKE THE STAIRS TO GO UP ONE FLOOR?!!
I AM, BECAUSE I HAVE WEAK KNEES FROM PLAYING FOOTBALL!
BUT I MEANT "LAZYBUTT" WITH THE UTMOST RESPECT! OW! OW! OUCH!
PON!
PON!

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My mother was sitting at the kitchen table crying. She says she's on vacation all next week but she's so broke she can't afford to leave the house. She says her job is making her poor.

Mom shuts off the lights around the house, and she uses as little soap as possible to wash things. At the supermarket she's not relaxed... she's serious.

She started to cry again when I told her I love her.

I said, "Mom we're not poor. We're too broke to be poor. We'd need another $50 bucks a week to be poor... We're free."

She said, "Yeah... free to be poor." I was confused but I felt much better. She has a way with words.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Mike MacLean
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reily
Production Supervisors ..... Marc Dionne
..... Kathryn Gracia
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Cheese	Cod w/ Crumb Topping
Kielbasa Grinder	Spaghetti
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Grilled Cheese	Cod w/ Crumb Topping
Hummus Veggie Pocket	Spaghetti

Wednesday

LUNCH	DINNER
BBQ Pork Sandwich	Southern Fried Steak
Ravioli Alfredo	Mandrin Chicken
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Savory Stuffed Peppers	Sesame Noodles
Ravioli Alfredo	Mandrin Chicken

Thursday

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Jambalaya
Brocci.Casserole	Chicken Margherita
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Golden Burger	Penne w/ Tomatoes
Brocc. Casserole	Chicken Margherita

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 least heard lines on E.R.
by Brian Marchionni

10. "Damn it Jim! I'm a doctor!"
9. "Ehh... let 'em die."
8. "Eww yuck! He's got blood and gunk all over him!"
7. "I should have been a plumber."
6. "Whew! I can barely see straight. I shouldn't have taken that extra hit."
5. "Why don't you run back to 90210 honey?"
4. "Anyone here understand what we're saying?"
3. "Tell the ambulance to wait... Ross and Rachel are fighting!"
2. "Dr. Benson that was soooooo sweet of you."
1. "Operation shmoperation! Get me a beer."

UMass Division of Continuing Education

· January 2-25 ·
Winter Session 1996

· More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
· Noncredit workshops
· Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
· Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register Now!

Call for a free course catalog - (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education · University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

After failing to get the waiter's attention using conventional means, Bruce brought out the flare.

Quote of the Day

"Everything else you may grow out of, but you never recover from childhood."

–Beryl Bainbridge

Sports notice
There will be meeting for all sports staff members on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian offices. All staff members are required to attend. Anyone interested in writing may also attend. If you are unable to attend, contact Candice Flemming at 545-0719.

Sports

Associated Press Top 25 – Men's Basketball

1. Kentucky	6.Georgetown	11. Iowa	16. Stanford	21. Cincinnati
2. Kansas	7. Memphis	12. Duke	17. North Carolina	22. Oklahoma St.
3. Villanova	8. Mississippi	13. Missouri	18. Louisville	23. Michigan
4. Arizona	9.Connecticut	14. Utah	19. Maryland	24. Arkansas
5. UMass	10.Wake Forest	15. Virginia	20. Georgia Tech	25. Arkansas

Minutemen face No. 1 Wildcats in Great Eight

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

It's late November and for the Massachusetts basketball team that means only one thing: playing the top ranked team in the country.

Two years ago in the Pre-Season NIT semifinals, UMass knocked off then No. 1 North Carolina 91-86 in overtime. Last year in was the reigning national champion Razorbacks who came calling in the Tip-Off Classic and toppled from their top ranking by being blown out by the Minutemen 104-80.

Now comes round three: the preseason number one Kentucky Wildcats in the Great Eight.

This will be UMass' first regular season contest after going 1-1 during their exhibition schedule which saw them beat Dinamo of Russia 105-75, while falling to Converse All-Stars 94-89.

The standout Minuteman in each of those contest was pre season All-America selection, Marcus Camby. The 6-foot-11 junior center from Hartford, Conn. averaged 27.5 points per game during the prelude to the season opener with Kentucky.

UMass will need strong backcourt play out of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso, as well as quality time off of the bench from freshman Charlton Clarke.

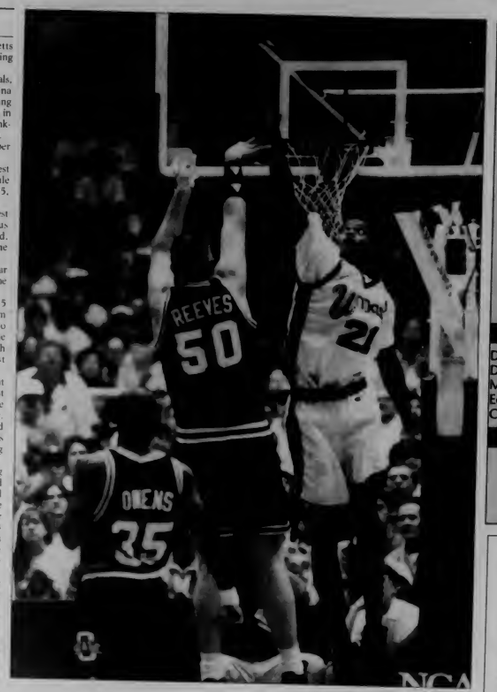
Travieso led Minutemen guards averaging 16.5 points per game including 7 for 17 from three point land. The Thayer Academy grad also has dished out six assists per game. Padilla, the starting point guard, averaged 7.5 apg along with six points per game. Clarke played only against Converse with seven points and two assists.

Rick Pitino's 'Cats overcame an early 11 point deficit in their first regular season game against Maryland. UMass' next opponent, to trounce the Terrapins 96-84 in this year's Tip-Off Classic. Senior transfer from Washington Mark Pope scored a game-high 26 points on his way to the game's MVP. Senior Tony Delk added 21 points including 10 in the last 1:12 to hold off a Maryland run.

There is good reason for Kentucky's top billing as they are loaded from top to bottom, their second unit capable of starting on most programs around the country. Junior forward Jared Prickett was the key ingredient in the Wildcats 67-64 victory over UMass during a neutral site battle in the 1993-94 season. Prickett logged 17 points and 15 rebounds that night. In the Maryland contest Friday, he played sparingly with five points on two-of-three shooting from the field.

Kentucky also added two key freshman in their current recruiting class, signing Massachusetts native Wayne Turner as well as Ron Mercer. Both played significant minutes in the Tip-Off Classic as they played a combined 30 minutes while contributing eight points to the Wildcat cause.

These teams have met three times already in '90s with Kentucky coming out on top each time. The Wildcats won both contests in the '91-'92 season, once at Rupp Arena during the regular season and later eliminating the Minutemen in the Sweet Sixteen of the NCAA Tournament 87-77. They met again at the Meadowlands in February of 1994 as Kentucky squeaked out a 67-64 victory.



COURTESY OF MEDIA RELATIONS

Marcus Camby and the men's basketball team take on the No. 1 Kentucky Wildcats tonight at the Palace at Auburn Hills, MI.

No. 7 UMASS Minutemen VS No 1 Kentucky Wildcats

At The Palace Aubrun Hills, MI 9:00 PM

Marcus Camby

Mark Pope

Probable Starters

Dana Dingle	F	Antoine Walker
Donta Bright	F	Ron Mercer
Marcus Camby	C	Mark Pope
Edgar Padilla	G	Tony Pella
Carmello Travieso	G	Derek Anderson

On The Air

TV: ESPN
Radio: WHMP 99.3
Mark Vandame, Jack Leaman

Volleyball loses to Rhode Island in A–10 tourney

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Thanksgiving break is usually a time of rest associated with family and turkey, not with digs, spikes and blocks.

However, for four Atlantic 10 volleyball teams, including UMass, last weekend's holiday was not a time to relax, but a time to compete as the A-10 Volleyball Championships were held in the Curry Hicks cage Nov. 24-25. After a season of intense competition, it was George Washington (No. 1), Rhode Island (No. 2), UMass (No. 3) and Virginia Tech (No. 4) who took to the court to fight for the conference championships. In the end, it was GW who won it's third consecutive title. Here's a recap of the weekend's action.

Rhode Island 3, UMass 0

This pairing had a familiar ring to it, as UMass (24-10, 15-5 in the A-10) looked for a repeat performance of last week's late season victory over the then No. 1 Rams. In the Minutewomen's final regular season match, they defeated URI in a four-game heart-pounder 15-11, 14-16, 7-15, 15-12. This win was the icing on the cake coming after UMass swept Xavier and Dayton thus earning a spot in the A-10 Tournament.

Rhode Island entered the match after beginning their season with a record opening A-10 win streak of 16 matches. Their season culminated in a 25-6 overall record, 17-3 in the A-10. From the start, URI held the upper hand, taking it to UMass winning the first two games 15-8 and 15-5 respectively.

"We never got into a rhythm in the first two games," said Minutewomen coach Bonnie Kenny. "They dominated us at the net. We needed to establish the middle. Lesley Nolan and Giza Rivera started to do this, but we couldn't finish them."

UMass came alive in game three and according to Kenny, played better defense, but still couldn't finish the rams as they lost 16-14.

Rivera, playing in the outside hitter spot led the way for the Minutewomen tallying 15 kills and 16 digs and was named to the All-Tournament Team. Close behind Rivera was Nolan who recorded 14 kills and 16 digs while freshman setter Katie Pearce finished the match with 41 assists and 11 digs.

"I'm disappointed with the way we played Friday," sophomore middle blocker Leigh Ready said. "It would have been something to advance, but I guess we had a good season and hopefully next year we'll be able to take it to the next level."

Although UMass was eliminated from the tournament, they will be able to play "at the next level" last

For Your Information

PIIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Wednesday, Nov. 29

Fill-A-Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill-A-Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545-3327.

Movie — The Jewish Campus Service Corps is sponsoring Dumb and Dumber in the Field classroom at 7:30 p.m.

Table — Hillel is sponsoring a Hebrew Table in the Bluewall at 3 p.m. for students to hang out and speak Hebrew. For more information call 545-1592.

Poetry Reading — The Globe Bookshop in Northampton is sponsoring a reading by Carl Phillips and Timothy Liu at 7:30 p.m. as part of their "Readers and Writers, Live" poetry series. The reading is free and open to the public. For more information call 584-0374.

Workshop — An "Arts & Crafts" Mural Contest will be held in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. For more information call 545-2073.

Meeting — The Student Nurse Association is holding a meeting at 5 p.m. in Morrill 4N 403. The meeting will discuss a blood drive.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 p.m. – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

HIV/AIDS Awareness — Peer Health Educators are providing information about HIV and AIDS at a table on the Campus Center Concourse.

Blood Drive — All blood donors are invited to donate from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. on the first floor of the Campus Center. Those people who have never donated blood before are encouraged to try.

Videos — UHS is sponsoring three films, Non, Je Ne Regrette Rien (No Regrets), AIDS: Changing the Rules and Safe for Life on HSCN Channel 17 at midnight.

Dancing — Hillel House is sponsoring Israeli dancing at 7:30 p.m. For more information call 549-1710.

Speaker — The Sylvan Cultural Center is hosting Dr. Denice Clark-Ware as part of the Women's Week of its first annual "ALANA Women and Men Empowerment" Series at 7 p.m. in the basement of Cashin.

Thursday, Nov. 30

Fill-A-Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill-A-Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545-3327.

Workshop — The W.E.B. Du Bois Library is sponsoring a workshop on obtaining Internet resources related to Latin America at 9 a.m. Contact Lori Mestre in the Reference Department at 545-6851.

Movie — "Erendida" will be shown in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. For more information call 545- 2073.

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel-chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542-5896.

AIDS Quilt Making — GLBT faculty, students and staff are encouraged to make quilt squares for the UMass AIDS Quilt in preparation for World AIDS Day. The quilt making will be held in the Mary Lyon classroom at 7 p.m. For more information contact The Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 p.m. – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

HIV/AIDS Awareness — Peer Health Educators are providing information about HIV and AIDS at a table on the Campus Center Concourse.

Blood Drive — All blood donors are invited to donate from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. on the first floor of the Campus Center. Those people who have never donated blood before are encouraged to try.

Videos — UHS is sponsoring three films, Common Threads, Tom and Safe for Life on HSCN Channel 17 at midnight.

Lecture — Rabbi Debra Orenstein is speaking on "Creating Your Own Jewish Rituals" at 4 p.m. at Hillel House with a second lecture on "Judaism and Sexuality" at 7:30 p.m. For more information call 549-1710.

Lecture — PAWSS is sponsoring a lecture on "Interpreting the War: The Debate Over Vietnam" by Prof. Marilyn Young of New York University at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Lecture Hall at Hampshire College. The event is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information call 582-5519.

Friday, Dec. 1

Candlelight Walk & Vigil — The Stonewall Center is sponsoring a walk and vigil for World AIDS Day. The walk begins at 6 p.m. on the Student Union Steps and ends at the Wheeler Gallery for a national Dimming of Lights. Followed by musical performances and an open forum for personal reflection at the Wheeler Gallery. For more information contact The Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Fill-A-Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill-A-Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545–3327.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center. For more information call Utama at 256–8482.

Lecture — "Firewalking" at 7 p.m. is taught by Barbara Weinberg at Oasis on Main Street in Amherst is free and open to the public. To reserve space please call 256–4995.

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel–chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542–5896.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $5.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

HIV/AIDS Awareness — Peer Health Educators are providing information about HIV and AIDS at a table on the Campus Center Concourse.

Blood Drive — All blood donors are invited to donate from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. on the first floor of the Campus Center. Those people who have never donated blood before are encouraged to try.

Videos — UHS is sponsoring three films, Other Faces of AIDS, AIDS Wise, No Lies and Safe for Life on HSCN Channel 17 at midnight.

Performance — Student Valley Productions is presenting an "Orgy of Talents," a showcase of talents from around the valley at 9 p.m. The cost is $3 with a student ID and $4 for all others.

Religious — Hillel House will sponsor Shabbat Services led by Prof. Julius Lester at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. For more information call 549–1710.

Notices

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five–College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10 p.m. – 11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the CRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8 p.m. – 10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis. 323–6330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1–800–750–2016, The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. A variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1–800–696– 7752.

Domestic Exchange — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding information sessions on Tuesdays and Wednesdays throughout November and December in Campus Center Room 811, from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. For more information, contact the Domestic Exchange Office, E– 26 Machmer Hall, 545–5351.

Absentee Ballots — Absentee ballots for the Dec. 12 Amherst Special Town Election are available in the Amherst Town Clerk's office on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Wednesday 8 a.m. to noon. For more information call 256–4035.

Campus Police Log

Vandalism
Nov. 25
Three greater Amherst area teenagers caused extensive damage to the Graduate Print Shop in the Fine Arts Center. Two juveniles were arrested on Nov. 25. A 16–year–old was arrested for assault and battery on a police officer, breaking and entering, malicious destruction of property valued over $250, disorderly conduct and larceny under $250. A 13– year–old was arrested all the same charges, other than assault and battery. A third arrest was made later.
Nov. 27
There was damage to stalls in a bathroom in the Fine Arts Center. Beer cans were stuffed in the urinals.

Traffic stop
Nov. 22
Todd C. Friedhaber, 28, of 10 Sheppard Dr., Holyoke, was arrested for an equipment violation and operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Larceny
Nov. 22
An individual reported money stolen from her wallet in Mather Career Center.
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 11.

Animal complaint
Nov. 22
Two dogs were removed from Whitmore Hall.

Fire alarm
Nov. 22
A small fire in a seat cushion in Rand Theater was extinguished.

Suspicious person
Nov. 22
There were skateboarders in the Campus Center Garage.

Annoying behavior
Nov. 22
Staff in Prince Residence Hall, who were having trouble with a resident, requested assistance.
Nov. 23
There was a prank 911 call made to the Amherst Police Department from the Mullins Center practice rink.
Nov. 26
There were complaints about fireworks on Clark Hill Road.

Noise complaint
Nov. 25
Guests on the sixth floor of the Campus Center were making noise.

SPRING 1996
UMASS SORORITY RUSH REGISTRATION
LOOK FOR OUR TABLE AT THE CAMPUS CONCOURSE!
"BE UNIQUE, GO GREEK!"

COLLEGIAN DRIVER WANTED TO DELIVER ON CAMPUS.
• NEED CAR
• CALL RYAN AT
545-3500

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Chris Conner • Photos by Romy Ribski

What is the first issue incoming University of Massachusetts President William Bulger must address?

"The facilities are falling apart — the library, the classrooms. I think the dorms are disgusting. In one of my classes, I read a lot of stuff on Hooker giving money to the other universities in the system. I think we need to concentrate on the main campus."
SHARON LOVETT
junior, legal studies
Framingham

"I think one of the main reasons Bulger has been brought in is to bring in money into the University system. I think the state has constantly thought public education to be a lesser concern. Most of where we're lacking can only be solved with money from the state. I think that if Bulger is successful in doing that, then I think the quality of life will improve in all five universities in the University system."
DAN CASTELLANO
senior, marketing
New York City

"I think we should deal with not letting what happened in housing this past semester happen again. It really screwed me up in the first few weeks of the semester. This could go for classes as well. I know people who can't even get into classes for their major."
THERESA ROGERS
junior, anthropology/linguistics
Wellfleet

"I guess having undergraduate and graduate students have the same services available. It seems like undergrads have more access to some services than graduate students do. We pay the same amount of money, we should have the same privileges."
IDRIS STOVALL
graduate student, mathematics
Harlem, N.Y.

"Right now, I think financial aid. Seriously. I thought the American government thought that education was the most important thing, yet they are cutting back."
GREGORY MAK
sophomore, english
Hong Kong

"I guess financial aid. I think it's important, especially for students of color because, of course, they say we come from poorer backgrounds. Basically, people say that black students need to go to college, but yet we don't have the money here for the education we should be getting."
ANGEL GREENE
first–year, undecided
Boston

New program targets illiteracy

By Jack Farrell
Collegian Correspondent

Most people take for granted simple tasks such as reading a book or writing a letter, but 877,000 adults in Massachusetts are currently not trained in these rudimentary skills. To fight the problem, Literacy Action sponsored "Share the Magic: Buy a Book for Literacy" at 32 booksellers throughout the Pioneer Valley this past Saturday.

The group is a collaboration between booksellers, writers, readers, and adult learners.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Education, in addition to those who are functionally illiterate, there are 1.2 million people who cannot read and write at a high school level.

These statistics mean that nearly half the adults in the Commonwealth are not able to acquire today's more complex jobs. With a substantial push for people to get off welfare, many people seeking jobs may not have the reading and writing skills necessary to maintain a self–sufficient income.

"Nationally, we spend about $300 million on adult literacy and several billion dollars on job training and

Turn to ILLITERACY, page 8

Attention all current, former and future
CARTOONISTS:
The Managing Editor's desk is over run with dozens of student comics that have already run in the Collegian. If you want to keep your cartoons please come by the Collegian and pick them up. There is a file in the Cartoonist's Mailbox for you to go through. All student comics that have not been claimed will be thrown out one week after the last day of the semester.
If you have questions, please call Marni E. Helfner, Managing Editor at 545–0719.

Because all-nighters aren't always spent in the library.
VISA
It's everywhere you want to be.
© Visa U.S.A. Inc 1995

Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists. LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares. Call for great Spring Break packages.
HELLER TRAVEL
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berkley
Boston MA 02115 → 1-800-843-1544 - Toll Free

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Rental Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $49.95
North Amherst Motors
CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

Rabbi Debra Orenstein
Teacher of Judaism, spirituality, and gender studies at the University of Judaism in Los Angeles, popular lecturer, and editor of Lifecycles, a book addressing roles of Jewish Women in religious life will talk on
Thursday, November 30
Hillel House
388 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
FREE
4pm - "Creating Your Own Jewish Rituals"
7:30pm - "Judaism and Sexuality"

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief
Marni E. Heffner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager
James P. Gunley Production Manager
Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager
Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara Mik Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor

Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Palestine's real meaning of peace

It is my belief that the leaders of the Palestinian people are telling the world what they want to hear in order to receive the territorial concessions of the present negotiations. Leaders of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, such as Abu-El Aymayan, have been quoted as saying, "We have to accept the deal and wait for a change in the circumstances that could lead to the elimination of Israel." This clearly suggests the Palestinians will not merely be appeased with the current agreements regarding land. We have to ask ourselves if we are being duped into believing what we wish to believe: peace in the Middle East.

The Jerusalem Post quotes a member of the P.L.O. executive committee on March 16, 1994, Abbas Zaki, as saying, "It is only a cease-fire until the next stage." If the Palestinians plan to continue their struggle after the peace settlement is finally reached, than it would seem pointless to arrive at any settlement at all.

Israel seeks to gain peace with her Palestinian neighbors through the issuing of land to serve as a Palestinian autonomy. That is the agreement that is being worked out currently. If the Palestinians are not willing to abide by the agreed concessions, than they should not be granted any land to begin with.

Arafat's current rhetoric is only a cover of his underlying plan to conquer Israel in it's entirety. Everyone knows a leopard can never change his spots, and so holds true to Yassir Arafat.

Guy Chayoun

The infamous Yassir Arafat, who is supposedly willing to hold to the agreements of the peace accord, has publicly stated, "Peace for us means the destruction of Israel. We are preparing for an all-out war, a war which will last for generations." Also, "The goal of our struggle is the end of Israel, and there is no compromise." To me, this does not sound like a champion of peace, but rather a man who is willing to lie to Israel and the world in order to obtain any tract of land possible.

Arafat's current rhetoric is only a cover of his underlying plan to conquer Israel in it's entirety. Everyone knows a leopard can never change his spots, and so holds true to Yassir Arafat. One time he cried for an armed struggle, only to realize his people were militarily incapable of achieving their objective. He cries for peace because he receives land for pleasing the hopeful ears of the world.

There is nothing stopping Arafat from returning to his armed struggle upon building his people's military prowess in order to complete the goal of "the destruction of Israel" that he established at an earlier time in his career. In fact, the signs are evident that the Palestinians will eventually return to this struggle for Israel.

The Palestinians that reside outside of the occupied territories, such as Lebanon, do not feel the current concessions meet their needs in the slightest. The commander of the P.L.O. forces in Lebanon, Lt. Col. Mumir Magdah, stated on Oct. 8, 1993, "We will not lay down our weapons until complete liberation...sooner or later we will throw the Zionists into the sea." This faction of the P.L.O. that exists on Israel's northern borders will stand for nothing less than the expulsion of the Jews from Israel completely.

On one hand, Israel talks with one faction of the P.L.O. that represents the territories, willing to make peace. When simultaneously, another faction of the P.L.O. that centers in Lebanon outright refuses any peace agreement. It is a catch 22 situation that will not end until the Palestinians unify. The peace settlements that are now occurring will potentially lead to a temporary era of peace between the two peoples. The Palestinians will not let this peace last long.

Only a few of the Palestinian leaders will publicly agree to the concessions of the current peace talks. Are we talking to the right leaders? Do these peaceful leaders really control the Palestinian people? These leaders have already let the cat out of the bag that they wish to eventually obtain all of Israel. Even the great peace maker Yassir Arafat has voiced this aspiration. The question the Israelis and the world need to ask is who do we trust? I also dream of peace in the Middle East, but not with terrorists. They're notorious for deceit.

Guy Chayoun is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Caucus idea misinterpreted

To the Editor:

"Be it resolved that the Undergraduate Student Senate support the establishment of a Women's Caucus." This one piece of proposed legislation has caused more turmoil in the Student Senate than any other piece presented this year. It has divided the Senate into two camps, one that supported this motion and the opposition. It has made examples of individuals who tried to create more representation and painted them as "well meaning white men," hypocrites, and worst of all having underlying motives in some sort of conspiracy.

One Collegian columnist stated she felt intimidated at the meeting. I can only guess that her overwhelming wave of intimidation struck her after her little tantrum of shouted accusations and pointing fingers. Not only was this display of irrational behavior, childish and embarrassing, but it made the entire Senate look like spoiled children. If she had taken a moment to look at how she was behaving, she might have offered to help in the construction instead of storming off in a huff.

The same Collegian columnist spoke with me the next day, bluntly telling me I am not allowed to speak of women's issues. I was unaware that the "campus restructuring" had her as Reichfuhrer of Censorship. Poor taste was the banner she marched under, preaching to me on how, as a white man, I should never speak on women's issues. I was told my racist views were shown when I mentioned the Everywoman's Center. She deemed the Everywoman's Center a racist organization filled with white women who don't represent her because she is a woman of color. Who is she to tell anyone what is allowed and forbidden? Racist and not? What she failed to acknowledge was the Everywoman's Center was not involved as an organization, only one of the members expressed interest.

A letter to the editor written by another Senator made reference to the fact "boys" were involved in this motion. In all of her wisdom she neglected to notice she cut off her nose to spite her face. The Centurion of a Grrrl's group here on campus, her organization blew off any involvement in the process three times. This person made it evident that unless her little militant faction was heading the formation of the Caucus, she would have nothing to do with it. Just to keep everything on the level, the makers of the motion prefer the term "men."

The most delicious of the editorials was written by a woman who has taken it upon herself to rally the women of the Senate around her. She called a "Women's meeting" after the Nov. 15 Senate meeting, forbidding men to attend. After her failed attempt, she called and badgered some of the women Senators who did not participate in her little rally. This is also the same woman who has only cosponsored one piece of legislation. The saying "It's easier to destroy than create" applies here. It's too bad she feels the need to belittle the work of other Senators when all she does is hide behind her pen.

It makes you wonder, why would all these women be against a Women's Caucus? It has nothing to do with who the Caucus would be representing, it has everything to do with the other Caucus in power. Isn't it ironic that these women, with the exception of one, are members of ALANA? This is why they didn't want the measure to pass. It would interfere with nine ALANA seats. It was in their best interest to shoot the Women's Caucus down, with the addition of other caucuses. It would reduce the amount of ALANA seats in the Senate. How sad is the state of campus politics when women cast aside a motion to empower those who currently do not have a voice? It has been said "everything has a price." I guess the price of their allegiance was the $70,465 budget of the office of ALANA affairs. This is rationalized by them when they compared it to the non-existent budget of the non-existent Women's Caucus.

In response to the rumors others had been working on this issue for some time is unfounded. It was never even mentioned to anyone before the infamous meeting. The SGA President said nothing of it when she presented her Legislative Agenda, nor had anyone else made any other kind of progress on the issue. A sad excuse for a pitiful decision to vote the motion down.

The underlying motives were said best by Senator Ramsey, "to create more representation in the Senate." This movement will not stop, the student body has expressed their desire for a Women's Caucus and many have pledged their support. I would like to make it evident to the campus that our movement will not be impeded by these "potholes" along the road to equal representation.

David Gafney
SGA Senator

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If at all possible, please come down Sunday afternoon to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial

MORE REQUESTS FROM EXTREMISTS FOR YOU TO TESTIFY THAT YOU ORDERED THEM TO KILL SOMEBODY ON YOUR BEHALF.
TOLES © UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND. FROFF THE BUFFALO NEWS
God's Junk Mail
SEND THEM MY FREE BOOKLET "THE TEN COMMANDMENTS"

Dissecting the dorm life

I have a friend who studies at home in New York City and always talks about how he is missing out on the campus/dorm experience. He believes a free flowing exchange of idealistic perspectives occurs away from home. In the reality of UMass dorm life, how often does a "meaning of life" type discussion spontaneously occur? Just recently, I witnessed a Sunday night gathering of stressed out souls unfold into a very interesting discussion. It went something like this:

"I was sitting on the bus ride home, and it was the first time in months I had a chance to be alone with my thoughts. Without the attachments of daily life on my mind, I was able to piece together memories that had only been glimpses in the past few weeks. It was a beautiful experience."

"Experience, it's amazing how much experience three years of college will bring you. There are so many things I did sophomore year I would never do now. I bet most students would wish they were freshman again if they could keep the knowledge they have now!"

"Experience is a relative concept. Take Orchard Hill for example. The average Orchard Hill student definately does not represent the average UMass student."

"What are you talking about? What does that have to do with anything?"

"Orchard Hill is a good learning environment, I'm not sure but I bet it has the highest average GPA. On the other hand, Orchard Hill students tend to be more sheltered than students on the rest of campus."

"Sheltered! What do you mean?"

"By sheltered I mean less exposed to traumatic events."

"Wait a minute, I guess by rule I am sheltered if I live in Orchard Hill, but I was born and raised in NYC!"

"I'm speaking generally."

"Isn't that representative of a prejudicial attitude?"

"The reputations of the living areas give students some background information to base their decision on where to live."

"Come on! It's bad enough when we come to this University we are judged by race, gender and economic background, is it also necessary to be judged on what type of architecture we chose to live in?"

"Obviously I'm not arguing on behalf of racism or sexism, but Architecture says a lot about personal taste. Just by the way Southwest is designed, it is obvious there will be many distractions and it will attract a certain type of student. Look at Orchard Hill, every building is cemetrical, every room is cubicle, everything is uniform. This presupposes a conforming attitude. The diversity of the Central buildings attract more diverse students."

Bryan Schwartzman

"I can't believe you buy all this stuff! So, do the buildings affect how we behave towards one another?"

"Definitely!"

"Why do we say hello to a stranger passing in the hallway, but not on the way to class or in the campus center? What arbitrary social laws dictate when we can say hello to each other?"

"Good question."

"So, you believe the reputations of the living areas upholds the status quo of the University? I may agree with you, but I say if we work towards diminishing the possibilities of prejudice, and increase the number of hellos said to strangers, this campus might be a happier place."

Bryan Schwartzman is a Collegian staff member.

Trying to strike the perfect pose

I wonder, does anyone ever look back in their high school yearbook or read the backs of the senior pictures they received and regard those messages fondly — without laughing out loud? More importantly, does anyone ever look at those pictures and think they mean something more than posturing and pouting for a cheesy photographer? I am reminded of this memorabilia again because my mother has been begging me to get my senior pictures taken for the UMass yearbook.

"Stay gold, don't ever change, keep in touch, you're the best...." these are all very touching, but pretty empty. People should really become accustomed to saying what they really feel. A more accurate message to a pal would read something like this, "I hardly know you, but since you begged me for this picture that I'll probably regret taking in a year or so, have a nice life and stay gold or whatever."

Do the pictures themselves truly capture the essence of the person you're suppose to remember in ten years or so? I think not, or rather I hope not for my own sake.

I am incapable of taking a good yearbook type picture and I will now illustrate why — I hope you're listening Mom.

First of all, I hate getting my picture taken in any sort of formal set-up (hence the reason why you don't ever see my mug shot in this forum). This process requires colorful blouses, of which I own none. Black and white — that's as loud as I get.

What is a blouse anyway? Sometimes I wish I was a guy just so I could get away with the traditional shirt, tie and sport coat. Once again guys fare much better than women in this process — the only thing they could regret later would be a wide tie.

Worse than the outfit, though, has to be the background settings, which always look oh so natural. I know I always stand by a tree near a stream with one arm perched a branch covered with evergreen, doesn't everyone? Another one of my favorites is the two head shot, one serious puss and one goofy smile, the alien look. I remember in elementary school I begged for the laser background, but my mom insisted on the greenery.

Pictures are never natural, they certainly aren't life-like. I never put my hands near or on my head and look fondly off into space. I never wear blouses that look good on film and brighten up my face. I certainly don't flock to picturesque lakes to sit by and wait for the sun to set for the perfect photo-op.

I can't stand the way photographers try to schmooze with you; "come on now, look like you're having fun" Not going to happen there slickster!

Tara Ruelle

Even if I were to comply with the above mentioned conditions, I just can't smile nicely on demand. I can't stand the way photographers try to schmooze with you; "come on now, look like you're having fun." Not going to happen there slickster! I always end up looking tortured and dazed. My prom pictures are classic, the old no teeth smiles. My mother nearly killed me that night.

I just don't really feel the need to capture every moment of my life on film. You know every time you look back at old pictures and you can't believe the grami mals you were wearing, or how big you got your hair that day. Sure there are some pictures I look back on fondly, but for some reason when I have to dress up for an important event I can't muster the enthusiasm.

I'll end up taking the yearbook picture, my parent's wall in the family room just wouldn't be the same without it. I will however stick to the camera's unfriendly dark shades. I fell prey to burgundy in high school, but I've grown some since then. I'll try to smile pretty for the camera and if there's any question of background, I'm getting the lasers this time.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

Developing Nations

Wednesday, November 29, 1995

Notes from the ruins of Iraq

The world has ended. It has ended for my people, it has ended with the sound of thunderbolts from above. The thunderbolts of the Allied Air Force, may the curse of the orphans and widows of Iraq be upon the pilots of the Allied Air Force.

Basim Rida

The bodies of my near and dear ones are lying scattered on the ground. The ground that they had once planted and farmed is today drenched with their own blood. The ground that once carried the scent of fresh dates when it rained. Although it rains today but the wind carries the scent of the blood of innocents, the martyr's of Fao.

Fao, a village that once was at the southeast edge of Iraq, now nothing in Fao remains three feet above the ground.

I can see the body of Abu-Harris from the window of my jeep, his son Khalid, only seven, is weeping over him. My heart is torn to pieces, for this is the same Khalid who I have never seen crying before. In the name of God, what have they done!

The Almighty seems to have abandoned us too, for the glorious crescent is visible through the storm clouds. The moonlit sky, the realm of the Kingdom of the Almighty has witnessed this crime ... this massacre in silence. I cannot watch this scene from the day of judgement, and so I run away, but I am surrounded by it. There is no escape from this bitter truth.

Never in my life have I ever seen the sorrow I saw on that day on the face of Abu-Harris. It was clear that his last thoughts were of his motherless child, Khalid.

And as I tried to hold back my tears, I could not help but cry at the sight of lady Salima, now a widow crying over the ruins of her home, under which lie buried her husband and daughter.

The house of our ancestors, the house where you and I spent our holidays, the house of my childhood is ablaze, burning like my heart.

But how is it the house of my childhood for I have had none, for years I saw the bodies of the victims of the eight year war come in, and today I myself am in the army, the army of the curse of Iraq, Saddam.

The fires of Fao have engulfed my heart , I am like a madman, a person with no sense of right or wrong, a man with no emotion but one, sorrow.

My only hope is to wait until I reach the front lines, then my brother I will surrender to the Saudis and get away from my sorrow.

This is a translation of the last letter written by my cousin, Basim Rida, the letter provides his account of what remained of Fao when his unit was instructed to start a rescue operation after a bombing run by the Allies. Basim died the following week while trying to surrender, shot by the Allies, dead at the age of nineteen.

This letter was translated by Syed Mohammed Ali Raza, a Collegian staff member.

Egypt holds elections in border area

By Salah Nasrawi
Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — In a new challenge to Sudan's claim to the disputed border area of Halaib, Egypt will conduct balloting in the region during parliamentary elections on Wednesday.

About 4,000 residents of Halaib, which sits along the Red Sea, have been registered to vote in elections for the 444-member People's Assembly, state-run media reported Tuesday. No one from Halaib is running for office.

It will be the first time such balloting will be held in the area since an 1899 treaty made it part of Egypt. The government turned over administrative control to Sudan three years later.

The triangle-shaped region has a population of 18,000 to 20,000, largely nomads with Sudanese roots. It is claimed by both countries and has repeatedly been a source of tension, most recently over possible oil finds and Egypt's accusation that Sudan's Islamic regime supports Egyptian Muslim militants.

A Sudanese Embassy spokesman in Cairo said his country will consider the balloting null and void because Sudan holds its own elections in Halaib.

"The (Egyptian) move is provocative," Sulaiman Abdel Tawab told The Associated Press. "Halaib has been a Sudanese parliamentary constituency and will remain so." A 1899 treaty made it part of Egypt. The government turned over administrative control to Sudan three years later.

The triangle-shaped region has a population of 18,000 to 20,000, largely nomads with Sudanese roots. It is claimed by both countries and has repeatedly been a source of tension, most recently over possible oil finds and Egypt's accusation that Sudan's Islamic regime supports Egyptian Muslim militants.

A Sudanese Embassy spokesman in Cairo said his country will consider the balloting null and void because Sudan holds its own elections in Halaib.

Gunmen assassinate highest ranking general

By Rachid Khiari
Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria — Just days after the president and Islamic militants expressed willingness to talk peace, assailants shot and killed Algeria's coast guard commander.

Gen. Mohamed Boutaghene was the highest-ranking officer slain in nearly four years of fighting between the military-backed regime and rebels who want an Islamic state.

He was shot Monday in a south Algiers market and died en route to the military hospital, the Defense Ministry said. No further details were available Tuesday.

No one claimed responsibility for the attack. The Armed Islamic Group has claimed responsibility for several previous assassinations. Boutaghene, 59, was a veteran of Algeria's 1954-1962 war of independence from France. He also served as military attache in Paris and Rome.

Civil war broke out in January 1992, when the army canceled legislative elections which a Muslim fundamentalist party was slated to win. The war has killed more than 40,000 people.

At his inauguration Monday, President Liamine Zeroual called for a national dialogue with Islamic militants and vowed to establish a pluralistic democracy. Algerian voters defied militants' threats of violence and turned out in large numbers Nov. 16 to elect Zeroual, a retired general.

Zeroual was appointed president two years ago to lead the military-backed government in a three-year transition to democracy.

The Islamic Salvation Front, which was winning 1992 elections before the army canceled the vote and banned the party, has urged Zeroual to open negotiations on ending the war.

On Tuesday, Annouar Haddam, head of the Front's Washington office, said the group had not recognized Zeroual's "transition regime," but he reaffirmed the Front's willingness to negotiate.

Last week, the Front appeared to have acknowledged Zeroual's legitimacy.

The conflicting statements could signal divisions within the group on how to respond to Zeroual's landslide electoral win.

"It defies common sense to judge the Algerian people based on elections organized by a military regime," Haddam said in a statement faxed to The Associated Press in Paris.

Foreign election observers said they found no evidence of fraud or intimidation by authorities during the election.

But human rights activists said there were too few observers to give an accurate reading.

Postal system scrutinized, 8 killed in Nagpur, India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Americans who think their postal system is "snail mail" might consider this: Millions of letters mailed in April in India still have not been delivered.

A strike by thousands of postal sorters working in trains that carry the mail has delayed delivery across the nation. Mailbags have piled up at post offices.

People are seething. One has filed a public interest lawsuit in the New Delhi High Court. After a hearing Monday, the court demanded an explanation from postal authorities within two weeks. In April, the government stopped paying overtime to postal workers, which led to the backlog.

DELHI, India (AP) — At least eight people were killed and 70 injured Sunday when part of a stadium crowded with 40,000 spectators collapsed, news reports said.

A wall in the Vidharbha Stadium in the central city of Nagpur gave way when people rushed in after play resumed after lunch in a cricket match between India and New Zealand, United News of India news agency said.

The crash and an ensuing stampede interrupted play for some time as police and paramedics rushed the injured to hospitals. Twelve of those hurt were reported in serious condition, United News said.

Many spectators fell from a height of 30 feet, Press Trust of India news agency said. Three spectators, including a girl, died instantaneously, and five others died in hospital.

Yassir Arafat,
Chairman PLO

Write about the issues facing

DEVELOPING NATIONS

For more information contact Syed Mohammed Ali Raza 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

Arts & Living

Syrup USA to play at Amherst

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

The streak continues as WAMH brings yet another excellent show to town. WAMH may be just a student run radio station that operates only during the school months, but every semester they consistently bring up and coming acts to town like Small Factory and Versus.

Tomorrow night at the intimate Amherst College Front Room, Syrup USA, Cobalt, 30 Amp Fuse, Pangloss and Shoes For Industry will show off their top notch tunes.

Largely due to the overwhelming success of the band's debut 7-inch single "Joie De Vol," Syrup USA has been one of the most talked about new Boston bands for quite sometime. Featuring Sioux Carmody former vocalist/guitarist for the acclaimed TAANG! band the Swirlies, Syrup USA has less of an edge and more of a pop sound than Carmody's former band who are known for their arty experimentation.

Fueled by an energetic keyboard player Syrup USA churn out poppy, but dreamy tunes nonstop and will keep fans on their feet. They plan to release the followup to "Joie De Vol" early next month, though it will be hard to match the greatness of the debut which is one of the best singles of the year.

Second on the bill is the New York City/Boston band Cobalt. Led by Yasmin Kuhn, Cobalt is one of Queenie's star acts and it is obvious why. Since disbanding the excellent trio Flying Saucer, who recorded for Teenbeat, Kuhn formed Cobalt with ex-members of Antietam and Mercury Rev. After scrapping plans for a Cobalt release on Teenbeat, the band chose Queenie, who have released a 7- inch single and a full length album.

While the top two bands are known for their pop melodies the middle of the show is where the noise and feedback will surface. 30 Amp Fuse who hail from Boston via Nashville have often been compared to guitar slinging bands such as the Replacements and Husker Du. This young band has released one full length and one 7-inch single both on the up and coming California label Darla.

Pangloss, who will play second, are one of the most overlooked local bands around. Based out of Westfield, ("The home of rock legends,") the band has been steadily gaining the recognition they deserve.

Opening the show will be locals Shoes For Industry, an Amherst band who are making a rare live performance. Look for an upcoming album on the above mentioned from Darla Records.

Syrup USA, Cobalt, 30 Amp Fuse, Pangloss and Shoes For Industry appear at the Amherst College Frontroom tonight at 8 p.m. for an all ages show. Tickets are $5 and available at the door. Call Jothan at 584-7412 for more information.

Newest romance novel a page turner

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

JUDE DEVEREUX
The Heiress
Pocket

As one of American's most loved romance writers, it seems that this Jude Devereux can do no wrong. After burning up the bestsellers' lists with Remembrance, Deveraux hits another double punch with her latest offering, The Heiress.

Once again writing about her favorite family, the Montgomerys, the author takes us back to Elizabethan England where courtly nature and chivalry still reign supreme. Although, without money or a title, you're going nowhere.

Jamie Montgomery is such a person. Despite near destitute he is knight, but unfortunately, even that doesn't count for much in this society. His keep is improvished and to boot, he's got a blind twin sister and another younger sister who wishes she was a boy. In fact, Jamie's estate has been so ravaged by his older brother that neighboring peasants eat better than the family.

The one asset that Jamie does have to his credit is his face, a visage that has wooed women all over Elizabeth's court and even had the Queen doing a double take. The other thing he has is the opportunity to escort England's most eligible bachelorette to meet her intended bridegroom.

The Maidenhall Heiress is heir to the largest and richest estate in England. However, no one has ever seen her because her father keeps her under lock and key. Now it's time for her to get married and it's Jamie's task to escort her to her fiancee's home.

So what does one of England's most improvished knights do with such an opportunity? Take advantage of the chance of course to woo away the one woman who could fix his financial woes forever. What Jamie doesn't realize is that it will take more than a pretty face and courtly manners to move this heiress. In fact, none of those things matter to a girl who sees this as an opportunity to finally be free.

Deveraux has a definite way with words and the ability to weave together a complicated plot without being bogged down with wordiness. Nor does she over-simplify the ending so you end up frustrated with the characters.

She makes it easy to sympathize with the characters and although the beginning of the book is a bit misleading, the reader is soon drawn into the story and is unable to stop reading.

Even though this story is a romance, the pages are thankfully absent of large amounts of senseless romantic scenes that often overburden romantic novels and leave the the reader bored to the death after the fourth mention of "heaving breasts" and "bulging codpieces." Sex does occur in this book, but it's kept neatly in the background like subtle music, emphasizing a point but never taking center stage.

Deveraux knows how to make things interesting and how to keep the book going. It is with little wonder why she keeps topping the best-sellers' list time and time again. A

COURTESY HOMESPUN TAPES

Jorma Kaukonen will bring his guitar talent to the Iron Horse tonight.

Jorma Kaukonen to play at Iron Horse

By Ed Hurley
Collegian Staff

It is not every night that one can see rock'n'roll royalty but tonight will definitely be different. The Iron Horse will welcome Jorma Kaukonen, founding member of Jefferson Airplane and Hot Tuna and guitar innovator to its stage tonight.

Kaukonen's career goes back over three decades. While in high school he met Jack Casady with whom he would form both Jefferson Airplane years later and Hot Tuna after that. As well as spending time in his own bands Kaukonen has played with such rock luminaries as Jerry Garcia, Janis Joplin and Jimi Hendrix.

Jefferson Airplane formed in 1965 as a folk-rock band but as the musical tides changed so did the band evolving into one of the most revered psychedelic rock band of the time. Jorma coined the name of the band — it came from a pseudonym he was using at that time. In January the band will get the highest honor for performers of rock music— they will be inducted into the Rock n' Roll Hall of Fame.

In later years, Kaukonen has taken a keen interest in teaching and he has a successful line of guitar instruction video tapes. He is pursuing his interest even further by building a guitar camp and workshop for children and adults. The camp is situated in the scenic Applanation Mountains where Kaukonen now makes his home.

Kaukonen is not a stranger to the Pioneer Valley. He took part in the Guitar Summit at the Fine Arts Center a month ago where he showcased his brand of acoustic blues.

It is likely that Kaukonen will play a lot of material from his recently released CD called The Land of Heroes his first studio effort in eleven years. The album showcases his gift for song writing and playing. Fans of acoustic music will surely love Kaukonen's performance of these songs. Judging from his performance at the Guitar Summit and his musical credentials tonight's performance is sure to be a treat to the ears.

Jorma Kaukonen will play the Iron Horse tonight Nov. 29 at 7 & 10 p.m. for an all ages show. Tickets are $15 in advance and $17 at the door.

World AIDS Awareness Week
November 27-December 1, 1995

VISUAL AIDS

Visual AIDS is an international exhibition that promotes public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS by illustrating how people the world over are coping with the epidemic. The posters reflect the social and sexual attitudes of their diverse sources regarding safer sex, research funding and social justice issues. The curatorial theme of this travelling exhibition highlights the tension between erotic and anti-erotic approaches to life in the Age of AIDS.

Opening Reception: Tuesday, November 28 5:00 - 7:00 pm.
Wheeler Gallery Hours: Monday - Thursday 4:00 - 8:00 pm.

UMASS Panels of the 5-College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt
November 28 - December 14
9:00 AM - 11:00 PM (Monday - Thursday)
9:00 AM - 7:00 PM (Friday)
Graduate Lounge, UMASS Campus Center

HIV/AIDS Awareness Tables
staffed by Peer Health Educators
November 27 - December 1
10:00 AM - 3:00 PM
UMASS Campus Center

AIDS and the ARTS
Wednesday, November 29
Wheeler Gallery 4:30-6:00 PM
tour of the Visual AIDS exhibition with James Miller, Curator and Professor from the University of Western Ontario

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Quilt Panel
Thursday, November 30
7:00 PM - 9:00 PM
Mary Lyons Classroom
students are invited to remember and honor those lost and to create a GLBT quilt panel to be carried at the Candlelight Vigil

World AIDS Day Candlelight Walk and Vigil
Friday, December 1
6:00 PM
from Student Union Steps to Wheeler Gallery
Music, Open Forum and Commemoration of "A Day Without Art"

Visual AIDS is a project of the Five College Sexuality Education Committee and is sponsored in part by the UMASS Arts Council. A portion of the collection will be exhibited simultaneously at each college as a visual backdrop for World AIDS day activities. For more information, please call the University Health Services Health Education Division Office 549-2671 x181

EL ACUÑA
TEX-MEX CANTINA

Don't Be A Conehead!

HEAD ON OVER TO
EL ACUNA
WEDNESDAY NIGHT IS 10¢
WING NIGHT (UNTIL 11:30 PM)
Also . . .
$1.50 Drafts
$2.50 Shooters

Magic Lantern

40 YEARS OF THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT
FALL SEASON - ALL NEW SHOW
AMATEUR NIGHT
EVERY WEDS 8:00 PM

Featuring . . . TOP FEMALE AMATEURS COMPETING
$500 1ST Place
& runner-up prizes
Interested Contestant Call: 283-9275
Free Admission With This Ad
ONLY 30 MINS. FROM CAMPUS!!
Rt. 9 South to Rt. 181 West to Rt. 20 West, 2 Miles On Right
BOSTON RD. • Rte. 20 • PALMER, MA (413) 283-9275
HOURS: MON-SAT 12 NOON to 1:00 AM

Etheridge's album disappoints

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

MELISSA ETHERIDGE
Your Little Secret
Island

Like Bonnie Raitt, Melissa Etheridge is an established and talented musician from an era where the personification of the words rock 'n' roll star came in the form of Bruce Springsteen and John Cougar Mellencamp.

Etheridge is a raw musician who uses her throaty voice and no-nonsense lyrics to say what she wants and then goes after it. With Yes I Am Melissa Etheridge we saw a new and improved woman bent on making everyone see she is happy with who she is. But it seems that with Your Little Secret Etheridge is still trying to pound the fact home and it's getting old.

From sedentary and solid to slithery and sexy, Your Little Secret taps into the new sensual side of the rocker. She is trying to infuse the feeling of the past hit "I'm The Only One" into it's follow up and it's not working. The reason so many have liked Etheridge is for her down-to-earth playing and 80's rock anthems. What would one say if the Indigo Girls suddenly donned negligees and satin baby doll robes? Yeah, their music might be good, but the image throws off any appreciation of it.

With most of her songs spanning over five minutes ("Nowhere to Go," "This War is Over" and "I Could Have Been You") you get the feeling that she's likely to join the new move towards crisp, clean songs with minimal fuss, but they sound overdone and drag on — not befitting the short and sweet seductress role.

No one can say that Etheridge is giving less than 100 percent, nor is her creativity sapped. It just only seems that after her affirmation of character in her last album, you can't help but think that in this one, she's a little lost. B

Collection of essays chronicles past

Alicia Nitecki's Recovered Land, is an illustrated collection of essays that is part memoir and party history.

The book records the author's travels to locations in Poland and Germany where she lived as a young child during World War II.

Nitecki was born in Warsaw to a Catholic family that was active in the resistance movement. After the Nazis conquered Poland, Nitecki and her family were sent to German prisoner-of-war, labor and concentration camps.

In her book, the author revisits the places that have formed her and confronts the past that has always haunted her.

Among those experiences are the 1944 uprising in Warsaw, the Black Forest village where she and the women in her family were taken as slaves and the concentration camps of Buchenwald and Flossenburg where her grandfather was imprisoned.

In 1947, Nitecki went to England as a displaced person and there received a B.A. Currently, she resides in Melrose, and is a professor of English at Bentley College.

Recovered Land marks Nitecki's movement from fear and rage toward fuller knowledge and reconciliation.

— Seema Gangatirkar

Collegian News: [illegible], and knowing is half the battle.

You are not a mooch. But when a hole in your pocket renders you changeless, you reluctantly call the folks collect.

You dial 1 800 CALL ATT.

Your pangs of guilt are minimal.

1 800 CALL ATT always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.®
Always works from any phone. And always gets you the reliable AT&T Network.
Use it whenever you're off campus.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice.℠

AT&T
Your True Choice

® By interstate calls. Promotions excluded.
1-800-COLLECT is a registered trademark of MCI.
© 1995 AT&T

Amherst police take to biking

New program puts local officers in touch with community

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

As of today, two Amherst police officers will be riding around town on bikes day and night.

Chief Donald N. Main announced yesterday that the Amherst Police Department is implementing a bicycle patrol, using bikes donated by the Amherst Rotary Club and Valley Bicycles, Ltd.

"This is another example of the town, the community, area businesses and the University working together," said John Coull, owner of Valley Bicycles. According to the Main, it was Coull who originally contacted him, wondering when the department would start patrolling by bike.

The University of Massachusetts Police Department was "of great assistance actually teaching the officers to ride a bicycle in a police capacity," said Sergeant Robert J. O'Connor, who is responsible for the bicycle patrol.

Last spring, David R. Knightly and Officer William J. Koski attended a four-day training program at sponsored by the UMass Police Department.

"The University is one of the first departments in the area with a bike patrol," O'Connor said.

"You're not as intimidating to the public [on a bicycle]," said Knightly, posed on his bike for local television interviews yesterday. "You're much more quiet ... you have the ability to move around a lot quicker."

Knightly, as well as Koski and alternate Officer Todd Lang, will patrolling the center of town and the outlying areas not usually visited during the walking patrol. Between those officers, there will be someone on bike patrol 16 hours per day, weather permitting.

The officers will be outfitted for a year-round patrol, and will have the ability to do just about everything any other officer can do except turn on those flashing blue lights. However, bicycles have other advantages.

"You see someone raking their lawn in the neighborhood, you pull over and say 'hi.' Normally, they only see the cruiser ..." Knightly said.

"They're going to be in the downtown area, they're going to be in the schools, they're going to be in the apartment complexes ..." Maia said.

He joked that his current officers are "more fit" than those with whom he worked in past years who "couldn't get from the University and back."

The bicycle patrol unit will assist, not replace, the walking patrol in the downtown business district.

Court questions Salvi's ability to defend himself

By Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press

DEDHAM, Mass. — John Salvi is so obsessed with a perceived conspiracy against Roman Catholics that he is unable to help defend himself against charges he killed two people and wounded five others in shootings at two abortion clinics, Salvi's lawyer argued Tuesday.

Attorney J.W. Carney Jr. asked a Superior Court judge to order further psychiatric testing for Salvi, who was declared competent to stand trial in August. Carney said his client's mental health would continue to be an issue.

Salvi's trial is scheduled to begin in Norfolk County Superior Court Feb. 5.

Prosecutors say Salvi, of Hampton, N.H., plotted the Dec. 30 attacks at Planned Parenthood and Preterm Health Services in Brookline out of his fierce opposition to abortion. He pleaded innocent to two murder charges and five counts of aggravated assault in February.

Salvi's attorneys, against his wishes, sought unsuccessfully to have him declared unfit to stand trial during a four-day hearing in August. Carney said Salvi had since exhibited signs of an "active psychosis" that made it impossible for him to aid in his defense.

This apparent psychosis, which Carney said had been observed by a defense doctor, "is of such a nature that the only thing that matters to John Salvi is that the conspiracy that exists against Catholics be made known to the world at large," the lawyer said.

"That's the only reason we're here. That's his only purpose on earth. That is the only reason why he's involved in these proceedings in his mind and that's a product of his psychosis."

Carney said, Salvi also has refused to undergo diagnostic testing. Carney said, because in Salvi's mind, "there is absolutely nothing wrong with him, he has no mental illness whatsoever ... but more than that ... because it's just an effort to poison him with rays in his head."

Carney said he sought to have a psychiatrist with a medical degree, rather than a psychologist without knowledge of medication, examine Salvi. A psychiatrist would be able to offer an opinion about whether Salvi can be treated with drugs, he said.

Any lingering doubt about Salvi's mental health would "haunt" all future proceedings, Carney said. "It's not an issue that's going to go away."

Salvi, handcuffed and wearing a blue sports coat and tie and white high-top sneakers, sat impassively throughout the hearing, often looking at photographers stationed to his right.

At past hearings, Salvi has vigorously tried to distribute long rambling letters about the perceived conspiracy to reporters, forcing court officers to restrain him. The letters later were given to reporters by his attorneys.

Also Tuesday, Carney asked Judge Barbara Dortch-Okara to move Salvi's trial from Norfolk County to Franklin County or elsewhere because of the "absolutely unprecedented amount of prejudicial pretrial publicity in this case."

Carney said frequent stories that have appeared since the shootings had "so saturated every individual in the county" that it would be impossible to find an impartial jury in Norfolk County.

First Assistant District Attorney John Kivlan opposed the motion, saying Salvi had received equal publicity throughout the state, not just in Norfolk County.

Dortch-Okara did not rule on either motion.

Also Tuesday, against defense objections, Dortch-Okara said she would allow Dr. Martin Kelly to be the court-appointed psychiatrist in the Salvi case. Carney argued that because Kelly had appeared at prior hearings as part of the prosecution team, he could not be impartial.

"To use the expert proffered by the commonwealth would make it a sham," Carney charged.

Dortch-Okara also rejected Carney's request for a hearing to determine whether Kelly had already formed an opinion about Salvi.

Speed limit to be raised to 65 on Jan. 1

By Randolf E. Schmid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The speed limit will rise to 65 mph on about 387 miles of highways in Massachusetts after the holidays as the state takes advantage of the elimination of the 55 mph speed limit, a state transportation spokeswoman said.

President Clinton signed a $6 billion road bill Tuesday that will give the states the power to set their own speed limits, starting in 10 days.

But the Massachusetts changes probably won't be made until after the holidays, said Jodi D'Urso, a spokeswoman for the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction.

The speed limit would go up on sections of Interstates 84, 91, 93, 95, 190, 195, 290, 295, 395, 495 and on Routes 24, 25, and 140, officials said.

D'Urso said transportation officials had picked the highway sections after determining whether they could handle cars going the higher speeds.

The White House said Clinton signed reluctantly.

"We don't think there's a persuasive case for raising the current maximum speed limit based on public safety and public health issues," said presidential spokesman Mike McCurry. But, while being "very concerned about highway fatalities," Clinton felt a veto could cost states nearly $6 billion in "necessary highway improvement projects," including finishing missing links in the Interstate Highway system, McCurry said. "Delighted," was the response of D. Gail Morrison of the National Motorists Association who battled for provisions ending the federally mandated speed limits and motorcycle helmet requirements.

Appalled, was the reaction from safety and consumer advocates, who foresee carnage on the nation's roads.

A half-dozen states have laws that raise their speed limits automatically when the federal cap comes off. The 10-day wait in the federal legislation is intended to give them time to change their minds. Other states are expected to raise their limits in the coming months.

With the end of the federal limit, Montana would have no limit at all; the limit would jump to 75 mph in Kansas, Nevada and Wyoming and to 70 in Oklahoma and South Dakota.

The 55-mph speed limit was imposed in 1974 as an energy-saving measure in the wake of the Mideast oil embargo. Highway fatalities declined by nearly 9,000 the following year, prompting safety advocates to hail it as a lifesaver. States were later permitted to set a 65-mph limit on rural Interstates. States that failed to comply faced the threat of losing federal highway funds.

Massachusetts has already raised the limit to 65 mph on stretches of Interstate 95 and Interstate 91 that totaled about 50 miles.

Jim Baxter of the National Motorists Association headquarters in Madison, Wis., said that while the federal speed limit was heavily opposed in the large western states, his group also drew large support from the West and East coast states in its battle to raise the limit.

"Anybody who has driven from Chicago to Miami knows we don't have a 55 mph speed limit," he said.

"But people in urbanized states did suffer from a lot more intense enforcement."

At the American Automobile Association, President Robert Darbelnet said, "While we are concerned with some safety aspects of the bill ... we do not feel passage of this critical legislation could be further delayed."

But consumer advocate Ralph Nader, Public Citizen President Joan Claybrook, and former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop suggested a veto, contending that approval of the bill could cause up to 6,000 more highway deaths annually.

Claybrook, who headed the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration during the Carter administration, predicted that lifting the speed limit will, over the next three years, kill the equivalent of the 20,000 troops being sent to Bosnia.

But Clinton bowed to political reality on the measure that passed by overwhelming margins in both houses of Congress. Transportation Secretary Federico Pena had sharply criticized lifting the speed limit, but in the end recommended approval of the bill.

And while not necessarily backing the faster speeds, William D. Fay of the Highway Users Federation said the road improvements paid for by the $6 billion in the measure will prevent 175,000 crashes over the next decade.

The highway measure designates a priority 160,000-mile system of national highways, including the Interstates. These roads, while totaling only 4 percent of the nation's highways, carry 40 percent of its traffic.

Other provisions of the wide-ranging measure:

— Ease some Environmental Protection Agency requirements for state emissions reduction programs.

— Free states from the requirement to use recycled rubber in their highways.

— Drop the requirement for use of the metric system on road signs.

— Exempt farmers from federal hours of service rules for truck drivers during harvest season.

— Establish a "zero-tolerance" requirement for alcohol use by drivers under age 21, rather than allowing underage drivers to meet the same standard as adults.

■ illiteracy

continued from page 3

welfare," said Hal Beder, professor of adult education at Rutgers University, in Sunday's Boston Globe Magazine. "But people who are not literate cannot benefit from job training. If you can't use a computer today, you aren't going to get very far. If you are illiterate, you can't even figure out how to turn one on. Literacy is the foundation."

Beder is the author of Adult Literacy: Implications for Policy and Practice.

Booksellers donated 10 percent of their sales to three adult literacy centers: The Read/Write/Now Adult Learning Center of the Springfield City Library, the Care Center in the Holyoke area and the Literacy Project serving Hampshire and Franklin counties.

The idea behind Buy a Book for Literacy was "to make people aware of the magnitude of the adult literacy problem in the area and provide a simple way for the public to help," said Mitch Gaslin of Food for Thought Books in Amherst, one of the organizers of the event.

"Last year we raised $5,700 to help the three literacy organizations offset cuts in public funding and continue their work with adult learners," he said.

Saturday also marked the release of This Wood Sang Out, a collection of prose and poetry by established and emerging writers. The book was edited by a group of published writers and adult learners, and is available at participating bookstores.

A worker at Food For Thought Books indicated that several people who made purchases were aware that some of the proceeds were earmarked to fight literacy. Literacy Action said they are hopeful that with busier post– Thanksgiving shopping days at area bookstores, at least a small dent can be made in the dearth of literacy programs available.

According to the group, there are enough programs for only three percent of adults in need of services in Massachusetts.

■ empowerment

continued from page 1

being a minority on a predominantly white campus.

"As a black women," said McCollen, "going to a white university means you have to persevere."

She also instilled upon the group the importance of going to school for one's own benefit. "School is for you. You're not doing it for anyone else."

Gordon stressed the importance of recognizing the mentality of "divide and conquer".

"Blacks need to unite," she said. "That's why I was happy with the Million Man March."

Gorton commented that in '72, blacks on campus were more united, and there were no fraternities or sororities to cause small divisions among them. She said that she felt this way because there was an entirely different type of movement, like the Panther movement, to promote unity.

Fabiola Narcisse, a graduate, and now an administrative worker, talked about how minorities acted like they weren't happy to see each other.

"We need to rise above this stuff and realize that I am not going to succeed if we don't succeed."

Springer, a senior majoring in marketing and advertising with a concentration in Afro–American Studies, is the moderator of the Sylvan Cultural Center and was the coordinator of the event. On her staff are Tanisha Narcisse, activity programmer, Michelle Arroyo, treasurer, and C-Quan Hubert is the office manager.

■ Bosnia

continued from page 1

ment and 40 percent opposed it. Emerging as Clinton's most powerful ally among the Republican leadership of Congress, Sen. Bob Dole said, "I want to support the president if I can." He also said, "Congress will have hearings and we'll debate it."

Speaking at a forum for Republican presidential candidates, the Senate majority leader said he was looking for a way to back Clinton "even though the American people may not agree." Referring to opposition from other candidate for the GOP nomination, Dole said, "I'm certain some of my opponents on the Republican side will have a field day. But there comes a time when you have to be responsible, too, in America."

Campaigning in Iowa, commentator Pat Buchanan blasted the congressional leaders for a "pathetic" response to Clinton. "What happened to the idea that we've got a Republican revolution and a Congress that's coequal in governing?" Buchanan said. "If you're a leader, stand up and say what you believe. Take the consequences."

However, even some of Clinton's severest critics in Congress were backing away from a direct confrontation over putting troops in Bosnia.

Collegian Elections, Spring 1995

Applications for all Newsroom Editor Positions are being accepted.

Arts & Living	Jewish Affairs
Black Affairs	Managing Editor
Business	Multicultural Affairs
Developing Nations	News
Editor In Chief	Photo
Editorial / Opinion	Sports
GLB Issues	Women's Issues

Deadlines:

Applications ▪ Friday, Dec. 8 ▪ 4 p.m.
Candidates Night ▪ Monday, Dec. 11 ▪ 7 p.m.
Elections ▪ Tuesday, Dec. 12 ▪ 8 a.m. – 3 p.m.

Applications are available on the Managing Editor's desk and should be dropped off in the Editor in Chief's mailbox. All questions should be directed to Matt Vautour, Editor in Chief.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Come Refreshments Served!
Kappa Kappa Gamma
HOLIDAY OPEN RUSH PARTY
Wednesday, November 29th, 8pm – 10pm
32 Nutting Ave.
All University Women Welcome! Freshmen Encouraged
For information contact Tara Myers 549-2646

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS
WE DON'T KNOW THE MEANING OF SLEEP.

Adult Children of the Mentally Ill
A University of Massachusetts researcher in School and Counseling Psychology is conducting a study about the childhood experiences of people who grew up with a mentally ill parent. The study involves an interview and questionnaire. If you grew up with a parent who was diagnosed with a mental illness, and you are interested in participating in this study please call: 413-565-9078. Participants identities will remain strictly confidential. Volunteers will be compensated for their time.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

TIME OUT
BUD NIGHT
Win a trip to the Bahamas and other prizes
9 PM to 1 AM
FREE ANTONIOS PIZZA!

Massachusetts 92, Kentucky 82

At The Palace of Auburn Hills.

Massachusetts (1-0)
Dingle 7-14 5-8 19, Bright 6-8 4-4 17, Camby 11-16 10-11 32, Padilla 3-8 7-8 14, Travieso 2-9 5-6 10, Norville 0-0 0-0 0, Weeks 0-0 0-0 0, Clarke 0-0 0-0 0, Nunez 0-0 0-0 0, Cottrell 0-0 0-0 0, McClay 0-0 0-0 0, Burns 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 29-55 31-37 92.

Kentucky (1-1)
McCarty 5-9 3-4 17, Mercer 2-10 1-2 6, Pope 0-3 5-10 5, Delk 7-16 4-4 21, Anderson 0-0 1-2 1, Sheppard 1-1 1-2 4, Walker 6-11 0-0 12, Prickett 1-2 2-2 4, Edwards 1-3 0-0 3, Epps 1-4 1-2 3, Turner 3-3 0-0 6. Totals 27-62 18-28 82.

Halftime-Massachusetts 45, Kentucky 45. 3-Point Goals-Massachusetts 3-9 (Bright 1-1, Padilla 1-2, Travieso 1-5, Dingell 0-1), Kentucky 10-20 (McCarty 4-4, Delk 3-6, Sheppard 1-1, Edwards 1-1, Mercer 1-2, Pope 0-1, Walker 0-2, Epps 0-3). Fouled out-Weeks, Delk. Rebounds-Massachusetts 36 (Camby 9), Kentucky 23 (McCarty 7). Assists-Massachusetts 12 (Padilla 6), Kentucky 17 (Epps 6). Total Fouls-Massachusetts 24, Kentucky 28. Fouled Out-Weeks, Delk. Technical-Kentucky Pitino. A-15,454.

Player of the Game

Marcus Camby – 32 points, 9 rebounds, 5 blocks

■ hoop

continued from page 12

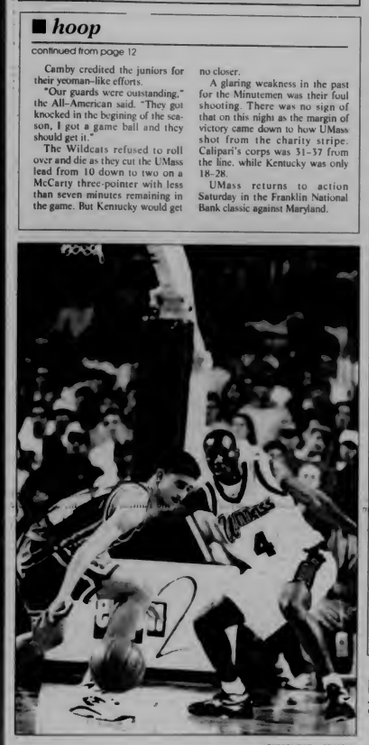
Camby credited the juniors for their yeoman–like efforts.

"Our guards were outstanding," the All–American said. "They got knocked in the begining of the season, I got a game ball and they should get it."

The Wildcats refused to roll over and die as they cut the UMass lead from 10 down to two on a McCarty three-pointer with less than seven minutes remaining in the game. But Kentucky would get no closer.

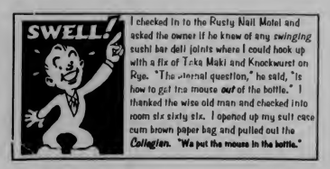
A glaring weakness in the past for the Minutemen was their foul shooting. There was no sign of that on this night as the margin of victory came down to how UMass shot from the charity stripe. Calipari's corps was 31–37 from the line, while Kentucky was only 18–28.

UMass returns to action Saturday in the Franklin National Bank classic against Maryland.



DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Senior co–captain Donta Bright contributed 17 points in the Minutemen's thrilling 92–82 win over top ranked Kentucky.



I checked in to the Rusty Nail Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging sushi bar dell joints where I could hook up with a fix of Teka Maki and Knockwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the mouse out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and checked into room six sixty six. I opened up my suit case cum brown paper bag and pulled out the Collegian. "We put the mouse in the bottle."

Virginia Tech takes care of CC in opener

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech went all last season with seven players and won the NIT championship. In the opener Tuesday, the Hokies put nearly twice that many on the court against Coastal Carolina, including three guys named Jackson who scored 38 points.

"Now that we have some depth, we are going to get out and run the ball," Ace Custis said. "We're going to try to get some easy layups and dunks."

Custis scored 19 points, including five dunks, and reserve Jim Jackson added 15 points to lead No. 22 Virginia Tech to a 93-49 victory.

Virginia Tech (1-0) scored 17 unanswered points to go ahead 19-4 with 13:36 remaining in the first half against a team with only two returning starters and eight new players, including four junior college transfers.

Coastal Carolina (1-1) was held to two field goals in the first nine minutes and was behind 49-22 at halftime. The Hokies then scored the first six points of the second half to go ahead by 33 points.

The only drama of the evening came moments before tipoff when the Hokies bird mascot had a hard time unfurling a new banner in the stands that proclaimed Virginia Tech the 1995 NIT champions. "The story of tonight's game was experience versus inexperience," Coastal Carolina coach Michael Hopkins said. "Tech doesn't miss a beat when the reserves come in."

Last season, Virginia Tech won 25 games, the most in school history, with no depth. With all seven players returning to join the injured players from last year, the Hokies had six score in double figures Tuesday and gave all 12 players at least eight minutes playing time.

"Our starters are glad to see the other guys get playing time," Virginia Tech coach Bill Foster said.

Custis, for example, was able to maintain his intensity by catching his breath on the bench more often.

With six minutes remaining in the first half, Custis dove for a ball to keep it in play, made a field goal, took a pass at rim level after a steal and dunked to put Virginia Tech ahead 39-15. The next time down the court, he pulled down a missed shot and dunked it again.

For their part, the Chants kept the game mildly interesting in the second half with outside shooting. They made five straight 3-pointers in one stretch to make it 75-45 with nine minutes to play.

Ben Avery led Coastal with 11 points and eight rebounds. Kelvin Pannell made three of his first six 3-point shots for nine points. For Virginia Tech, Shawn Smith scored 14, David Jackson, Jim's twin brother, had 12 and Travis Jackson, no relation, and Damon Watlington each had 11.

Virginia Tech, a new member of the Atlantic 10 Conference, made 52 percent of its field goal attempts while Coastal, a Big South team, shot 31 percent from the field.

Jim Jackson twisted his ankle and will be out for at least a week while Shawn Good pulled his left groin muscle and may be unable to play Saturday against Virginia Military Institute. "Last year, if we'd have had two injuries like this we would have been sunk," Foster said.

Michigan St. 75, No. 25 Arkansas 72

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Jon Garavaglia scored six of his 14 points down the stretch Tuesday night and Michigan State defeated No. 25 Arkansas 75-72 in the first game of the Great Eight basketball festival.

Top-ranked Kentucky and No. 5 Massachusetts played in the second game with two more games scheduled for Wednesday night.

The Razorbacks (1-2) had been idle since losing to Arizona in the second round of the Preseason NIT. But their fullcourt press helped hold the Spartans without a basket for a six-minute stretch of the second half.

Arkansas took a 69-61 lead on Darnell Robinson's three-point play with 6:04 remaining. Then Garavaglia took over.

His jumper from the top of the key put the Spartans ahead 71-70 with 2:05 remaining and his tip of Daimon Beathea's shot gave Michigan State a 73-70 lead with 53 seconds left.

Kareem Reid, who had 18 points, made two free throws with 44 seconds left, but Beathea matched them for the Spartans.

The press forced 16 Michigan State turnovers, but the Spartans had a 47-23 edge in rebounds with Jamie Feick and Garavaglia each pulling down 12.

Jesse Pate scored 13 of his 20 points in the second half for the Razorbacks, who had to replace five starters since losing to UCLA in the title game of the NCAA tournament last spring.

Feick scored 20 points for the Spartans (2-2), who snapped a two-game losing streak.

North Carolina 83, Richmond 76

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Dean Smith wasn't convinced that North Carolina's 23-point lead would hold, and neither was Richmond coach Bill Dooley. Both were almost right.

Shammond Williams converted a three-point play and Dante Calabria scored eight points in a critical stretch of the second half Tuesday night, helping No. 17 North Carolina hold off Richmond 83-76.

The Tar Heels (3-1) were in their home opener after an impressive showing in the Maui Invitational in Hawaii, where they lost to Villanova in the championship game. The first regular-season game in the Smith Center turned into a nailbiter in the less-than-full Smith Center.

"I told them at the half that the game wasn't over," said Smith, who picked up his 833rd career coaching victory. "I guess that was self-fulfilling prophecy."

■ College Hockey

continued from page 12

Joseph and Mike Richter, he's proven to be dependable in the past. Credit the slow start, or lack there of, to a tough early schedule and a dismal 70.8 percent penalty kill.

• The one Badger tie in their current 0–6–1 streak was actually a gift from the shoddy officiating which has plagued college hockey this year.

Both St. Cloud State and Wisconsin became confused on line changes in the final minute of a 3–2 game as a Husky power play ended. Both an extra SCSU player and an extra Badger went onto the ice, neither noticed by the officials. Max Williams notched the tying goal for Wisconsin with 36 seconds to play with 14 players on the ice at the time.

Likewise, Hockey East officiating has been horrendous this year. Richard Zannetti, to his credit has called a pair of exceptional games that I've seen. The first–year referee calls a fair and even game with the law well laid down.

Despite the physical resemblance, there is no truth to the rumor that Steve McBride and NHL referee Don Koharski were separated at birth, although each one calls an inconsistent and often unbalanced game.

McBride missed several major infractions in Massachusetts' game at Providence which was broadcast live on NESN. This at least went both ways as McBride, and his brother–in–arms Rich Fowkes whistled neither UMass defenseman Dennis Wright for a vicious and very illegal boarding hit that nearly killed Erik Sundquist, or a Providence player upending Brian Regan, resulting a pivotal third period Friar goal.

Yet, McBride still whistled players for silly shanagains that made NBA "fouls" look like a Don Cherry video. In addition, the pudgy referee was frequently interfering with the play with his mere physical presence as players were forced to work around him in the corners.

Of the 22 Hockey East officials, McBride ranks 22nd.

Scott Leavitt, another Hockey East ref, is 23rd.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

■ Jacques

continued from page 12

had a goal and an assist in the playoff win against BC. He was all set to play in what he called "the biggest game of his life" a playoff against top–seeded Maine, when tradgedy struck.

Jacques, mother Margaret, who had been diagnosed with cancer earlier in the year, had taken a turn for the worse. He left the team in Orono to be with her. She passed away a few weeks later.

"He did the right thing, Family comes first," Mallen said. "This was only a hockey game. I would have found it impossible to play him under those circumstances."

Jacques has dedicated his season to her.

"My mom is always there in my mind, and I've dedicated this season to her. I think about her every day," he said. "She always supported me. Growing up she was always there. It was tough, everything happened so fast. It was tough to focus on hockey, but I have great teammates. They really supported me. I'm just going out there and play for her and hopefully do my best for her."

With last season behind him, Jacques has gotten off to a good start this season with three goals and four assists. He has also made considerable contributions to the power play and penalty killing units.

Mallen points to his physical strength as one of Jacques' key attributes.

"He has division one strength, especially leg strength," Mallen said. "His leg strength is tops on the team. That enables him to go both ways quickly."

■ NFL

continued from page 12

ahead of Ted Marchibroda's club.

If Miami doesn't make it to the playoffs, look for at least a new defensive coordinator, possibly "Mean" Joe Greene formerly of Pittsburgh Steel Curtain defense that produced four NFL Championships for the Steelers. Otherwise there will be a complete cleaning of the coaching staff and the man to lead that staff would probably be Jimmy Johnson.

The ex–Cowboy coach would need to hand select his staff but if the money is right and ownership would be willing to agree to his demands, Johnson would turn the team into an immediate winner.

He won college national championships as the eye of the Hurricanes and brought America's team from the bottom to Super Bowl Champs in four years. He could motivate and be the attitude the Dolphins player personnel need to put the whole package together. If you have trouble getting up to play for Shula there is a big problem, but the talent in Joe Robbie stadium is much better than a .500 team.

• Sometimes all it takes is one thing to turn a teams season around. Last year, the Patriots went to their two–minute offense in the second half of the game with the Minnesota Vikings and used that tool to get to the playoffs. Everytime the owner of the Detroit Lions says if you don't win, coach Wayne Fontes losses his job, the Motown team finds a way to come out on top.

At 3–4, the Steelers needed something to get rolling or they would be fighting with the expansion Jaguars for last place in the AFC Central. Then a funny thing happened in practice.

A rash of injuries to wide receivers left a void in preparation for their next opponent. Third string quarterback Kordell Stewart, who ran the option in his college days as a Colorado Buffalo, was asked to run routes for the scout team. Time and time again, he got open. He got open almost everytime. Stewart was so good he was switched over to the regular offense and has been part of the Pittsburgh attack since.

Two weeks ago, during the comeback against the Bengals, Stewart lined up as a halfback and ran the option to perfection for a two point conversion to get the Steelers within a touchdown. Later still trailing by five, he set up in the slot and beat the Cincinnati zone coverage, splitting the safeties for a 72–yard touchdown catch.

Pittsburgh now leads the Central by three games.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

Wed. Raffle Nite at Mikes
Beer of the Week Miller Genuine Draft Bottles 99¢
Drink of the Week Screwdriver 125¢
MIKES WESTVIEW CAFE
Prizes
•Mikes Great Tee Shirts
•$100 in Mikes Mad Money
•2 Tickets to the "Bruins"

The University of Massachusetts' Campus Activities Office
Presents
Something Every Friday
A WEEKLY PROGRAM SERIES OF EVENTS
Coming This Friday: The Acapella Group
REGENCY
Followed by the Movie: Apollo 13
Bluewall Cafe
December 1, 1995 • 8 p.m., FREE
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

CUSTOMER EXPRESS CHANGE™
1st Service
QUAKER STATE. The Intelligent oil.
NORTHAMPTON HONDA
EXPRESS CHANGE™ $17.99
Service includes:
• Oil and filter change
• Genuine Honda Parts
with this coupon
Express 12/8/95
Northampton HONDA
171 King St. Rte. 5
NORTHAMPTON
586-8626
No Appointment is Needed - Drive In anytime between 8:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. Monday - Thursday • Fridays till 5:00 p.m. And we guarantee we will have you back on your way in 30 minutes or less or your next express change will be free!! Offer valid for Honda vehicles only!!!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ACTIVITIES

Come to Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority [illegible] Wednesday night Nov 29th from 8pm to [illegible] All University women welcome. Rushing encouraged. Come celebrating Thanksgiving with us for a couple of hours. 87 Nutting Ave. Refreshments served. Call Lee 549-2646

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CRAFT BAZAAR
Fall Craft Bazaar Hampshire College [illegible] Nov. 30 [illegible] 30

3-4 senior grad students looking for [illegible] Allston area for Spring semester Call 545-9919

AUTO FOR SALE

BLUE '86 SUBARU
86 Subaru [illegible] Brand new [illegible] motor, water pump $1,200 [illegible] Call [illegible]

86 Merc Topaz [illegible] Runs excel. $[illegible] Call [illegible]

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment for rent starting Jan 1st 2 bathrooms on bus line near school. Contact Nagh 549-8415

EMPLOYMENT

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $275-$375/week working to save the environment with Mass Pirg. Casual fun atmosphere. Call Tom at 256-6434

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45/hr. teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

We want you Unique liquor related product. Retails for $20. Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location - your profit $32,400 first year! 941-766-9001

$40,000 Income Potential Home typists/PC users. Toll free 1-800-898-9778 Ext T-1732 for listings.

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn big money. Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Big dorm size fridge $130 or bo. Call Kalina @ 665-5093

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Amity Love, all of us down here in 526

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

MISCELLANEOUS

May the sacred heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved now and forever. Sacred heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Thank you. M.M.

PERSONALS

Pega Happy 21st birthday! Now we can be dumb & dumber together! Love, H

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2942

ROOM FOR RENT

Available 1/96 Room in 4 bedroom/Belchertown, prefer female $781+ Jennifer 253-0676

One bedroom in a five bedroom house. Smoking Ok. $270 per month. 256-4295

One bedroom in vacant two bedroom apartment as of December 22, until January 25th. Call Kalina at 665-5093

Room for rent on bus route, all utilities included. Male or female. $268 per month. Available Jan 1. Call Nikki 253-7741

Room for rent Northampton on bus route 1, 2 bedrooms available. Only $237.50. 584-2146

Room for rent: Private home quiet neighborhood, kosher/vegetarian kitchen. Laundry, parking furnished. $325 incl. Jan 30. 549-4853.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located (1/2 mile to UMass and center of Amherst), beautiful 3 bedroom 2-1/2 bath condo at Amity Place. Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen and great sunset views. Must be responsible cat loving non smoker. $475.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3866

Roommates wanted for all open bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Heat & hot water incl. Start Jan 1 or Feb 1 call Andy at 549-5747

Roommate wanted non smoker to share room for Spring semester. $185 per month. On bus route. Start Jan 1st. Call Anne 253-1895 (heat & hot water included)

Roommate wanted to share apt in Mill Valley. Heat & hot water incl. 253-1402

SERVICES

Free financial aid! Over 6 billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. F50012

RESUME
Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union. 545-2271

Honeylove and Butterflies hosts jewelry parties! Hemp, beads, accessories. In time for holidays. Sororities encouraged! 548-9786 appt

International Students Visitors DV-1 Greencard program by US Immigration Legal Services tel (818) 772-7168 20231 Stagg St. Canoga Park CA 91306

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $245 r/t California $175 o/w Europe from $229 r/t. Cheap airfares to S. America, Asia, Africa, Middle East and Australia. Call (413) 587-0001. Air Tech New England

Free Travel Spring Break '96 Sun Splash Tours. Reliable spring break company. Organize group! Travel free! Party! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! For free information 1-800-426-7710

JAMAICA

Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril. $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437. Trust our experience

Spring break Bahamas or Florida Keys. Spend it on your own private yacht. One week only $385.00 per person including food and much more. Organizers go for FREE! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters 1-800-783-4001. See us on the net http://www.shadow.net/~erss

Winter Break Special Killington week $269. Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437.

TO SUBLET

Apartment to Sublet Jan 1st Puffton 1 bedroom, heat/hot water included $505/mo. 549-9180.

WANTED TO RENT

We are two females looking for 2 rooms in which to rent our heads from Jan or Feb 1st (prof Feb) until June 1st. Will also consider 1 large bedroom. Apt or house is fine. Bus route would be ideal. Please call Stacy or Renee evenings at 546-4868

Attention all current, former and future CARTOONISTS: The Managing Editor's desk is over run with dozens of student comics that have already run in the Collegian. If you want to keep your cartoons please come by the Collegian and pick them up. There is a file in the Cartoonist's Mailbox for you to go through. All student comics that have not been claimed will be thrown out one week after the last day of the semester. If you have questions, please call Marni E. Helfner, Managing Editor at 545-0719.

HOROSCOPE

Aries (March 21-April 19): Teen-agers should not try to force an issue today, especially if money is involved. Adopting a conciliatory approach will help you accomplish more.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Show more trust in young people, but move slowly in financial matters. Do not take unnecessary chances. Your spiritual values influence a practical decision.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): New challenges are featured. Let loved ones in on your plans. A face-to-face meeting yields favorable results. Sign contracts and agreements. Cancel certain social plans if short on funds.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Someone will surprise you today. Do not reveal your secrets. Thrift is not the entire solution to a money problem. Consider working a second job. Talk things over with the love of your life.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Real estate investments can be highly profitable now. A friend's sympathy is comforting if you have recently terminated a relationship. Get your personal affairs in order.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Taking a chance could pay off. A financial tip from someone abroad helps you land a contract. Asking for a favor brings a delightful response. You win widespread affection by helping someone realize a dream.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be willing to travel for work. New doors open to you. Domestic affairs may be frustrating. Heed your intuition. It is vital you live up to an agreement. A private meeting produces desirable results.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Draw up a blueprint for your financial future. Information from experts helps you obtain valuable support. Their advice proves golden! A domestic crisis could be a blessing in disguise.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): News from abroad proves a legal or media-related move is a good idea. Do not lose your nerve, success is assured! A favor or gift will promote good will and ensure a VIP's support.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A wish moves closer to becoming reality. Do your homework religiously. A close associate is an excellent sounding board for your ideas. Far-off events signal a change in the direction of a relationship.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Co-workers and partners are highly supportive today. Mutually beneficial agreements can be easily formed. Your sensitivity to other people's needs helps you put a dream plan into operation.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day for launching creative projects and pursuing new interests. Exercise financial restraint. Savings will accrue if you buy in quantity and perform more services for yourself. Give romance a second chance.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tuesday Ticker

Market closes as of 4 p.m. November 28

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	5,078.10	+7.22
Standard & Poor's 500	606.45	+5.13
Nasdaq Composite Index	1050.05	+20.73
AMSE Index	530.74	-0.12

Market Reports

Compiled by Matthew Wurtzel

The Dow industrial average lurched into record territory Tuesday, reaching its fifth straight all-time high with help from a late rally in technology shares that reversed a broad retreat.

The Dow industrials, at one point down by more than 37 points, recovered to close up 7.22 at 5,078.10. Meanwhile the dollar slipped, gold rose, and bonds were mixed.

Cotton futures prices slumped as well on the New York Cotton Exchange after reports on textile mill use and consumption reinforced expectations that poor Christmas sales will hold down clothing manufacturing. Coffee futures fell to contract lows, while unleaded gasoline futures advanced.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction of new homes declined in October for a third straight month, reflecting builders' worries.

Housing starts unexpectedly fell 3.7 percent to a seasonally adjusted 1.34 million annual rate, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday. It was the largest drop since starts plunged 6.1 percent last March at the depths of the recent housing slump.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box · use capital letters where they apply • Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

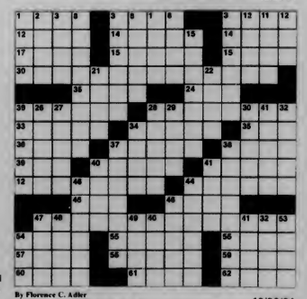
ACROSS
1 Bistros
5 Hawaii's state bird
9 Glut
13 Aid
14 Swedish island in the Baltic
16 Angers
17 Region
18 Savor
19 Bog
20 American playwright: 1905-84
23 Information; rumor
24 Look over
25 Empire State capital
28 Answered
33 Burns slightly
34 Place of refuge
35 Epoch
36 Male deer
37 Weeds
38 Stain
39 Within: Prefix
40 One of the acting Moores
41 Scold
42 Ballerina
44 Prodded
45 Sailor
46 Dry
47 Play by 20 Across
54 Home of the Mets
55 Fine-grained rock
56 A.A. Milne's "When We — Very Young"
57 Direction for a knitter
58 Asian region
59 Gaelic
60 Matures
61 Sisters
62 Periods

DOWN
1 False god
2 Dugout of WWI
3 Scottish dance
4 Robust
5 Public lead-in
6 Antelope
7 American writer of humorous verse
8 Duck, in Darmstadt
9 Boil
10 Chorister's goal
11 Aquatic bird
12 Wind direction
15 Erases
21 Charged particles
22 City of SE France
25 Pined for
26 Capital of 58 Across
27 Nobleman
28 Street show
29 Always
30 Lukewarm
31 Disintegrate
32 Passe
34 Crones
37 Sightseer
38 Followed secretly
40 Genuine
41 Close-fitting cap
43 Pitfers
44 Welcomes
46 Ethan of the Green Mountain Boys
47 Ruffian
48 Roll call answer
49 Slender
50 Forbidden
51 Dry: Comb. form
52 While lead-in
53 Understands
54 Health resort

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

G	L	O	W		S	A	P	O	R		B	E	R	T
R	E	N	E		O	B	E	S	E		A	Q	U	A
R	A	C	E	C	O	U	R	S	E		D	U	E	S
		D	E	P	O	T	S		A	N	T	L	E	R	S
					S	H	E		T	O	Y	S
O	P	H	I	T	E		S	P	E	D		T	H	Y
B	O	O	T	S		H	A	I	R	Y		R	E	O
E	R	R	S		T	O	U	T	S		S	I	L	K
Y	E	S		G	I	R	T	H		S	T	A	G	E
S	S	E		A	P	S	E		S	A	U	N	A	S
			P	A	T	S			E	E	L
C	H	A	L	E	T	S		M	E	A	N	I	E
L	A	C	E		E	P	S	O	M	O	O	W	N	S
A	V	E	R		R	O	U	T	E		S	I	D	E
P	E	R	T		S	T	E	E	D		E	N	O	W

12/29/94



By Florence C. Adler
© 1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

12/29/94

Collegian Classifieds... They Work!
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

THESE ARE INTERESTING TIMES
WE DON'T TRUST THE GOVERNMENT, WE DON'T TRUST THE LEGAL SYSTEM, WE DON'T TRUST THE MEDIA, AND WE DON'T TRUST EACH OTHER! WE'VE UNDERMINED ALL AUTHORITY, AND WITH IT, THE BASIS FOR REPLACING IT.
"INTERESTING" IS A MILD WAY OF PUTTING IT
IT'S LIKE A SIX-YEAR-OLD'S DREAM COME TRUE!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

MY WEBBING OUGHTA TAKE THE FIGHT OUT OF YOU!
IN YOUR DREAMS, WEB-HEAD!
AWAD! HE'S EVEN STRONGER THAN HE LOOKS!
TROUBLE IN THE HALL! TAKE CARE OF IT!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

DON'T TAKE THIS PERSONALLY, GONJO!
IT'S PERSONAL, ANYWAY—
YOU CAN'T HAVE MISS STENART! I LOVE HER!
SO EVEN A GORILLA LIKE YOU CAN HAVE A HEART!
IT'S SPIDER-MAN! GET 'IM!

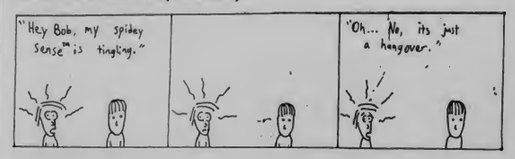
Bruno By C. Baldwin

LENNY, DO YOU THINK I GO OUT OF MY WAY TO MAKE LIFE DIFFICULT FOR MYSELF?
WELL... YES, BUT ONLY BECAUSE YOU DON'T LET YOURSELF ACCEPT THINGS AT FACE VALUE. WHICH IS GOOD WITH ALL OF THE DECEPTIONS IN THE WORLD TODAY.
WELL, I'M TIRED OF DOING IT. I WANT SOMEONE ELSE TO TAKE OVER MY JOB AS WORLD SAVIOR, OR WHATEVER THE HECK IS MY DELUSIONARY REASONING.
THAT'S A DIFFICULT ONE. IT'D PROBABLY TAKE A MIRACLE. MAYBE GOD COULD TACKLE IT.
BUT WHICH ONE? CATHOLIC? HINDU? PAGAN?
EXACTLY.

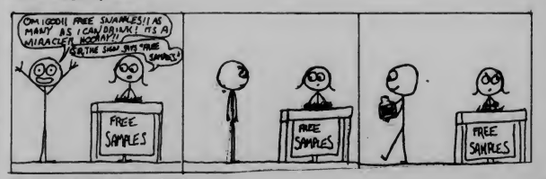
Clue Man By Galen

Student Union
Well, this seems like a good enough place to take a nice, quiet nap.
Student Union
It's just an excuse to wear tights
Say NO To Superheros
Why Can't I Be Super?
Anti-Super Hero Day? You've Got To Be Kidding Me!!!

Loser Crow Comics By Mike Krozy



308 Boyz By Skid

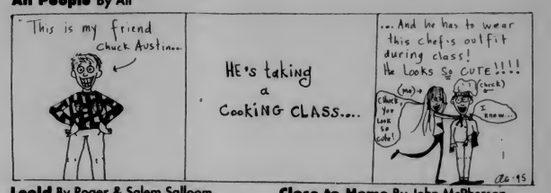


OH GOOD! FREE SAMPLES!! AS MANY AS I CAN DRINK! IT'S A MIRACLE! HOORAY!
SO, THE SIGN SAYS "FREE SAMPLES"
FREE SAMPLES
FREE SAMPLES
FREE SAMPLES

Molson Spice By Derek Oleson

Don't Go There By K & Justine

Ali People By Ali



This is my friend Chuck Austin...
He's taking a Cooking CLASS...
...And he has to wear this chef's outfit during class! He Looks So CUTE!!!!
Don't You Look So Cute!
You W...

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My friend Mark Niznik asked Gabe,

"Correct me if I'm wrong, but has Bob Dylan taken a turn for the worst? I saw him on MTV unplugged last night and he looked as if he'd been unplugged.....by Dr. Kervorkian."

Then Gabe said,
"He should've stayed home in bed.

He's gonna end up in a petting zoo.

Dylan won't make it to the next century."
Too bad..... I always thought I'd meet Dylan someday. I idolized him.

He's a songwriter of great subtlety and depth.
Ah....who cares?..he hasn't called me lately anyway.
At what point do the students teach the master?

Close to Home By John McPherson

Following a tip from an anonymous informant, two ushers uncover the largest popcorn-smuggling operation in the history of U.S. movie theaters.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Vatour
Copy Editor ..... Tara MK Connelly
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... Marni E.Helfner
Production ..... Brian D. Inocencio
Dave Voldan

Dining Commons Menu

Wednesday

LUNCH
BBQ Pork Rib Sandwich
Ravioli Alfredo
BASICS LUNCH
Savory Stuffed Peppers
Ravioli Alfredo

DINNER
Southern Fried Steak
Mandarin Chicken
BASICS DINNER
Sesame Noodles / Peas
Mandarin Chicken

Thursday

LUNCH
Hamburger
Broccoli Casserole
BASICS LUNCH
Golden Burgers
Broccoli Casserole

DINNER
Shrimp/SausageJambala
Chicken Margherita
BASICS DINNER
Penne w/tom&spinach
Chicken Margherita

Friday

LUNCH
Sloppy Joe
Clam Roll/Tartar Sauce
BASICS LUNCH
Vegan Sloppy Joe
Clam Roll/Tartar Sauce

DINNER
Chicken tenders/Sauce
Szechuan Beef/Broc
BASICS DINNER
Chicken tenders/Sauce
Szechuan Tofu/Broc

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Bad things to say when first meeting your date's parents

10. "You folks got any rubbers?"
9. "Wanna help me finish this bowl?"
8. "Don't worry, I've become really good at driving drunk lately."
7. "If you could just sign this paper for my parole officer..."
6. "Back by midnight? What are you guys, Reich marshals?"
5. "Mom! Dad! Great to meet you!"
4. "Seeing you two explains why your offspring has such a great ass!"
3. "Your house reeks!"
2. "I'm the one having sex with your child."
1. "Oh, we'd better not shake hands, the doctors haven't determined whether or not the rash is contagious."

Close to Home By John McPherson

No one ever messed with Wayne's car security system, crude though it was.

Quote of the Day

"If you think that no one cares that you're alive, try missing a couple of auto insurance payments."

–Old Collegian Proverb

Sports

Sports Notice

There will be a meeting for all sports staff members on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian. All staff members are required to attend. Anyone interested in writing may also attend. If you are unable to attend, call Candice Flemming at 545-0719.

No. 1 still can't beat Minutemen

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

"If we can't play defense against these guys," junior Marcus Camby asked after playing a sloppy exhibition game. "What are we going to do against Kentucky?"

Answer: Win.

For the third straight year, the Massachusetts men's basketball team took on the No. 1 ranked team in the country and made the pollsters eat their votes. Camby led the way for Minutemen scoring 32 points in a rousing 92–82 victory over the Kentucky Wildcats.

This adds another chapter to the legacy of UMass knocking off top ranked teams. North Carolina 91–86 (OT) in 1993 and Arkansas 104–80 last year.

Just 37 seconds into the contest senior co-captain Donta Bright nailed a three-pointer with the shot clock running down to give UMass the lead. It also started a 9-to-1 run that got the Minutemen out of the blocks quickly, as well as gaining confidence over Rick Pitino's troops.

Instead of letting up, the Minutemen continued what got them the lead pressuring the Kentucky backcourt and making the Wildcats take rushed shots. That lead to UMass opening up their biggest lead of the night at 29–10, ten minutes into the first half. At that point Kentucky had only hit three baskets from the field.

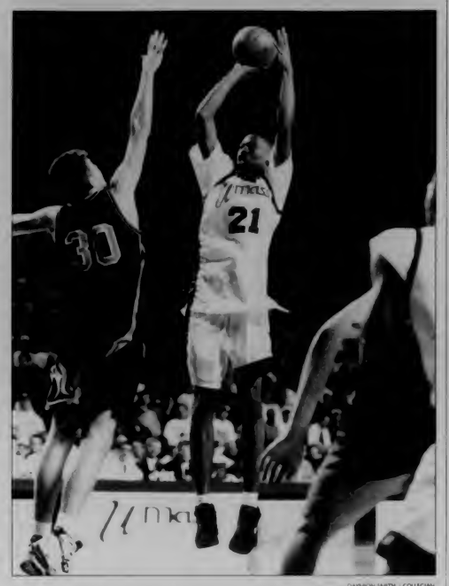
The Wildcats true to their ranking were far from finished as they used the three-pointer as the major weapon in getting back into the game hitting six-of-seven from downtown, including all five in the final 10 minutes of the half. Tony Delk (21 points) hit three while Walter McCarty (17 points) sank two in the 31–14 run that got the Wildcats within two with 1:43 left in the first half. And when Antoine Walker hit a bank shot with three seconds remaining, the game went to the half tied at 45.

"We knew they were going to make a run," Camby said. "They are a good team and you've got to give them credit."

The second half started much like the first, as the Camby stole a Ron Mercer pass from the top of the key and went in for a flying two-handed slam for a lead the Minutemen would never relinquish.

Camby, who was by far the standout in the first half, got tremendous support from senior Dana Dingle (15 second half points, 19 for the game). Bright chipped in as well, scoring 17 on the night.

The UMass backcourt of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso played all but the last minute of the game. Freshman Charlton Clarke attempted to play, but after on the court for less than a minute in the first half, had to come out of the game. When he returned from the locker room at halftime, Clarke was on crutches.



DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Center Marcus Camby blocked five shots and grabbed nine boards, in addition to holding Kentucky's Mark Pope to five points in UMass' upset victory.

Turn to HOOP, page 9

Marino setting records, but can't win for Miami

Justin Smith on the NFL

To start the 1995 season, the Miami Dolphins were 4-0. Dan Marino was healthy and the winningest coach of all time Don Shula has a cast of superstars that could lead him back to the Super Bowl for the first time since their clash with San Francisco in Super Bowl XIX.

It was Marino's second NFL season and even though they lost to the Joe Montana led Niners 36-19, the promise of Shula and his franchise signal caller was the talk of the league. He was selected in the 1983 entry draft that included first round picks Ken O'Brien, Tony Eason, John Elway, Todd Blackledge and Jim Kelly. Of those only Elway and Kelly still take snaps every Sunday, but there accomplishments are quite different.

No AFC team has won the Lombardi Trophy since that season, the Los Angeles Raiders over the Redskins. Kelly have been to four Super Bowls since and Elway two. Marino just that one but he has all the major passing records.

Most career yards passing, most career completions, and just this passed Sunday most career touchdown passes. His surpassing of Fran Tarkenton's records make him that much more of a lock for a spot in Canton, Ohio, but without success in the playoffs thus far in his career, the ex- Pittsburgh Panther was pointing to this 1995 campaign to get back to the Super Bowl and making his football career complete.

But as in so many years before, except it's come earlier this year, the Dolphins are taking their annual nose dive. After losing this passed Sunday to Indianapolis 36–28, Shula's squad is 6–6 and fighting for their playoff lives. If their defense doesn't turn it around soon, Tom Olivadotti's troops will be spending New Year's popping champagne bottles instead of opposing offenses.

What's wrong with their defense? It's not their personnel, or is it? The talent is there, free agent signings galore starting the season surred up their defensive line. Could it be their outspoken personalities that cause such mayhem on the field?

Linebacker Bryan Cox is the first name that comes to mind when one thinks of hot heads on the Dolphins defense, but he alone is not the problem. The defensive line, which includes the explosive temper of Jeff Cross and sloppy tackling of their secondary has resulted in three straight losses to the Patriots, 49ers and Colts.

Olivadotti's defense has given up an average of over 35 points per game in those three losses. It really doesn't matter who your quarterback is, if you are surrendering that many points, your team isn't going to win many ball games in this league.

The loss to Indianapolis hurts even more because they not only lost a chance to pick up a game on the first place Bills, but are now a game behind the Colts who swept them and must finish ahead of Indy in order to make the playoffs.

Turn to NFL, page 9

Minn. hot, Badgers not; Governor's Cup begins; Officials blowing calls

Ralph Torbin on College Hockey

After opening their season at an uncharacteristic 1–2–1, the Gophers are once again golden. Winners of nine of its last 10, Minnesota has vaulted back into the No. 3 spot in the national polls, care of some gigantic victories the past two weekends.

The Gophers traveled north to face their hated intrastate rivals Minnesota–Duluth and became the first school in the 36 year history of the WCHA to shut a team out on consecutive nights on the road. The Gophers took 2-0 and 7–0 decisions at a sold-out and stunned Duluth Entertainment and Convention Center.

Not only was this unprecedented in conference history, but Bulldog history as well. Minnesota–Duluth, no slouch entering that weekend at 8–2, had been shutout just once in their 571 games played at the DECC, with that one time coming nearly 15 years ago.

"That's unbelievable," Minnesota coach Doug Woog told The Minnesota Daily. "It may be the most amazing statistic that I can recall. That just shows how hard it is for teams to come in here and win."

What enabled the Gophers to secure the victory was the standout play of netminders Jeff Moen and Steve DuBus, who were named the WCHA's co–defensive players of the week. The duo were a question mark entering the season with the Gophers losing Jeff Callinan (who logged over 92 percent of last year's minutes) to graduation, but were stupendous at Duluth.

"The nice thing about it is that this record reflects on everyone on the team," sophomore standout defenseman Mike Crowley said. "Anytime you can get a record like that, it's pretty special. That's a great record for the team and one that everyone should be proud of."

The annual College Hockey Showcase in Milwaukee saw the already rolling Gophers officially start to snowball, as they topped CCHA nemesis Michigan and Michigan State to win the tourney.

Senior Brian Bonin, a serious Hobey Baker contender, and Crowley led the Gophers with three points apiece in a 6–5 OT win over the Spartans. Bonin also netted the game- winner against the Wolverines on his way to being named the tournament's most outstanding player. DuBus, Crowley and Ryan Kraft joined him on the Gopher-laden All-Tournament squad.

• Speaking of tournaments, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and UMass-Lowell, fed up with being in the shadow of their Beanpot playing rivals, started their own tradition this weekend with the inaugural Governor's Cup.

While it will never match the grandeur of Boston's early February classic, Alfond Arena fans were treated to a thrilling weekend of hockey, ultimately won by the home Black Bears on an overtime goal by Steve Kariya.

It's a nice thought, but lacking a major media market and with great distances between the schools, by eastern standards, it might be a while before the Governor's Cup flies on a national scene. Don't expect it to grow into another Beanpot or Great Lakes Invitational.

• One team that just plain isn't growing is the slumping Wisconsin Badgers. Even James Bond couldn't locate the Badger's defense as the team has looked awful in compiling a 2–9–1 record. Wisconsin (0–6–1 since Oct. 27) has gone seven games without a win for the first time ever, and hasn't had a losing season since 1980.

More bad news for Bucky is that 23 of the team's 33 goals this season have come from seniors and without increased participation by underclassmen or a stellar recruiting effort by coach Jeff Sauer, the Badgers will be in awful shape next year.

It's hard to fault senior Kirk Daubenspeck, who's played every minute in goal for the Badgers this season. While he might not be the heir apparent to recent "Goalie U." graduates Jim Carey, Curtis

Turn to COLLEGE HOCKEY, page 9

Jacques' two-way play stands out

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The play of Jon Jacques can often go unnoticed to the casual Massachusetts hockey fan. He rarely scores two goals a game, he seldom knocks opponents into the first row and goes about his business in a quiet, unassuming manner.

What he is however, is one of the best two-way players on the Minuteman squad. He kills penalties, skates on the power play and will often see time when the game is on the line, making him a valuable part of the early success that UMass has enjoyed so far this season.

"He has the ability to go two ways, the ability to score goals and to keep goals out of the net," said Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen. "He's a very quick and agile penalty killer."

Jacques believes that the key to effective play on both ends ice is awareness.

"You need good awareness of where your defensive men are, and you got to be ready to jump to offense transitionally," Jacques said. "I don't think I'm the glitter type, the highlight film type forward. I take pride in good defense. I try not to be out there when the other team scores. If I get an an offensive chance hopefully I'll be able to put it in."

Jacques may not consider himself a flashy offensive force, but the senior winger scored what is the biggest goal in UMass hockey history…

Ahead 2–0 over then No. 1 and previously undefeated Maine, the 6,834 UMass hockey fans were in shock. When he collected the pass at center ice at the 14:47 mark, Jacques had open ice. He broke in on Blair Allison and beat the star netminder to put the upstarts ahead 3–0. It was a lead the Minutemen would never relinquish as they went on to stun the Black Bears 4–2.

"That was a big goal for the team and for me personally, that was probably my best moment as a collegiate player," Jacques said. "The feeling of the team progressed as the game went on. We got a lead and we kept building on it. It was a great confidence thing."

This weekend, Jacques and the Minutemen will encounter a struggle, very similar to that Maine game, when they take on current No. 2 and defending National Champion Boston University. Jacques contends that this is a different season and this Massachusetts squad is more confident.

"It's a different situation this year. We have the confidence that we know we can win," Jacques said. "Last year we were apprehensive with a team like Maine, but this year you won't find one guy in our locker room that is intimidated by BU. We'll go out and play hard and hopefully come out on top again."

The chance to knock off a national power is only one reason that this game is a big one for Jacques. After a colorful high school career at Mount St. Charles, and a year of post grad at Cushing Academy, Jacques went to Boston University in hopes of leaving his mark on one of the nation's most storied collegiate hockey programs.

It didn't quite work out the way he planned. After playing sporadically his freshman year, the Bellingham native got lost in the shuffle and fell out of coach Jack Parker's mix.

"I went to BU and played off and on the first half of my freshman year," he said. "It was a good learning experience but I got lost in the crowd. I knew if I wanted to play I had to make a move.

"UMass was starting a program. I talked to Coach Mallen and he gave me an opportunity to come in and help the team. It just bloomed from there. I was more than happy at BU. It was one of the toughest decisions of my life to leave the place, but now that I came here I'm happier than I've ever been."

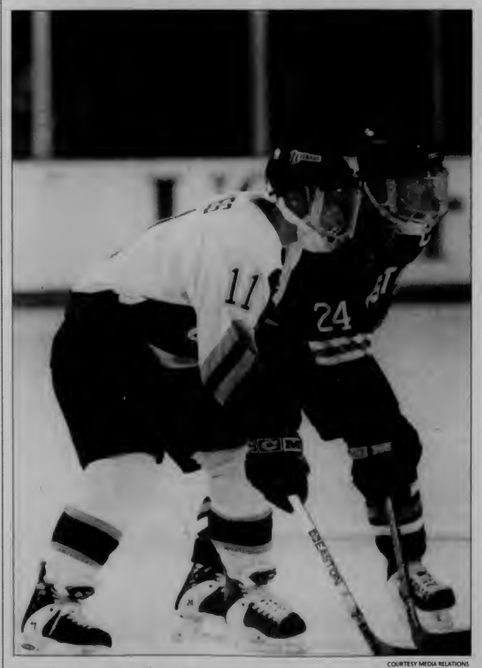
This weekend, Jacques hopes to show the Terriers that it was mistake to let him go.

"I don't want to put too much pressure on myself, but you always want have a good showing against your former team and show them that maybe they did make a mistake," he said. "I would like to come out with a big game and help the team win. The team winning would say enough for me."

Winning would be enough for Jacques now, but less than a year ago just playing was enough. After sitting out the first half of the season, while he waited a year to be eligible after transfering, Jacques was itching to play.

Starting with the Jan. 6. game against Boston College, he became a regular in the Massachusetts lineup, finishing the regular season with 11 points in 21 games.

He played a key part in the Maine victory and



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

After a tumultuous career before this year, Jon Jacques is hoping to contribute a full year to the Minutemen.

Turn to JAQUES, page 9

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 58 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, November 30, 1995

Roe returns to the Baystate
Former UMass basketball player Lou Roe returned to Massachusetts last night as his new team, the Detroit Pistons, faced the Boston Celtics (See Sports, page 16).

Calling all high rollers
Check out the stock action and yesterday's numbers on our business ticker. Keep yourself financially up to date. (See ticker, page 14).

Down in the Depp
Johnny Depp is a desperate father trying to save his daughter in John Badham's Nick of Time (See Arts & Living, 6).

Extended Forecast
Today will be mostly sunny with increasing clouds toward the evening, expect snow after midnight. Friday, freezing rain and sleet ending in the afternoon. It will be a cloudy weekend.
HIGH: 30 LOW: 20 | HIGH: 40 LOW: 30 | HIGH: 35 LOW: 25

Financial aid funds threatened

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

Although the most recent bill to emerge from Capitol Hill proposes to reduce less of the financial aid programs than originally planned, the victories are not yet to be savored.

While some parts of the financial aid programs previously threatened to be cut were saved, Clinton's Direct Lending Program will be virtually cut altogether if the revised version is approved, according to Burt Batty, the Financial Aid Director at the University of Massachusetts.

There are currently 1100 schools participating in the program. The new bill would eliminate schools who enrolled in the second year of its implementation from participating further. Schools who enrolled in the program at its beginning would be allowed to continue in it.

Chris Lindstrom of MASSPIRG said there are currently 40 Massachusetts schools which are part of or soon to be part of the direct lending program. If the cuts go through, only four would be able to participate, all being private schools.

"Direct lending is incredibly important for students, providing choice and a competitive market in which banks must compete with the government for student clients seeking lower interest rates and longer grace periods on their loans," Lindstrom said. "Cuts to direct lending give a virtual monopoly to the private sector, and students cannot benefit from competition, which results in a controlled market around loans with fixed higher interest rates."

Batty said if the program is cut there will still be a loan program, but it will be modeled after the old system.

Batty hopes further negotiations of the bill will protect the schools which have participated since the first and second years of its existence. He hopes a compromise will keep ones already participating in the program to remain in it, until they can prove to Congress that the program is beneficial and successful. Then they can open it up to new schools who choose to use it.

After one year of implementing the direct lending program at the University, the process is better but not as smooth as Batty would like. But he likens these problems to the ones found at the start of any new program.

"By and large, students have been happy with the funding since I have been here," Batty said. "I haven't received any complaints."

Round two of the fight to save financial aid will occur in mid-December. Financial aid advocates are looking for a compromise as the best possible solution to the elimination of the program altogether. If there is an agreement, Batty said it will probably save most, if not all, of the direct lending program for those already in it.

"I have to look out for the best interests of UMass and the students," Batty said.

Students give Congress the "bird"

The Student Pirgs (Public Interest Research Groups) announced their "Turkey Awards" to the congressional members who they feel have given students the "bird" on financial aid matters.

"Over the last year students have been on the receiving end of some real turkeys," said Ivan Frishberg, U.S. PIRG's Higher Education Advocate in a recent press release. "We've had Speaker Gingrich suggesting the elimination of Pell Grants, proposals to cut 24.2 billion dollars from student aid, and special interests over student interests."

Frishberg and his group hope Congress will recognize the value of an education and how vitally important aid is to students.

"We hope that next year Congress will realize that a college education is the best investment in America's future, not something to be thrown on the table and carved up," Frishberg said.

Benjamin Gingrich, other winners of the turkey title include Senator Phil Gramm, the Washington Post and the House of Representatives.

Smeal fights for equality, saving affirmative action

By Aimee Schwartz
Collegian Staff

Eleanor Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority Foundation, gave a lecture titled "The Fight to Save Affirmative Action: Campaign for Equality" in the Student Union Ballroom last night.

"We have been and we still are fighting every inch of the way," Smeal said. "The same folks now who want to close the door, outlaw affirmative action, gut sex and race discrimination laws, these are the same folks who fought it being put on the books in the first place."

While affirmative action has helped, women and minorities still account for a small number of upper level professionals, Smeal said.

Smeal used the law enforcement profession to demonstrate the effectiveness of affirmative action. In the 1970s about one percent of women were allowed to be police officers. After years of lawsuits and affirmative action, the amount of women officers has increased to eight percent nationwide, she said.

Affirmative action has not put an end to discrimination, she said.

"There is still discrimination. What we really should be talking about is how do we make these programs stronger, not … how do we slam the door shut again," Smeal said.

According to Smeal, in the '60s civil action groups were creating opportunities for people, and making professions like law enforcement more representative of the community.

Smeal used the issues of domestic violence and police brutality as examples of how women and minority police officers could benefit the community.

Incidents of domestic violence and police brutality would decrease if women and minorities were involved, she said.

"If you put more people who are trained to deal with this and have the compassion for it," said Smeal. "They deal with it much more aggressively and effectively and the number of calls go down."

Turning her attention to what is happening now in government, Smeal said, the conservative movement is rolling back the carpet on social justice programs.

Smeal used the California Civil Rights Initiative as an example.

"The California Civil Rights Initiative is no civil rights initiative. It is a program to outlaw affirmative action. If you read the fine print, it will roll back sex discrimination law itself," Smeal said.

The third clause of the initiative reads, "Bonified qualifications based on gender which are necessary for the normal operation of public education, public employment or public contract are permissible," Smeal said.

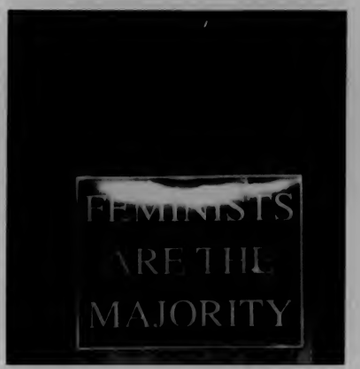
"In other words, if you have a reason for the discrimination based on sex, it's OK. I believe [this initiative] is intended not only to attack affirmative action programs generally, but to gut sex discrimination law in particular," Smeal said.

This California language is being introduced at the federal level in bills and in Congress, she said.

This "will amend the sex discrimination law to permit such discrimination," the said.

Smeal ended her speech by urging young adults to take action to bring the country back to a more progressive agenda.

The event was sponsored by the Everywoman's Center, the Chancellor's Office, the Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Office, the Faculty Senate Status of Women Council, the Faculty Senate Status of Minorities Council and the Women's Studies Department.



RYAN TRZCINSKI / BOSTON

President of the Feminist Majority Foundation and Leading Advocate for Women's Rights, Eleanor Smeal, speaks on the fight to save Affirmative Action last night in the Student Union Ballroom.

Blood drive drains campus community

By Joseph Fountain
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts is hosting a blood drive through Friday to help maintain an adequate supply of blood throughout the holiday season.

Each unit of blood collected by the American Red Cross gets broken down into three components — platelets, plasma and red blood cells — which can be transfused to three different hospital patients.

The Red Cross is encouraging donations because the holiday season is typically a time when the number of donors and donations drops drastically. Other times of the year when the Red Cross sees a drop in donations are January and February and during the summer months, when most people are away on vacation.

> "I feel fine. This is my second time donating and I'll donate again."
> — Jennifer Linehan, UMass student

Donors should go to the first floor in the Campus Center, between 10:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. both days. The entire process, from registration to relaxing with cookies and juice, takes about an hour.

"I feel fine," said first-year student Jennifer Linehan after giving blood. "This is my second time donating and I'll donate again."

Blood donors are asked a few questions about their general health. They need to answer some personal questions, such as whether they have used intravenous drugs, whether they have ever had sex for money or drugs, whether they have had homosexual sex since 1979,

Turn to BLOOD, page 3

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Kristen Risley looks on as the American Red Cross collects her blood.

American officers aid UN in Bosnia

By Thomas Ginsberg
Associated Press

KALESIJA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — U.S. military experts arrived in northern Bosnia Wednesday to scout the battered countryside where thousands of GIs are to keep the peace.

"We've got a lot to do and very little time to do it," said Col. John Brown, splashing through the mud in a U.N. pickup truck. Within weeks, some 20,000 U.S. soldiers are to begin arriving, and then will fan out across northeastern Bosnia, French, British and other troops will patrol the rest of the country.

In the meantime, Brown's teams will be bouncing over hundreds of miles of northeastern Bosnia, checking landing strips, pothole-riddled roads, scores of villages and many minefields. The GIs will face "the same dangers that have been here for several years and will continue. That's why we're down here," said Brown, chief of staff for the first Armored Division.

Brown and nine other officers from the division flew from Germany to the Croatian city of Split. They arrived in the northern city of Tuzla in four white armored personnel carriers driven by Norwegian U.N. peacekeepers.

Shortly afterward, the team made its first foray into the smog-shrouded hills around the U.N. airbase at Tuzla.

"We're just taking a look around," Brown, in a helmet and camouflage fatigues, said curtly during a stop in burned-out Kalesija. The town, about 10 miles east of Tuzla, was on the frontlines through much of the war and has been empty since May 1992.

The pickup crunched over shell holes and rubble, a ragged blue U.N. flag fluttering from its antenna. On the rear window was a small sticker of a U.S. flag.

AP reporters who followed the truck saw turn down one road and stop within sight of former rebel Serb positions, now in government hands. The truck stopped cautiously and turned around to avoid possible mines.

Inside the cab, officers directed the driver using a topographical map and a hand-held Global Positioning System device, which pinpoints locations using satellites.

Just east of the Tuzla airbase, the team hesitated, then plunged into an enormous field once used for small civilian aircraft. Now it's a sea of soggy grass and ankle-deep mud.

Spewing pale muck behind, the truck plowed through as the officers took in the landscape that conceivably could become the Army's staging ground, home to makeshift barracks or a baseball field — or nothing at all.

Minutes later, outside an abandoned warehouse, Brown only smiled when peppered with questions about the use for the field. Finally he answered obliquely: "There are all kinds of options." As the officers ventured into the crumbling building, they had one of their first encounters with the locals: a half-dozen Muslim boys with curious, wary smiles.

"Hi, how're you doing?" one of the officers said. The boys giggled and one of them mimicked in return, "Hi."

Brown said his team would use their observations during their four-to-five-day trip to decide how many soldiers and supplies to station around Tuzla, and whether to base the U.S. headquarters here or elsewhere.

UMass GLBT community adds to AIDS quilt

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

Since its initial creation in 1990, the Five College AIDS Quilt has been a work in progress, expanding with every year — along with the effect of the disease.

This year members of the University of Massachusetts gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender community will add a new panel.

According to Marty Martinson, a staff member at the UMass Stonewall Center, this is the first time that the GLBT community has ever contributed a panel in an organized way.

"This event was designed so we could have a time and a place to acknowledge and honor the ways in which AIDS and HIV have affected us in the GLBT community," said Martinson.

Scheduled for this evening from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Mary Lyon classroom, the quilt-making session will include time for members of the community to talk to one another about AIDS and HIV and to remember those who have already been lost to the disease.

After that, participants will get their hands dirty working with cloth, paint, ribbon, glue and glitter to create squares to form a GLBT panel. Food and music will be provided for the duration of the evening, said Tara Woolfson, an employee at the Stonewall Center.

The panel will be carried tomorrow evening during the candlelight vigil to commemorate World AIDS Day. When the Five College quilt is displayed again next year, the GLBT panel will be included along with the rest of the existing panels, said Laurie Turkovsky of UMass Health Education.

The squares that make up the panel are expected to range from the highly personal to the more community-oriented, said Martinson. Some people will create works dedicated to loved ones who have died in the pandemic, while others will present words and images that address the impact of AIDS and HIV on the entire GLBT community and society and large.

Sponsors of the event include the Stonewall Center, the 2 in 20 Floor, the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance, the GLB Graduate Student Organization, the GLB RA Matters Group, the Everywoman's Center and the University Health Services GLB Health Project.

Belchertown selectman dead; authorities determine it a suicide

BELCHERTOWN (AP) — Hours after he cracked jokes at a board meeting, selectman Andre Michaud was found beside a road, dying of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, authorities say.

Michaud, 42, a selectman since 1991, was an active man who loved children, animals and this rural town east of Springfield. The motive for his suicide remained a mystery.

"Suffice it to say that he's such a good man, and he had one small flaw he couldn't live with, and it just manifested itself, and that was that," his wife, Debra, was quoted as saying in Wednesday's Union-News of Springfield.

Her husband of 20 years was pronounced dead Tuesday morning at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester. David Angier, an assistant district attorney, said the

Turn to SUICIDE, page 2

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Nov. 30

Fill–A–Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill–A–Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545–3327.

Workshop — The W.E.B. Du Bois Library is sponsoring a workshop on obtaining Internet resources related to Latin America at 9 a.m. Contact Lori Mestre in the Reference Department at 545–6851.

Movie — "Erendida" will be shown in the Latin American Cultural Center at 7 p.m. For more information call 545– 2073.

Lecture — The Wildlife Society is sponsoring Prof. Walter Mozgala, a marine biology professor at Holyoke Community College will speak on "Coral Reef Biology" at 6:15 p.m. in Holdsworth 202.

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel–chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542–5896.

AIDS Quilt Making — GLBT faculty, students and staff are encouraged to make quilt squares for the UMass AIDS Quilt in preparation for World AIDS Day. The quilt making will be held in the Mary Lyon classroom at 7 p.m. For more information contact The Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 p.m. – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

HIV/AIDS Awareness — Peer Health Educators are providing information about HIV and AIDS at a table on the Campus Center Concourse.

Blood Drive — All blood donors are invited to donate from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. on the first floor of the Campus Center. Those people who have never donated blood before are encouraged to try.

Videos — UHS is sponsoring three films, Common Threads, Tom and Safe for Life on HSCN Channel 17 at midnight.

Lecture — Rabbi Debra Orenstein is speaking on "Creating Your Own Jewish Rituals" at 4 p.m. at Hillel House with a second lecture on "Judaism and Sexuality" at 7:30 p.m. For more information call 549–1710.

Lecture — PAWSS is sponsoring a lecture on "Interpreting the War: The Debate Over Vietnam" by Prof. Marilyn Young of New York University at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Lecture Hall at Hampshire College. The event is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information call 582–5519.

Friday, Dec. 1

Candlelight Walk & Vigil — The Stonewall Center is sponsoring a walk and vigil for World AIDS Day. The walk begins at 6 p.m. on the Student Union Steps and ends at the Wheeler Gallery for a national Dimming of Lights. Followed by musical performances and an open forum for personal reflection at the Wheeler Gallery. For more information contact The Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Fill–A–Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill–A–Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545–3327.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 1 p.m., Campus Center. For more information call Utama at 256–8482.

Poetry Slam — Claudia's Cafe in Amherst is having a poetry slam and open reading at 8 p.m. First prize is $10.

Lecture — "Firewalking" at 7 p.m. is taught by Barbara Weinberg at Oasis on Main Street in Amherst is free and open to the public. To reserve space please call 256–4995.

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel–chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542–5896.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

HIV/AIDS Awareness — Peer Health Educators are providing information about HIV and AIDS at a table on the Campus Center Concourse.

Blood Drive — All blood donors are invited to donate from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. on the first floor of the Campus Center. Those people who have never donated blood before are encouraged to try.

Videos — UHS is sponsoring three films, Other Faces of AIDS, AIDS Wise, No Lies and Safe for Life on HSCN Channel 17 at midnight.

Performance — Student Valley Productions is presenting an "Orgy of Talents," a showcase of talents from around the valley at 9 p.m. The cost is $3 with a student ID and $4 for all others.

Religious — Hillel House will sponsor Shabbat Services led by Prof. Julius Lester at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. For more information call 549–1710.

Saturday, Dec. 2

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel–chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542–5896.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Dancing — English Country Dance, the first Saturday of the month at the Munson Library in South Amherst at 8 p.m. Beginners come early, singles welcome, $5 each or barter. For more information call 549–1913.

Workshop — Scandinavian Couples Dance, the first Saturday of the month at the Munson Library in South Amherst at 6:30 p.m. Beginners and singles welcome, $5 each or barter. For more information call 549–1913.

Campus Police Log

Larceny
Nov. 28
There was a television stolen from the 12th floor of Washington Residence Hall.
An individual reported that his laptop computer was stolen from Webster Residence Hall.
There was a bank card stolen from an office in Thompson Hall.

Alarm
Nov. 28
An alarm was accidently turned on at the Student Union Credit Union.

Vandalism
Nov. 28
Small trees and stones were uprooted at Durfee Conservatory.

Accident
Nov. 28
An individual reported his vehicle was struck by an unknown vehicle in Parking Lot 64.

Nov. 29
A vehicle struck a tree near Hamlin Hall, causing minor damage. There were no injuries.

Animal complaint
Nov. 28
A small kitten was removed from an engine compartment of a vehicle near Bowditch Hall.

Cow struck
Nov. 28
There was a report that a cow was struck by a vehicle on Route 116. UMass police stood by until Hadley police arrived.

Health/safety hazard
Nov. 28
There was a report of a burning odor in Wilder Hall.

■ suicide

continued from page 1

death was ruled a suicide and declined further comment.

Police say Michaud was shot with a small-caliber revolver inside his vehicle.

A state trooper found the wounded Michaud beside Route 202 near a Quabbin Reservoir lookout in Pelham hours after a meeting of town selectmen. "Things went as they always did," said Bernard Kubiak, board chairman. "He even made a couple of cornball asides to me."

The couple had three children. Michaud was a longtime child advocate and foster parent, and five foster children had recently lived with him and his wife.

The selectman, a former Zoning Board of Appeals chairman, worked as a sales manager for a Westfield company. He and his wife also ran a nonprofit service to find homes for stray animals.

SNOW HAPPENS
We just work here.
Collegian Graphics

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.

When Appearance Counts,
Count on Jonathan Reid
for a great selection of men's suits for professional service an attention to detail
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

Tip Off December Right With These Great Specials At SCOTT'S
Thank You For Your Patronage
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692
Open Sunday 12-6
Southern Comfort $7.99 - $1.50 Mail In Rebate Your Cost $6.49 750 liter
Red Dog & Ice House $13.79 +dep 24 - 16oz. Wide Mouths
Catamount All Varieties $4.69 +dep 6 Pack
Red Wolf $6.99 +dep 12 Pack Bottles
Jack Daniel's $11.49 750ml
Boones Wines All Varieties 3 for $6.00
Absolut Vodka $20.99 1.75
BUD & BUD LIGHT PARTY BALLS $19.99 +DEP.
MasterCard VISA MasterCard Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Now open Sundays 12-5 until 1996
Refers University Drive Alcohol Medium
SCOTTS Victory Market Super Package Store

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN

'So, when's Spring Break?'

Junior Matt Brown takes yesterday's first snowfall head– on, attacking his driveway in Amherst with his new snowblower.

Three more services added to OIT system

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

As the popularity of the Internet continues to grow, the University of Massachusetts Office of Information Technology continues to keep up with increasing demand by adding new servers to an already extensive offering.

OIT has added three new servers in addition to the six which already exist.

"The new servers were established because both of our clusters were saturated," said Duncan Chesley, director of OIT computing administration.

In addition to Deimos, Phobos, Nebula and Frost, the VMS cluster now offers Austen. Chesley said Austen, like Frost, is a Digital Equipment Corporation Alpha Server. Austen is 10 times faster then Deimos or Phobos, but Chesley said students using it for e–mail will not see the speed difference. Not all the features available on the other VMS servers are available on Austen, said Chesley.

OIT added two other Alpha servers to the UNIX cluster, which already includes Titan and Twain. Wilde and Asimov are both three to five times faster then the older UNIX machines.

In order to log on to Austen, students must choose seven on the opening menu because there currently is no option on the menu. To connect to the new UNIX servers, students can simply choose option 10 on the opening menu which sends students to the server with the least load.

In addition to the new servers, OIT has taken measures to prevent more system failures which lock students out from accessing their accounts.

The unexpected shut downs primarily on the VMS cluster are due to power failures and hard drive failures.

"Hardware failures cause most of the unexpected lock outs," said Chesley. "Mechanical devices are more problematic then chips."

Some say politicians perfect for college presidential jobs

By Jon Marcus
Associated Press

BOSTON — The way some higher education experts see it, few people are better qualified to run a university or college campus these days than a politician.

"There is no better training, given the nature of the job today," said former Connecticut state senator and U.S. congressman Lawrence DeNardis, now president of the University of New Haven. DeNardis is part of a growing fraternity of former politicians being named to lead academic institutions at a time when university and college presidents spend more time raising money, battling budget cuts, recruiting students and negotiating contracts than steering the curriculum.

The latest member of the group is Massachusetts state Senate President William Bulger, named Tuesday to head the University of Massachusetts.

Bulger, 61, who has been one of Massachusetts' most powerful politicians for 17 years, immediately accepted the job, which will boost his annual income from $81,410 to at least $189,000. Those who have preceded him say the authority he commanded in the Statehouse may not follow Bulger to his new job, but his experience will help him deal with the overlapping interests of the faculty, staff, students, legislators, neighbors, alumni and contributors.

"You show me a college president who is not a good politician and I'll show you a very poor college president," said Holyoke Community College President David Bartley, former Massachusetts speaker of the House and state secretary of administration and finance. "The influence — that lasts about 24 hours."

On the other hand, Bartley said, "Clearly, you are able to get an audience. You can be heard. You have a knowledge of the process, knowledge of who makes the decisions, how the decisions are made and for what reason those decisions can be made, and these are things that can only be gained from experience and from being part of the process."

Bartley said Bulger's high profile also could return public attention to UMass, often lost in the glare of the area's prestigious private universities and colleges.

But some former politicians who today are university and college presidents do their best work behind the scenes.

David L. Boren, a former governor and U.S. senator named president of the University of Oklahoma last year, successfully lobbied Gov. Frank Keating in February to help block a proposed 2.5 percent cut in the state's higher education budget, for example.

■ blood

continued from page 1

if they've had a tattoo in the past year, if they've ever had hepatitis, HIV, AIDS or a whole list of other diseases and if they are feeling well the day of the blood drive. A nurse asks these questions in a private one–on–one manner.

There are also weight and age requirements. An iron test is done to ensure the donor is not anemic.

Blood drive workers say that no one should give blood on an empty stomach because donors may become light–headed. Donors are also encouraged to not drink alcohol for 24 hours after giving blood.

It takes seven to 15 minutes to give a pint of blood. Then the donor must rest for 15 minutes to make sure they are not dizzy or feeling ill. The Red Cross provides cookies and orange or apple juice.

Donors may give blood roughly every 56 days, or after one and a half months.

For questions regarding donating or to make an appointment, prospective donors should contact the Red Cross at 800–462–2229.

Collegian staff member Amy Paradysz contributed to this story.

You know Bobby, copying those answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those enivilling statics! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence live every weekday

The Daily Collegian
Bringing you the latest in up-to-date recent current fresh news and information.
Regardless of redundancy

The Daily Collegian, we bring you the weather

Jewish Affairs needs writers!
If you are interested in writing fair and about the UMass Jewish Community.
Contact Laurie W. Michaelis
113 Campus Center
545–3500

WE ARE SPRING BREAK!
Our Trips Are Better Than Mom's Apple Pie!
• South Padre Island
• Cancun
• Jamaica
• Bahamas
• All Other Destinations
Why risk your travel plans with some shady organization? Every year hundreds of students are left stranded. It costs no more to book your Spring Break trip with your local travel experts with a proven track record of successful trips.
Can that flier or acquaintance from the dorms offer you that?
(413) 256-8228
TRAVEL MAKERS INC
321 Main Street, Amherst • (corner of Dickinson St.)

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES
H-1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification / Special Handling
Extraordinary Aliens
Outstanding Professors / Researcher
National Interest / Extraordinary Ability
Reserve Personnel
All Immigrant / Nonimmigrant Matters
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty
33 Old South Street Northampton, MA 01060
413-586-3332
1500 Main Street - 2nd Floor Springfield, MA 01115
413-781-6570

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap / Rinse / Wax
Bubble Brush / Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser, Vacuum Cleaners & Bill Changers
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS
FOR RESERVATION
586-6843

WE'RE STRONG ON SAVINGS!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEERS WINES LIQUORS
MILLER GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LT. Case of 24-12 oz. Bar Bottles $9.29 + DEP
NATURAL LIGHT Case of 24-12 oz. Cans $8.29 + DEP
HARPOON WINTER WARMER 6 Pack Bottles $4.99 + DEP
MOLSON GOLDEN, ICE, LIGHT Case of 2-12 Pack Bottles $15.49 + DEP
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LIGHT In-Pack 18-12 oz. Cans $8.99 + DEP
SMUTTY NOSE Brown Dog, Shoals Pale Ale 6 Pack Bottles $4.99 + DEP
½ KEGS Bud, Lt, Ice, Michelob, Lt. & Dk., Icehouse, Red Dog, Lite $39.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
FETZER VINEYARD SUNDIAL CHARDONNAY VALLEY OAK CABERNET SAUVIGNON EAGLE PEAK MERLOT 750ML $5.99
WINE OF THE MONTH
JEKEL VINEYARD CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $7.99
CHARDONNAY 750ML $6.99
CARLO ROSSI ALL FLAVORS 4.0L $6.99
CITRA MONTEPULCIANO, TREBBIANO 1.5L $3.99
KORBEL CHAMPAGNE BRUT, EXTRA DRY 750ML $7.99
ROBERT MONDAVI WOODBRIDGE WHITE ZINFINDEL SAUVIGNON BLANC 1.5L $6.99
COSSACK VODKA 1.75L SALE $8.99 MAIL IN REBATE $2.00 FINAL COST $6.99
GLENLIVET SCOTCH 12 year old singlemalt 750ML $18.99
SEAGRAMS V.O. Canadian Whiskey 1.75L SALE $15.99 MAIL IN REBATE $5.00 FINAL COST $10.99
B & B LIQUEUR 750ML $18.99
JACK DANIELS 750ML $11.49
GILBEYS GIN 1.75L SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE $3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 11/30/95 THRU WEDS. 12/6/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Pearl Street Night Club
THURSDAY NOV 30 DANCE PARTY
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
DOWNSTAIRS 8:30 PM SYNAESTHESIA
PHINEAS GAGE
FRIDAY DEC 1 RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70'S & 80'S FREE ADMISSION WITH THIS AD
DOWNSTAIRS 10:30 PM TREE
SATURDAY DEC 2 CLUB NIGHT
Now Available THE CLUB CARD
TUESDAY DEC 5 8:30 PM VELOCITY GIRL
WEDNESDAY DEC 6 GAY NIGHT
With DJ Dennis Sam Adams Boston Ale $2.75 All Month
THURSDAY DEC 7 DANCE PARTY
FRIDAY DEC 8 8:30 PM GOVERNMENT MULE
SATURDAY DEC 9 9:00 PM CHUCKLEHEAD
TUESDAY DEC 12 8:30 PM MERCURY REV
SAT DEC 16 9:00 PM MAX CREEK
SUN DEC 31 8:00 PM POPA CHUBBY

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Heffner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Herman Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist

Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Tom Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the World's Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-World's Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Alaska's Northern Exposure

Alaska has become a test of wills over federal land policy as the state finds itself in yet another national debate. Unlike the land policy campaigns of the 1970s and 1980s, the new initiatives promote resource extraction, not conservation, in Alaska's forests and on the tundra. The outcome will help determine how far the Republican-led congress can go in readjusting the balance between developmental and environmental interests.

As many of you are aware, the push to open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) to oil drilling has gained considerable momentum. The proponents of the drilling are mostly the Alaskan congressional delegation who claim leasing revenues will assist in balancing the budget. However, in attempting to block the opening of ANWR to oil drilling, Interior Secretary Babbitt recently invoked President Clinton's promise to protect environmental spending from budget cuts.

Babbitt says the "spirit and content" of the new budget agreement requires Republicans to drop their ANWR proposal. But Alaska Representative Don Young, who believes ANWR can be opened with little ecological damage, says it is not an environmental issue as much as it is a money issue — the GOP is counting on $1.5 billion in ANWR drilling revenues to help balance the budget.

This is exactly where the oil industry wants to place its oil–field infrastructure. State, federal and international scientists all agree this will cause a major decline in the caribou numbers and will negatively affect other wildlife in the area.

Erin Barnes

Whether or not Republicans in Washington believe this to be an environmental issue, they cannot deny the fact ANWR oil drilling raises issues of fairness. Has the GOP considered either the feelings of the species who thrive in the area, or those feelings of the Native American people who thrive on the sustainability of those species? ANWR lies on the northeastern coast of Alaska next to Canada. It is home to muskoxen, wolves, grizzly bears, many species of songbirds and waterfowl and it is the primary residence of the Porcupine River caribou herd which raises its young on the lush growth of the coastal plain.

This is exactly where the oil industry wants to place its oil–field infrastructure. State, federal and international scientists all agree this will cause a major decline in the caribou numbers and will negatively affect other wildlife in the area.

Equally as significant as the wildlife damage is the dramatic change in Native American culture which would occur should the oil drilling be implemented. The Gwich'in Indians live around the Arctic refuge, mostly to the south. For millennia, they have relied upon the caribou and have developed a relationship to them much like the Plains Indians had toward the buffalo.

They still live a subsistence life and reject our money-based economy. Unlike Representative Young, the Gwich'in tribe does not see this as a money issue, rather a matter of life and death. Devastation of the caribou herd would destroy their culture, ultimately extinguishing another nation of indigenous people.

In a recent opinion column, Rep. Young claims to have considered the feelings of the Native Americans and non–humans in the design of his proposal. He notes the Inupiat Indians and Eskimos have seen first–hand oil development can coexist with their aboriginal lifestyle. Many of the indigenous people still rely largely upon a sub-sistence culture — living off the land, the sea and its wildlife.

But in other ways, according to Rep. Young, the revenues from oil development have allowed the native people to progress from third–world living conditions to living standards of the 20th century. Rep. Young believes "the native people of Alaska support oil development because it has dramatically improved their lives and the lives of their children."

Rep. Young should be cautioned against promoting himself as the protectorate voice of all Native Americans in Alaska. Fish and wildlife represent more than food and clothing to the Gwich'in Indians — they are part of their identity. The oil drilling will wipe out their culture by polluting pristine land decimating the herds of caribou upon which their livelihood relies.

While Gwich'in village residents acknowledge the fact ANWR drilling may bring them jobs and money for luxuries Rep. Young claims all native people want, they prefer to maintain their traditional culture of hunting and gathering. The belief and desire to protect their identity should not be discounted simply because Rep. Young finds such beliefs difficult to quantify.

The debate over oil development and environmental conservation is far from over, and as the issue escalates, the Gwich'in people will continue to keep a trained hunter's eye on the arguments thousands of miles to the east. So far, they have found an ally in the White House. President Clinton has promised to veto any budget that allows ANWR oil exploration, citing concern for both human and non–human interests.

Rep. Young firmly believes the US needs Alaska's oil in order to alleviate our cycle of dependency on foreign sources. Perhaps he should be commended for emphasizing energy independence as a national priority. However, the US should emphasize conservation and development of renewable energy resources rather than the exploitation of finite ones. Since the US demand for energy resources is not likely to subside, energy independence is a rational goal. The chances are good there is three months of oil, at the most, under ANWR, given our present rate of consumption. We could save that amount simply by inflating our tires to the proper pressure. To the Gwich'in Indians, the wildlife and others, that's not just a lot of hot air.

Erin Barnes is a Collegian columnist.

Syria controls the hourglass

Peace, do you believe in it?

For comprehensive peace to occur in the Middle East, trust must be built with the Palestinian people. More importantly, the process of reconciliation between Israel and its immediate neighbors must expand to include Syria and Lebanon.

Guided by the principle of comprehensiveness, full Israeli and Syrian delegations embarked on extensive negotiations beginning with the Madrid Conference in Oct. 1991, which was followed immediately by talks in Washington, D.C. Since Feb. 1994, the negotiations have been held in an ambassadorial level between the Israeli Ambassador, Professor Itamar Rabinovich, whom I had the great honor to meet last week in Boston during the 1995 General Assembly organized by the Council of Jewish Federations and Syrian Ambassador Walid al-Muslem.

David Bloch

These talks led to focused discussions on security arrangements which are crucial to Israel and the convening of two meetings between the chiefs–of–staff on the Israeli and Syrian militaries in Dec. 1994 and June 1995.

The Israeli delegation has stated to the Syrians that Israel is willing to consider an element of withdrawal on the Golan Heights in the context of peace settlement, which simultaneously addresses four key issues: the depth of withdrawal, the schedule and duration of withdrawal, the stages of the withdrawal and the linkage between them and normalization and finally, agreements.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who was assassinated Nov. 4, stated publicly the degree of Israeli withdrawal is related to the degree of peace achieved. In addition, the Prime Minister had stated that should a peace treaty that includes a significant withdrawal on the Golan Heights be negotiated with Syria, the proposed treaty will be put to a national referendum before it is signed, because the majority of Israelis are against a total withdrawal of the Golan Heights.

Syria has done very little to demonstrate its desire for peace with Israel. As has been the case with most Arab countries, if not all of them, peace talks were all initiated by Israel and all the risks that had to be taken to achieve peace with its neighbors were again on Israel's hands.

Syria prevents the upgrading of the level of negotiations with Israel, and refuses any meetings between Israelis and Syrians outside of the formal framework of the negotiations in Washington. Syria rejects any indication of normalization. Its mass media bluntly attacks Israel and its leaders, as they always did, as well as the PLO, which Syria sponsored during their active terrorism phase and those Arab countries who have begun to normalize relations with Israel.

Syria continues to give shelter to Palestinian and other radical terror organizations like Hamas, and to support Hizbullah in cooperation and coordination with Iran. In taking all the necessary and unnecessary risks for peace, Israel cannot succeed alone: it needs an enemy to make peace with, an enemy who can renounce war and terrorism and who is willing to talk about peace.

Unfortunately, Syria does not consider public diplomacy and confidence–building measures crucial to promoting understanding between the two sides, and to preparing the ground between the two peoples for future peace. Israel feels direct and public high–level meetings between Israeli and Syrian leaders will promote the negotiations and bolster public confidence in Syria's desire for peace.

The negotiations between Israel and Lebanon are very difficult if not impossible at the moment. There has been no contact between the two sides since Feb., 1994. From the beginning of the peace process, negotiations with the Lebanese have been overshadowed by Syria's absolute control over Lebanon's policies and decision–making process.

The land of Lebanon being occupied by Syria and its government composed of a great majority of Syrians, Syria holds the key to peace in the region. The government of Israel has clarified to the Lebanese many times it makes no claims to Lebanese land or resources and has suggested a settlement to the Lebanese based upon principles which all involve more security to the region.

If Syria is not able to assure security in the region, which means preventing terrorist activities against the security zone and Israel, that means Syria absolutely does not want to exercise its authority for changing for the better and do not want to stop supplying arms to terrorist organization.

In waiting for peace, time is the only hope.

David Bloch is a College correspondent.

Somebody is always doing something

Those who can, do. Those who can't, try. Those who can't try, give up. Those who can't give up, win. Those who can't win play a different game. Those who can't play a different game make new friends on the block. Those who can't make new friends on the block move to a different town. Those who can't move to a different town hang out at the Store 24 down the street.

Those who can't hang out at the Store 24 down the street, go cruisin in their parents' cars for chicks. Those who can't cruise in their parents' cars for chicks get their parents to give them a ride to the mall. Those who can't get their parents to give them a ride to the mall give up on having a social life and rent a movie. Those who can't give up on having a social life and rent a movie, hang out in front of adult movie stores with signs that say "honk if you love porn."

Evan Young

Those who can't hang out in front of adult movie stores with signs that say "honk if you love porn," write a list of 75 different reasons why women should not have freedom of speech. Those who can't write a list of 75 different reasons why women should not have freedom of speech, wait for four other guys to make the list and get themselves publicly crucified. Those who can't wait for four other guys to make the list and get themselves publicly crucified write editorials in newspapers.

Those who can't write editorials in newspapers write editorials in the Collegian. Those who can't write editorials in the Collegian can't write at all. Those who can't write at all, don't get good grades in college. Those who don't get good grades in college drink a lot of alcohol in college. Those who can't drink a lot of alcohol in college are made fun of at parties. Those who can't be made fun of at parties, are the big frat guys.

Those who can't be the big frat guys live in Southwest and act like big frat guys. Those who can't live in Southwest and act like big frat guys move up to central and learn to hack. Those who can't move up to Central and learn to hack, move to Sylvan. Those who can't move to Sylvan sleep on couches in the campus center. Those who can't sleep on couches in the campus center are picky about where they sleep.

Those who can't be picky about where they sleep are homeless guys. Those who can't be homeless guys have money. Those who can't have money ask their friends for money. Those who can't ask their friends for money rob liquor stores. Those who can't rob liquors stores rob old ladies' houses.

Those who can't rob old ladies' houses get guilty about things easily. Those who can't get guilty about things easily become cops so they can harass college kids at parties. Those who can't become cops so they can harass college kids at parties become mounties. Those who can't become mountees sit around drink beer and watch hockey like the Canadians they wish they were.

Those who can't sit around drink beer and watch hockey like the Canadians they wish they were become twisted individuals. Those who can't become twisted individuals live long and happy lives. Those who can't live long and happy lives turn to smoking. Those who can't turn to smoking turn to smoking menthols. Those who can't turn to smoking menthols chew wintergreen certs all day.

Those who can't chew wintergreen certs all day have halitosis. Those who can't have halitosis are public speakers. Those who can't be public speakers put on a mask and yell about fascism on Tuesday afternoons in front of the student union. Those who can't put on a mask and yell about fascism on Tuesday afternoon in front of the student union have better things to do with their time. Those who can't have better things to do with their time have made it to this point in my article.

Those who can't have made it to this point in my article read the comics instead. Those who can't read the comics instead do the crossword puzzle. Those who can't do the crossword puzzle are verbally challenged. Those who can't be verbally challenged are English majors. Those who can't be English majors become STEPC majors. Those who can't become STEPC majors get disappointed because they won't have a way to showcase their superior intellectual skills.

Those who can't get disappointed because they won't have a way to showcase their superior intellectual skills have no superior intellectual skills. Those who have no superior intellectual skills can't figure out how to end this article. Those who can't figure out how to end this article will end it now.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

Choice (chois), n. [see choose]

Choice.

The word is thrown around in debates, lectures and rallies. It circulates through discussions, seminars and literature. It floats around in advertisements and commercials, and continues through newspapers and magazines.

It is said in microphones, written on signs, spoken in front of crowds. It comes off the tongue and out of the voice box many times by different people in various instances. It is expressed with emotion and feeling, it is communicated for a reason.

And yet, as much importance lies in the true meaning of the word choice, the great magnitude of the word is diminished. In our society, the word has become trivialized, trapped under those same emotions and feelings which sparked the communication and reason.

"I'm pro–choice," I always say with little hesitance. "A woman should have the right to do what she wants with her body. No one should have to tell a woman what to do her with her own body. She has the right to choose, she should have the option to ...."

Andrew Bryce

And as I banter about the choice a woman has, I, too, am guilty of unknowingly utilizing the word without the true subject and the overall meaning in mind. Choice, the word itself, is easy to say. It's one syllable, it's said the way it sounds. It's a fingertip dance through the beginning of the dictionary.

Then there is the word when it's used as far as abortion rights are concerned. Pro–choice is seemingly said and looked upon as just the opposite of anti–abortion only because it is the option other than the one which says you shouldn't kill a baby. It is seemingly used solely upon the word choice, meaning to have an option. The voluntary act of selecting or separating from two or more things that which is preferred." (Webster's Dictionary).

The true meaning of the word choice and how it applies to abortion is lost, deflated in the strict meaning of the term despite it, in context, being of great significance.

Abortion — the debate is, in simple terms, whether or not a woman should be able to terminate a fetus or have the choice to do what she feels with her own body. Notice when a person speaks out on anti–abortion, they say the word abortion. The term, which according to Webster's Dictionary means "the expulsion of the human fetus prematurely ... obviously conjures up a mortal image.

In the same way the word abortion purposely conveys a powerful meaning, the word choice, in the text of abortion, is brought down to a lesser degree of importance. Instead of expressing the idea of killing a child, it supports the freedom of choosing. No mention of a fetus' life being cut short in the term of pro–choice, though that is basically what's occurring.

The vagueness of the term choice is evident as the full meaning cannot be conveyed by the way people use it. When you think about it, that's a shame considering how large in magnitude abortion rights really are.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

Attention all columnists: If at all possible, please come down Sunday afternoon to get your picture taken. Questions? Call Geri.

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545–1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday November 30, 1995
Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 58

BEATLEMANIA... again?

England's biggest musical sensation is staging yet another invasion twenty five years later

Picking the best Beatle movies

If the six–hour "Beatles Anthology" didn't satisfy your craving for the Fab Four, head over to the video store and satiate yourself with some of their cult classic musicals.

Go back to the era when Beatlemania was an epidemic with The Compleat Beatles — a two–hour "rockumentary" which chronicles their days of touring and making all of those girls in the front row swoon. Probably the most thorough source of Beatles concert insights, it is loaded with Beatles songs and nostalgia.

The Beatles' first movie, Hard Day's Night, is director Richard Lester's interpretation of a day in the life of the group. Their crazy days of touring are exaggerated, as they mostly run from screaming fans, while playing "Can't Buy Me Love," "And I Love Her" and of course, "Hard Day's Night."

The band becomes ensnared in a few wild adventures taking them from London to the Swiss Alps to the Bahamas. Help!'s soundtrack includes "Ticket to Ride" and "Another Girl."

Take a surreal ride through Pepperland in the Beatles' only full–length animated feature — Yellow Submarine. George, Paul, Ringo and John do not perform the voicings for their cartoon counterparts, but they do make a live appearance at the end.

Songs like "Lucy in the Sky With Diamonds," "When I'm Sixty Four" and "All You Need is Love" are featured. The band members take a psycadellic voyage in the yellow submarine, as they attempt to save Pepperland from the Blue Meanies.

While the plots of the Beatles' various films are basic, they are always loaded with comedy and are guaranteed to have great soundtracks.

Laura Stock is a Collegian staff member.

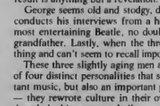
The Beatles... just let them be

Beatlemania 1995.

It seems as though all the hoopla that blasted out of Liverpool over 20 years ago is finally resurfacing once again. But why? What relevance does four mop–topped Brits hold in the age of gangsta rap, grunge and industrial music, besides nostalgia for bored yuppies and dollar signs for marketers who almost wet their pants when the word "reunion" came up?

The answer is simple — there's none. Let's face it, "Free As A Bird" is not quite as embarrassing as many predicted, but it is certainly no grounds for a celebration. The television anthology promised Beatles die–hards the world and in return gave us a bunch of footage that we had previously seen, often edited in an dopey fashion. And finally the (ahem) "new" Beatles records are really nothing more than alternate takes on old favorites and forgotten tracks that were most likely forgotten for a reason.

Is Beatlemaina happening all over again? Not really, although the record companies and television networks would like to lead you to believe so (when ABC starts calling themselves ABeatleC, you know that the whole affair is on collision course with the absurd). So what's the big deal? Why are the fab four's faces plastered over every magazine across the nation, and why is their more Beatles–orientated product on the market than ever before?



Who cares? Put all the fanfare aside. Ignore all the product and documentaries and what you have left is great songs, great albums and finally, one of the greatest bands to ever emerge in rock 'n' roll history. How many people dusted off their copy of Revolver when they started hearing all the news about a Beatles reunion and the upcoming documentary? I did, and I have to admit it never sounded better.

And in the end that should be what this re–examination of The Beatles career should be about — the music. The story has been told before, and even though the actual three surviving members of the group are now adding in their two cents, the result is anything but a revelation.

George seems old and stodgy, dodging questions about the band's drug use. Paul conducts his interviews from a houseboat and in front of a campfire. Ringo (the most entertaining Beatle, no doubt) seems like he could be your mildly eccentric grandfather. Lastly, when the three are shown together, they never agree on anything and can't seem to recall important facts in the band's career.

These three slightly aging men are not The Beatles. The Beatles were a collection of four distinct personalities that somehow came together to create, not only important music, but also an important phenomenon. They were not just part of a culture — they rewrote culture in their own distinct image and then called it quits before the whole thing went to hell.

I think that is what has made The Beatles popularity so endearing. While most of their counterparts have continued to squeeze any dignity out of their careers (can you say, "Rolling Stones?") until they just become a parody of themselves, The Beatles have always kept their musical integrity intact. They are rock 'n' roll's sacred cow (people pick on Elvis, nobody picks on The Beatles) only because they bailed before the creative juices started drying up.

Now that has all changed. The fab four have now become the fab three and the cash registers are ringing to the tune of "Yesterday" once again. Beatlemania 1995 may be looked back on as a big, ugly blemish on what had been an otherwise untarnished career. Everyone says, "John would be rolling in his grave." But would he?

The all–mighty Beatle was beginning to look pretty cheesy in his old age (Don't believe me? Watch the concert film Live In New York and you'll see what I mean) and could easily have been considered an aging dinosaur with some principles intact (as compared to Paul, who's principles went out the window with "Silly Love Songs").

That is why, in the end, not too much stock should be put in this Beatles hullabaloo. But rather, fans should remember the band for what they were and what they did during that time. "Free As A Bird" may be the rage on radio stations now, but will anybody really care in 20 years? Probably not. I'm sure the song will have a long and happy shelf–life somewhere between The Monkees' reunion album and USA For Africa's "We Are The World."

I'm not saying that all this new Beatle product is a bad thing. It has given most fans an excuse to hear some of the classic songs that they perhaps forgot about. For other people who never really got into the whole Beatles–thing, it may give them a chance to be exposed to what all the excitement is about. The old songs still hold up so well today, who needs new songs?

"Free As A Bird?" Thanks, but no thanks guys. Now, where did I put that copy of Sgt. Pepper's?

Matt Audette is a Collegian columnist.

Beatles still got what it takes to be on top

THE BEATLES
Beatles: Anthology I
Capitol/Apple

A quarter century after their demise, it seems only fitting the Beatles begin where they left off — at number one. Beatles: Anthology I marks the first release of new Beatles' material in over two decades, although only one of the songs is an actual new recording.

Backed by the success of the TV special (which it mirrors chronologically), the double album set gave some retailers a taste of what Beatlemania was like the first time around. Crowds gathered outside stores across the country on the eve of the release last week in order to be among the first to grab a piece of record history.

The resulting furor from the strategic marketing of both the album and the TV special helped the Beatles make history once again with the largest first day sales of any record ever — a feat they undoubtedly achieved at the height of Beatlemania when such statistics were not yet kept.

Among the most fascinating and anticipated tracks are both the band's oldest and most recent songs juxtaposed at the beginning of the album. Anthology I begins with a new Beatles song, "Free as a Bird," which isn't exactly entirely new.

The foundation of the song is an acoustic demo laid down in the late '70s by John Lennon in his personal studio, on top of which the three surviving members added a bridge, instrumentation and missing lyrics. The result is an emotional song that eerily echoes the greatness of the past, while maintaining a contemporary brilliance.

The infectious tune is spattered with George Harrison's tasteful and constrained slide guitar complemented by the sweet three–part harmonies of Lennon, Paul McCartney and George Harrison. Ringo Starr ties the

Turn to ALBUM, page 13

Television Anthology not all it's cracked up to be

"She loves you, yeah, yeah, yeah ..." As the Beatles sang these simple words on "The Ed Sullivan Show" in 1964 they revolutionized both the television and musical world. Millions upon millions of viewers watched on their black and white screens three of the most exciting minutes in rock 'n' roll history. The Beatles invaded America at the perfect time and the television cameras caught it all — thus Beatlemania began.

Over the past month, ABC (ABeatleC) has been hyping up the six–hour documentary, "Beatles Anthology," as if it was rock 'n' roll's finest moment since the Fab Four's first American TV appearance. Unfortunately it lacked nearly all the creativity, energy and wit that helped make the band famous.

ABC announced before the show began: "The wait is over. The most powerful band of all time tell their personal stories in their own words and music. From their roots in Liverpool to their biggest conquest — America."

The wait had ended but one had to wonder what the wait was for. It is true that The Beatles were "the most powerful band of all time" but most people already knew that. This documentary hardly exposed new light on the band — if anything it left a sour taste in many fans mouths who cringe when they hear "Real Love" and "Free As A Bird." These tunes were John Lennon tunes, not Beatles' tune.

Beatles have been a band since the last track from the Abbey Road album was recorded. Unfortunately money persuaded the remaining band members to reunite one more time (hopefully the last time) to record a "new Beatles song" and "to tell their personal stories in their own words."

Night One

Images of Liverpool and childhood shots of the four Beatles flashed across the screen while "A Day In the Life" played in the background. Harrison, McCartney and Starr briefly discuss their families and share funny tales. Old interviews with Lennon were included, as well.

As with many children born in the early 1940s, rock 'n' roll changed their lives. McCartney and Lennon both were greatly transformed the first time they

Turn to ANTHOLOGY, page 12

Layout & Design by James P. Ganley & Tara MK Connelly • Collegian Art By Sean Colleran

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Quotes of Note

"It has been suggested by a network goon that we add some spice to the Simpson family by adding another character. I'm resisting this with all my might. However, if a genie or little friendly alien comes to live with the Simpsons sometime soon, you'll know I failed."

— Matt Groenig

"It's easier to solve work problems than it is real–life problems. So the more I'm involved with work, the less I have to think about reality."

— Woody Allen

"I was the man who could have been, should of been, would have been Bond — but who lost it. And now the role has come back to me."

— Pierce Brosnan, the new 007

People and Pop Culture in the News

With a strange case of life imitating art, the Mel Gibson movie, Braveheart has suddenly caused Scotland to renew it's independence fever. Since the movie came out in May, more Scots have shown interest in The Scottish National Party, an organization which advocates independence.

Miramax films just signed a deal with David Schwimmer and Jon Stewart to write and appear in upcoming films. Stewart is to star in the upcoming Wishful Thinking with Drew Barrymore. Schwimmer's contracted to direct and act in The Pallbearer.

Robert DeNiro and his former companion model Touki Smith are proud parents of twin boy by way of surrogate mother. Although the two ended their relationship four years ago, the two are looking forward to parenting their children together.

Poor, poor Anna Nicole Smith. She's been hospitalized on Nov. 6 in Los Angeles following an "adverse reaction to prescription medication," according to the ex–model's spokesperson.

Move over Claudia! Male models are out to prove their worth and among them are several TV and movie stars, as well. Mel Brooks is featured in a magazine spread for Neiman Marcus. Dennis Hopper hit the runway for Hugo Boss. David Duchovny is the sole model for Saks Fifth Avenue fall catalogue. And finally, Jack Wagner made the cover of Sak's fall sportswear catalogue.

If you liked Pierce Brosnan in Goldeneye then you'll be pleased to hear that he's slated for at least two more movies. Brosnan will have more of a part in creating his next film and would like to see Anthony Hopkins as a villain and Sharon Stone as the Bond girl. He'd also like to see younger directors like Quentin Tarantino directing.

Tony Randall fans and Mrs. Randall fan hopefuls weep and lament. The actor, 75 has wed Heather Harlan, 25 in New York City this past November. Three words: Anna. Nicole. Smith.

Wesley Snipes next movie is called The Fan. Snipes plays a baseball player that is stalked by an obsessed fan. It is directed by Tony Scott and also stars Robert De Niro as the aside stalker. Call it a combined Copy Cat and Cape Fear. Call it over done as well.

Out of all the people one would get to host a CBS Schoolbreak Special on the holocaust would you have picked ... Keanu Reeves?!? The actor turned action hero was picked by director–producer Mark Gordon (who also ineidentally, directed Speed) because he wanted children to see someone they respect as the host. Material for this column has been compiled from various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly.

Editors' Cuts

Food Boca Burger

I am a big fan of hamburgers. In fact I recently scoffed down two double quarter pounders at McDonald's — I love them that much. Burgers have been a staple of American life for as long as American's had barbecues. That is why it was with great reluctance that I tried the dreaded veggie burger. Suddenly fearful of high cholesterol and fatty acids, I decided to see if anything could take the place of my beloved ground beef. Surprisingly enough it was Boca burgers that convinced me that there was hope for my arteries without ticking off my taste buds. Boca burgers are like any other veggie burgers, but it's the mixing and subtle exchange of flavors created by the various spices that give it the real honest to gosh burger taste and consistence.

I may not give up my McDonald's runs entirely, but it's nice to know that there is a healthy and tasty alternative to two all beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese ...

— Tara MK Connelly

Movie Miracle on 34th St.

Get in the Christmas holiday spirit early with John Hughes' remake of the 1947 classic, Miracle on 34th Street — just released on video.

This updated version stars Richard Attenborough as Kris Kringle, the Santa Claus who has to make some magic (and win a court case) so people will believe in him. The girl whom he wants to convince he is real the most is played by the adorable Mara Wilson (of Mrs. Doubtfire fame).

Playing the part of the young girl's mother is Elizabeth Perkins, who develops a love interest for her Santa–loving neighbor, Dylan McDermott.

Hughes' version does stray from the original plot a bit, but Miracle remains the sentimental Christmas favorite.

— Laura Stock

Art La Vie Moderne

If you've always wanted to see Paris, Amherst College's Mead Art Museum has an exhibit for you. The exhibition of late 19th and early 20th century prints entitled "La Vie Moderne: Paris in Prints" opened earlier this month.

The exhibit, which will run through Dec. 20, features prints by French, expatriate and Impressionist artists.

High society, fashionable courtesans and night spots are portrayed by artists such as Degas and Manet, while the Impressionists observed the changing social milieu and the relationship of art to modern life.

Views of fin–de–siecle Paris and her inhabitants epitomize the modern human condition, as they chronicle bourgeois prosperity and sophistication as well as urban poverty, moral decadence and artistic bohemianism.

— Seema Gangatirkar

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
R&P Liquors
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
253-9742
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brook, & The Boulders
505 West St. • South Amherst

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex. Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

NEED $150?
WELL-KNOWN COMPUTER COMPANY SEEKS COLLEGE STUDENTS INTERESTED IN PURCHASING COMPUTER HARDWARE AND PRINTERS. WILL PAY $150.
$150 REBATE
Macintosh Performa 636CD
8MB RAM/250MB hard drive, CD-ROM drive, 15" color monitor, keyboard, mouse and all the software you're likely to need.
Looking for a great deal on a computer and a printer can be a whole lot easier than finding a roommate. Because right now, when you purchase a Macintosh® Performa® from the 630 series and an Apple® printer, you'll get $150 back. Just think about it. You can get your work done faster, it will look great and you can receive an extra $150 at the same time. So take a moment to look into the power that can keep you ahead. The power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.® Apple
Color StyleWriter® 2400 w/ CardShop Plus™
ink cartridge and cable included.
Stop By The University Store Computer Department For More Information
UNIVERSITY STORE ☆ Campus Center 545-2619 Mon. - Fri. 9-5 Sat 11- 3
Purchase any Apple Macintosh Performa 630 series or 640CD DOS compatible computer along with any Apple printer and receive a $150 mail-in rebate. Offer valid through January 15, 1996, while supplies last and subject to availability. If you have any questions about the "Performa + Printer = Payback" offer please call 800 950 6154 or see stores for a complete list of details. ©1995 Apple Computer Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the apple logo, Macintosh, Performa, StyleWriter and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. PowerPC is a trademark of International Business Machines Corporation, used under license therefrom. CardShop Plus is a registered trademark of Mindscape. All Macintosh computers are designed to be accessible to individuals with disability. To learn more (U.S. only), call 800 600 7808 or TTY 800 755 0601

~ Movies ~

Animated Toy Story captivates

Boy toys Tim Allen & Tom Hanks delight in new Disney movie

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

TOY STORY
Directed by John Lasseter with the voices of Tom Hanks, Tim Allen
Playing at Hampshire Six

Though the stars of the movie may be made of the shiny and colorful substance, there is nothing plastic about the plot of Toy Story.

Walt Disney Pictures and Pixar collaborated on the production of this premiere full–length computer animated film. While the graphics of the movie are astonishing, the plot of Toy Story is equally captivating.

The toys of suburbia come alive with the help of some very famous voices. Academy fave Tom Hanks gives life to Woody — a pull–string cowboy doll that suffers an identity crisis when his owner, Andy, receives a shiny new Buzz Lightyear doll for his birthday.

"Home Improvement's" Tim Allen provides the voicing for the superhero space action figure, Buzz Lightyear. This latest addition to Andy's toy collection is equipped with laser light flashers and a battery–powered recording of his mantra, "To infinity and beyond!" which inflates his little plastic ego.

Buzz's conceit, we learn as the plot unfolds, is truly ignorance — for he believes he is the one and only Buzz Lightyear, and not a toy. That heart of gold beneath his Space Ranger suit makes us care about him as much as we sympathize with the depressed Woody.

Woody, who demonstrates his leadership in the beginning of the movie by calling all of the toys together for a meeting, feels extremely inadequate next to Buzz. On top of that, Woody's role as favorite toy is literally taken away by Buzz.

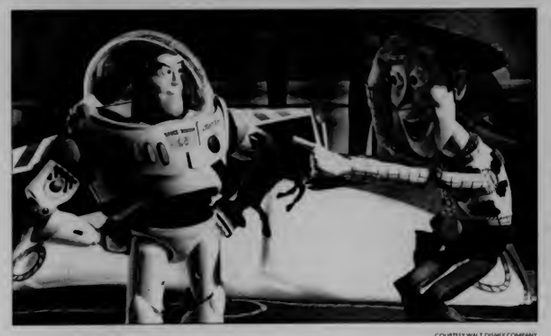
In a fit of jealousy, Woody accidentally pushes Buzz out of Andy's bedroom window. Shunned by his toy–pals, Woody embarks on a rescue mission to find Buzz. Their adventures together bring them to some exciting places, including a crazy pizza theme restaurant and the bedroom of the sadistic, toy–mangling boy next door, Sid.

Woody and Buzz do not steal all of the limelight from the rest of the toys, however. A solid cast of classic playmates exists in Andy's bedroom. With his constantly moving facial features and adult humor, Mr. Potato Head (voice by Don Rickles) is hilarious.

"Cheers" Cliff Claven characteristics return as Jon Ratzenburger does the voice of a piggy bank. Also entertaining is an adorable troop of green plastic soldiers, who lead missions under Woody's orders.

Toy Story doesn't seem the least bit like a cartoon. It's animation is as sparkling new as the computer process is used. Carefully worked into the scenery are scratches on tabletops and scuff marks on doors. The toys, in all of their colorful glory, look real — while the human characters, ironically, look like toys.

While the Disney morals and toy antics will appeal to children, Toy Story also proves that adults are never too old to be entertained by toys. A–



COURTESY WALT DISNEY COMPANY

Toy Story stars Buzz Lightyear and cowboy sidekick Woody.

Money Train misses every stop

By Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Correspondent

MONEY TRAIN
Directed by Joseph Ruben
with Wesley Snipes, Woody Harrelson
Playing at Mt. Farms Four

Wesley Snipes and Woody Harrelson return to the big screen to taunt each other in new and wackier ways in the action–comedy Money Train.

Banking on the success of White Men Can't Jump, this time the two are foster brothers stuck in dead–end jobs as New York City subway cops. Their only way out is — you got it — robbing the money train (the train that collects millions of dollars each night from the subway station).

Snipes (last seen in a dress in To Wong Foo, Thanks For Everything, Julie Newmar) plays the everyman, John, who is always looking out for his screw–up foster brother Charlie. He is as suave as ever and, when need be, is willing to throw down some martial–arts moves.

Harrelson once again falls into the goofy white guy stereotype with his character, Charlie. He is constantly getting into to trouble with his gambling problem, amassing huge debts.

Harrelson sports one of the worst hairstyles ever (short on the top, short on the sides and rock steady in the back), and once again it becomes painstakingly clear that the cast members from "Cheers" should stay away from the big screen.

John and Charlie demonstrate their brotherly love, however, as they often have tiffs that escalate when a new, female cop joins their ranks (played by Jennifer Lopez). Obviously, both compete for the love of the much welcomed vixen.

The Commissioner of the Transit Authority (Robert Blake) is the vindictive boss that won't put up with the brothers' no–holds–barred approach to law enforcement. His primary concern is the subway and his blessed money train.

With his frequent downs–and–outs, Charlie concocts a plan to hijack the money train. Without his brother's help, however, he would be unable to pull it off. The problem that arises is that John wants no part of it.

Director Joseph Ruben, who made an impressive look into the eyes of a serial killer in his low budget masterpiece The Stepfather, has since descended down the Hollywood chain. Big budgets and fast trains do not a good movie make.

–Money Train is both bland and predictable. Wesley and Woody may have had chemistry on the basketball court, but they just don't cut it on the subway. D

January
Winter Session at UMass Boston
Make the most of your January break by taking a course or two at UMass Boston. You can choose day or evening classes in a variety of disciplines. Courses meet January 2 through January 25. The undergraduate course fee is $130 per credit, and you can charge your fees to a MasterCard, VISA, or Discover account. To receive a copy of our Winter Session schedule, send in the coupon, email us at dce@umbsky.cc.umb.edu, or call 617 287-7904
Please send me information about UMass Boston's January Winter Session.
Name
Address
City, State, Zip
Return to:
Division of Continuing Education
UMass Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125
Fax: 617 287-7922
Appears at no cost to the Commonwealth.
UMass Boston

Cypress Hill
III (temples of boom)
Including: THROW YOUR SET IN THE AIR, KILLA HILL, ILLUSIONS
CYPRESS HILL SALE $11.88 CD
ALICE IN CHAINS SALE $11.88 CD
The Presidents Of The United States Of America
Including: LUMP, KITTY, PEACHES
PRESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA SALE $10.88 CD
KORN SALE $10.88 CD
Newbury Comics
50 Main St.• Amherst, MA
256-8840

World AIDS Awareness Week
November 27 - December 1, 1995
VISUAL AIDS
Visual AIDS is an international exhibition that promotes public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS by illustrating how people the world over are coping with the epidemic. The posters reflect the social and sexual attitudes of their diverse sources regarding safer sex, research funding and social justice issues. The curatorial theme of this travelling exhibition highlights the tension between erotic and anti-erotic approaches to life in the Age of AIDS.
Opening Reception: Tuesday, November 28 5:00 - 7:00 pm.
Wheeler Gallery Hours: Monday - Thursday 4:00 - 8:00 pm.
UMASS Panels of the 5-College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt
November 28 - December 14
9:00 AM - 11:00 PM (Monday - Thursday)
9:00 AM - 7:00 PM (Friday)
Graduate Lounge, UMASS Campus Center
HIV/AIDS Awareness Tables
staffed by Peer Health Educators
November 27 - December 1
10:00 AM - 3:00 PM
UMASS Campus Center
AIDS and the ARTS
Wednesday, November 29
Wheeler Gallery 4:30-6:00 PM
tour of the Visual AIDS exhibition with James Miller, Curator and Professor from the University of Western Ontario
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Quilt Panel
Thursday, November 30
7:00 PM - 9:00 PM
Mary Lyons Classroom
students are invited to remember and honor those lost and to create a GLBT quilt panel to be carried at the Candlelight Vigil
World AIDS Day Candlelight Walk and Vigil
Friday, December 1
6:00 PM
from Student Union Steps to Wheeler Gallery
Music, Open Forum and Commemoration of "A Day Without Art"
Visual AIDS is a project of the Five College Sexuality Education Committee and is sponsored in part by the UMASS Arts Council. A portion of the collection will be exhibited simultaneously at each college as a visual backdrop for World AIDS day activities. For more information please call the University Health Services Health Education Division Office 549-2671 x181

~ Previews~

Polish composer's music to be featured in concert

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Most people have probably never heard of Graiyna Bacewicz. The contemporary Polish composer doesn't often have her works appear on American concert programs. Tomorrow night, Pioneer Valley audiences will have the chance to hear Bacewicz's work as performed by the Opus One String Ensemble. The concert, which will take place in Bezanson Hall on the University of Massachusetts campus, begins at 8 p.m.

Veronica Macchia-Kadlubkiewicz, the violinist/director for Opus One, said about Bacewicz, "It was her love for the violin that inspired many of her most successful compositions including the concerto that we will play in Bezanson. The work, written in 1948, features pulsating rhythms, a wide range of color and texture and attractive melodic design which makes the piece enjoyable for players and listeners."

The concert will also feature Henry Purcell's "Canon" and Felix Mendelssohn's "Sinfonia IX in C Minor."

Macchia-Kadlubkiewicz, who is replacing Charles Treger during his sabbatical, was born and educated in Poland. An advocate and performer of contemporary violin music, she participated in the Summerkurs for Neue Musik in Darmstadt, Germany and the Center for the Creative and Performing Arts at State University of New York at Buffalo. She is a member of the Monadnock Music Festival, founder of the New England Camerata and Concertmistress of the New Hampshire Symphony. She has performed with the Orpheus Chamber Orchestra, at the Marlboro Music Festival and has served as Concertmistress of the Polish Chamber Orchestra and Orchesta Filarmonica de Gran Canaria.

Tickets are $2.50 for students, senior citizens and children and $5 for general public. UMass students are admitted free with a valid ID. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or at the door. For more information, call 545-2511.

University Dancers to jazz it up in performance at Bowker

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The University Dancers will perform tonight at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Their inspiration? Solid, liquid and gas. Choreographer Billbob Brown, a University of Massachusetts Dance Department faculty member, used the three states of matter as the starting points for his new piece entitled, "Solid, Liquid and Jazz."

The work's three sections focus on a diversity of dance styles. The first section, solid, revolves around lifts and partnering — liquid includes fluid movements which tell a story of unrequited love. The final section incorporates jazz and funky jazz mixed with hip/hop.

"This piece is fun, entertaining and accessible to a diverse audience," said Brown. "In it we find ways in which the lyrical aspect of dance and street-generated hip/hop styles blend." The piece is set to music by Grover Washington, Jr., Ramsey Lewis, Spyro Gyro and Candy Dulfer.

Another piece that will be performed is "Young Goodman Brown." Choreographed by Smith College Professor Roger Blum, the ballet is based on the 1835 short story of the same name by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

"To me, a ballet of the story seems appropriate because human movement is a perfect medium for communicating the complex and often abstract passions and emotions painted so carefully by Hawthorne," said Blum.

The ballet, which features a cast of 22 characters, is set to the "Petite Symphonie Concertante" by Frank Martin.

COURTESY FRANK WARD

The University Dancers will perform at Bowker tonight, Saturday and Sunday evening.

"Solid, Liquid and Jazz" and "Young Goodman Brown" are just two of the five pieces to be performed tonight. Contrasting choreography is offered by faculty members from the Five College Area, including Andrea Watkins, Jin-Wen Yu and Adrienne Hawkins.

The University Dancers will perform tonight, tomorrow and Saturday night. Tickets to the concert are $7 for the general public, $4 for students and $2 for senior citizens. UMass students are admitted free with a valid ID. Tickets can be purchased at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or at the Bowker Box Office on performance nights.

One Act Plays to be presented by undergrad theater majors

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Theater Department presents Three One-Act Plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate Theater Majors in the Curtain Theater at the Fine Arts Center. The plays which open tomorrow night begin at 8 p.m.

All three plays deal with the battle of the sexes. The victor of those battles is inevitably the force of love. The first play of the evening, "The Marriage Proposal" by Anton Chekhov, takes the audience to 19th century rural Russia where a farmer's daughter and her would-be fiance argue the possibilities of a relationship. In a serious of boisterous misunderstandings, they find togetherness in their love of conflict. The suitor, Lomov, is played by Jase Woodruf, most recently seen in "Vito on the Beach." The daughter, Natalia, is played by Claire E. Davies and her confused father by Aaron Lyons. The play is directed by James Clark, a fourth year undergraduate student in the department.

The second and third plays are both by John Guare and are directed by Dan Blumenthal, also a fourth year undergraduate. "A Day for Surprises" reveals one of the New York Public Library's stone lions very much alive and are feasting on librarians. This shocking realization reveals something of the passions that lie within the normally reserved library staff. The role of the woman is played by Tara Efstathiou and the man by Ben Hellman.

"The Loveliest Afternoon of the Year" shows how seemingly innocent, if not eccentric, an encounter in Central Park can be. Love blossoms in a world where truth is truly stranger than fiction. The role of the young lady is played by Julia T. Sears and the young man by Robert Ripley.

Undergraduates Tim Plankey and Justin Townsend are the lightening and set designers. Costumes and sound are designed by Jill Shea and Ben Stanton. Plays are dramaturged by Nicole Boisvert and the stagemanagers are Jennifer Campbell and Kevin Langlier.

The Three One Act Plays will be presented on December 1-2, 5-9 at 8 p.m. with 2 p.m. matinees scheduled for both Saturdays. Tickets are $6 for general admission and $3.50 for students and senior citizens and can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545-2511. Advance purchase is strongly recommended as seating is limited.

BIG GUY LIQUORS
BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE
•FULL LINE OF BEER, LIQUORS, & WINE•
Open Mon.-Sat.
10am - 11pm
Rt. 63 North Amherst
549-3555
BEER BALLS
KEGS

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

ATTENTION UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
All utilities included • 1.5 baths with Hollywood Lighting • Private patio area • On-site laundry facilities
FALL MOVE-IN SPECIAL!
CALL JENN 256-0741
ALPINE COMMONS
RTE. 9, AMHERST

The University of Massachusetts' Campus Activities Office
Presents
Something Every Friday
A WEEKLY PROGRAM SERIES OF EVENTS
Coming This Friday:
The Acapella Group
REGENCY
Followed by the Movie: Apollo 13
Bluewall Cafe
December 1, 1995 • 8 p.m., FREE
This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

Ads by Credit Cards
VISA
MasterCard
Available Soon

The Distinguished Visitor's Program presents
A Debate: The Bell Curve
What roles do genetics, race and environment play in determining future status?
Dr. Alvin Poussaint
Dean of Harvard Medical School, script consultant to the Cosby Show, psychiatrist and noted social critic. Author of Raising Black Children and Why Blacks Kill Blacks.
Dr. Charles Murray
Author of The Bell Curve and Losing Ground. Bradley Fellow at the American Enterprise Institute and one of the nation's leading conservative policy commentators.
Monday, December 4, 1995, 8:00 PM
Fine Arts Center, UMass
Free to UMass Undergrads with valid I.D., $3 for UMass faculty, staff, and graduate students, $6 for public

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Bud Dry" $9.99 case
Bud & Bud Light
16 Oz bottles
$14.99 case
Absolute 80° $11.49 750 ml
Vodka 80° $8.99 1.75 Liter
"The 6/PK. Bonanza "Continues
Sam Adams- Lager, Ale, Porter, Stout, Scotch, & Cranberry!
Catamount- Porter, Amber, Gold, includ. 'X-Mas Ale!'
Shipyard- Export Ale, Stout, & Brown Ale.
Oregon- Nut Brown, I.P.A., Honey Red, & Raspberry.
Brooklyn- Lager, & the "Famous Brown Ale"!
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Don Q Rum $6.99 750ml
Cider Jack It's Back! $4.99 6/pk
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

~ Music ~

Madonna takes another bow while Magnetic Field attracts attention

MADONNA
Something To Remember
Maverick

Call it Madonna for the adult contemporary listeners or the album of slow songs for junior high dances, either way this release is full of slow sweet ballads begging to be swayed to (alone or otherwise).

Something To Remember is a mix of old and new songs that lull you to sleep and make you feel loved. From the new release "You'll See" (a sequel to "Take A Bow," also included) to oldies but goodies like "Live To Tell" there is sure to be at least one song you like.

Also present is the remake of Marvin Gaye's "I Want You," a dreamy song filled with longing and threaded together with a monotonous but heart felt beat. Two other new songs include "Forbidden Love" written by Babyface (a man who has made a career of writing songs for everyone and their mother) and "One More Chance." Both lack a certain catchy quality, but like most Madonna songs they are sure to catch maximum airplay once released. And chances are if you hear it long enough you'll eventually be humming it as well. A (Tara MK Connelly)

THE MAGNETIC FIELDS
Get Lost
Merge

Although the term "indie-rock" has been tagged conveniently on the Magnetic Fields (a.k.a Stephen Merritt), nothing could be further from the truth. For the past few years Merritt has been bearing the dimly lit torch of Euro/synth pop that was thought extinct when the Pet Shop Boys traded in melody for underwhelming British irony.

Thankfully Merritt knows what made the genre so endearing, and on Get Lost abandons the dreary, atmospheric dirges that he doled out on last year's Charmed Life of the Highway Strip. In exchange, Merritt takes us on a field trip through the history of synth-pop which gives props to just about every name in business, without ever losing Merritt's trademark tinny sound.

Traces of vintage New Order can be found in the scorching track "The Desperate Things You Made Me Do" while the bouncy, disco-bop of "You And Me On The Moon" recalls a less self-conscious Erasure. Tracks such as "Smoke And Mirrors" and "All The Umbrellas In London" hark back to late '70s post-punk greats such as Joy Division, making this collection seem more like who's who of Merritt's influences more than anything else.

Trax On Trax Off

Not that this is entirely a bad thing. Let's face it, music like this just doesn't exist anymore (and if it does you would be hard pressed to find any that is good) and Merritt obviously has a true love for what he is doing. It's funny thinking of what The Magnetic Fields do as "retro" but at times the nostalgic factor weighs in heavy. No matter, Get Lost is still one of the better releases in a lackluster year, and Merritt may just be synth-pop's only living (at least creatively) genius. B+ (Matt Audette)

AIR MIAMI
Fuck You, Tiger
4AD

Still blistering from the scorching success of me. me. me., Air Miami has released their imported four track EP from 4AD. The first rack is a remodeled version of their first single off their debut album a snappy techno version of "I Hate Milk." Borrowing sounds from their predecessors Unrest, the track has that catchy guitar hook and melding lyrics which made them so popular.

Following it is "Warm Miami Day" and "You've Made Me So Very Happy," a remake of the lauded Blood, Sweat and Tears hit in 1969. Elastic with pop melodies and fragrant with the heady noise of guitars and bass is "Afternoon Train," a simple song that cuts to the heart of track without all the added fuss. It all finishes off with "see Through Plastic," a plaintive but infectious ballad supported strongly by a unforgettable guitar. B+ (T.M.K.C.)

COURTESY MICHAEL HALBAND

Echobelly turns it on with latest release.

MR. BUNGLE
Disco Volante
Warner Bros.

Mike Patton's status in Faith No More brought his side project, Mr. Bungle, to attention. With its themes of the circus, violence and sexual deviance, the band's debut brought forth a brew of eclectism that teetered between genius and silly irrelevance.

On their latest effort, Disco Volante, Mr. Bungle again shows shades of musical brilliance yet this time borderlines sheer chaos. Severely disjointed and whimsical, the album veers into territory that parallels the technical merit and avant-garde zaniness of John Zorn's Naked City (it was Zorn who produced the band's debut).

"Carry Stress in the Jaw," in its nine minute-plus duration, gives a hint at the band's new direction as it runs the gamut of musical genres from jazz on through to death metal. Patton's vocals are also more subdued and concentrated on sounds rather than actual words which, in turn, frosts the album's overall ambiguity.

"Chemical Marriage" sounds like a Danny Elfman film score in its mystical carnival sequences while the aquatic epic. "The Bends," leads the

Turn to TRAX, page 11

On Sale Now
11.88 CD
Newbury Comics
50 Main St.• Amherst, MA
256-8840
Sale Ends 11/28/95

SKI BOUSQUET
$20 DAYS $15 NIGHTS
Grand Opening
This Weekend
$5 off with college ID
Dan Fox Drive (413) 442-8316 Pittsfield, MA

BLUEWALL

COFFEE TIME
The Bluewall Coffee Club has arrived!
Buy just 12 cups of coffee and receive 1 medium cup free!

The Daily Collegian
Always making good use of the alphabet

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday - Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Mastercard accepted
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. bott. $18.49 + dep. ALL FLAVORS	SARANAC 24-12 oz. bott. $16.99 + dep.	HEINEKEN 24-12 oz. bott. $18.99 + dep.	MICHELOB & LT 24-12 oz. bott. $13.49 + dep.	BUD 30 PKS $14.49 + dep.	ROLLING ROCK 24-12 oz. bt. $12.49 + dep.
BUSCH & LT 30 pk. cans $11.99 + dep.	BUD DRY 24-12 oz. bott. $9.99 + dep.	NATURAL LT 24-12 oz. cans $8.49 + dep.	HAMM'S 24-12 oz. cans $7.19 + dep.	BEER BALLS BUD BUD LT KILLIANS 21.99 +DEP	KEG OF THE WEEK! BUD LT $36.99 + DEP "KEGS" BUD, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT, MICHELOB DK, LITE, LITE ICE, MGD, LOWENBRAU, ROLLING ROCK $39.99 + DEP
ABSOLUT VODKA $19.99 1.75L	BAILEYS IRISH CREAM $14.49 750 ml	SOUTHERN COMFORT $14.99 1.75L	LUKSUSOWA VODKA $9.99 750 ml	4 Seasons Rum $10.99 1.75L	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.65L
15% Off CASE WINE	INDIAN SPRINGS CHARD. $6.99 750 ml	FETZER BARREL SELECT CHARD. $7.99 750 ml	RODNEY STRONG CHARD. $6.99 750 ML	R.H. PHILLIPS BARREL CUVEE CHARD. $5.49 750 ML	NORTH RIVER WINES $6.99 750 ML

LETS GO! UMASS BASKETBALL & HOCKEY

Newbury Comics

CD BLOWOUT SALE!!

MOST DISCS JUST $11.88 OR LESS!

$14.99 CDS (REGULARLY PRICED) → $10.88

$15.99 CDS (REGULARLY PRICED) → $11.88

NOW THROUGH DECEMBER 5TH!

LAST CD BLOWOUT SALE OF THE YEAR

COME DOWN TO THE GRAND OPENING ON DECEMBER 2ND FROM 2-7PM FOR A LIVE BROADCAST WITH WAAF!

WE'LL BE GIVING AWAY TONS OF WICKED COOL

- CELTIC VS. LAKER TICKETS
- SKI PASSES
- T-SHIRTS
- HATS
- POSTERS
- GIFT CERTIFICATES
- MUGS

AND MORE!

The Daily Collegian

Bringing you the latest in up-to-date recent current fresh news and information.

Regardless of redundancy

WATCH WHAT YOU HEAT!

Everyone is watching what they eat these days, but watching what we heat doesn't always get the attention it deserves. And that can be dangerous.

When you've got something cooking on the stove, keep an eye on it. If you must leave the kitchen for a moment, take a pot holder or a wooden spoon with you to remind you to get back to the kitchen as soon as you can.

Cooking equipment is the leading cause of home fires in the U.S., causing one-fourth of all home fire injuries. Take care when cooking and watch what you heat so you can prevent a fire.

NFPA American Red Cross

■ trax

continued from page 9

listener through a candid yet eerie underwater adventure.

Despite its arty pretensions, Disco Volante has a thought- provoking beauty that is beyond scratching the surface. Extremes somehow find a median between seriousness and pure irresponsibility and Mr. Bungle appears to be seeking greater extremes. A (Wayken Shaw)

ECHOBELLY
On
550/Epic

In the last three years, America has produced three types of bands: bands who think they're Pearl Jam, bands who think they're The Clash — and Hootie and the Blowfish. As such, most of the intriguing new faces on the scene recently have come from that sceptered isle, Great Britain — Blur, Oasis, Elastica, Del Amitri ... the list goes on and on.

Now we can add another talented and exciting band to this lineup. Echobelly, a five piece outfit who have just released their second album, On, an album which fairly bristles with energy, attitude and tremendous musical ability.

Echobelly is fronted by Sonya Aurora Madan, one of the major new vocalists of the decade. By this point, it's become a press cliche to conjure Madan to Blondie's Debbie Harry, but the similarities are evident from the disc's two and a half minute opening punch, "Car Fiction," and they are only reinforced throughout the course of the album.

Madan's gorgeous voice, however, is miles more powerful than Harry's, anchoring every song in a way that only the Cranberries' Dolores O'Riordan has matched in recent memory. Madan's vocals can segue from straight out ballsy and dominant, to the dreamily atmospheric and still dominate instantly — all the while never betraying the direction of the song.

Madan is backed impressively by as diverse a bunch of bandmates one could ever hope to find — Swedish co- songwriter and guitarist Glenn Johanssen, Debbie Smith (formerly of Curve), the group's self-described "token black/lesbian guitarist" and English lads James Harris and Andy Henderson on bass and drums, respectively. Madan is herself of Anglo-Indian blood, and the unique combination of backgrounds in the band result in a harmonious, yet deliciously loud and aggressive whole.

The songs of On perfectly walk the line between instantly hummable hard-pop tunes and topical moving lyrical pieces — with Madan seemingly able to offer stunning insight into any number of subjects. From the single, "King of the Kerb," a sparkling, surprisingly upbeat song about pimps, gangsters and lowlifes, to "Dark Theory," the story of a psychiatrist's session gone terribly wrong, and "Pantyhose and Roses," based on the real-life autoerotic suicide of a member of British Parliament.

Produced by Shaun Slade and Paul Kolderie (who did Radiohead's The Bends), On is an album which knows how to talk as well as rock — and one guaranteed to have you bouncing around your room in sheer pop-delirium delight. And if your roommate doesn't like Echobelly — move. A (Josh Wardop)

PEKING GARDEN OPEN 7 DAYS

ALL YOU CAN EAT LUNCH BUFFET 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday-Saturday Lunch Buffet to Go - also $3.99 Only $3.99

ALL YOU CAN EAT DINNER BUFFET or Dinner Buffet to Go - also $6.99 Regular Menu Always Available Only $6.99

7 NIGHTS A WEEK 5-9 P.M.

LATIN NIGHTS PARTY Every Thurs. & Fri. 8 p.m. - 1a.m. Call 256-4580 or 256-3425

SUNDAY BUFFET 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. Only $5.99

COMEDY EVERY SATURDAY
20% OFF All dinners for Comedy Patrons

Rt. 9, Hadley • 586-1202

COLLEGE SKI or SNOWBOARD from $18 a day STUDENTS

Killington Mount Snow Haystack sugarloaf/usa Waterville Valley BROMLEY

a free lift ticket is just the beginning the extra credit card is now valid every day!

When it comes to great snow and good times, no one keeps you covered like the Peaks of Excitement. With six of the best resorts in New England, you're never more than a short drive from the finest skiing and snowboarding in the East. Just think, wicked half-pipes, killer bumps, "take your breath away" steeps...it's all here.

And now college students have a special opportunity to enjoy it all at great prices. Just purchase an Extra Credit Card for $30. Then, your first day on the slopes is free, and you can buy lift tickets at Killington, Mount Snow/Haystack, Sugarloaf/USA, Waterville Valley or Bromley Mountain for $18 to $30. And new this year, the card is valid every day throughout the season.

	Monday thru Friday	Saturday, Sunday & Holidays
Killington	$25	$30
Mount Snow	25	30
Haystack	18	25
Sugarloaf/USA	25	29
Waterville Valley	20	29
Bromley	18	28

Holidays: Dec. 26-29, 1995 & Feb. 19-23, 1996

If you've never tried skiing or snowboarding, try a learn-to package. For just $35 a day, you get a lesson, a lower mountain lift ticket, and a complete rental package.

So get the card that gives you something extra...and enjoy the payback.

Call 1-800-88-PEAKS
(1-800-887-3257) to get yours. http://www.peaks.com/
Some restrictions may apply. Must be a full-time college student.

SNOOZE
You sleep through morning classes. And now you're gonna blow off the afternoon. The sad thing is, your parents have no clue. They think you're working hard. They're convinced you're busting your butt. They're so damn proud. If only they could see you now. Lying there like a lump. Suddenly guilt sets in. You feel so low. Quickly, you reach for the phone and surprise the folks with a call. Ahhh, now you can sleep in peace.
1-800-COLLECT
Save Up To 44%.

■ anthology

continued from page 5

saw Elvis Presley perform on television. He changed their lives and influenced them to go into music. At the time Lennon had a band, The Quarrymen, who performed around Liverpool. McCartney met up with the young musician and was quickly asked to join the band largely because he knew how to play guitar like Eddie Cochran. Harrison soon joined as he impressed Lennon and McCartney by playing the tune "Raunch" perfectly.

In 1962 the three recorded a cover of the Buddy Holly tune, "That'll Be The Day" and their own, "In Spite Of All The Danger." Both songs were featured on the special in their original form filled with tape hiss and background noise. After some lineup changes, the addition and departure of both Stuart Sutcliffe and Pete Best, Ringo Starr joined the three to form the Fab Four.

On many accounts hearing the band members talk about the early days proved to be the most rewarding segment of the entire television special. Rare video shots of an early Beatles gig at the intimate Cavern Club in Liverpool offered an interesting contrast with the band's legendary show at Shea Stadium in front of 55,000 screaming fans.

The rise from their early gigs to full blown Beatlemania is well documented with the help of thousands of screaming girls. Highlights include hearing their demo which they recorded for Decca who passed on signing the band. Dick Rowe, head of Decca, told Epstein that, "guitar groups are on their way out."

Overall the first night displayed several on-going problems that persisted throughout the mini-series. The lack of a narrator hurts the program considerably, as the storyline is choppy at best. Commercials always pop up at the worst possible time often completely disrupting thoughts.

As with most music documentaries it was the live performances that offered most of the highlights while the interviews provided a few laughs but too many stories that most Beatles' fanatics already knew.

As the closing credits for the first night scrolled across the screen, a clock ticked down the seconds marking time down to hear the new Beatles' song, "Free As A Bird." It was hard not to feel a little bit of anticipation. Unfortunately, as with too many songs from the 1990s, the video was better than the song. Filmed as if a bird was flying through different scenes of Beatles songs, upon a closer look one could find some of the 80 references thrown in.

Night Two

"I love it ... all the decoy cars," commented Ringo Starr on Beatlemania when the Fab Four would literally be attacked every time they were seen in public. Highlights included video from their legendary American tour where they played 32 shows in 34 days and their performance at Shea Stadium in New York City.

As for the interviews the band talked candidly about their meeting with royalty — The Queen of England and the King of Rock 'N' Roll, Elvis Presley. Musically they discussed the bands evolution up to Rubber Soul, which marked the beginning of a new age for the band.

Video clips from Tokyo displayed the band's frustration with performing live as they had great trouble performing complex tunes like "Paperback Writer" live. The band also expressed their fear that their musicianship was declining. Performing live was not their only worry, as their brief stop in the Philippines almost cost them their lives, literally. After declining an invitation to dinner with the Marcos family, the head of the Philippines, the nation had riots and the band had to sneak out of the country.

On Aug. 29, 1966 the band performed at Candlestick Park. Although it was not publically known, it was the band's last live performance. Unfortunately the only live clips from the performance was of the band running across the field to the stage.

Soon after, the band began work on, Sgt. Peppers Lonely Hearts Club Band, the concept album that literally changed rock music forever. Near the end of the episode the complete version of "All You Need Is Love" that was broadcast around the world as the first satellite show.

Once again, the night ended with a new song and video for the Lennon composition "Real Love" which he recorded in the '70s. Harrison, McCartney and Starr added instrumentation to make it a "new Beatles' song," although the same song already appeared in its original form on the Imagine Soundtrack.

Remarkably the documentary spent just a few brief moments on the band's album Revolver which remains one of the band's most important releases. Once again the plot was jumpy and the commercials were haphazardly thrown in.

Night Three

Footage from the band's retreat to India opened up the final segment of the episode. The band stayed with the Maharishi Mahesh, a guru of Eastern philosophy, for several months. While on their stay, tragedy struck. On Aug. 27, 1967, the Beatles manager Brian Epstein passed away. His death nearly disabled the band as Harrison said, "It was a huge void. We didn't know anything about our personal business and finances and he had taken care of everything ... it was chaos after that."

When the band returned they filmed the Magical Mystery Tour, the band's most compelling and artistic film to date. A brief portion was shown including "I Am A Walrus" in its entirety.

At this point, the most interesting interview of the documentary was shown as Harrison, McCartney and Starr were all together. They were sitting by a lake discussing songwriting while Harrison strummed away on his guitar. Briefly he played a tune that he wrote over 25 years ago but never recorded. Unfortunately this was one of only two interviews conducted with all three band members at once.

Night three dragged on like a long and winding road while the plot covered the recording of the bands' last three albums, Yoko Ono's involvement with Lennon and the final breakup of the band. As with before, too much time was spent on trivial matters while major events were left out. Let It Be was arguably the worst Beatles album, yet more time was spent on its recording than any other release.

Concert footage from their legendary rooftop performance on top of the Apple Recording Studio was most appealing but it has all been seen before. Of course, there were more interesting scenes and interviews but too often the show dragged on while losing energy just like the Beatles did near the end of their career.

And in the end ...

It is ironic that when the Magical Mystery Tour was first shown on the BBC, public dissatisfaction was abundant. One headline read, "Beatles' Mystery Tour Baffles Viewers." In many ways this documentary baffled viewers too. The documentary itself wasn't bad but it could have been far better.

Even though it was a disappointment there was material that redeemed the documentary. The previously unseen footage intrigued all Beatles' fans and the live clips never get old. To this day the Beatles's performance on The Ed Sullivan Show remains a rock 'n' roll landmark. Just hearing and seeing the hundreds of girls screaming at the top of their lungs while the Fab Four jammed away sends shivers up my spine. It was Beatlemania at its peak, but Beatlemania is over — even though ABC and Capitol Records don't want you to know.

The television world has seen better documentaries but the world has never seen a band as great and powerful as the Beatles — and it never will.

Mike Burke is a Collegian staff member.

HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS?

If you want to earn some money during your holiday vacation, come to work for the Barnes & Noble College Division. To determine which of the more than 30 college bookstores in Massachusetts and New Hampshire will be closest to where you will be spending your holidays, please call Barnes & Noble Regional Office at (508) 934-6430.

Full and part-time jobs, immediate hires, flexible scheduling, and store discount up to 35%, friendly work environment.
We are an equal opportunity employer.

BARNES & NOBLE COLLEGE DIVISION

nobody prepares you like Kaplan

LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT

Kaplan has the most complete arsenal of test prep tools available. From videos to software to virtual reality practice tests, nobody offers you more ways to practice. Kaplan teachers will show you the proven skills and test-taking techniques that help you get a higher score.

The answer to the test question
1 - 800 - KAP - TEST
413 - 549 - 5780

UMass Division of Continuing Education

January 2-25 · Winter Session 1996

· More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
· Noncredit workshops
· Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
· Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register Now!

Call for a free course catalog · (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education · University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

• THE MEADOWS • COMPLETELY ENCLOSED AND HEATED FOR THE WINTER SEASON • THE MEADOWS •

HARTFORD The Meadows Music Theatre

NATALIE MERCHANT
TIGERLILY TOUR

SATURDAY DEC. 16 8 PM

With Special Guest
The Innocence Mission

Pick up Natalie's solo debut, Tigerlily, featuring "Carnival" On Elektra compact discs and Digiday cassettes

http://www.elektra.com
© 1995 Elektra Entertainment Group, a division of Warner Communications Inc. A Time Warner Company

WHITE ZOMBIE

RAMONES & into another

SATURDAY • DECEMBER 2 • 7:30 PM

Reserved seats available at STRAWBERRIES MUSIC AND VIDEO STORES (cash only) located in CT & W. MASS; and at Extra Extra News & Info, 825 Main St., Htfd: M-F 6am-5pm; Sat 7am-5pm.

Budweiser THIS BUD'S FOR YOU

or CHARGE BY PHONE PROTIX 203-422-0000

NEWS 30 peoples bank Member FDIC

NOTE: Food, beverages, glass containers, cameras and/or recording devices may not be brought inside facility gates. No refunds. No exchanges. Due to the nature of theatrical bookings, schedule is subject to change.

• THE MEADOWS • COMPLETELY ENCLOSED AND HEATED FOR THE WINTER SEASON • THE MEADOWS •

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Michelob & Michelob Light	$6.99 12 pack Bottles	Myers Rum	$12.99 750 ml
Bass Ale 12 pack bottles	$10.99	Early Times Bourbon	$5.99 750ml
Sea Dog (Blond Ale. Brown Ale & I.P.A.)	$5.99/Six	Tanqueray Gin	$12.99 750ml
Naked Aspen (Pale Ale. Brown Ale. Raspberry Wheat)	$5.99/six	Emmit's Irish Cream	$9.99 750ml
Smirnoff Vodka	$7.99 750 ml	Hot Damn	$6.99 750ml
		Keg Special: 1/2 Keg Sam Adams Scotch Ale	$75.00

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

■ album

continued from page 5

whole thing together with simple, yet consistent drumming.

The melancholic tone of the song lends itself to being quite maudlin and sentimental, further highlighting the significant loss marked by Lennon's untimely death. McCartney said in a recent interview with Q magazine, "I've played it to a few people who have cried." The ever more light-hearted Starr said in the same interview that, "it sounds just like [the Beatles]" upon hearing the playback in the studio.

Although they have cameos on one another's albums and performed the odd live show in different incarnations, "Free as a Bird" marks the first time all three surviving members have been in a studio to record since putting the finishing touches on Abbey Road.

As ironic as it may seem, Yoko Ono is largely responsible for providing the vehicle that initiated the reunion.

Following Lennon's recent induction into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame as a solo artist, McCartney eulogized his dear friend in the form of a personal letter. Ono, clearly moved by the gesture, hugged McCartney and later confided that Lennon had never stopped loving him as a friend. This dramatic event marked the point at which a symbolic truce had been declared between the long feuding pair.

After the ceremony, McCartney confessed to Ono his wish to "write with John like I used to," at which point Ono invited him to listen to some tapes of John's which she had been saving for a possible future project. She kindly donated two songs, "Free as a Bird" and "Free Love" to McCartney for use in the video Anthology project.

At the request that she trusted their judgement, she kindly gave McCartney, Harrison and Starr full artistic control over the two songs. Initially weary of the daunting task, the now fab three simply pretended Lennon had gone on holiday and left them the songs to complete with his blessing. With this weight off their shoulders, the trio was able to relax and capture the elusive Beatles' sound with the help of producer Jeff Lynne.

The monumental "Free as a Bird" is backed by what is the oldest song recorded by The Beatles, "In Spite of All the Danger." What it lacks in clarity and audio fidelity, it makes up for by providing an intriguing look into the humble beginnings of the band which would change the world. Incredibly, it is the same demo tape that was rejected by Decca records in early 1962.

While the people at Decca believed that "groups with guitars are on the way out," the execs over at Parlophone knew a good thing when they heard it, signing The Beatles at the end of the very same year. The following year they scored their first number one and the year after that, they commenced their invasion of the then unconquered America.

"Leave My Kitten Alone," a Little Willy John cover is irrefutable the best finished original song on the album. A long time bootleg favorite of completists, it features a blistering Lennon vocal as rough and raw as any early Beatles' track.

It was omitted from official releases because of the abundance of high quality matcrial. Other outstanding tracks include a raucous version of "I'm Looking Through You" sans middle eight, and a poignant McCartney tune originally given to P.J. Proby entitled "If You've Got Troubles," a song as quirky and humble as its shy and unassuming vocalist.

Spread out among these gems are diamonds in the rough in the form of studio out-takes and live performances. Bright spots include the two intriguing versions of "One After 909," a Lennon/McCartney original written early in the band's career, but failed to make it on a record until it debuted on the groups swan song album, Let It Be. These and others like them give insight into the transformation and development of songs that later became Beatle standards.

Although many critics accuse the Beatles of attempting to recoup the millions of dollars lost each year to the bootleg industry, many are reveling in the avalanche of listenable material that has collected dust in Capitol's vaults for years. Last year's BBC recordings were mere appetizers for ravenous, insatiable fans who can't seem to get enough of the Fab Four. Fortunately for them, they won't have to wait 25 years for the next release.

Anthology I merely marks the pre-Beatlemania days spanning from 1958-1962. The second of three planned double album releases, due in early Feb. 1996, will cover the next four years and the remaining four years will be documented by the third and final double release due out next spring. Beatlemaniacs will have relatively little time to recover from the onslaught before being bombarded once again with scores of musical masterpieces. With the anticipated release of further archival gems, The Beatles seem to once again be "Here, There and Everywhere." In this three-historic era, it certainly is "Getting Better All the Time" for Beatles' fans.

The Beatles: Anthology I and its brother volumes are not greatest hit packages for the casual listener who simple seeks the hits, but rather an audio testament that documents the growth of the most enduring and endearing band in recording history. Anthology is a collection of material that caters to the fans who wish to witness the genesis of genius that was The Beatles. A

Michael McCloskey is a Collegian staff member.

■ NBA

continued from page 16

changes. Bottom line — GM Willis Reed and head coach Butch Beard could be working for Santa by Christmas.

• How big of a joke are the replacement officials? Charles Oakley was recently assessed a technical foul in a game versus the Rockets for not having his shirt tucked in properly. Memo to commissioner David Stern: "Hey Dave, What's going on here?"

• Guess the '76ers have finally lost all patience with erratic stick-figure Shawn Bradley. A reliable source informed me Sixers GM/coach John Lucas contacted the Knicks about reserve point guard Charlie Ward (currently suffering from a severe case of splinteritis). In order for the Knicks to even consider such a deal they would have to part with either Charles Smith or Oakley to match Bradley's outlandish salary. It is highly unlikely that the Knicks would tamper their nucleus to acquire a project such as Bradley.

• Finally, has anyone seen Suns rookie Michael Finley? The Wisconsin grad (selected 21st overall) has been nothing short of awesome. Not only is Finley playing well, he is on the floor at the end of games hitting big shots and winning games. Shows you just how hard Suns scouts work during the season.

Darren Cohen is a Collegian columnist.

■ football

continued from page 16

vote in recent years.

A prediction: George wins. I backed him all year and will stick with that. He has the numbers and played well despite his team's loss to Michigan. Frazier, despite a big game from Wuerffel this Saturday, will hold on for a close second place.

• Here's a quick look at this weekend's match-ups

Florida v. Arkansas

The Gators are a 23-point favorite and why not, they have been phenomenal all year.

Sure the Gators can't run the ball, but who cares with Wuerffel throwing TD's to Ike Hillard and Chris Doering.

Danny Ford's Razorbacks have surprised at 8-3. Their defense is key while Madre Hill and QB Barry Lunney head a tasty offense.

Spurrier has said what a huge game it is, Gators tune up for the Huskers with a win. Florida 44, Arkansas 21.

Texas at Texas A&M

Both teams come in hot. A&M has won six straight while Texas hasn't lost in its last eight games.

The Aggies disappointing start has brightened. QB Corey Pullig and running back Leeland McElroy have been solid offensively while the defense has played that tough 'D' they expect in College Station.

Texas has taken it on the chin in recent games with the Aggies but appear to have the upper hand. QB James Brown has shown signs he's a player and Tony Brackens has returned from injury to lead the defense.

The Longhorns shouldn't be denied and will bid farewell to the SWC with a win. Texas 28, Texas A&M 24.

Army v. Navy

Both teams come in with comparable records. Army is 4- 5-1 while Navy comes in 5-5.

This one always comes down to who wants it more and who plays with more emotion. It's one of the biggest rivalries in all of college football.

Bob Sutton's Army team nearly knocked off Notre Dame earlier in the season. They get the next biggest prize on the schedule and bragging rights for another year. Army wins the battle in the City of Brotherly Love. Army 19, Navy 16.

Greg Corey is a Collegian columnist.

■ polo

continued from page 16

the UMass fast break.

"Alex is the backbone of this team," Yarworth said. "He runs the defense and everyone relies on him to be the stopper.

"They've been a great foursome to have. I think this is a culmination for them. They know that this is a great opportunity for them to go out and do something that no other [UMass] water polo team has done. Win or lose, we've had a great season. They're a great group of kids and they'll always remember what they've accomplished here."

The four have certainly done a great deal for the UMass water polo program and for themselves. But they are not done yet. Their careers come to an end when they compete for the NCAA Championship in Palo Alto, Calif. on Saturday and Sunday.

Collegian Graphics
We just work here (and only on weekdays)

Show Your UMass SPIRIT!!

Call today for your appointment
PATRICK & Company
104 Russell St. (Rte. 9) Hadley
586-7477

Interested in a Challenging and Exciting Career that will put your Social Concerns into Action?

Consider a Career in Clinical Social Work...

To find out more, attend the Smith College School for Social Work

INFORMATION DAY

Saturday, December 2, 1995
2:00 p.m.
Wright Hall Auditorium

For more information, call (413)585-7960.

NCAA® 1995 DIVISION I WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

December 14 & 16
Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts
For tickets, call
413/545-0810

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS Holiday SAVINGS

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS Insurance Policy
Shop Around For The Best Possible Price, Then Come To Klein's And We'll Beat That Price!

Gift Certificates For The Holidays!

Something For Everyone On Your Holiday Gift List!

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
Hampshire Mall • Hadley

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
Presents:

PAWSS

"INTERPRETING THE WAR: THE DEBATE OVER VIETNAM"
A Lecture by:
MARILYN YOUNG
New York University

Thursday, November 30th
7:30 PM
Main Lecture Hall, Hampshire College

This program is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information call PAWSS at 582-5519.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD

Kai Lih delivering Sunday through Thursday 12-11pm and Friday and Saturday to 3am. 586-2774

Need an escape? Join us this spring on the water with the sailing team. Call now. Emily 546-5857

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment for rent starting Jan 1st. 2 bathrooms, on bus line, near school. Contact Nagib 549-8415

Take over lease 2br apt on bus route Call Megan 665-4304

AUTO FOR SALE

BLUE '86 SUBARU

86 Subaru Four wheel drive. Brand new brakes, muffler, water pump. $1,200 o.b.o. Call 582-9105

Volkswagen Golf 1985 well maintained 91,000 miles $2500. Call 256-1959

88 Merc Topaz Good cond. Runs excel $1000 obo. 546-7942 John

90 Ford Tempo 4 dr, $7500. Call 256-3052!

EMPLOYMENT

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $275-$375/week working to save the environment with Messpirg. Casual, fun atmosphere. Call Terri at 256-6434

Exotic Dancers Flex hours no exp. 413-536-0502

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours. Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 28 hrs per week. Start at $5.25/hour with good training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're in the Mt Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri (413) 586-8635. ABT Associates, telephone research center, Mt Farms Mall, Rte 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45/hr. teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J60012

We want you Unique liquor related product. Retails for $200. Inventory required $7500. Follow our plan and sell only 2 sales per day in each location - your profit $32,400 first year! 941-766-9001

$40,000 Income Potential Home typists/PC users. Toll free 1-800-898-9778 Ext T-1732 for listings

FOR RENT

Two 900 #'s Be creative to earn big money. Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Amp for sale Peavey studio pro 60 50w Asking $150 or b.o. Call Adam 6-6835

Big dorm size fridge $130 or b.o. Call Kalina @ 665-5093

CD Rom games for Mac 7th guest, myst gadget, hall throttle, original packaging 584-0942

UMass vs Maryland 2 tickets for bas ketball tourney in Maryland 4 games if interested, call Anthony @ 549-7324

286/386 Computer System $105/$205 Keyboard, CPU, monitor. Call Steve (413) 566-3324

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5263

LOST

Reward$ I lost my thick silver bracelet with green stones in town between Delanos, Barcy's and Antonio's on Friday Nov 18. Was a present from deceased mother. Please return for reward. Call Sarah 546-3813

PERSONALS

Lauren Lauren Here's your third clue I'm really short and sometimes quite stuffy also my nickname is fluffy. Sigma Love ????

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7942

ROOM FOR RENT

Available 1/96 Room in 4 bedroom/Belchertown prefer female $78+ Jennifer 253-0676

Looking for upbeat female to share 2 bedroom apt. Available Jan 1. Aug 275/mo negotiable Call 549-4835

One bedroom in 6 five bedroom house. Smoking OK. $270 p.m. month. 256-4295

One bedroom in vacant two bedroom apartment as of December 22 and/or January 25th. Call Kalina at 665-5093

Room for rent on bus route, all utilities included. Male or female. $268 per month. Available Jan 1. Call Nikki 253-7741

Room for rent in private home quiet neighborhood, kosher/vegetarian kitchen, laundry, parking furnished. $325 incl. Jan 30 549-4853

Room for rent in townehouses $215/mo. Call Jamie 549-5767

Room at Cliffside Avail Jan 1. For spring sem $315/mo inc all utils! Grad student pref. 665-7810 Chris

Single in 3br Puffton Apt. Avail Jan 1 225/month Call 549-6894

Large Bedroom in Belchertown apt for 1/2 people. New, quiet, on bus route. Available whenever. Scott 253-1768

ROOMMATE WANTED

Person wanted to share room in great house in great location. Call 549-4827 ASAP!

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located (1/2 mile to UMass and center of Amherst), beautiful 3 bedroom, 2 1/2 bath condo at Amity Place. Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen, and great sunset views. Must be responsible, cat-loving, non-smoker. $425.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3866

Roommates wanted for an open bedroom in Brandywine Apts. Heat & hot water incl. Start Jan 1 or Feb 1 call Andy at 549-5747

Roommate wanted non-smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month. On bus route. Start Jan 1st. Call Anne 253-1605 heat & hot water included

Roommate wanted to share apt in Mill Valley. Heat & hot water incl. 253-1402

SERVICES

Free financial aid! Over 6 billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext F50012

RESUME

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union. 545-2271

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

Caribbean/Mexico $189 r/t San Juan $745 r/t California $175 o/w Europe from $729 r/t Cheap airfares to S. America, Asia, Africa, Middle East and Australia Call (413) 587-0001 Air Tech New England

TRAVEL

JAMAICA

Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

Winter Break Special Killington week $269. Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED TO RENT

We are two females looking for 2 rooms in which to rest our heads from Jan or Feb 1st (pref Feb) until June 1st. Will also consider 1 Large bedroom. Apt or house is fine. Bus route would be ideal. Please call Stacy or Renee evenings at 549-4868

WANTED

Models wanted National published sports and actions photos seeks athletes/models for photo shoot. Will photo you and your sport. 413-584-8585

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

El Ché says:
"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"
Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Thursday Ticker

Market closes as of 4 p.m. November 30

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	5,105.56	+27.46
Standard & Poor's 500	607.64	+1.19
Nasdaq Composite Index	1057.57	+7.52
AMSE Index	533.03	+2.29

Market Reports

Compiled by Matthew Wurtzel

NEW YORK (AP) — Financial markets got a lift from increased speculation that the Federal Reserve would lower interest rates as soon as the budget crisis in Washington is resolved — possibly early next month — and on expectations that Germany would cut its rates Thursday.

As bond prices rose, yields on 30-year Treasury bonds fell to the lowest level since early Jan. 1994.

Falling interest rates would reduce borrowing costs for businesses and consumers, helping increase economic activity at a time when inflation appears contained at a low rate. In addition, falling interest rates make returns more attractive on stocks compared with bonds.

On Wednesday, the White House and Republican congressional leaders agreed to strike a budget deal by Dec. 12 and conclude action on the legislation by Dec. 23.

Once the budget crisis is out of the way, analysts believe the central bank can reduce interest rates. That is because, while investors did not receive any new economic data Wednesday, recent reports have indicated that "economic growth has slowed, but it's not disastrous," said Barry Berman, head trader at Robert W. Baird & Co. in Milwaukee.

Arts & Living
So you wanna write for arts.
But you don't know what it does
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Seema or Laura.
They give you an assignment.
You take it and write.
You're happy.
It's a lot like Nike: you just have to do it

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Margery of rhyme
4 Inundated
9 Noble Italian family
13 Kimono sash
14 Like ancient manners?
15 Short tail
16 Deceptive
19 Melody
20 Laterally
21 Comic and grand
23 Harass
24 Scornful smile
25 Felix's messy roommate
28 JFK sight
30 Wide of the mark
33 Parts of place settings
35 Homophone for 22 Down
37 Sass
38 Class
39 On the qui vive
41 Excellent
42 Poetic contraction
43 Entreaty
44 Type of beer or pine
46 Initiative
48 Runner for Moe
50 Laid level, the English way
51 Concerns
53 Lighthearted youth
55 Incarcerated
57 Boa
61 Clarinet's cousin
62 Native
64 Border on
65 Old hat
66 Resort
67 "Untouchables" lawman
68 Gorged
69 Like a cool cat

DOWN
1 Capitol topper
2 In the arms of Morpheus
3 Kite's appendage
4 Computer code for info. interchange
5 Body lines
6 Lotion additive
7 Erwin of the early movies
8 Chinese green tea
9 Regard highly
10 Insulting
11 Albacore
12 Soisson summers
17 War of words
18 Cognizant
22 Prickly — cactus
24 Luminary
25 Made a choice
26 Less naive
27 Whimsical
29 "— softly and carry ...": Roosevelt
31 Because
32 Go too fast
34 Gal of song
36 Not his or hers
40 Minus
41 Henry's Katharine of —
43 Pierre's papa
45 Cost
47 Men's men
49 Kindle
52 Prepares copy
54 Seethed
55 Comic Rivers
56 French ecclesiastic
57 Mine passage
58 Snack
59 Gullible person
60 PDQ
63 Blue Eagle agcy.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

B	A	R	S		N	E	N	E		S	A	T	E
A	B	E	T		O	L	A	N	D		I	R	E	S
A	R	E	A		T	A	S	T	E		M	I	R	E
L	I	L	L	I	A	N	H	E	L	L	M	A	N
				W	O	R	D		E	Y	E
A	L	B	A	N	Y		R	E	T	O	R	T	E	D
C	H	A	R	S		H	A	V	E	N		E	R	A
H	A	R	T		T	A	R	E	S		S	P	O	T
E	S	O		R	O	G	E	R		C	H	I	D	E
D	A	N	S	E	U	S	E		G	O	A	D	E	D
			T	A	R			A	R	I	D
	T	H	E	L	I	T	T	L	E	F	O	X	E	S
S	H	E	A		S	H	A	L	E		W	E	R	E
P	U	R	L		T	I	B	E	T		E	R	S	E
A	G	E	S			N	U	N	S		D	O	T	S

12/30/94

By James L. Beatty
© 1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

12/30/94

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

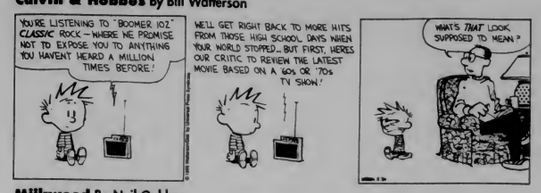
Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



YOU'RE LISTENING TO "BOOMER 102" CLASSIC ROCK — WHERE WE PROMISE NOT TO EXPOSE YOU TO ANYTHING YOU HAVEN'T HEARD A MILLION TIMES BEFORE!
WE'LL GET RIGHT BACK TO MORE HITS FROM THOSE HIGH SCHOOL DAYS WHEN YOUR WORLD STOPPED... BUT FIRST, HERES OUR CRITIC TO REVIEW THE LATEST MOVIE BASED ON A 60s OR 70s TV SHOW.
WHAT'S THAT LOOK SUPPOSED TO MEAN?

8 Years in Braces By Erik Petersen

Milkweed By Neil Golden

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?
HEY, MOM! LOOK AT ME, I'M GOT AMERICA ONLINE!
THEY DID?
YEAH. THEY THOUGHT THEY WOULD GET ME MORE INTERESTED IN MY SCHOOLWORK.
WITH JUST THE CLICK OF A BUTTON, YOUR CHILD TOO CAN ENJOY ALL OF THE INTERNET HAS TO OFFER.
YOU WOULDN'T BELIEVE THE TIME I SAVE!
IMPLEMENTING YOUR STRIPES OF THE FEMALE ANATOMY'S FUN.
I USED TO HAVE TO SUBMARGE THEMSELVES IN PARENTS' ROOM FOR HOURS TO GET THAT PAINT!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

ROGART'LL PAY PLENTY FOR WASTIN' SPIDER-MAN!
THAT'S WHY I'M GONNA DO IT!
UH-OH!
SORRY TO RUIN YOUR PAYOFF, GUYS--
--BUT I'VE GOT BUSINESS INSIDE!

Monkey Socials By Boogaloo Shrimp

GUS MEETS BOSS
Hey I've Seen You At The GYM Before!
I'M SO MESSED UP RIGHT NOW!
You Know Why I Lift? To Get Chicks. Chicks Dig Me!!
And You're Not A Comp Sci Textbook?
BOSS AMELIA
NO FEAR

Bruno By C. Baldwin

DO I NOT WANT TO SIMPLIFY MY LIFE, OR AM I JUST INCAPABLE? I'VE NEVER BEEN ABLE TO FULLY LET GO, THAT I CAN THINK OF...
FRANKLY, I DON'T THINK YOU ARE CAPABLE. NOR DO I THINK YOU TRULY WANT TO SIMPLIFY YOUR LIFE.
JUST THIS CHAOS I PUT MYSELF THROUGH IS SO TIRING, AND TO SIMPLIFY IT ALL... IT JUST SOUNDS SO NICE, IT REALLY DOES.
OH, IT SOUNDS REAL NICE AND I BET YOU SECRETLY WISH THAT TEDDYSON CHOSE THE JAPANESE MANTA AS HIS MEDIUM.

Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand

One sunny day at the Campus Pond...
QUACK
WHAT THE...
QUACK QUACK QUACK
QUACK
oh oh
Unfortunately Specks did not see the slice of bread he steped in.

Big Man on Campus By David Schneidner

JAKE, I THINK IT'S GREAT YOU BROUGHT YOUR MOOSE FRIEND HOME FOR THANKSGIVING...
WE ALL THINK HE'S JUST A REAL NEAT GUY...
BUT DON'T YOU THINK HE MIGHT BE MISSING THE CONCEPT OF "THANKSGIVING"?
DAD STILL HAVE THAT SHOTGUN?

Munch Monster U. By MMC

ANOTHER ERIN SNOWED DAY ON CAMPUS
MAN, IT IS SO WET OUT THERE! DO YOU THINK WE'VE GOTTEN ENOUGH RAIN YET TO MAKE UP FOR THE SUMMER'S DROUGHT?
WELL, CONSIDERING THAT OUR FRIEND MUNCHIE IS OUTSIDE...
TAKING HIS PET FISH FOR A WALK, I'D SAY WE'VE HAD PLENTY AND THEN SOME!

Small potatoes By Jon Art

Loold By Roger and Salem Salloom

My uncle Reggie flew into visit my family yesterday. We were all pretty excited to see him... haven't seen him in years.

We figured out his plane arrival time, drive time and all the other stuff so that he should've walked through the door around 1 p.m. Instead he walked in at 3 p.m. We were worried.

He said he arrived at noon but went to a motel and then went out to have his nails done. He said he's not effeminate it's just a nice thing to do. Then Reggie said he was tired. The night before he spent 4 hours in the hospital emergency room. His ankles swelled up because he had a wicked sunburn on his neck.

He was so tired he fell asleep on the couch at 5 p.m.... while we were talking to him.

When I grow up I want to be like him... clean nails, sunburn on my neck, have doctors and nurses take care of me all night long and then fall asleep as soon as my relatives start to talk to me.

Ever Think of writing for Sports?
Stop by the Collegian Office at 113 Campus Center

Close to Home By John McPherson

"She's not supposed to be in school today. All of the kids telecommute on Thursdays and Fridays."

Close to Home By John McPherson

An amateur magician as well as an obstetrician, Dr. Kingsley felt it was important to bring some humor into the delivery room.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Tim J. White
Copy Editor ..... Andrew Bryce
Photo Technician ..... Ryan Tiezzi
Production Supervisor ..... jim Ganley
Production ..... Matt Audette
Amy Paradysz, Leon Latino

Dining Commons Menu

Friday

LUNCH
Sloppy Joe
Clam roll
BASICS LUNCH
Vegan Sloppy Joe
Clam roll

DINNER
Chicken tenders
Beef & broccoli
BASICS DINNER
Chicken tenders
Tofu & broccoli

Saturday

BRUNCH
Omelet w/ veggies
Jumbo waffles & hash
BRUNCH
Polynesian vegetables
Jumbo waffles

DINNER
Stuffed shells
Pancakes & sausage
BASICS DINNER
Black-eyed peas
Stuffed shells

Sunday

BRUNCH
Eggs & bacon
Texas french toast
BASICS LUNCH
Texas french toast
Roman rice & beans

DINNER
Turkey divan
Tacos
BASICS DINNER
Turkey divan
Vegetable taco

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10

By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Quotes you'll never hear aboard a pirate's ship

10. "Ahhrrr... That sun dress looks mighty good on ye."
9. "But Captain! It's my turn to swab the deck!" (Thanks A.J.C.)
8. "Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of Zima."
7. "Aye-Aye, Captain Scott."
6. "I think this is the one where Dylan and Brenda have sex."
5. "Retreat! It's the Dred Pirate Roberts!"
4. "Yeee-ouch! That's not the plank!"
3. "Who wants some yogurt?"
2. "Give us a kiss you 'ol scalawag!"
1. "Tickle fight!"

Quote of the Day

"God gave man a penis and a brain, but only enough blood to use one at a time."

–Robin Williams

Sports Notice

Student pick-up for the Wake Forest and UNC-Wilmington men's basketball games, along with the BU and Vermont hockey games, will be today from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage. No lines will be able to form before 6:30 a.m. If there is a line before 6:30 then tickets will be distributed by a lottery system.

Sports

Clarke breaks foot

Massachusetts freshman guard Charlton Clarke broke his foot early in Monday's win over Kentucky and could be out for 4-6 weeks, UMass coach John Calipari said last night during his radio show at Bertucci's in Amherst.

Clarke injured his foot in a collision seconds after entering the game in the first half. He never returned and was on crutches in the second half. This is Clarke's second injury as a Minutemen. He sustained a knee injury in preseason that forced him to have surgery, keeping him out of action for 2- 4 weeks. He saw his first action in UMass' exhibition loss to the Converse All-Stars on Nov. 17. In 22 minutes of action, he played aggressively scoring seven points and dishing out two assists.

Clarke's injury presents a huge problem for the Minutemen, since the backcourt is even thinner. Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso, who played 39 and 36 minutes respectively in Monday's win, will have to continue to play a lot of minutes. The only other backcourt possibilities off the bench are Giddel Padilla, Ross Burns and Andy Maclay, all walk-ons. The loss of Clarke probably means more minutes at the two guard for Donta Bright. The Minutemen head to Landover, Md. this weekend for the Franklin National Bank Tournament where they will face Maryland.

— Candice Flemming

Water polo heads for the NCAAs

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

East meets West in a big way this weekend as Massachusetts travels to Palo Alto, Calif. to compete in the NCAA men's water polo Final Four with three University of California squads.

The fourth-seeded Minutemen will face top-seeded UC- Berkley while UC-San Diego will play UCLA in the other first round match-up.

"This first round match is one that we're excited about. This is the third year in a row we'll be facing Cal in the first round," UMass coach Russ Yarworth said. "We feel we know them. We feel we can compete with them and our goal is to go out there and pull off the upset."

An upset it will have to be as Cal has been to more, and won more, NCAA tournaments than any other men's water polo team in history.

On top of tradition and reputation, Cal has one of the best coaches in the country in Steve Easton. Easton was head coach of the gold medal winning U.S. club in the World University games. Yarworth was an assistant coach on that team.

Cal's answer to Massachusetts' leading scoring threat, Luis Limardo, will be Derek Albright. One of the country's most complete players, Albright is the anchor of a strong, physical defense and the catalyst of the Golden Bear offense.

UMass (28-5, No. 12 in nation) will try to counter the potent California (19-6, No. 1) attack with strong transitional defense and improved play in man-up and man-down situations.

"It's no mystery to our guys that they have to play the best game of their life to be competitive," Yarworth said.

Last year at the NCAA Championships, the Minutemen nearly became the first non-California team ever to win a first round match. UMass stayed within two goals of California for three quarters, but couldn't hold that level of play as the Golden Bears pulled away to win, 12-7.

UMass was ruined in its other meeting with Cal-Berkley last year, losing to the Bears 20-3 at the Labor Day Invitational in Annapolis, Md.

Although Yarworth's squad has not had much success against California teams in the past, he feels confident his club will show up ready to play.

"We're in the best position [in which you can be] in a tournament like this. We aren't expected to win, so that takes some of the pressure off. I'm sure we'll go out there and play the game we're capable of playing," he said.

* * *

There are four graduating seniors on the UMass squad that will be playing competitive collegiate water polo for the final time this coming weekend — co-captains Luis Limardo and John Luviano, goalie Alex Mujica and Frankie Mariani.

Limardo — A two-meter player from Guaynabo, Puerto Rico, Limardo is one of the most prolific scorers in UMass water polo history. In 1994, he set single-season records for goals scored (126), fouls drawn (71) and penalty shots drawn (8).

"Luis has proven that he is a game player," said Yarworth of his departing star. "He keeps the team loose with his sense of humor."

Luviano — "Luvi is probably the hardest worker you'll ever find in any sport," Yarworth said.

Luviano, a native of Glenside, Penn., played through a serious shoulder injury to lead his team through the Eastern Championships. He plays hard-nosed defense and is one of the team's best passers. Luviano has gone from hardly getting wet his freshman year to setting a UMass single- season record with 137 quarters played last season.

Mariani — A driver from Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico, Mariani gives Yarworth the ability to depend on his bench. Mariani came on strong late this season taking the sting out of the loss of sophomore J.C. Limardo to multiple frustrating injuries.

"Frankie is a guy that understands his role. He is a team leader by both effort and example," Yarworth said.

Mujica — The UMass career leader in saves and quarters played in goal, Mujica has been one of the most consistent goalienders in the country, and the best goalie in the East this season. Also from the water polo factory of Rio Piedras (Mariani and UMass' all-time leading scorer Javier Gonzalez hail from the same city), Mujica is the anchor of the Minuteman defense, and the spark plug of

Turn to POLO, page 13

Douglas traded, Bucks dealing

Welcome back hoops fans, hope everyone enjoyed their Thanksgiving break.

Ok Celts faithful, it looks like the "forever turning" wheels of rebuilding are once again in motion. M.L. Carr surprised few earlier this week when he dealt displaced point guard Sherman Douglas to the Milwaukee Bucks. In return for Douglas, the Celts received guard Todd Day and reserve center Alton Lister. Reports indicate Carr is a big fan of the inconsistent Day and was pleased with the acquisition. In trading Douglas- Carr is finally able to place (grossly- overpaid) free agent Dana Barros into the starting lineup.

Darren Cohen on the NBA

However, it is no secret Carr took on the responsibility of rebuilding the Celtics with one condition ... he wants to win with "his own players." With this in mind, along with M.L's admiration of guard Greg Minor, the future of Dee Brown as a Celtic looks quite bleak. To make room for Lister on the roster, the Celtics waived backup center, Charles Claxton.

What's up with the Bucks? When the above trade was first reported, I was somewhat confused. Why would GM/Coach Mike Dunleavy trade for Douglas, a point guard, with two point guards (Eric Murdock and Lee Mayberry) already on the roster? Truth is, Dunleavy lost his patience with Murdock, who has struggled so far this season. Clearly, the Bucks hope Douglas can provide stability to their backcourt.

Speaking of Murdock, once Douglas was acquired he was deemed expendable. So, a day later the Bucks shipped Murdock and center Eric Mobley to the Vancouver Grizzlies for center Benoit Benjamin. Yes, I said Benoit Benjamin. Personally, the Grizzlies made out like bandits on this deal. By taking advantage of Benjamin's (shocking) early season success, the Grizzlies acquired a solid point guard in Murdock and a raw athlete in Mobley. Besides, what is Dunleavy thinking? To fill the open roster spot, he activated Kevin Duckworth from the injured list. Duckworth and Benjamin on the same team? Are you kidding? Who knows, by seasons end they will be battling one another to see who can come up with the best excuse not to play.

• While on the subject of athletes attitudes — I guess I should mention Chris Webber is finally returning to practice with the Bullets this week. Can't you just feel the excitement? Truth is Webber, coming off shoulder surgery, must serve a one-game suspension for fighting Chicago's Luc Longley in the preseason. Welcome back Chris, let's see if you can finally earn some of that new six-year $50 million dollar contract. Good luck, you're going to need it.

Spanning the "Globe"

• Talk about disappearing acts. Both Scotty Thurman, who hit the winning shot for Arkansas in the 1994 NCAA final and Donald Williams, the 1993 NCAA Final Four MVP, were both cut from CBA teams this week.

• New Nets President Michael Rowe has publicly stated that he will not wait the entire season for the Nets to show any signs of progress before making administrative

Turn to NBA, page 13

Roe's adjusting to NBA game

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — The uniform, his number and his position are different, but the fire in Lou Roe's eyes and the intensity he brings to the game are unmistakably the same.

The night after his alma mater completed its annual upset of the No. 1 team in the nation, Roe, a former Minutemen and current Detroit Piston, made his first return to the state where he established himself as one of the top players in college basketball — this time as a pro.

Roe helped lead Massachusetts to the Elite Eight of the N C A A Tournament a year ago. But after being drafted as the first pick of the second round (30th overall) of last spring's NBA draft, Roe is starting all over again.

"It's kind of been a roller-coaster ride. You can say it's like freshman year again, trying to get accustomed to the play," Roe said. "But right now, I'm starting to feel more comfortable with the play and what's going on with the team."

Making the transition even more difficult is that Roe, who made his mark as an inside player in college playing mostly power forward, has shifted to a swing-man role in the NBA, seeing time at both off-guard and small forward.

He struggled in the early going, but he has adjusted and lately has made his presence felt.

In Monday's loss to Orlando, Roe scored a career-high 14 points (5-10 from the field, 4-for-4 from the free-throw line) while grabbing nine rebounds in 33 minutes.

Roe praised Piston coach Doug Collins for helping to motivate him.

"I think he's a great coach," Roe said. "He gives players the confidence and the fire they need to play with."

Roe got a warm welcome from the FleetCenter crowd that included many fans clad in maroon and white.

Each time he entered the game or touched the ball, a drawn out chant of "Lou ... Lou ... Lou" rose from the stands.

Two fans even brought a sheet with a full-length drawing of Roe and the slogan "Lou Roe: we still love you man."

Familiar faces Derek Kellogg and former UMass baseball star Bill Knight were also on hand.

While Roe said he appreciates the fan support, he didn't consider the game a homecoming.

"I'm not from Massachusetts," said the New Jersey native. "I just went to school there, so I don't think it's a homecoming."

Roe is, however, keeping track of his former team, and complimented their performance against Kentucky on Monday night.

"I saw them," he said. "They played pretty well. They played the way UMass always plays."

Because of their busy schedule, Roe and UMass coach John Calipari have had trouble staying in touch.

"We've talked a couple times but very briefly," Roe said. "He's very busy and I've been busy too."

On the court, Roe's return to the Baystate wasn't spectacular.

His shooting was a bit off (0-for-4 from the field) but he played a steady game grabbing eight rebounds.

Defensively, Roe was solid, as well, guarding several Celtics including newly acquired Todd Day, Rick Fox, Eric Williams and Dee Brown.

The Celtics were able to hold on and win the game, beating the Pistons 100-96.

In 134 collegiate games at UMass, Roe grabbed an all-time best 1,070 rebounds (8.0 per game) and scored 1,905 points (14.2 per game), good for second all-time.

He was the only player in Atlantic 10 history to be named to four A-10 All-Tournament teams and was the Atlantic 10 player of the year last season.

"You can say it's like freshman year again, trying to get accustomed to the play. But right now, I'm starting to feel more comfortable with the play and what's going on with the team."

— Lou Roe

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Former Minuteman Lou Roe, shown playing for UMass last season, struggled early on but is now getting accustomed to playing in the NBA for the Detroit Pistons.

Gators, Huskers remain unbeaten

Stop, sit back and relax and we'll sort through all that has happened while this column has been on a two-week hiatus.

First item on the agenda is the national championship. Going into last week there were three undefeated teams left with national championship hopes — Nebraska, Ohio St. and Florida. Now as we head into the final weekend of the regular season there remains two. Nebraska (11-0) and Florida (11-0) have eluded defeat and will most likely meet in a winner-take-all national title game in the Fiesta Bowl on New Year's Day — providing Florida doesn't self destruct against Arkansas in the SEC championship game.

GREG COREY on College Football

As for Ohio St., it not only lost a chance at the championship with its 31-23 loss to Michigan, but the Buckeyes also lost a bid to the Rose Bowl as they will finish runner-up to Northwestern in the Big 10. Even if you hate the Buckeyes you have to admire the run they had this year, 10 straight wins dating back to the season opener with B.C.

Ohio St.'s schedule was tough and it finally caught up with the Buckeyes as they were simply outplayed by the Wolverines last Saturday.

OSU's misfortune was roses for Northwestern — literally. It's a great story. Coach Gary Barnett's club ran the table in the Big 10 and their dream of making the Rose Bowl came true as Michigan downed the Buckeyes. This is the type of story that makes sports exciting. Hopefully the Wildcats can buck the odds one more time and pull-up a win in Pasadena.

• Three weeks ago I wrote that the weekend of Nov. 25 would probably decide the Heisman race. If anything, last weekend made the race more confusing. All that's certain at this point is who the contenders are and the cases they make for themselves.

Tommy Frazier of Nebraska is one of the top candidates. Frazier is the QB of the nation's top team and has directed the Huskers to an undefeated record this season. His versatility on the run and pass are his strength, but the downfall with Frazier is that his numbers do not stack up with other players. Also, a luck-luster game against Oklahoma on Nov. 24 was not the last impression he wanted to leave voters with.

Eddie George of Ohio St. was the man at running back for his team all year. George had the trophy sealed but the loss to Michigan, despite his 100-plus yard performance, will no doubt cost him some votes. George had a phenomenal season, ending in the top five in the nation in rushing. Time will tell if his team's performance costs him the award.

Danny Wuerffel of Florida has quietly been racking big numbers while making opposing defensive backs look like speedbags. Wuerffel's team is 11-0, taking some steam out of Frazier's argument, not to mention the 3,000-plus passing yards and 33 TD's he has thrown for. He had over 400 yards against FSU last weekend. A strong game versus Arkansas this Saturday will steal him some more votes.

Who wins it? The only sure thing here is it will be the closest Heisman

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 13

Women's swimming heads to NEs with confidence

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

It was definitely fun for Massachusetts women's swimming and diving coach Bob Newcomb to be thrown into the pool after last weekend's upset of Boston University.

It was even more fun when he had his entire house and lawn decorated with shaving cream and toilet paper by his players. However, it would be even more gratifying for him if his team came away with a top finish at the New England Championships this weekend.

Tomorrow the Minutewomen will begin the first of a three-day meet in Storrs, Conn. against 12 other teams at the mid-season invitational meet.

Last year UMass finished fifth — but this weekend Newcomb feels his team will put up a much better showing.

"We're going to be in a real good dogfight for second," Newcomb said. "This team is so much more confident than any team I've ever had, and they're going in looking for a good finish."

UMass started off the year strong with a defeat at Vermont, a win over Northeastern, and last weekend's exciting upset victory over B.U. to remain undefeated on the year at 3-0. The Minutewomen will take their strong strokes and dives to Connecticut in the real test of who the best teams are so far this season.

"This is a good opportunity to see our swimmers in a championship format," said Newcomb. "This is a good meet, with a lot of tradition and excitement."

UConn, the defending New England champions, will most likely be the heavy favorite.

"They have essentially the same team that they had last year, which is extremely talented," Newcomb said. "We have improved immensely so I think we'll catch up."

The Huskies are 4-1 with their only loss coming to Villanova. Hilliary Krug, the defending East Coast Athletic Conference champion, is one of their top swimmers in the backstroke and freestyle events. Lisa Galpin is very strong in diving as she was the New England diver of the year last season and has already qualified for the NCAA's this year. Boston College could be right up there with the top finishers as well.

The other teams that will be competing in this meet are Northeastern and Vermont (two teams that UMass has already beat), Providence, URI, Central Connecticut, Holy Cross, Kent, Maine and New Hampshire.

The teams will begin swimming tomorrow night at 7 p.m., then Saturday at 7 p.m., and Sunday at 3 p.m. The diving events will be on Friday and Sunday.

UMass will have everyone back for this meet including Jessica Griffith and Jodi Walters, who were both out last weekend when the Minutewomen took care of BU. Karen Sonnwald will have the cast removed from her foot today and will start rehabilitating before she will be ready to get back in the water.

"I've never had a team that's had this much confidence and total faith in their abilities than this one," Newcomb said. "Beyond just the pure swimming and diving, academically, this is the strongest team I've ever had."

The Minutewomen team GPA is over 3.0, a phenomenal accomplishment for the amount of work that this team does.

"There have been some fun teams I've had before but I don't think anything can match the talent on this team," Newcomb said. "The attitudes, personalities and everything is just great."

Turn to FOOTBALL page 13

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 56 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, December 1, 1995

UMass tangles with Terriers
Brad Norton and the Massachusetts hockey team take on Boston University this weekend in Hockey East action (See Sports, page 10).

No more sleeping with the politicians
New rules on lobbying will make it a harder holiday season for politicians in Washington who are going to lose some of their perks (See story, page 3).

The doctor is in
Up-and-coming punk icons Doc Hopper will perform Sunday night at Katina's. Find out what to expect from their show (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast
Snow today with 3-5 inches accumulation, turning to freezing rain later. Saturday will be partly sunny and cold. Sunday will have a high in the 40s and a chance of rain.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 30	HIGH: 35 LOW: 30	HIGH: 42 LOW: 30

SGA debates supporting Bulger

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association passed two motions unanimously that will enhance the quality of life for students at the University.

However, a motion to welcome the new President of the University of Massachusetts system, William Bulger, to his post was not passed unanimously. Students felt they did not know enough about what he has done and what he will do for the University, and chose not to support him prematurely. Other senators with concerns about Bulger's lack of diversity felt they should not vote in favor of the motion on behalf of their constituents who might not approve of his presidency.

After much debate following the failure of the motion to pass the first time it was proposed, the motion was passed with a revised amendment.

Sen. Bill Ramsey and Sen. Peter Luongo presented the motion that originally read, "Be it resolved, that the Undergraduate Student Senate welcome and support William Bulger as the newly elected President of the University of Massachusetts."

Luongo said Bulger represents the essence of the UMass college student, being a hardworking and successful person who rose in the ranks from the poor sections of Boston which he represents in the state senate.

Sen. Phill Copeland was "angry" with the proposal of the motion because if passed, it would represent the approval of the entire student body of UMass, not just the senate.

"How does rewording change the sentiment of the [motion]," Copeland asked. "We have taken hard stands against other administrators. Why can't we do it now?"

Copeland wants Bulger to come and present himself before the senator and his constituents before they formally support his presidency.

Sen. David Giampa said he abstained from voting in favor of the motion because he felt he did not know enough about Bulger and his record to make a decision on his competency.

"I abstained from the vote because I didn't know if students wanted him as president or not," Giampa said. "We just don't have enough information."

Student Trustee Dan Rivera, a member of the Board who voted Bulger for President, said the President Search Committee spent the last six months researching the best candidate for the position. With Bulger's name in newspapers and on television since the beginning of the search, Rivera said members of the senate and the student body had plenty of time to do their own research of Bulger's record in order to make a decision. However, he urged the senate to "vote your conscience."

Speaker Dan Castellano stressed the senate wasn't voting against Bulger, since he was so recently commissioned to the position. He said the senate didn't feel strongly enough to say "we support him" because they only found out about Bulger's candidacy last week.

Castellano and other senators said they would only be able to make an educated decision of whether to support him or not after Bulger comes to the campus to address the concerns and issues about his past that were raised at Wednesday night's meeting.

The motion was finally passed after being rewritten to read that the senators "support the Trustees' decision to welcome William Bulger as the newly elected President of the University of Massachusetts."

Bulger has already been formally welcomed on behalf of the senate body in a letter written by SGA President Christine Lopes.

The senate also passed a motion that the University establish a formal holiday for GLBT students. Sen. Ashavan Doyon made the presentation on behalf of himself and his constituents in the GLBT community.

Doyon said he was approached by many of his constituents who were upset they could not participate in National Coming Out Day Activities because they had an exam. A holiday recognized by the University would exempt these students for that day.

Sen. Bill Ramsey and Sen. Dan Kittredge proposed a motion that was passed unanimously that the New Students Program create better and more dynamic methods of informing incoming students about Special Interest Residential Programs. They said it would make the students' first semester at the University more enjoyable if they were more aware of the programs offered.

The senate also enacted a motion that the University purchase microwaves and make them readily accessible to students in public areas on campus.

Sen. Johannah Henson proposed the motion on behalf of commuter students who cannot afford to buy a hot meal every day. The purchase of three industrial microwaves would not be very expensive, and would go in food areas such as the Bluewall, Coffee Shop and Hatch, Henson said.

The senate also received word that a motion they passed a couple of weeks ago that Housing Services repeal the Sylvan/Northeast posting policy has been enacted by Housing Services.

New chairman wants lower tuition, higher standards

BOSTON (AP) — Tuitions at the University of Massachusetts and the state's public colleges are too high and admission standards too low, the state Higher Education Coordinating Council has been told by its new chairman.

James Carlin, chairing his first meeting of the council Wednesday, also said he thought faculty pay should be higher. "In a business, if you don't take good care of your employees, they won't take care of your customers," said Carlin, a Natick businessman and former city receiver of Chelsea.

Carlin, who was appointed council chairman, an unpaid job, last week by Gov. William F. Weld, said he was sorry Boston University President John R. Silber did not take the post.

Silber declined, saying it could give an appearance of conflict of interest. Instead, he became chairman of the state Board of Education, which has authority over public elementary and secondary schools.

Carlin said he planned to meet today with Senate President William M. Bulger, who will become president of the University of Massachusetts next month.

Carlin said a grade of C-plus given to UMass by a former president "might be stretching it," but he declined to elaborate. However he said he will work with Bulger to improve it.

"Don't speculate on how Carlin and Bulger are going to get along. We're going to get along very well," Carlin said.

He also said he will seek legislation empowering the Higher Education Coordinating Council to control fees — as well as tuitions — charged by public colleges.

"I think public education should be inexpensive," said Carlin, who called tuitions now charged at the state's public colleges outrageous, and said he was embarrassed he went along with tuition increases when he was n UMass trustee in the 1980s.

He said he could not have gone to the University of Florida if tuition had been more than $50 a semester.

The council approved and sent the governor a proposed $790.8 million budget for the 1997 fiscal year. That's an increase of 4 percent and includes an additional $5 million for scholarships.

Carlin asked the council to delay acting on new minimum admission standards until he can study them, but he said he wants standards at least as tough as those proposed.

He also called for ending distrust and rivalry among the state's 29 public campuses, and said he wants the council to operate like businesses which are satisfied when decisions are 70 percent right rather than bogging down seeking perfection.

"It would be much more interesting if John Silber were here instead of me," said Carlin. "He knows 100 times more about higher education than I do. A lot of his ideas can come here."

Weld and Kerry focus on issues as Senate race begins

By Robert W. Troit
Associated Press

BOSTON — Gov. William F. Weld and U.S. Sen. John Kerry each have made a familiar campaign promise, one that is rarely kept: to focus on issues that matter to voters and stay away from negative personal attacks.

They share some views, particularly in the social arena — both support abortion rights, for example, and have similar beliefs on civil rights.

But on issues like taxes, welfare and the Washington political scene, the two are far apart.

"This is going to essentially be a 12-month debate," Weld said yesterday.

Both men officially kicked off their 1996 campaigns Wednesday when Weld said he would get in the race. They also gave previews of their favored campaign themes.

Weld points to the 11 tax cuts he has signed in his five years as governor. Most of them were designed for businesses, including phaseouts of the capital gains tax and the bank tax, although some helped lower-income families.

Kerry disputed the governor's contention that he "votes for every tax increase that comes along." He defended his vote for President Bill Clinton's tax hike bill in 1993, saying it increased taxes only on the wealthiest 2 percent of Americans.

Another favorite topic of Weld's is crime. He has sponsored a bill to restore the death penalty every year he has been in office. Kerry — like Weld, a former prosecutor — opposes capital punishment. He often mentions that he voted for Clinton's crime bill last year, which helped pay to put hundreds of police officers on Massachusetts streets.

Earlier this year, Weld worked with the Democratic state Legislature to pass what at the time was considered the nation's toughest welfare measure. The law, which went into effect last month, requires recipients to work after 60 days, cuts off benefits after two years, and does not increase benefits if a mother on welfare has more children.

Since then, Weld has said he wants to go further by cutting all cash benefits to teen-age mothers and requiring recipients to be fingerprinted.

Kerry supported the Senate's national welfare reform bill earlier this year, but opposes a cap based on family size. The governor also will make much hay out of Kerry's vote against a balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution earlier this year.

Weld supports the amendment, while Kerry said Congress should approve balanced budgets without amending the Constitution. The Democrat also said the GOP-backed amendment — which failed by one vote in the Senate — some helped lower-income families.

Kerry disputed the governor's contention that he "votes for every tax increase that comes along." He defended his vote for President Bill Clinton's tax hike bill in 1993, saying it increased taxes only on the wealthiest 2 percent of Americans.

Another favorite topic of Weld's is crime. He has sponsored a bill to restore the death penalty every year he has been in office. Kerry — like Weld, a former prosecutor — opposes capital punishment. He often mentions that he voted for Clinton's crime bill last year, which helped pay to put hundreds of police officers on Massachusetts streets.

Weld maintains that Kerry has no clout in a Senate run by Republicans, and that a GOP standard-bearer should represent the state in the "Republican revolution" in Washington.

JEFFREY S. DICIOVANNI / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Stamp collecting
Junior engineering major Greg Fincher counts stamps for a customer while working at the post office yesterday. Fincher has a pet peeve in that the $1 stamps are much smaller than many of the 32 cent stamps.

Conte papers to be dedicated in W.E.B. Du Bois library today

By Jack Farrell
Collegian Correspondent

Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci will be among many political notables at the dedication of the Silvio O. Conte papers at the University of Massachusetts this morning.

The papers of the late U.S. Representative from Pittsfield will be formally dedicated this morning at 10 a.m. in the Special Collections Room of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Cellucci will speak, as well as Conte archivist Gail Giroux, and Richard Baker, director of the U.S. Senate Historical Office.

Other events throughout the day featuring prominent public figures such as former Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, will celebrate Conte's life.

Corinne Conte donated the papers to the University after her husband, who served western Massachusetts as congressman for 32 years, died in 1991. She will attend the ceremonies along with several other family members.

The formal dedication will be followed by a series of panel discussions and speeches throughout the day. The first, at 11 a.m. will offer personal reflections about the late congressman from participants such as Margaret Heckler, former congresswoman and ambassador to Ireland; Evan Dobelle, president of Trinity College and former mayor of Pittsfield; David Bartley, Holyoke Community College president and former Massachusetts Speaker of the House; and former Conte aid Paul Larkin.

Former U.S. Attorney General Eliot Richardson and former Congressman Edward Boland will speak at the dedication luncheon at the Campus Center restaurant at 12:30 p.m.

Following the luncheon, Dukakis will moderate a panel examining politics and the Conte legacy at 2:30 p.m. Panelists will include U.S. Reps. John Olver, who was elected to succeed Conte, and Richard Neal of Springfield.

The papers and other memorabilia are now on display in the Special Collections Room of the library. Visitors to the exhibit will also find a smaller display in the entrance floor lobby.

The exhibit includes personal artifacts and correspondence, as well as press clippings, official papers, and campaign memorabilia from Conte's family life and his years on Capitol Hill.

The exhibit, which is open to the public and runs through Jan. 31, is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Second brother guilty of possession

By Amy H. Poradysz
Collegian Staff

Almost a year after an Amherst Regional High School student died from an overdose of heroin, the brothers who were originally in possession of the drug have both gone to trial.

Last week John Ciarametaro, 23, of Rockport, was sentenced to two-and-a-half years in the Hampshire Country Court of Corrections after pleading guilty to involuntary manslaughter. He was accused of selling the heroin to the Amherst student, Harrison "Ozzy" Klate, last December.

The younger brother, Mark, was charged only with possession of three drugs — heroin, cocaine and marijuana.

John and Mark Ciarametaro are former University of Massachusetts students who lived in Butterfield Residence Hall at the time of Klate's death. They had traveled to Lynn a few days earlier to purchase the heroin, according to witness Adam Turner, who went with them.

It was John, however, who sold the heroin to Klate, a fellow employee at the Classe Cafe in Amherst, according to court documents.

Yesterday, Mark Ciarametaro, 22, also of Rockport, pleaded guilty at Hampshire County District Court to charges of possession of a Class A, Class B and Class D substances, according to Assistant District Attorney Michael Goggins.

As of last week, Mark Ciarametaro was pleading innocent, according to the Daily Hampshire Gazette. His lawyer, Rick Gorgon was not available for comment yesterday.

Mark Ciarametaro received two years straight probation. He must be evaluated for treatment and counseling, and any recommended treatment must be completed. Ciarametaro must also have a drug follicle test done at his own expense. In addition, he must pay a $750 fine and do 25 hours of community service, Goggins said.

The former UMass student had already "sought out treatment and counseling on his own," Goggins said.

John Ciarametaro was the first person in Hampshire County to be incarcerated for a death caused by the sale of heroin. Upon his release, he also must do community service work.

Ciarametaro's lawyer, Thomas Whitney, and Goggins, said they believe the former student has learned from what Whitney called a "mistake." Goggins said he hopes Ciarametaro will speak publicly about heroin as part of his community service.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Dec. 1

Candlelight Walk & Vigil — The Stonewall Center is sponsoring a walk and vigil for World AIDS Day. The walk begins at 6 p.m. on the Student Union Steps and ends at the Wheeler Gallery for a national Dimming of Lights. Followed by musical performances and an open forum for personal reflection at the Wheeler Gallery. For more information contact The Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Fill-A-Bus — The Panhellenic Council, in conjunction with the VIVA Council, is sponsoring the Third Annual "Fill-A-Bus" Donation Drive. Please bring donations of food, clothing or toys to the bus parked outside the Student Union from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Donations benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts and the Amherst Survival Center. For more information contact 545-3327.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m., Campus Center. For more information call Utama at 256-8482.

Poetry Slam — Claudia's Cafe in Amherst is having a poetry slam and open reading at 8 p.m. First prize is $10.

Lecture — "Firewalking" at 7 p.m. is taught by Barbara Weinberg at Oasis on Main Street in Amherst. It is free and open to the public. To reserve space please call 256-4995.

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others," a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel-chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542-5896.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545-2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

HIV/AIDS Awareness — Peer Health Educators are providing information about HIV and AIDS at a table on the Campus Center Concourse.

Blood Drive — All blood donors are invited to donate from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. on the first floor of the Campus Center. Those people who have never donated blood before are encouraged to try.

Videos — UHS is sponsoring three films, Other Faces of AIDS, AIDS Wise, No Lies and Safe for Life on HSCN Channel 17 at midnight.

Performance — Student Valley Productions is presenting an "Orgy of Talents", a showcase of talents from around the valley at 9 p.m. The cost is $3 with a student ID and $4 for all others.

Religious — Hillel House will sponsor Shabbat Services led by Prof. Julius Lester at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. For more information call 549–1710.

Saturday, Dec. 2

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel-chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542–5896.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Dancing — English Country Dance, the first Saturday of the month at the Munson Library in South Amherst at 8 p.m. Beginners come early, singles welcome, $5 each or barter. For more information call 549–1913.

Workshop — Scandinavian Couples Dance, the first Saturday of the month at the Munson Library in South Amherst at 6:30 p.m. Beginners and singles welcome, $5 each or barter. For more information call 549–1913.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Performance — Student Valley Productions is presenting an "Orgy of Talents", a showcase of talents from around the Valley at 9 p.m. The cost is $3 with a student ID and $4 for all others.

Sunday, Dec. 3

Study Group — The UMass Bolshevik Club and Radical Student Union are sponsoring a study group on "Trotsky vs. Stalin: Socialist Internationalism vs. Bureaucratic Nationalist Reformism. Participants are asked to read The Stalin School of Falsification Revisited, and The Revolution Betrayed, both by Leon Trotsky. The class is at 5:30 p.m. in Campus Center Room 801.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Meeting — Hillel's Grad Group Planning Meeting will be held at 3 p.m., downstairs at Hillel. For more information call 549–1710.

Cafe Night — Hillel House is sponsoring an Israeli Cafe Night at 7:30 p.m. at Hillel House. Israeli food and music. Cost is $2. For more information call 549–1710.

Celebration — The Malcolm X Cultural Center is sponsoring a Kwanzaa Celebration at 5 p.m. in the Southside Room. To reserve a seat please call 545–1256.

Festival — The Japanese American Club is sponsoring the Second Annual Japanese Festival starting at 11 a.m. in Campus Center Room 1009. For more information call 546–3576.

Notices

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi-lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College student is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five–College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10–11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8–10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323–6330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1–800–750–2016. The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1–800–696– 7752.

Domestic Exchange — The Domestic Exchange Office will be holding information sessions on Tuesdays and Wednesdays throughout November and December in Campus Center Room 811, from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. For more information, contact the Domestic Exchange Office, E– 26 Machmer Hall, 545–5551.

Absentee Ballots — Absentee ballots for the Dec. 12 Amherst Special Town Election are available in the Amherst Town Clerk's office on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Wednesday 8 a.m. to noon. For more information call 256–4035.

Jewish tomb misidentified

By Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Archaeologists no longer believe a 2,000-year-old burial cave discovered next to a highway was used by the ancient Jewish warriors known as the Maccabees.

Hopes had been raised when ossuaries, or burial containers, were found in the cave that archaeologists thought bore the first three letters of the Hebrew name Hasmonean, another name for the Maccabees.

But Israel's Antiquities Authority yesterday dismissed that earlier theory.

An expert on ancient languages who examined the letters on an ossuary this week determined they were not a "het," "shin" and "mem" — the equivalent of H, S, M — but a "het," "nun" and "yud," or H, N, Y, said Efrat Orbach, spokeswoman for the antiquities authority.

"It's not Hasmonean," Orbach said. "It's a Jewish tomb from the second Temple period, but we don't know who is in it." The Maccabees carried out a successful revolt against Syria's King Antiochus in the second century B.C. The revolt is still celebrated in the Jewish festival of Chanukah, which begins Dec. 17 this year.

The burial cave with about 20 stone burial containers was discovered just two weeks ago, when a tractor leveling ground for a new highway 18 miles northwest of Jerusalem broke open the entrance.

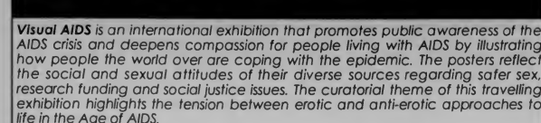
If the ossuary had been inscribed with the word "Hasmonean," it would have been the first written evidence of the family's name. Archaeologist Meir Ben Dov, who examined the burial cave, said it was not ornate enough to be the tomb of the Maccabees. Ancient writings describe such tombs as ornate and filled with monuments. "This was just a Jewish family in the area," he said. Scientists said bones found inside the ossuaries were turned over to Israel's Burial Society, run by the ultra-Orthodox, for reburial.

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those enlivilling statlics! I did love them so!

DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

World AIDS Awareness Week
November 27 - December 1, 1995

VISUAL AIDS



Visual AIDS is an international exhibition that promotes public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS by illustrating how people the world over are coping with the epidemic. The posters reflect the social and sexual attitudes of their diverse sources regarding safer sex, research funding and social justice issues. The curatorial theme of this travelling exhibition highlights the tension between erotic and anti-erotic approaches to life in the Age of AIDS.

Opening Reception: Tuesday, November 28 5:00 - 7:00 pm.
Wheeler Gallery Hours: Monday - Thursday 4:00 - 8:00 pm.

UMASS Panels of the 5-College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt
November 28 - December 14
9:00 AM - 11:00 PM (Monday - Thursday)
9:00 AM - 7:00 PM (Friday)
Graduate Lounge, UMASS Campus Center

HIV/AIDS Awareness Tables
staffed by Peer Health Educators
November 27 - December 1
10:00 AM - 3:00 PM
UMASS Campus Center

AIDS and the ARTS
Wednesday, November 29
Wheeler Gallery 4:30-6:00 PM
tour of the Visual AIDS exhibition with James Miller, Curator and Professor from the University of Western Ontario

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Quilt Panel
Thursday, November 30
7:00 PM - 9:00 PM
Mary Lyons Classroom
students are invited to remember and honor those lost and to create a GLBT quilt panel to be carried at the Candlelight Vigil

World AIDS Day Candlelight Walk and Vigil
Friday, December 1
6:00 PM
from Student Union Steps to Wheeler Gallery
Music, Open Forum and Commemoration of "A Day Without Art"

Visual AIDS is a project of the five College Sexuality Education Committee and is supported in part by the UMASS Arts Council. A portion of the collection will be exhibited simultaneously at the Hampshire Mall as a visual backdrop for World AIDS day activities. For more information please call the University Health Services Health Education Department office 549-2671 x54

THE GREATEST ISSUE ON EARTH!

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents

A Spectacular Sports Extra

The 1995-96 UMass Basketball Preview

Coming to a newsstand near you December 6, 1995

LOOK FOR IT!

Politicians to have cold holidays

Lose annual gifts as new lobbying restrictions come into effect

By Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On Capitol Hill, they're calling this "The Last Christmas."

Each holiday season, lawmakers could anticipate such goodies as wooden barrels full of snacks from RJR Nabisco, bottles of chardonnay wine from the Securities Industry Association and pewter serving plates from the United Transportation Union.

As of Jan. 1, those gifts will be banned in the House.

The birthday cakes that retail giant Sears sends to every member of Congress? Gone.

The annual trips to the Danny Thompson Open in Sun Valley, Idaho, for three days of golf and a grab-bag of clothing and equipment, in the name of charity? Gone, too.

And, beginning in the new year, those armies of expensive lobbyists who have worked Capitol Hill so quietly for years will have to disclose who they work for, what they do and how much they're paid.

All of this comes in reaction to public anger and disgust. The House, pushed by reform-minded freshmen, has banned most gifts; the Senate has limited them to $50. Both passed a lobbying disclosure law closing gaping loopholes that evaded change for nearly five decades.

Life is certain to change on Capitol Hill. How much remains to be seen.

Rep. Porter Goss (R-Fla., a backer of the changes, acknowledges "tradition dies slowly."

"We'll have the 'old drinking buddy' phenomenon," Goss predicted. "You invite me out for a beer, and that makes us old drinking buddies. Then I can take you out for dinner.

"Influence peddling is not going to change. Those determined to skirt the rules still will."

Wright Andrews, president of the American League of Lobbyists, says his colleagues are already looking for ways around the new rules.

"Those with the biggest bucks will have even more disproportionate influence," Andrews said.

Special interests could simply use their political action committees to schmooze politicians, calling the expenses "campaign contributions" instead of lobbying expenses. The line between the two already is blurred.

"The world is unfair," Andrews said. "The reality is, any big interest is always going to have more influence than the citizen on the street because it has the interest, it has the money, it has the sophistication."

Still, lawmakers hope they will have mollified a public outraged by TV clips of senators and House members frolicking with lobbyists on all-expense paid trips to the Caribbean.

COLLEGIAN ELECTIONS
SPRING 1995

Applications for all Newsroom Editor Positions are being accepted.

Arts & Living
Business
Editor In Chief
GLB Issues
Managing Editor
News
Sports
Black Affairs
Developing Nations
Editorial / Opinion
Jewish Affairs
Multicultural Affairs
Photo
Women's Issues

Deadlines:
Applications due Dec. 8, 4 p.m.
Candidates Night, Monday, Dec. 11, 7 p.m.
Elections, Tuesday, Dec. 12, 8 a.m. – 3 p.m.

Applications are available on the Managing Editor's desk and should be dropped off in the Editor in Chief's mailbox. All questions should be directed to Matt Vautour, Editor in Chief.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

EMILY REILLY / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Books for holidays

Crystal Cartwright, sophomore nursing major checks out the children's books at the "Books for Holidays." Today is the last day of the sale.

Clinton's Belfast visit reinforces peace

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — President Bill Clinton visited violence-scarred neighborhoods on both sides of Northern Ireland's long conflict yesterday, celebrating a successful 15-month cease-fire and declaring, "Surely there can be no turning back."

The first American president ever to come to the troubled province, Clinton implored Roman Catholics and Protestants alike not to surrender to the impulses of "old habits and hard grudges."

There was a poignant reminder of the horror of the past and the promise of the future when Catherine Hamill, a nine-year-old Catholic schoolgirl, shyly read a letter to the president: "My first daddy died in the troubles. It was the saddest day of my life. I still think of him. Now it is nice and peaceful." Her father was slain by gunmen who burst into his home and shot him in front of his family in 1987.

In his main speech of the day, Clinton addressed several thousand people at Mackie Metal Plant, located along a "peace line," a wall of steel and stone dividing Catholic and Protestant neighborhoods. The plant's workforce is mixed but mostly Protestant. Everyone is instructed to leave their politics at the door.

"You must stand firm against terror," Clinton urged. "You must say to those who still would use violence for political objectives: 'You are the past. Your day is over.'"

Clinton's peace appeals were loudly applauded, though a lone heckler, Cedric Wilson, twice called out, "Never." Wilson is aligned with Protestant firebrand Ian Paisley, leader of the most extreme pro-British party, the Democratic Unionist Party.

Despite the truce observed by paramilitary groups, security was intense.

The ALANA Lecture Series Presents

THE FUTURE OF DEMOCRACY IN CHINA

Chai Ling is most noted for her role as the Chief Commander of the Tiananmin Square Committee, the organization that was responsible for the Tiananmen Square protest in June of 1989. She is now President of China Spring, a Washington D.C. based nonprofit organization that is working to bring about political and social change for a Democratic China.

DISCUSSING ISSUES OF DIVERSITY WITHIN THE ASIAN COMMUNITY

Tuesday, December 5, 1995
Campus Center 165 • 3:00pm

LECTURE: THE FUTURE OF DEMOCRACY IN CHINA

Tuesday, December 5, 1995
Student Union Ballroom
7:00pm

UMASS AMHERST

Chai Ling

Sponsored by: Office of ALANA Affairs, Commuter Area Government, Cultural Enrichment Fund, Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities, Graduate Student Senate, Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center, Latin American Cultural Center, Sylvan Cultural Center and the United Asia Cultural Center

The University of Massachusetts' Campus Activities Office
Presents
Something Every Friday
A WEEKLY PROGRAM SERIES OF EVENTS

Bluewall Cafe

December 1, 1995 • 8 p.m., FREE

This series is made possible by a grant from Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
AMHERST • BOSTON • DARTMOUTH • LOWELL • WORCESTER

BOARD OF TRUSTEES
18 TREMONT STREET, SUITE 800
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS 02108
(617) 287-7000
FAX (617) 287-7044

Dear Members of the University Community:

We are writing to introduce William M. Bulger, the university's next president. William Bulger holds B.A. and J.D. degrees from Boston College. He has served as the presiding officer of the Massachusetts Senate from 1978 to the present, and before that as a Representative from 1961 to 1970 and as a Senator from 1971. He is an adjunct professor at Boston College and was formerly an adjunct professor at Suffolk University Law School. He serves on the Boards of Trustees of the Boston Public Library, the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Museum of Fine Arts and on the Board of Overseers of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He holds fourteen honorary degrees from Massachusetts colleges and universities, including one from our university.

In Mr. Bulger we have a proven leader who is willing to lead, and who has the desire, values, and skills to champion the mission and raise the stature of our university.

Mr. Bulger's lifelong regard for intellect and his efforts on behalf of education show his commitment to the core of our enterprise - teaching undergraduates and expanding knowledge through research and outreach. Mr. Bulger is eager to work with academic and administrative leaders of the university to put this commitment into action.

Our university must listen to many voices. Out of all these voices, we must find common purpose and direction. Mr. Bulger has a demonstrated ability to lead others to consensus and prompt action. We must have a president with this leadership skill.

Our university has long been committed to diversity and pluralism. Today our Commonwealth, due in no small part to Mr. Bulger's leadership, has some of the strongest laws in the nation protecting citizens from discrimination and from hate crimes based on race, national origin, religion, gender or sexual orientation. Mr. Bulger shares the trustees' commitment that the university be a welcoming beacon of opportunity to all.

Our university has not enjoyed adequate access to top business leaders, who must respect the quality of our education and give us financial support before we can join the top rank of state universities. Mr. Bulger enjoys the confidence of a wide cross-section of Massachusetts business and civic leaders. The private sector relationships he brings to the presidency will help the university broaden its base of allies and of private funding.

In the public sector, our university faces perilous times. Federal responsibilities, but not sufficient federal funds, will soon shift to the states and lay claim to our state's limited revenues. The university must be able to obtain its fair share of public finds. Mr. Bulger understands public processes and has worked effectively with many legislative leaders and governors of both parties. He is well suited to lead up in stating our case for fair public funding.

We are also writing to acknowledge publicly Dr. Sherry Penney's success and express our appreciation. She has ably led the university as our president since last summer. She has articulate a compelling case for the university, she has successfully finished our collective bargaining, she has begun developing enrollment policies, and she has focused us all on the importance of tenure revue. Because of her expertise and personal skills, the university works a lot better than it did before. We look forward to her continuing contributions to the university for many years to come.

Please join us in extending our greatest thanks to Dr. Penney for her effective leadership and in warmly welcoming President Bulger.

Sincerely,
David A. Taylor
Chairman
Board of Trustees

Sincerely,
Peter K. Lewenberg
Chairman
President Search Committee

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gazley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwarz Women's Issues Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Hernán Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Daysmon Smith Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The blind leading the blind in D.C.

What is a leader?

People talk all the time about "leading by example," or, the "qualities that exemplify a leader," but these are pretty vague, and very often, subjective.

The dictionary is no help either. Webster's New World Dictionary simply defines a leader as "one that leads; guiding head." Gee, thanks. That's a big help.

Sometimes, the best way to define what something is, is to take a look at all the things it isn't.

Luckily enough our own esteemed speaker of the house, Mr. Gingrich, has provided us with a pristine example of all the things that don't come readily to mind when thinking of a leader. Pettiness, childishness, immaturity and just plain bad form.

Bob Dunn

Newton contends that part of the reason budget talks between the two parties weren't going to be able to happen was because of a perceived snub aboard Air Force One on the way back from Yitzhak Rabin's funeral. Photos released afterwards showed Gingrich and Clinton, not only seated at the same table on the plane, but conversing.

Clinton decided to take the high road and offered to apologize if Newt felt disrespected at all, but the quote of the week has to go to Mike McCurry, the White House press secretary, who said, "Maybe we could send him some of those little M&Ms with the Presidential seal on it."

Whether or not Clinton meant to belittle the speaker, whether or not Gingrich was asked to exit through the rear of the plane for a reason other than mere convenience, isn't the point. The point is, an elected official, a leader, ought to have the courtesy, the class, the common sense to be able to settle internal squabbles internally, not air dirty laundry on the tarmac in front of the world. He had to know he was going to wind up looking a bit foolish. Didn't he?

If that wasn't enough to contemplate over the holiday, Monday night gave an opposite example of leadership in action. A solemn message that cut through the trypuphan- induced haze of far-too-large dinners, and seemingly endless stacks of leftovers.

Monday night, President Clinton sat behind his desk in the Oval Office, his shoulders never broader, his nerves never steadier, looked straight into the eyes of millions of people, and told them he was sending their children, brothers, sisters, lovers and friends overseas, and he did so with the following words. "I take full responsibility."

Whoa, rewind that a second. Full responsibility.

In an age where everyone is scrambling around for a target that can stay still long enough to have blame laid on it, it's revitalizing to see someone who's willing to pick up the check for the whole table.

For me, the jury is still out on sending troops to Bosnia. There are plenty of why's and why not's. Holding the country's highest public office, however, means having to make the tough calls. Not only making them, but being willing to deal with the fallout afterwards should they be the wrong ones, and he did just that.

I've been sent into harm's way by a President before. It's no fun. And we didn't have the confidence someone was willing to cover our backs should something go horribly wrong.

Monday's speech was enough of a prime example of leadership in action on its own, but when contrasted and compared with Gingrich's infantile, puerile performance, it becomes a stellar one.

So, what is a leader?

For me, it seems a leader can't be reduced to something as simple as "one who leads." It's much more than that. It's someone who finds the courage to rise above juvenile squabbles and make decisions. Someone who makes those decisions carefully and is prepared to deal with their consequences. Someone who sets an example of serenity and maturity underneath the daunting pressures that come with great responsibility. Someone who not only handles criticism, but doesn't recklessly criticize.

By contrast, someone who isn't a true leader lets petty emotions derail important work at hand. They let the entire government shut down, holding up day-to-day business and reducing thousands of poor souls to "non-essential" status instead of dealing with problems like a mature adult. Not only isn't it the behavior of a leader, it isn't even the behavior of a follower.

It's the behavior of someone who needs to get out of the way.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Sometimes jokes don't taste so good

Heard any good AIDS jokes lately?

Just kidding. I don't think any of us have heard any jokes about AIDS lately, let alone good ones.

How times have changed. Ten years ago, when I was in fifth grade, AIDS jokes were all the rage.

Why was the gay guy so sad? Because all his friends were dead.

Ha ha. Not funny.

Wendy Darling

I remember getting into a fight with a friend of mine during lunch recess in sixth grade. We were talking about AIDS.

"Don't kiss anyone with AIDS," my friend warned.

"You can't get it from kissing!" I said angrily. I had just seen some scientists talk about it on TV and was feeling quite the expert. "In order for someone to get HIV, they'd have to drink around three gallons of saliva," I said.

My friend was pretty grossed out, but she persisted with her argument anyway.

"You can so get AIDS from kissing!" she yelled.

"Can not!" I yelled back.

I was angry now. This was at a time when most people still thought you could get the virus from sitting on the wrong toilet seat or shaking hands. They seemed not to be aware of the real way people get HIV is through some fairly involved interaction, not from sharing air with someone.

"No, that's just a prejudiced lie," I countered.

"That's just what some guy said on TV!" screamed my friend.

It was at this point I did what I often ended up doing when I was angry in those days. I threw something at her. In this case, it was an ice cream cone. I watched the white vanilla goo slide down her face, which turned red and started barking at me almost immediately.

I ran away, embarrassed I had done something so childish. When would I ever grow up? I was in sixth grade and doing well in school, but I still couldn't put up a rational argument.

I was also mad I couldn't change her mind. To my knowledge, I had never met anyone with AIDS or HIV, but from watching TV and reading the newspaper I figured I probably would.

And being the devout Methodist I was, and believing strongly in the Golden Rule, I felt it was my duty to protect these people with AIDS and HIV and treat them with as much fairness as I possibly could.

Saying these people deserved to die was not fair. Treating them like contagious plague monsters wasn't fair either. I didn't think God had brought the disease down.

Not that I really knew the answer, but I knew a slanderous, prejudiced lie when I saw one. I also didn't like to make judgements about things without having all the facts. And back then, sixth graders didn't have all the facts or even part of the facts. All they had were gay jokes, TV, and a lot to learn.

These days there are a lot of people walking around with vanilla ice cream running down their faces, so to speak. A lot of lies have been uncovered and many people, scientists, social workers and parents have been confronted with realities they'd rather not face.

Occasionally I still feel like throwing things, but there's never enough ice cream.

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

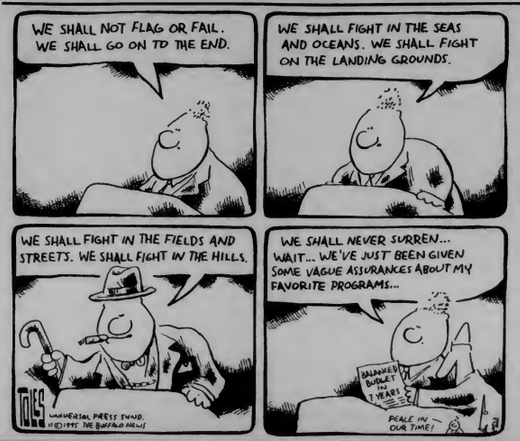
All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@oit.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Opinion/Editorial



WE SHALL NOT FLAG OR FAIL. WE SHALL GO ON TO THE END.
WE SHALL FIGHT IN THE SEAS AND OCEANS. WE SHALL FIGHT ON THE LANDING GROUNDS.
WE SHALL FIGHT IN THE FIELDS AND STREETS. WE SHALL FIGHT IN THE HILLS.
WE SHALL NEVER SURREN... WAIT... WE'VE JUST BEEN GIVEN SOME VAGUE ASSURANCES ABOUT MY FAVORITE PROGRAMS...
BALANCED BUDGET IN 7 YEARS
PEACE IN OUR TIME!
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
©1995 THE BUFFALO NEWS

Letters to the Editor

Contracts still not settled

To the Editor:

This is to inform your readers that contrary to public perception, not all UMass workers have settled their current contract negotiations. In fact, two unions on the Amherst campus, USA and AFSCME, are not close to settling at all.

Since 1989, all UMass employees received 13.9 percent salary increases over a period of time when inflation rose 22.5 percent. At the same time, health insurance costs increased so that employees are now contributing several hundred dollars more per year out of their pockets. In other words, a 10 percent increase right now would just about bring us back to the level of take home pay we were getting in 1989, after adjusting for inflation.

We are being offered an increase of 5.5 percent over three years. How much further behind would we be in 1997 if the administration was to get away with this?

USA and AFSCME are unions made up primarily of working-class positions. We are your secretaries, janitors, clerks and technicians. These are not high-paying, nor were they ever overpaid jobs.

Evidently, we are seen by the current administration as unimportant, though one wonders how long the University could function without us. This is classist exploitation of the most blatant sort. What kind of lessons is UMass teaching these days?

Linda Perry
Holyoke

Reporting on contracts not accurate

To the Editor:

In the Nov. 29 edition of the Collegian, your lead article about Bulger getting the UMass' President's position made reference to acting president Sherry Penny, and stated, "...she has successfully finished our collective bargaining," in listing her accomplishments.

That is a false statement. The University has not "successfully finished" bargaining with all its employees. Actually, the Collegian just yesterday (Nov. 28) had an eloquent letter to the editor by Barbara McGlynn which clearly stated that USA and AFSCME workers (over 2,000 on this campus alone) do not have contracts.

The lack of contracts is true not only on this campus but on others in the UMass system as well. I hope it is not your policy to blindly accept information from University managers and administrators when reporting on campus events. The essence of good journalism is independence and accuracy.

If you uncritically accept what managers say about what they wish others to believe about their actions, and their policies, then the values of the scholarly community the University tries to maintain will fail to be the practice in our institution. There is a sad reality in the shabby treatment workers receive at the hands of University management, that will never become known unless a courageous press reports it.

Frank C. Olbris
University Staff Association (USA)

Support for peacekeeping mission

To the Editor:

There is no question that the Balkan peninsula seems to be bent on its own destruction. Ancient Illyria, progenitro of Ancient Rome's most fearsome warriors, continues to practice grievous acts and prolonged dissent amongst its varied ethnic spectrum. The Balkan peninsula has been rife with internal strife for the last 700 years.

The troubled region is now the immense grief for not only its war-tired inhabitants but for the rest of the morally responsible world. While it is true other peace accords have been put forth to end the Balkan conflict, the one arrived at in Dayton promises at least a glimmer of success.

Whereas previous accords did not have the backing of the United States, this one does. Whether we like it or not, the US is the biggest player in the proposed peace and it is our obligation to stand behind it. The glimmer of hope in the October accord relies heavily on American participation, i.e. troops.

The thought of sending American troops on yet another policing mission in some far-off land is to those who remember Somalia, Korea and Vietnam very disheartening. Each of those missions was entirely different with their own distinct circumstances, as is the latest one poised to be enacted. The American military learned enormously from earlier operations; they would be going into Bosnia ready for the worst.

Casualties would be inevitable, as with any military operation. However, the NATO force, comprised of some 60,000 strong, highly-trained servicemen would at the first incident of attack on the NATO force strike back with disproportionate force. Hopefully, this would be sufficient to deter further incidents.

Currently, the Republican-lead Congress remains adamant in its refusal to support the President or for that matter the Dayton Peace accord. They have argued vehemently that the US has no part in subjecting its military personnel to bodily harm in an area that has no direct national security risks to the US. Of course Bosnia poses no security threats to the physical body of the US.

It is not the body of the US that is at risk, but the mind. For the last four years, Americans have watched news reports and have read articles documenting the abhorrent atrocities committed in the region. Finally, the three warring sides have sat down with each other and have produced a feasible end to the suffering of the Croats, Serbs and Muslims.

Now is the chance for Americans to play their part to put an end to the constant hell that has been a daily reality for the residents of the former Yugoslavia for years. No morally responsible American can ignore their responsibility to support the effort to help bring an end to the worst conflict in Europe since WW II.

Trey Shores
Northeast

Committee Chairman unreasonable

To the Editor:

Two weeks ago, the Collegian reported on the Massachusetts Rivers Act and the attempt of MASSPIRG at UMass-Amherst to prompt the Means and Way Committee to approve the bill. Sate Rep. Finneran, the chairman of the committee, has held the Act for the last five years in his office. Unfortunately, he was again unreasonable and unyielding even though this year's pressure was stronger than ever before.

But Finneran knows very well that he can only delay the bill — not prevent it. From year to year the quality of the Massachusetts rivers gets worse and worse and statewide support for the Rivers Act grows proportionally.

If Finneran does not want the Rivers Act to become the stumbling block of his political career he has to give in soon. It is unbelievable that all Massachusetts inhabitants have to suffer deteriorating water quality while a few people, close to Finneran, earn a lot of money by building on the banks.

This is a reminder call to all legislators that this campaign will remain a top environmental priority for citizens across Massachusetts.

Karsten Jung
Southwest

Act of vandalism an act of shame

To the Editor:

On Tuesday morning I strolled into Durfee Garden, as I do almost daily, to find it in a state of disarray. Apparently, someone felt it necessary to topple over a unique stone sculpture and forcibly rip a number of mountain laurel shrubs from their beds and throw them about the garden.

If you were involved in this display of ignorance I urge you to question your own values and lack of respect for those around you. In the case that you were not aware, Durfee Garden has received national recognition in the form of the 1995 A.S.L.A. Design Award and has served as a place of refuge for thousands of students, faculty, staff and visitors since its completion in the fall of 1993.

I would guess that this was simple a misguided act of senseless drunken vandalism. As a student and bartender for nearly five years, I have been witness to many unnecessary drunken acts with varying degrees of destruction but none have irked me more than this one.

If you were involved in this truly disheartening incident I urge you to return to the garden in a sober state and examine the high quality of design and craftsmanship that it embodies.

My assumption is that while experiencing a period of acute embarrassment for what you have done you will also realize the tranquillity and intrigue that his wonderful place has to offer. As vandalism is sure to continue I hope that everyone will be more disciplined in their target selection.

Durfee Garden is located between Health Services and the Morrill Science Building. I urge you to check it out. Drink up and enjoy. Just don't ruin it for everyone else. I promise that it will be time well spent.

Laurence Scanlon
Amherst

Worker sees package as fair

To the Editor:

This letter is regarding Barbara McGlynn's Nov. 28. letter, "Employees deserve pay increases." A recent University Staff Association Bargaining Update states that the economic package the employer is offering USA is not equitable because it is different from the packages offered to MSP and SEIU. If one only looks at three years of percent increases, that does seem really unfair, but the economic package the employer is offering USA is for a different three year period.

The USA Bargaining Update quoted a figure of zero percent for USA in 1997. This is misleading because July 1997 would be the start of our next contract and would be taken up in contract negotiations then.

If the proposed 3 percent merit raise of 1996 is pass/fail (i.e. you would get it unless you were unsatisfactory on your last evaluation) and if we don't have to pay more for our health insurance, then this package actually compares favorably with the packages offered to MSP and SEIU.

If the USA contract was settled by January (and it was funded by the Legislature) each USA member would be getting a bonus check of 2.5 percent of her yearly salary plus a retroactive pay raise of 2.5 percent since July 1995.

The question is: Why does the USA bargaining team insist this economic package is inequitable?

Lucinda Lucey
USA Member

Arts & Living

FAC to feature fabulous Follies

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

"The Will Rogers Follies" will razzle-dazzle its way into the Fine Arts Center Saturday night. The musical, which won six Tony awards, will begin at 8 p.m. in the Concert Hall.

"The Will Rogers Follies" is the story of a time in history when an Oklahoma boy became America's favorite philosopher. Will Rogers (Sy Becher) hosts the story of his life and leads the audience through the big, bright, bountiful productions known as "Ziegfeld Follies," in which Will Rogers starred for 10 years. The musical looks back at the extraordinary biography of Will Rogers as his boss, Florenz Ziegfeld might have presented it. Surrounded by rope tricks, dog acts and a glamorous chorus line, Will narrates the events in his life with the occasional "stretch of the truth" to accommodate Ziegfeld's showmanship.

The musical opened on Broadway in May of 1991 and immediately captured the hearts and imaginations of the audience with its stunning costumes and elaborate sets. The music and lyrics not only entertained but also conveyed the essence of the down-home temperament and tell-it-like-it-is humor also added to the charm. The critics gave the musical rave reviews and awarded it the New York Drama Critic's Circle Award for Best Musical. It swept the Tony Awards, winning in all six of the prestigious awards, including Best Musical.

What makes "The Will Rogers Follies" special is the innovative handling of what is usually the most conventional element of a play, the plot. Instead of showing a sequence of events in the order in which they happened, this musical avoids chronological or even logical storytelling.

Songs include "My Unknown Someone," "My Big Mistake" and "No Man Left for Me," "Look Around" and "Never Met a Man I Didn't Like" are songs titled from Roger's own words.

"The Will Rogers Follies" boasts a distinguished list of creative credentials. The music was composed by Cy Coleman, a respected composer whose talents have earned him numerous awards including back-to-back Tonys for Best Music (City of Angels, "The Will Rogers Follies"). Lyrics were provided by the longest running creative partnership in theater history, Betty Comden and Adolph Green. The two have collaborated on such hits as "Our Town." Peter Stone provided the book. Stone won the Tony Award for his musicals "1776" and "Woman of the Year."

Tickets for this performance are $35, $27, $27 and $5 for Five College students. Tickets for children 17 and under are $10. For tickets and more information please call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Pianist to tickle pink Amherst crowd

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Internationally acclaimed American pianist Ursula Oppens will present a recital at Amherst College tonight. The concert, which will take place in Buckley Recital Hall, will begin at 8 p.m.

Oppens, who has been praised by audiences and critics from all over the world, is committed to contemporary repertoire as well as to the masterpieces of the Classical and Romantic eras.

Her musical integrity, stylistic mastery and prodigious technical command ranks her among the world's foremost interpreters of piano music. Richard Dyer of the Boston Globe praised Oppens, calling her "one of America's greatest pianists."

Oppens' dedication to music of differing styles and periods is reflected in her latest CD releases. Recorded on the Music and Arts label, her CDs range from an all-Beethoven disc to a disc of contemporary American piano works, consisting entirely of music written for her.

Friday evening's concert will demonstrate Oppens' considerable range. The program will include pieces by Stravinsky, Schubert, Piker and Takemitsu.

During the 1995-96 season, Oppens will be heard as soloist with the Houston, San Antonio, Kansas City, Louisville and St. Louis symphony orchestras. She will present recitals at the prestigious 92nd Street Y in New York City and at Princeton and Northwestern Universities, University of California at Los Angeles and Dartmouth College.

This concert is part of the 1995-96 Music at Amherst Series. The doors of Buckley Recital Hall open tonight at 8 p.m. Tickets are $16 and $14 with discounts for senior citizens and students. Reservations may be made by calling 545-2195 mornings.

Doc Hopper plays genuine punk

COURTESY SUZANNE THOMPSON

Punk favorite Doc Hopper will play Katina's on Sunday.

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Punk Punk Punk. Everywhere you look punk bands are popping up faster than you can say Green Day. This pseudo punk revolution is gaining notoriety for many bands who were still playing their parents garage last November and should never have left. Unfortunately a few worthy bands have fallen through the cracks and remained in obscurity without just cause. Look at Doc Hopper who may easily be New England's best punk band. For the past four years they have been known for their highly energetic live shows and infectiously catchy punk tunes.

In 1991 the band formed in the rural town of Randolph, Maine when Chris Pierce (vocals, guitar) and Jon Madden (bass, vocals), "decided that a life of lobstering, swatting black flies and inbreeding was not for them." After they moved to Allston, Doc Hopper released their debut 7" single. Soon after, Greg Hoffman joined as the drummer. Ringing Ear Records, out of New Hampshire, released their debut album Aloha in late 1993. This album helped the band make a name outside of New England and led to two national tours and several mini-tours.

Last May the band won the prestigious WBCN Rock and Roll Rumble, a battle of the bands featuring 24 unsigned local bands. Doc Hopper became the first punk band to win since the legendary Gang Green took home first prize in the mid-80's. Since then the band has continued their steady diet of touring, including a stop at the Butterfield Residence Hall last semester, which proved to be one of the better live shows on campus.

Their most recent album, Ask Your Mom continues where Aloha left off, featuring fifteen tunes including a cover of the Monkees' "Sunny Girlfriend" and the Dickies' "Fan Mail." Sunday night's show will be jam packed with many of these three minute punk-pop anthems that will keep the dance floor alive. Set aside your Offspring CDs and listen to some true punk tunes.

Doc Hopper plays Katina's on Sunday with the Marshes, Project Flatboy and Speedtrap. Tickets are $5. The show is all-ages and starts at 6:30 p.m. Call the club at 586-4463 for more details.

Kaukonen's finale saves show

Ed Hurley
Collegian Staff

JORMA KAUKONEN
Iron Horse Music Hall
Nov. 29

Jorma Kaukonen and band started off weak with their performance on Wednesday night at the Iron Horse, but eventually they picked up steam and ended with a very strong set.

The first half of the show was performed with Kaukonen on acoustic guitar, sitting on a stool. He was accompanied by a keyboardist/accordion player, a drummer and a second guitarist/mandolin player.

The first couple of songs they played, "Have More Faith In Jesus" and "Banks of The River," were from his latest album The Land of Heroes. They were both covers of Rev. Gary Davis songs. These initial songs sounded rather flat and it seemed the band wasn't really gelled as a unit. This was due probably to the fact that the songs were so new to them that Kaukonen needed to glance at a music stand and refer to the lyrics.

The height of the acoustic set was the band's version of "You're Going to Miss Me Rider" — a traditional folk tune the Grateful Dead had been known to cover. Kaukonen and his guitarist infused humor into the show with an aside about his old band's (Jefferson Airplane) up-coming induction into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame next year. Kaukonen wondered what song all of the inductees would jam out on at the end of the ceremony with such diverse acts as Pete Seeger, David Bowie and Gladys Knight and the Pips.

The humor continued in the show when the keyboards broke and Kaukonen joked that they should break into the music store next door and play the show, then go to jail across the street (Northampton Police Station is located across the street from the Iron Horse).

The crowd's enthusiasm level increased and the show picked up when Kaukonen traded his acoustic guitar for an electric one and his stool for a rockin' strut. Kaukonen and company started to jam out with a series of electric blues songs.

Playing electrically, they were the fine-oiled musical machine grooving like they should be considering they have been playing together for a very long time. With the keyboards working again, the keyboard player did some fantastic solos taking the pressure off Kaukonen.

When the show ended the audience was just as tired as the band was. The two-hour performance left nobody dissatisfied, though he could have played more from his excellent album, The Land of Heroes. The crowd came to see a guitar legend and that was what they got.

NOW AVAILABLE with easy BITE off CAP.
CIDER JACK HARD CIDER

WANTED
Nominations for the 1996
Outstanding Academic Adviser
DESCRIPTION:
A faculty or staff adviser who builds strong relationships with students; monitors students' progress toward academic and career goals; makes appropriate referrals; knows and understands institutional regulations, policies, and procedures.
Submit nominations in writing by FRIDAY, December 15, 1995 to:
Lu Butler, Chair
Outstanding Academic Adviser Selection Committee
Division of Continuing Education, 614 Goodell Building

Latest videos offer a mixed bag

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

If you could pick one thing that has single handedly changed American pop culture in the past 15 years, how many of you would pick MTV? And although MTV has awards and a handful of magazines review videos, very little critical attention has been aimed at videos when compared to the scores of album and concert reviews out there.

A regular feature reviewing music videos is long overdue, and although the music plays a role in a video, there are both good and bad songs with good or bad videos. Therefore the main focus will be on the videos themselves — the style, the plots and other video aspects.

Smashing Pumpkins
"Bullet with Butterfly Wings"

This video was directed by Samuel Bayer, the same director who did several of the Cranberries' latest videos — and it shows. Not only does the video utilize the biggest video cliche of the '90s — whiting out the screen (a la a camera flash) when changing frames, but steals several pages from Nine Inch Nails' "Closer" clip (my vote for possibly the best video of the decade to this point).

Altering the speed of the film violently, putting Billy Corgan in a chair spinning around and intentionally creating scratches on the film are all probably justification for a law suit on Trent Reznor's part.

The ending, where the guy gets (attacked?) by everyone else is very similar to the Cranberries' "Zombie" video where the kid gets beat up.

Anyone familiar with Billy Corgan's attitude towards rock stardom is no doubt not very surprised by this overblown production. Regardless, it doesn't stand very well on its own, let alone when compared to the deliciously fresh videos that came off of Siamese Dream. C–

Joan Armstrong
"One of Us"

Remember when being dubbed a "Buzz Clip" meant something? It has been a long time, but try to remember some of the original ideas that used to come from the buzz bins and then compare them to this video.

"One of Us" is a video very typical of recent styles, it tries to be minimalistic, but just comes off forced. The premise (people sticking their heads into a faceless God cut out) is clever and relates to the song, but how about more than one camera angle on Joan Armstrong? Is an extreme close-up on her face (with her nostrils flaring as she sings) really the best idea they could come up with?

It has become painfully clear in recent years that you don't have to come up with anything unusual to be put in the buzz bin, just be someone no one has heard of. C+

Sonic Youth
"The Diamond Sea"

If the previous video tried a little too hard for a minimalistic approach, then Sonic Youth's video for "The Diamond Sea" pulls it off wonderfully. The band enlisted five different video directors, including Spike Jonze to work with the most overused premise in video making — the live footage video. And the directors pull it off magnificently.

Compiled from five different locations around the country (presumably on the Lollapalooza tour), the different directors change styles so often that there is always something different to soak in. The video has slow-mo (and just about every other speed in existence), a split screen effect reminiscent of the Woodstock documentary — the real Woodstock, strobes effects and color effects all coming together to create a feast for your optic nerves.

Live action videos rarely make huge splashes on the video world so tune in late night and catch this gem before the suits decide to pull it from rotation. A

Folk Implosion
"Natural One"

Folk Implosion is basically Sebadoh in disguise as the project Lou Barlow came up with to do the majority of the music for the Kids soundtrack (highly recommended).

This video was shot in Rhode Island although you can't tell. The only outside shots are of two guys in space suits walking on what looks like a desert but it was no doubt just a beach in RI.

Due to the brevity of the song, a premise isn't really possible, so we get many shots of bright, colorful wind-up creatures wandering around on plants and in the dirt and bumping into each other. Sound silly? Well surprisingly they are hypnotic to watch and the colors are incredible.

The video could have done without the shots of the men on the beach and the repeated shots of Lou Barlow looking like he just had his wisdom teeth removed, but for the shots of the wind-up animals and the fact that the whole thing is done in about two minutes — take your chances. B

COURTESY JOE KUSHNER

Hitting the high notes...

Lori Pozzo, Juan Carlos Falcon, Naomi Lopin and Hsin-Ying Ho rehearse for Sunday afternoon's performance of the "Beggar's Opera," presented by the Opera Workshop. Thomas Johnson's "Four Note Opera" will also be featured at 3 p.m. at Benzanson Hall at the Fine Arts Center.

Lemieux does trick, as Penguins win shootout

BOSTON (AP) — NHL scoring leader Mario Lemieux had four goals yesterday night as the Pittsburgh Penguins beat the Boston Bruins 9-6.

The hat trick was the 34th of Lemieux's career and it marked the fourth time this season that he has scored four points in a game. Two of Lemieux's goals came on power plays in the third period. He has 22 goals for the season and 52 points.

It was the third straight win for the Penguins, who improved their record to 4-0-2 against Northeast Division opponents and 14-5-3 overall.

Bryan Smolinski and Glen Murray added two goals each for the Penguins.

Despite getting power-play goals from Ted Donato, Ray Bourque and Cam Neely, Boston had its five-game unbeaten streak (3-0-2) snapped. It was the Bruins' first loss at home in their last five games.

Ken Wregget (3-3-1) stopped 33 of 39 shots. It was only the third time this season he has allowed more than three goals in a game that he has started.

Dent gave Boston a 1-0 lead on his sixth goal of the season at the 3:02 mark of the first period. It was the sixth consecutive game that Boston has scored on a power-play opportunity.

But the lead was short-lived as Smolinski scored his first goal of the game and fifth of the season on a power play at 6:02 of the first period when he popped home his own rebound past the stick of Scott Bailey.

Lemieux gave the Penguins a 2-1 lead at 13:21 of the first period when he put a backhander through Bailey's pads. Jaromir Jagr increased the lead to 3-1 at the 16:53 mark of the first period when he wristed a shot over Bailey's stick.

■ hoops

continued from page 10

broken foot sustained in UMass' win over Kentucky left the Minutemen's backcourt even weaker. Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso are the only UMass guards who have any extensive collegiate playing experience, which spells big trouble for the Minutemen.

Donta Bright and Dana Dingle will probably now see some time at two-guard. Another factor in tomorrow's outcome could be bench scoring. UMass somehow beat Kentucky without any scoring from its bench, but against the Terps it will need more help from the supporting cast.

UMass should have the advantage down low, as its frontcourt is much deeper than Maryland's. Camby is the main man for the Minutemen and will have to carry UMass on his back much like he did against Kentucky in order for UMass to win.

Keith Booth and Exree Hipp lead a solid Maryland frontcourt. Booth is currently the third leading scorer for the Terrapins (11 ppg) and Hipp destroyed UMass two years ago in the Minutemen's second round NCAA loss.

■ basketball

continued from page 10

At the free-throw line, nobody has done it better than senior co-captain Melissa Gurile. She has not missed a free throw this season, going 12 for 12 so far. The team is shooting a shade above 78 percent from the line.

The Minutewomen have played tenacious defense this season. They have held opponents to a .373 field goal percentage, while shooting .422 for the year.

"I feel like in the last two weeks we've grown up an awful lot. When you think about the game of basketball, there is a lot of ups and downs. Streakiness with shooting and things of that nature, and you hope you don't have everybody on the downside at the same time," O'Brien said. "Right now were are doing a nice job. Everybody is on the same level.

"We are starting to get a nice rotation now, and hopefully the freshmen will get themselves ready to play. But we got some good things happening. We'll see, it's their team now."

■ hockey

continued from page 10

among the nation's best.

On defense, the Terriers lost some talented players to graduation, but the blueliners are still very dependable.

Between the pipes, Tom Noble is a star in only his sophomore year.

"They have all kinds of fire power up front," Mallen said. "They are not as strong as they were last year on defense, but they're still very strong."

The Massachusetts players are pointing to special teams as a key to the game.

"We have to stay out of the box," said junior center Warren Norris. "Special teams will be a key ingredient. If we take care of their big dogs, like Bates, Pandolfo and Grier, we'll be all right."

Norton said that UMass' improvement in man-up and man-down scenarios will give UMass an edge.

"Last year down there, we played one close game with them," Norton said. "We outscored them 5-on-5. I think our power play and penalty kill have improved a lot."

Mallen outlined what he thought would be necessary from his squad.

"UMass has to take fewer penalties than BU," he stated. "We have to outshoot them. We have to be more disciplined than they are."

Because so many of the players from both the Minutemen and Boston University are from the Greater Boston area, the rivalry between the two teams is heightened.

"We have a lot of kids on this team from Boston," Manganaro said. "We grew up with these kids we're playing against."

* * *

The start of UMass' season has been surprisingly strong so far, but in the eyes of most people, the Minutemen will face their biggest test of all this weekend and critics around the nation will be looking to see how UMass handles the challenge.

When Manganaro was asked: Could UMass beat BU once this weekend? the Quincy native responded:

"I think we might beat this team twice this weekend."

■ BU hockey

continued from page 10

Jim Craig.

The legendary players have left an astounding legacy, which clutters the rafters at Walter Brown Arena. The Terriers have claimed four NCAA championships, including one just eight months ago, four Hockey East championships, five ECAC titles and, what the Terrier faithful will tell you is their proudest accomplishment, 18 Beanpot titles. That by far is the most of any of the four schools in the tournament.

The 1995 edition has not deviated from this tradition. BU enters the weekend at 8-1-1 having already won games at Maine and at Vermont. BU is undefeated in its last 13 at home, the longest such streak in the nation.

The team has pushed onwards even in the face of losing their top freshman, Travis Roy, in a tragic incident. If anything, the horrible episode has only strengthened the Terriers, offering a rallying call and motivational focus.

There is an aura of greatness at Walter Brown Arena, where 93 percent of all tickets were sold last year. The rabid fans expect victory as do the Terrier coaches and players.

Some UMass netminder will have to assume his position beneath the gigantic "sieve" sign at the south end of Walter Brown Arena. He will be attacked with both an onslaught of colorful taunts by BU fans and a barrage of shots from the Terriers themselves, who took an average of 38.3 shots per game last year.

Minutemen Vs. No. 2 Terriers

Tonight 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center

Brad Norton

UMass HOCKEY

Mike Grier

BOSTON UNIVERSITY

Volleyball heads to second straight NIVC

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

This weekend, the Massachusetts volleyball team extends its post season play as it travels to Kansas City, Mo. to compete in the National Invitational Volleyball Championship (NIVC).

The Minutewomen will not be taking to the court in the Mullins Center later this month, as UMass hosts the NCAA Volleyball Championships, partially due to last weekend's loss to Rhode Island in the A-10 Championships. Coach Bonnie Kenny and her crew look to exact revenge on a tough NIVC field.

The national field of the NIVC consists of 20 teams, broken down into four pools of five teams. Each team plays four round robin matches within its bracket. The champion of each bracket advances to the semifinals held Sunday.

UMass faces Arkansas at 11:30 a.m. today and Michigan at 4:30 p.m. The action continues on to Saturday as they face Butler at 9 a.m. and San Diego at 4:30 p.m.

This is the second consecutive season UMass has received a bid into the NIVC as last year they finished 1–3 in round robin action. Out of the four intra-bracket matches, the Minutewomen have only met Michigan this season when they found themselves staring across the net at each other in the UMass Invitational early in the season. In fact, it was the Wolverines who edged out the Minutewomen in their own tournament as the squad, led by tournament MVP Kristen Rzchesky, took home the first place spot.

That was three months ago, before the team had dug in and began to boom under its momentum, which led to a nine game win streak late in the season. The Minutewomen won 13 of their last 14 regular season matches.

Last week, UMass hosted the A-10 Championship Tournament, finishing in third place after losing to Rhode Island in the semifinals.

This was a disappointing loss, as Massachusetts split their two earlier matches with the Rams, who had held first place honors for the majority of the season. The Minutewomen who handed URI a late-season loss (15–11, 14–16, 7–15, 15– 12) only a week before tournament action.

UMass was clearly not playing up to speed as they dropped the match decisively 15–8, 15–5, and 16–14. The Rams don't want to fade out of the Minutewomen's horizon, as they are the only other A-10 team represented in the tournament. However, for better or worse, the two squads are competing in separate brackets.

Kenny will look to junior outside hitter Giza Rivera to lead the UMass bid for a semifinal birth. Throughout the season, it has been Rivera who brought consistency and control to the Minutewomen's game. A staple in serving, passing and defensive play, last year's first squad All– Atlantic 10 member has stepped up at all the right times.

Another impressive team leader is junior Dionne Nash, who earned the distinction as being the first athlete in Minutewomen history to reach the 1,000 kill mark. An offensive powerhouse, UMass will look to Nash along with Sophomore outside hitter Lesley Nolan and sophomore middle blocker Michelle Paciorek to earn some kills as well.

Setting the ball will be freshman Katie Pearce, who has filled the setter spot for the majority of the season and even succeeded in earning A-10 rookie of the week last month.

If UMass can operate on all cylinders, the Minutewomen have a good shot at improving on last year's 1–3 NIVC record.

EMILY RILEY / COLLEGIAN

Senior Rachel Sky and the UMass volleyball team travel to Kansas City, Mo. this weekend to take part in the National Volleyball Invitational Championships.

Men's track opens year with quad meet at BU

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The 1995–96 edition of the men's indoor track and field squad looks to utilize increased depth and impressive young talent to improve on their 9–4–1 record last winter, starting with a quad–meet at Boston University.

UMass coach Ken O'Brien acknowledged the loss of many top scorers to graduation, but is optimistic that his young team can cover most of the indoor events with no real weakness.

> "One of our strengths is that we cover all of the events,"
> Coach Ken O'Brien

"We certainly have lost some major point scorers," O'Brien assessed. "But, we've replaced them with, I think, wider coverage. We have a lot of freshman that, in time, will be able to score at the level of those guys."

To supplement the loss of last season's leading scorers, the new UMass squad employs no less than 18 freshmen, and is more–than–half comprised of freshmen and sophomores.

O'Brien's young squad will be captained by senior Marc LeFebvre. A native of North Attleboro, LeFebvre is the team's top thrower, recording last year's best shot put mark with a distance of 48'3" at the Rhode Island meet on Feb. 6, 1995.

Sophomore Scott Price, one of the top returning sprinters for the Minutemen, will likely sit out the initial meet of the winter season with a slight strain in his hamstring.

Price had a spectacular freshman season placing first on the club in the 55–meter dash (6.4 sec.) and the 200–meter dash (22.48 sec.), winning the 200–meter at last winter's BU meet with a time of 22.6 seconds.

Joining the Minutemen and the Terriers Saturday will be the Wildcats of New Hampshire and the Maine Black Bears. Yale, who won the meet last season with 48 points, decided not to participate this season and was replaced by Maine.

Massachusetts finished second to Yale a year ago, falling eight points shy of first, while winning three events outright. Returning winners are junior Ron Tauro, used in a wide array of events, took the high hurdles, while Price edged out a Terrier and two Yale runners to win the 200–meter dash.

"One of our strengths is that we cover all of the events," O'Brien said.

The Minutemen are particularly strong in the sprints with junior Chris Abbott and freshman Mike Tessicini running with Price, while LeFebvre anchors a strong throwing unit.

Gun fires on women's track season

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Taking a cue from the men's basketball team, the Massachusetts women's indoor track and field team's first match-up is no cupcake. The Minutewomen will travel to Boston tomorrow to compete in the inaugural meet of the winter season against Northeastern and New Hampshire.

Massachusetts will feature a strong corps of distance runners, as the top five members of the Atlantic 10 champion cross country team are on the meet roster. NCAA cross country qualifier Rebecca Donaghue will lead the distance runners, competing in the 800–meter and the mile.

Fellow harriers Christie Martin, Kristin Donaldson, and Jen DelColle will also run the mile. Cross country veterans Jen Waeger, Katie Greenia, Molly Dunlap, and Bonnie Davis will fill the roster for the 3000m. Tracy Meagher completes the list of mile runners, and Susie Hitscherich will join Donaghue for the 800m. The 4x800m relay is tentatively scheduled to be run by Martin, Donaldson, DelColle, and Donaghue.

"Rebecca is coming off a great cross country season and I expect her to run away with the mile," LaFreniere said. "The other cross country runners should run well, and because of that the distance events should be our strong suit.

"I usually don't like to race the cross country runners this soon after the season, but we are going to need every runner in order to beat Northeastern."

The sprint runners will be anchored by the trio of Melanie Bell, Rosemarie Bryan, and Emma Gardiner, as the three will compete together in the 55m dash and the 200m. Yves Amazan and Michelle Cooper are scheduled to race in the 400m, along with Angela Oei–Mensah. Amazan and Cooper, along with Shelanda Irish and Anya Forrest, will comprise the 4x400m relay. Forrest and Alyssa Angers are scheduled to run the hurdles for UMass.

"Anya should do very well in the hurdles," LaFreniere said. "And I expect a lot from Melanie and Shelanda. They are going to be running against some fierce competition. Rosemarie should do well against NU, hopefully she'll pull out a win or two. But it's not going to be easy, for any of them."

Northeastern brings a strong contingent to the field events, posing a threat to UMass in every jump and throw. The Minutewomen's throwers are powered by Christie Martin, the university record holder in the 20 pound weight throw. Shana Mitchell is also expected to contribute solid performances in the 20 weight event.

The sprint trio of Bell, Bryan, and Irish will bolster UMass' scoring hopes as the Minutewomen's entries in the long jump. Hurdler Angers will compete in the triple jump for Massachusetts. Martin and Karen Pekarski will compete in the shot put, while Irish and Jen Gates will carry the Minutewomen's hopes in the high jump.

The weekend's match-up is a tough test for the early season, and although the Minutewomen are concentrating on defeating Northeastern, UNH is not being discounted.

"Northeastern is strong. That's a given," LaFreniere said. "But we're also competing against UNH, so we've got to give this meet everything we have. And hopefully we'll come home undefeated."

The meet will be the first collegiate contest to ever be run in the new Reggie Lewis Track and Athletic Center in Boston.

Men's gym vaults into action

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

Expectations are high for the 1995–96 Massachusetts Men's Gymnastics team. Winning seven straight New England Championships does that to a team.

There is no reason to foresee a letdown in Amherst this season either. The team returns all but two members of last years team, and added the largest recruiting class in the school's history.

"We had a solid group of guys return from last year, and we added a tremendous recruiting class," said UMass assistant coach Steve Christensen.

The combination of experience and depth will play a large role in the teams' overall performance.

Once again the team will be led by the 1994 Coach of the Year, Roy Johnson. Over 18 years at UMass, Johnson has compiled a solid 123–71 overall record. Last year was one of his best yet, as he maximized the talents of many young gymnasts. He led the Minutemen to an impressive 9–2 overall record. This was along with an ECAC Championship, as well as a third place finish at the EIGL Championships.

A huge obstacle for the team to overcome is the loss of sophomore Kevin Schwartz. After setting numerous school records and qualifying for the NCAA's, he will be unable to participate until the Spring semester due to academic reasons. Fortunately, other athletes have filled the void that he left.

"This team is as large, and competitive, as any that I have seen here," said Christensen.

The Minutemen will need this depth, as they compete in the UMass Open on Dec. 2. In what Christensen termed a meet "that sets the pace for the year," top rated teams such as Ohio State, Penn State, and Temple will be looking to beat up on the rest of the field. Massachusetts is definitely capable of altering these plans.

Strong performances are expected from senior Co–Captain Steve Goldman, juniors Gabe Columbus, Kiat Oboler, and Ruslan Shupak. Sophomore Dan Young is another integral part in any success that the team will have.

Joining them will be freshman recruits Steve Frey, Brad LeClair, and Tim Wheeler. As this important preseason meet approaches, UMass is relaxed and confident.

"This is a great opportunity to show that we are right up there with the big guns," Shupak said.

"We're all going to have fun. That's all we need to do," Young added.

■ horn

continued from page 10

the first guard off the bench for the Minutemen this season. And indeed he was, but he didn't even make it through his first minute of action. He hobbled over to the bench area just 30 seconds after stepping onto the court. When he came out of the locker room for the second half... he was on crutches.

The starting guards, Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso, had to play nearly the entire game and played well in beating the Wildcats' pressure for a good portion of the contest. Their play was a major factor in the Minutemen being able to coming out on top.

This weekend could complete a hat trick of UMass upsets in less than 10 days, as the defending national Champions and currently second–ranked Boston University Terriers come to Amherst. They open a home–and–home series tonight at the Mullins Center before Saturday's clash at Walter Brown Arena.

The Minutemen have no fear of this perennial national power and with the marked improvement over last year, it seems there is nothing this three–year old program can't attain.

• Before I stray from the UMass theme, I wanted to mention the strong alumni contingent that was at the FleetCenter Wednesday. Most notably was Roe on the hardwood while his fellow co–captain Kellogg was in the stands rooting him on, along with career home run leader Bill Knight and movie star Richard Gere.

• Ever since I can remember, the Northwestern football team was the equivalent to Central Conn. St. in college basketball, the proverbial doormats. Now they are the ones who are laughing.

How weird has this year been? So far the Cleveland Indians have made the World Series, the Atlanta Braves have won the World Series and now the Wildcats are in the Rose Bowl. What next, an AFC team winning the Super Bowl?

• All right, I admit it. I said Blaine Lacher was not the next Mike Moffatt, i.e., a one year wonder. As of Tuesday he was demoted to a Providence Bruin for a two–week "conditioning assignment", i.e., he isn't playing in the NHL, so let's put him against weaker opposition and he'll look better as trade bait.

The Bruins recent success has been due to a new netminder in the cage, Scott Bailey. Maybe the Bruins should just accept the fact that their goalies have an expiration date of one year. Then they could trade them and get quality players in return for the goalies they know will turn sour. Kind of like Bill Ranford.

Oops.

• Is it true that they are changing the nickname of the Miami Dolphins to the Miami Red Sox. They sure do have one very similar quality.

• Do all you NBA fans' eyes' hurt? Those obnoxious new uniforms and designs inside the three–point arc of various teams take away from the purity of the game. I realize marketing the clubs sports wear is big business these days, but I didn't realize these team cut a deal with Lens Crafters as well as Foot Locker.

I applaud such teams such as the Celtics and Lakers, two franchises which are the most storied in the league for not changing the floor of their courts. When I watch basketball games I care about the players on the floor rather than the trendy paintings in the paint area.

• Did anyone else happen to see the Sportscenter show when anchor Steve Levy was describing what was ailing ex–Patriot cornerback Maurice Hurst?

"Hurst, cut by the Patriots today, has been diagnosed with a bulging dic," Levy quickly recovered. "Disc in his lower back."

da-da-DA, da-da-DA.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

20% off!
Any single item.
One day only!
Sat. Dec. 2.
10 to 6.
Some restrictions apply.
ZAYA
Downtown Amherst

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS...
DOING THE JOB NO ONE ELSE WANTS TO DO

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex: Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

Eating DisorderPrograms • 1995-96
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671 x233, Clinic 4.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know.
Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

1177 N. Pleasant Street
North Amherst (3 minutes from UMASS)
549-4555
muddy duck cafè
Dinner & Cafe Menus:
Delicious Rotisserie
CHICKEN, DUCK, and TURKEY
...vegetarian to grilled fish to Hamburgers...
Thurs., Fri., Sat.
Cafe Menu 'til Midnight
Bar 'til 1am
We Want To Be Your Special Late Night Place
NEW HOURS
DINNER
Tues., Wed. & Sun. 5-9 pm
Thurs., Fri., Sat. 5-10 pm
SUNDAY BRUNCH
10 am - 2pm
Fine Selection of Wines, Beer, Microbrewa & Frosted Mugs

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY
LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 8
Call Theatre For Showtimes
MONEY'S TRAINY
IT TAKES TWO
CASINO*
THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT
COPYCAT
HAMPSHIRE 6
Call Theatre For Showtimes
WHITE MAN'S BURDEN
ACE VENTURA: WHEN NATURE CALLS
DIE HARDER
GOLDENEYE
HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS
TOY STORY*

COLLEGIAN NEWS
Because it happens everyday.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $140 $280
PARIS $175 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $220 $439
TOKYO $859 Roundtrip
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Earn/passes Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-Immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. INT'L student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420
800-272-9676

Sports Notice
The Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team will also be competing in the New England Championship this weekend which are being held at the University of Connecticut at Storrs, beginning today and continuing through Sunday. UMass enters the meet 3–0.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR
&
AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

SKI BOUSQUET
$20 DAYS
Grand Opening
This Weekend
$5 off with college ID
$15 NIGHTS
Dan Fox Drive (413) 442-8316 Pittsfield, MA

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities	Miscellaneous
Announcements	Personals
Apartment For Rent	Room For Rent
Auto For Sale	Room Wanted
Employment	Roommate Wanted
Entertainment	Services
For Sale	Summer Sublet
Found (2 days Free)	To Sublet
Happy Birthday	Travel
Houses For Rent	Transportation
Instruction	Wanted to Rent
Lost	Wanted
Musicians

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD
Kai Tin de vering Sunday through Thursday 12-11pm and Friday and Saturday to 3am 586-2774

Adult children of the mentally ill UMass researcher conducting study about the experiences of people who grew up with a mentally ill parent seeks volunteers. Call 413 585-8678. Participants will be compensated

Need an escape? Join us this spring on the water with the sailing team. Call now. Emily 546-5857

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment for rent starting Jan 1st || bathrooms on bus line near school. Contact Naghi 549-8415

Take over lease 2br apt on bus route Call Megan 665-4304

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Merc Topaz Good cond. Runs excel $2300 obo 546-7942 Julie

90 Ford Tempo A/T $2500 Call 256-3052!

Double bed practically brand new mattress, boxspring, frame $225 Call Elaine 549-9911

Kegerator $200 2 year old iguana 4' x 2' tanks all supplies incl $200 specialized hardrock 18" mountain bike $175 or bo 549-9166 Larry or Denise

Large Dorm sized fridge $100 Excellent condition Chris 256-1937

Top of the line Voiki skis for sale at an unbeatable price- boots for sale bo Lori # 253-1882

UMass vs Maryland 2 tickets for basketball tourney in Maryland 4 games If interested, call Anthony @ 549-7324

286/386 Computer System $105-$205 Keyboard, CPU, monitor Call Steve (413) 566-3224

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS
Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and supportive teacher. Call Peter 253-5283

EMPLOYMENT

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $275-$375/week working to save the environment with Mass.pirg. Casual, fun atmosphere. Call Tem at 256-6434

Travel Abroad and Work Make up to $25-$45/hr teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

We want you Unique liquor related product. Parents for $700. Inventory required $7500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location your profit $32,400 first year! 941-766-9001

FOR RENT

Two 500 #s Be creative to earn big money. Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Alesis HR-16 Drum machine $200. Great condition Chris 256-1937

CD Rom games for Mac 7th guest, mystgadget, full throttle, original packaging 584-0942

LOST

Reward$ I lost my thick silver bracelet with green stones in town between Delanos, Barcy's and Antonio's on Friday Nov 18. Was a present from deceased mother. Please return for reward. Call Sarah 546-3613

MISCELLANEOUS

Reward $500 CASH!!! for any info regarding the robbery of 45 Southpoint Dr over Thanksgiving leading to the arrest those involved. All names anonymous. Please call Cory at 253-1540

PERSONALS

To my sunshine I'll been two wonderful years being with you. Thank you for teaching me how to receive love without apprehension. I hope I made your life brighter as you did mine. I love you with all my heart. Love always, Josephine

WRFC Rookies Beware I'm going to be there. I have no hesitation as this years invitation. Hope I like you

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-7942

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for upbeat female to share 2 bedroom apt. Available Jan 1 - Aug 275/mo negotiable Call 549-4835

One bedroom in a five bedroom house. Smoking OK. $270 per month. 256-4795

Room for rent on bus route, all utilities included. Male or female. $768 per month. Available Jan 1. Call Nikki 253-7741

Room for rent: Private home quiet neighborhood kosher/vegetarian kitchen Laundry, parking furnished. $325 incl. Jan 30 549-4853

Room for rent in townhouses $215/mo Call Jamie 549-5767

Room at Cliffside "Avant Jan 1 "For spring semf $315/mo inc all, utili Great stud pref. 665-7810 Chris

Single in 3br Puffton Apt. Avail Jan 1 725/month Call 549-6694

ROOMMATE WANTED

Large Bedroom in Belchertown apt for 1/2 people. New, quiet, on bus route. Available whenever. Scott 253-1768

Person wanted to share room in great house in great location Call 549-4827 ASAP!

Roommate wanted to share apt in Mill Valley. Heat & hot water incl 253-1402

SERVICES

Free financial aid! Over 6 billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help! Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. FS0012

RESUME

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union 545-2771

International Students DV-1 Greencard program by US Immigration. Legal services tel (818) 772-7168. 20231 Stegg St Canoga Park, CA 91306

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3334

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Available month of Jan 1 bedroom Apt in North Amherst on bus route. $425. Call Julie 549-5886

TRAVEL

JAMAICA
Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril. $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

Port Antonio, Jamaica. Ocean view cottages, great neighborhood walk to beaches, restaurants, dancehall clubs $150/week. 413-367-9350

Winter Break Special Killington week $269. Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED TO RENT

We are two females looking for 2 rooms in which to rent our heads from Jan or Feb 1st (pref Feb) until June 1st. Will also consider 1 Large bedroom Apt or house-id fine. Bus route would be ideal. Please call Stacy or Renee evenings at 546-4868

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

Aries (March 21–April 19): You have good reason to feel better about yourself and a complicated situation. Someone is given the green light to launch a creative project. Conventional behavior and dress will make the best impression on a newcomer.

Taurus (April 20–May 20): Curb unnecessary spending by sticking to a budget. Keep your feet on solid ground. Do-it- yourself projects will give your home a needed facelift. Host a small party once all the work is completed.

Gemini (May 21–June 20): Watch out for a blue mood this morning. Give yourself a pep talk! Displaying humor and enthusiasm on the home front will help consolidate family ties.

Cancer (June 21–July 22): Break out of your shell and socialize more. Updating your image or appearance could lead to new professional opportunities. Meet a business associate more than halfway.

Leo (July 23–Aug. 22): Explore other employment opportunities within your field. A practical approach can turn your dreams into reality. Classified ads provide useful job leads.

Virgo (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): You may have to rectify someone else's mistakes. Face a heavier workload with determination and poise. Showing initiative will impress higher-ups. Postpone signing papers.

Libra (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Seek privacy when discussing your personal affairs. Catch up on work assignments; you can celebrate later. A friend may be in need of consolation. Be considerate and kind. Ask as few questions as possible.

Scorpio (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Your personality is a tremendous asset today. Pay outstanding bills, but do not use all of the funds available to you. A trusted pal offers sound advice. Other friends prove delightfully cooperative. Romance soars!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): New faces and places are a source of inspiration. Publicity and advertising efforts produce wonderful results. Romance could wear a mask tonight. Get together with good friends; their support will make all the difference.

Capricorn (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Aim for a tranquil atmosphere today. If you work hard and stick to a well- planned agenda, everything should fall into place. Influential people applaud your efforts. New contacts prove very valuable. Nurture them.

Aquarius (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): People in high places are watching. Emphasize your versatility. Deal with any gossip by acting level headed and dignified. Time is on your side in romance. Tact and compromise will help avert a showdown.

Pisces (Feb. 19–March 20): Avoid showing irritation over trifles. The best way to deal with petty people is to ignore them. Do not sell yourself short in business. Guard your assets by demanding fair compensation for work done well.

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

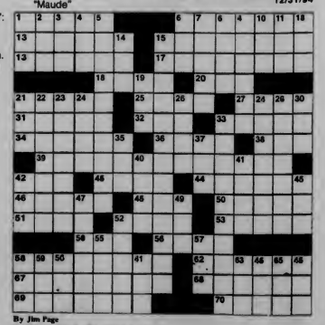
ACROSS
1 Troy saga
6 Early TV's "Break —"
13 Certain ticket holder
15 Saint in Hollywood
16 Honor
17 State of being legal
18 Heavy metal?
20 JFK ltrs.
21 Gemini rocket
25 "Annie" yaps
27 Calamine target
31 Chopper part
32 Pres. Hafez al-Assad's rep.
33 "— Island": 1962 film
34 Up-to-date
36 Rockefeller nickname
38 Lines from Keats
39 Like winning the lottery
42 — Pan Alley
43 Gridiron gain
44 It's under a grate
46 Cleans a pipe
48 "— of the Tiger": 1986 film
50 Youngsters
51 — Royale, Mich.
52 Like a baseball cover
53 View anew
54 Recipe meas.
56 Inactive
58 Tryout
62 Early rock 'n' roller
67 Horace and family
68 Musician Henderson
69 Lucky at the track
70 "60 Minutes" regular

DOWN
1 Suffix meaning made of
2 Chaney
3 Self ending
4 Gotchal
5 Shoppers' gold mine
6 Power agcy.
7 Compels to go
8 Utter
9 "Tales From the Crypt" creature
10 Actress — Meyers
11 Twit, to a Brit
12 — to the city
14 Court
15 Winger/Nolte 1990 film
19 "— Kapital"
21 Easel holding
22 Hockey's Howe and others
23 Ceaseless
24 "...little pig had —"
26 Envelope word
28 Theater groups
29 Painkiller
30 D.C. chamber
33 Vegas bonanzas
35 Sumac
37 Arthur of "Maude"
40 Canadian First Nations people
41 Big name in Korea
42 Before angle or sect
45 Mao follower
47 Specialty
49 Outcome
52 Say at length
55 French market town
57 Ted Williams et al.
58 Past
59 Tea vessel
60 Goddess: Lat.
61 Shelley Duvall role
63 Improv routine
64 Give — rest!
65 Bonn alas
66 Sports org.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

D	A	W			A	W	A	S	H		E	S	T	E
O	B	I			S	A	L	T	Y		S	C	U	T
M	E	N	D	A	C	I	O	U	S		T	U	N	E
E	D	G	E	W	I	S	E		O	P	E	R	A	S
			B	A	I	T		S	N	E	E	R
O	S	C	A	R		S	S	T		A	M	I	S	S
P	L	A	T	E	S		P	A	I	R		L	I	P
T	Y	P	E		A	L	E	R	T		A	O	N	E
E	E	R		P	L	E	A		S	P	R	U	C	E
D	R	I	V	E		S	K	I		R	A	S	E	D
		C	A	R	E	S		G	R	I	G
J	A	I	L	E	D		A	N	A	C	O	N	D	A
O	B	O	E		I	N	D	I	G	E	N	O	U	S
A	B	U	T		T	R	I	T	E			S	P	A
N	E	S	S		S	A	T	E	D			H	E	P

12/31/94



By Jim Page
© 1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

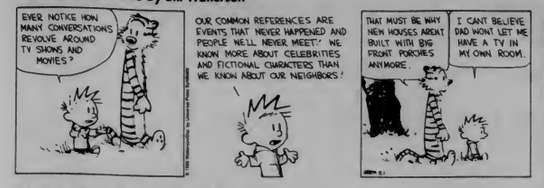
Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1	1
2	2
3	3
4	4
5	5
6	6
7	7
8	8
9	9
10	10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



EVER NOTICE HOW MANY CONVERSATIONS REVOLVE AROUND TV SHOWS AND MOVIES?
OUR COMMON REFERENCES ARE EVENTS THAT NEVER HAPPENED AND PEOPLE WE'LL NEVER MEET. WE KNOW MORE ABOUT CELEBRITIES AND FICTIONAL CHARACTERS THAN WE KNOW ABOUT OUR NEIGHBORS!
THAT MUST BE WHY NEW HOUSES AREN'T BUILT WITH BIG FRONT PORCHES ANYMORE.
I CAN'T BELIEVE DAD WON'T LET ME HAVE A TV IN MY OWN ROOM.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY THERE CURLY-Q! I SAW YOU SITTING OVER HERE LOOKING LIKE YOU NEEDED CHEERING UP.
OH, THANKS, BUT... FEEL FREE TO JOIN ME.
MY NAME'S JACK, WHAT'S YOURS?
BRUNO.
SO, WHAT'S EATIN' YOU UP? WHY THE SAD FACE?
NUTHIN', I'M JUST THINKING ABOUT IF I WANT TO GET MARRIED AND THEN HOW MANY KIDS I WANT TO HAVE.
WHOA... THESE ARE PRETTY HEAVY THOUGHTS. MAYBE I'M INTERRUPTING.
I HAD THAT SUSPICION.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

YOU CALLED ME "ROGART"! HOW'D YOU KNOW MY NAME?
HE'S RIGHT! I MET HIM AS PETER PARKER!
A FRIEND OF MINE NAMED PARKER TOLD ME ABOUT YOU!
I NEVER SHOULDA LET THAT DWEEB GET AWAY!
SPIDER-MAN'S MINE! NOTHING'LL STOP ME!
STAN/LARRY LEE/LIEBER 12/1

Close to Home By John McPherson

As a special service, Dr. Gremley gave all of his patients a complimentary photo-collage of their entire root-canal procedure.

Close to Home By John McPherson

The agony of having a college roommate with an easy course load.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

LOOK, LET THE LADY GO AND I'LL BE OUT OF HERE!
NO WAY!
NOBODY RENEGES ON A GAMBLING DEBT TO ME!
I'M SORRY I GOT YOU INTO THIS!
NOTHING'LL KEEP ME FROM SPIDER-MAN! NOTHING!
STAN/LEE/LARRY 1/2

Loser Cow Comics By Mike Krozy

308 Boyz By Skid

Clue Man By Golen Burke

Today I'm going to find out what people will pay money for. Let's check out these bumper stickers.
Suckers! You're Paying $1.00 For This?!?
That answers my question
Bumper $1.00 Stickers
Bumper $1.00 Stickers

Molson Spice By Derek Oleson

Here are the three most famous guitars at Chinrubber's Vintage Instruments.
A 1959 Fender Strat scorched by Jimi Hendrix
A 1968 Gibson Explorer smashed by Pete Townsend,
And a 1971 Gibson SG incinerated on by Frank Zappa.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Munch Monster U By McCormic

Man, I laugh I never heard of the Newt that son of a...
Some how, some way, something should be done about the Newt!
NEWT?
Ah! Here it is, NEWT-n, a heartless, slimy looking, legged relatives of a snake. It crawls out of a swamp, lives under a rock and spends its life using its forked tongue to rock around for a living in the debris on the floor of...

The Daily Collegian, making the world a better place, one day at a time

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Did you ever meet an insensitive stutterer? I already told you that only sensitive people stutter.

Sometimes when life was getting too hectic I used to force myself to stutter when ordering a donut. It was my way of being kind to myself.

What I haven't told you is that I found a better way to be tender to myself... I'll stop my hectic day and go over to this beautiful brook by the grass and listen to the water talk to me.

Wha wha wha wha what do do do do you think?

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor ..... Allison Connolly
Photo Technician ..... Jeffery DiGiovanni
Production Supervisor ..... Joshua Grey
Production ..... Marianne Haner
William Darby

Dining Commons Menu

Friday

LUNCH
Sloppy Joseph
Clam Roll
w/ Tartar Sauce
BASICS LUNCH
Vegan Sloppy Joseph
ClamRoll
w/ Tartar Sauce

DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Szechuan Beef & Broccoli
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Tenders
Szechuan Tofu & Broccoli

Saturday

BRUNCH
Omelet w/ veggies
Jumbo Waffles
BASICS BRUNCH
Jumbo Waffles
Polynesian Veggies

DINNER
Stuffed Shells
Pancakes & stuff
BASICS DINNER
Black Eyed Peas
Stuffed Shells

Sunday

BRUNCH
Scrambled Eggs
Texas French Toast
BASICS BRUNCH
Texas French Toast
Roman Rice & Beans

DINNER
Turkey Divan
Savory Tacos
BASICS DINNER
Turkey Divan
Savory Veggie Tacos

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10

By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Signs that the holiday season is upon us

10. Students become increasingly aware of the fact that they just don't want to go to class anymore.
9. Professors, wary of their student's lack of enthusiasm, assign enough work to bring a mature adult to tears.
8. Bursar closes invoices with "Thanks for the extra cash and have a great holiday, sucker!"
7. HSCN starts airing "Ernest Saves Christmas" again and again.
6. Project FLATBOY starts to play their "Holiday Set" at gigs.
5. Ted Kennedy is often found in Liquors 44 purchasing some "holiday spirits."
4. Drunken mall Santas, on break, line the streets shouting at passers by "Here's your stocking stuffer you bratsl"
3. A few people actually enter the Mountain Farms Mall.
2. Unruly men start wearing belts made of mistletoe.
1. Student in Santa outfit gets caught in Chancellor Scott's chimney.

Quote of the Day

"You're going to be making money hand over fist."
–Phoebe, from Friends

Sports

Massachusetts renews rivalry with No. 19 Terps

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

It's become one of the better rivalries in college basketball on the East Coast — Massachusetts vs. Maryland — and it continues tomorrow in the Franklin National Bank Classic in Landover, Md.

The No. 5 Minutemen and the No. 19 Terrapins will tangle again at 12 p.m. in the first game of the two-day tournament. Florida and George Washington will face each other in the second game of the afternoon, with the winner of the two games facing off in the championship game on Sunday. The consolation game will be at 1 p.m. Sunday, with the championship to follow immediately after.

The Minutemen enter tomorrow's contest coming off its impressive win 92–82 win over No. 1 Kentucky. The Terps played the Wildcats in their season opener also, but fell 96–84. They didn't play well in their second game against Townson State but pulled out the victory, 70–67.

Maryland and UMass have played each other only four times and the series is tied 2–2. The first meeting was in the first round of the National Invitational Tournament during the 1989–90 season where the Terps came away with a 91–81 win. But that was before the Minutemen became a national power. UMass finished that year with a 17–14 record.

The rivalry really started two seasons ago when the two teams met in the Atlow's Classic in Springfield, Ma. The Minutemen came away with the 94–80 win in this matchup. The loss left the Terrapins angry because they thought that UMass was talking too much trash.

The Terrapins got their revenge in the second round of the NCAA Tournament later that season, when they beat the Minutemen 95–87 at the Kansas Coliseum. In that game, the Terps got their first taste of UMass center Marcus Camby, who scorched them for 32 points and 10 rebounds. That loss left a bad taste in the mouths of the entire UMass squad.

The Minutemen returned the favor last season (Dec. 10) with a tough 85–74 win at the Baltimore Arena. Camby was a important part of the win, scoring 15 points and grabbing a team-high 11 boards. This time around the game won't be decided on just Camby's play, but more importantly, the play of the UMass backcourt.

Maryland has one of the best backcourt duos in the country in Johnny Rhodes and Duane Simpkins. Rhodes currently leads the Terps in scoring with 26.0 points per game and Simpkins is second with 16.0 ppg. Rhodes also leads the team in rebounds with 8.5 per game. Against Kentucky, Rhodes finished with a game-high 30 points.

The backcourt is UMass' weakness. Charlton Clarke's

Turn to HOOPS, page 6

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Senior co-captain Donta Bright (shooting) will see time in the backcourt this weekend as UMass competes in the Franklin National Bank Classic in Landover, Md.

No. 5 Massachusetts Minutemen		No. 19 Maryland Terrapins vs.

At USAir Arena, Landover, Md. 12 p.m.

Donta Bright

Keith Booth

Probable Starters

Edgar Padilla	G	Duane Simpkins
Carmelo Travieso	G	Johnny Rhodes
Marcus Camby	C	Mario Lucas
Donta Bright	F	Keith Booth
Dana Dingle	F	Exree Hipp

On The Air

Radio: WMUA 91.1 FM Brian Perillo and Mike Reiss
WHMP 99.3 FM Mark Vandermeer, Jack Leaman and Tony Barbee

Minutemen play two against BU

■ UM feels it can play with BU ■ Terrier hockey history runs deep

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

It doesn't matter that the last (and only time) the Massachusetts hockey team beat Boston University, Woodrow Wilson was President (Jan. 16, 1920).

It doesn't matter that the Terriers are ranked No. 2 nationally and that they are the defending national champs.

It doesn't even matter that BU beat UMass by a combined score of 19–5 in the three games the teams played last year.

When Massachusetts battles Boston University in two games this weekend, the Minutemen expect to win.

"Our players feel that they're just another team. They're a pretty good team," said Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen. "We try to approach every team in Hockey East like they're just another team."

The confidence headed into the weekend flows freely from the Minutemen players.

"We know we're just as good as anybody that anybody else can put on the ice," said senior winger Sal Manganaro. "We just have to go out there and prove it."

Sophomore defensemen Brad Norton guaranteed a UMass victory.

"Don't get me wrong, they're all great players, but I think they're a little too hyped up. People make them look a lot better than they are," he said. "I don't think any of us are intimidated by them at all. I'm not afraid. We're going to win."

If they do, the Minutemen will be accomplishing a feat only accomplished once so far this season.

The Terriers 8–1–1. Their only loss came at the hands of New Hampshire in the Wildcats home opener.

Their offense is loaded. Led by Jay Pandolfo, Shawn Bates, Chris O'Sullivan and Hobey Baker candidate Mike Grier, the BU forwards are

Turn to HOCKEY, page 6

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts hockey team skates out onto the ice Saturday night in Boston University's sold out Walter Brown Arena, a hostile environment, unparalleled in Hockey East, will await.

Constantly packed to the crowded rafters with fans, their vociferous screams suppressed beneath a low roof, the building is deafening. A boisterous band belts out tunes as the Terrier faithful are whipped into a heightened frenzy by a student-designated "ogre" who's sole responsibility is to instigate pandemonium, assuming of course that the dynamic team in the scarlet and white hasn't done that already.

It all starts well before the game as the helmetless players emerge from their locker room and charge onto the ice, always in numerical order behind their goalie, the names on their backs reading like a list of All-America candidates. O'Sullivan, Pandolfo, Grier, Bates. No team outside Minnesota better stockpiles local talent than the Terriers.

Year after year, coach Jack Parker rakes in local recruits from hockey powers like St. Sebastian's and Catholic Memorial, and perpetuates his nationally dominant program. New Englanders in scores of thousands, dream throughout their youth of donning the legendary scarlet sweater.

Perhaps no one better personifies the legendary program than Parker himself, who last week became the eighth coach in NCAA history to record 500 career wins. Originally from Somnerville, the CM and BU grad has spent the last 32 years both playing and coaching on Commonwealth Ave.

As coach of the US Junior National team, Parker's players are no strangers to the international scene. Six Terriers were members of the 1992 US Olympic squad, while four played for the 1980 gold medal winning "Miracle on Ice" team, including team poster-boys Mike Eruzione and

Turn to BU HOCKEY, page 6

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Blair Wagar (17) and the UMass hockey team will have their hands full this weekend as they take on the reigning nation champion Boston University Terriers.

UMass heads south to La. Tech Tournament

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

They are coming off the most successful weekend in Massachusetts women's basketball history. They enter the Louisiana Tech Tournament this weekend which includes the No. 1 host Louisiana Tech, St. John's, and the Minutewomen's first opponent, Mississippi Valley State. They know what it takes to defeat a national power, and they look to do some damage.

Last weekend UMass upset then No. 8 Stanford on Friday 65–56, and then proceeded to beat a tough Detroit team on Sunday 67–61. The Minutewomen now stand 30th on the national chart and have their sights set on cracking the AP Top 25 for the first time in school history. There may be no better opportunity than this one.

Tonight, UMass squares off against Mississippi Valley State (0–2). The Minutewomen will look to better their 2–1 record this evening and advance to the finals to play either Louisiana Tech or St. John's. UMass has never played either Mississippi Valley State or Louisiana Tech. The Minutewomen have played St. John's eight times, and post a 1–7 record against the Red Storm.

If UMass defeats Mississippi Valley State, they would likely play No. 1 Louisiana Tech. If the Minutewomen could win the tournament, they would surely be placed in the Top 25. UMass coach Joanie O'Brien however, has placed a motto on the team which they plan to stick to — "one game at a time."

"We are primed to play Mississippi Valley State. One thing I know about Mississippi kids is that they are great athletes and they will run up and down the court," O'Brien said. "That will be a big challenge for us. Hopefully, we won't catch ourselves overlooking them trying to think about St. John's or Louisiana Tech. We will get ourselves ready and if things go well, we will get a chance at Louisiana Tech."

The Minutewomen are beginning to mold into a complete basketball team. The depth of the team is better than it has ever been, and the people expected to score are doing their part. In UMass' first three games, two players have reached double figures in all three contests.

Senior co-captain Octavia Thomas netted 18 points vs. Maine, 12 vs. Stanford, and 22 against Detroit, while sophomore reserve forward Tez Kraft notched 10 against Maine, 14 against Stanford, and 12 vs. Detroit.

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 6

UMass upsets could reach three when Terriers come to Amherst

When the Massachusetts women's basketball team dropped No. 8 ranked Stanford at the Mullins Center last Friday 65–56, it was a tremendous upset and really put the program on the national scene. That victory, coupled with their win over the University of Detroit, brought the team their highest national ranking ever, 30th in the country.

Around the Horn with Justin C. Smith

The continued progress of that program, doing whatever it takes to play the storied teams and beat them, could very well lead to their first ever Top 25 ranking. To Joanie O'Brien and her troops, congratulations and keep up the outstanding effort.

Tuesday night, as Marcus Camby tamed the top ranked Kentucky Wildcats, everyone in the world of men's college basketball forgot the Minutemen lost Lou Roe and Derek Kellogg after last year. They spoke of UMass basketball and their "Refuse to Lose" attitude.

It also marked the third time in as many years the Minutemen had dethroned the pre-season number one ranked team in college basketball. North Carolina, Arkansas and now Kentucky, all programs with storied histories in the sport have fallen to the Minutemen, two of those times without key cogs in their juggernaut.

In 1993, it was Jerry Stackhouse, Rasheed Wallace and Camby's freshman year, but just after the overtime period started, the Hartford native who had played so well for the Minutemen, went down with a knee injury. Giving up such size and quickness, UMass dug deep, especially to the then–junior Roe and pulled off the upset.

The match-up with Rick Pitino's squad was a similar situation. Freshman Charlton Clarke was to be

Turn to HORN, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 60 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, December 4, 1995

Ground control to Major Tom
One of rock and roll's most enduring stars, David Bowie, makes an impressive comeback with Outside (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Overlapping identities
Students who are both Latino and gay, lesbian or bisexual, were invited to the Latin American Cultural Center for a discussion Tuesday (See story, page 2).

Marcus vs. Maryland
Marcus Camby and the men's basketball team continued their opening win streak, winning two on the road in Maryland (See Sports Weekend, page 12).

Extended Forecast
It will be partly sunny today with a light wind and a high near 45. There won't be any snow, but Tuesday will be considerably cooler with temperatures continuing to drop into Wednesday

	Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH:	43	40	35
LOW:	20	20	15

Four held after shooting at SW Malcolm X Center

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

A fight unexpectedly broke out during a party at the Malcolm X Cultural Center early Saturday morning, resulting in multiple gunshots. The dispute was between several UMass students and juveniles from Springfield.

The fight broke out between an unidentified woman and a male UMass student. Individuals from both sides entered the foray. One of the off-campus individuals at the party pulled out a small gun, and fired a shot in the air.

"A fight broke out across the room on the couch, and my friend was jumped," said Delana Anderson, a first-year student who witnessed the fight. "Then I saw a bunch of people jump in, and someone pulled a gun. Then everyone scattered."

It is reported that the fight broke out at 3 a.m. because of a misidentification between alleged "gang members" and several UMass students at the party.

The scene became hectic as students fled wildly from the party. The police quickly arrived on the scene, but the situation did not improve.

Police officers held several students at gunpoint, and instructed them to lean up against the wall. Many students protested and simply walked away. One student was searched, according to students at the party.

The non-University students who started the fight at the party were from Springfield according to police reports. They allegedly stolen a car in Springfield, and had driven the car to the party.

"Two Springfield men and a juvenile were arrested after shots were fired... " according to the Associated Press. "Police said the three that were arrested after they lead police in a car chase through South Hadley were not UMass students."

When the police arrived, the non-students fled into the car, and were pursued by police from local police stations, including the University, Amherst, South Hadley.

It is the opinion of many UMass students that the incident may have been prevented if security had done a better job.

"The security was weak," said first-year student Ben Scott. "It was lackadaisical. It could have been prevented."

A similar incident happened at the "Jeans and T-shirts", one of UMass' biggest student-run parties, which is sponsored by the Black Mass Communication Project. In that incident, a person was stabbed, despite heavy security.

Van Meter Hall is vandalized

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

Last Thursday, a slew of racial and anti-hippy comments were written in the stalls of the men's bathroom on the second floor of Van Meter Residence Hall.

The graffiti consisted of several remarks regarding the residents of Van Meter Residence Hall and dissatisfaction with their lifestyles. The vandals responsible for the damage drew obscene pictures on stall doors, and other remarks that included the name of senior biology major Chris Skop as an example. Skop is a resident of the hall.

"I went in and saw my name and wondered, why did it have to be me," said Skop, about his initial reaction to seeing his name in the midst of the graffiti.

Police were on hand to investigate the incident last Friday. Police suggested that the bathroom be closed and residents on the second floor were asked to use the bathrooms upstairs. The suggestion was not enforced and several students continued to use the facilities.

Although pictures were taken and questions were asked, the police could do little to rectify the feelings of Skop and other residents of Van Meter who have become accustomed to seeing acts of vandalism all semester.

"I wasn't surprised to hear about it," said senior Tawnya Conway. "Nothing surprises me anymore."

Van Meter is one of the last residence halls on campus that has yet to be renovated. Residents of the hall say this is part of the reason why incidents of vandalism and the destruction of public property persist.

"In the four years I've been [in Van Meter], I've watched it go straight to hell," said Conway.

First-year Jamie Sinsheimer came home to her fourth floor room last Friday and found a homophobic remark written on the memo pad on her door. In retaliation, Sinsheimer wrote a two page response paper addressing the incident, asking whoever made the remark to make themselves known and discuss whatever issues they have with Sinsheimer face to face. She made copies of the paper and had it taped to the second, third and fourth floor stairwells of Van Meter.

"They're constantly vandalizing Van Meter and it's awful," she said.

Many residents of Van Meter share the sentiments felt by Conway. Skop and Sinsheimer. A floor meeting is being scheduled to see what can be done about this recurring problem.

As the Collegian went to press, the UMass Police Department was unavailable for comment.

UM gathers for AIDS memorial

Feelings & stories surrounding disease shared at Friday's vigil

By Roseann Cohen
Collegian Staff

Approximately 50 University of Massachusetts students, staff and community members united to remember World AIDS Day on campus, gathering on the icy steps of the Student Union to take part in a candlelight vigil Friday evening.

Organized by the UMass Health Education Division, the gatherers trekked past the Campus Pond and onto the Wheeler Gallery, where they were given the opportunity to voice their feelings and share perspectives about the disease.

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Katie Thoennes, a sophomore sociology major, helps make part of the quilt for World AIDS Day on Friday.

Moving personal stories, thoughtful reflections and expressions of the ranging emotions surrounding the disease provided the forum with many insights helpful to understanding AIDS and enhancing awareness.

"Events around World AIDS Day have a multitude of purposes," said Lauri Turkovsky, a doctoral student in social justice education. "It gives people a chance to reflect on their feelings of loss for those who have the disease. It's a chance to take notice and think about these issues."

Senior biology major Jonathan Henson said, "The emotions and feelings this disease brings up in me — anger, fear, sadness — I don't know what to do with them. Where do we start? Legislation, research, treatment, working with individuals? I think this here is a start, just finding the voice to say something."

One student pointed out the need for educating people how to prevent HIV, telling the story of how she had been shocked when an old boyfriend of hers admitted that he had only used a condom once before in his past.

"I thought he meant that he forgot to use a condom only once," said Diana Zimmerman, a freshman undecided major, explaining how she chided him for not understanding the necessity of using condoms to prevent the spread of disease. Months later, her ex-boyfriend said that he was now using condoms in all of his sexual practices.

"What a little change you can do by opening your mouth just once," she said.

Kerry Sheehy, a sophomore English major, expressed the need for people to take it upon themselves to be informed and start thinking about AIDS.

"I know a lot of people who are at risk and they don't even know they are. AIDS is a disease that affects

Turn to VIGIL, page 3

Student dies while playing ice hockey

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Since he was five years old, Darryl Sigleski loved playing hockey.

On Saturday afternoon, Sigleski was skating on the ice, passing the puck and playing hockey with his former team, the Middlesex Midgets, when he collapsed.

At around 3:15 p.m., bystanders at the Tri-Towns Sports Center, and later medics, gave the 18-year-old cardiopulmonary resuscitation. He was then airlifted to Hartford Hospital. But the doctors could not save him. The University of Massachusetts student died.

The cause of death was listed as dysrhythmia, the medical examiner's office said.

"He loved to play hockey," said Darryl's mother, Oksana Sigleski. "He loved it."

Darryl Sigleski, of Durham, was a first-year undeclared major who had turned his efforts to academics and was considering a major in hotel management. Sigleski lived in Pierpont Residence Hall.

A former captain of the Midgets, Darryl Sigleski enjoyed playing many sports. He was on the soccer team at Coginchaug High School. In his free time, he liked to camp and fish. He also liked in-line skating.

> "We kept an eye on it and had him checked out. The doctors said they saw no reason not to play."
> – Oksana Sigleski

But Darryl Sigleski also had a heart murmur and would occasionally suffer heart palpitations.

Doctors said his heart murmur would not limit his playing hockey, Oksana Sigleski said. He had undergone a series of tests in the fall before trying out for the UMass team, which he didn't make, she said.

"We kept an eye on it and had him checked out," Oksana Sigleski said. "The doctors said they saw no reason not to play."

His heart palpitations happened only a handful of times last year, his mother said. When it happened, he knew to head for the bench, she said.

Hartford Hospital spokesman James Battaglio said that an autopsy will be conducted at the state's medical examiner's office.

"He was a good, solid hockey player and enjoyed playing the sport," Oksana Sigleski said.

Conte's life, work inspires dedication

By Jack Farrell
Collegian Correspondent

An outpouring of love and admiration warmed the University of Massachusetts campus Friday as politicians of all stripes gathered to honor a man for whom "politics was the noblest of professions."

The busy slate of events honoring Conte began with the formal dedication of the late congressman's papers. Conte served western Massachusetts as representative from the 1st District for 32 years until his death in 1991.

Present at the day-long celebration, deemed a "love-in" by U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's former aide and raconteur Michael Feinberg, were notables such as former U.S. Attorney General Eliot Richardson, former Gov. Michael Dukakis and former ambassador to Ireland Margaret Heckler.

Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci, calling Conte "a role model of mine" and "the kind of politician I'd like to be," started off the morning dedication ceremony at the W.E.B. Du Bois Library's Special Collections Room. He noted Conte's conviction in working to "provide the best possible education to the largest possible population. It makes sense for his papers to be dedicated here at the state university."

Conte's widow, Corrine, who donated the papers, echoed those sentiments. "He felt education was

Turn to CONTE, page 3

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

On Friday, former Governor Michael Dukakis warmly recalled his early days in Massachusetts politics with Silvie O. Conte.

NYU professor analyzes continuing tragedy of Vietnam

By Michael Elliott
Collegian Staff

The issue of U.S. involvement in Vietnam has paralyzed this country for more than a generation according to Marilyn Young, chairman of the department of history at New York University, and author of the recent book, The Vietnam Wars: 1945–1990.

Young sees this dilemma as one which will continue into the next century.

Young's speech, entitled "Interpreting the war: the debate over Vietnam," addressed an audience at Hampshire College Thursday night in a event sponsored by the Five-College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS).

"It's as if the war only ended yesterday," said Young, who cited numerous examples of how the conflict "haunts" the thinking and dialogue of modern day policy-makers.

The lessons of Vietnam "are involved in every discussion when considering if the United States should send troops to Bosnia."

Issues such as deploying United States troops into a potentially bloody quagmire while maintaining the nation's position as a reliable and effective world leader mirror the arguments used for and against intervention in Vietnam, according to Young.

Because academics, veterans, the government and the general public alike are constantly reassessing the implications of the conflict, it has become the "forever war," said Young.

Many view the war as "a logical extension of the ideology of the Cold War," in which the United States sought to contain communism from overtaking additional South-East Asian states and simultaneously nurturing global democracy, Young said.

Others, said Young, see the lessons gained from the war as "rather moderate," claiming that the war was merely a "local conflict" in which the United States did not react to properly in time.

Economic considerations were also at play, said Young, as the United States had intentions of capitalistic expansion in Asia.

Young did not wholeheartedly endorse or reject any of these views. Rather, she said that if one is to understand the American experience in Vietnam, they must first put their thinking into the context of the very precarious domestic and international position the United States was in at the time.

The war, the 1960s Civil Rights Movement and similar events which ignited social struggles for action and change "questioned the nation's morality," and posed a "serious threat to America's sense of itself," Young said.

Most Americans supported the fight against communism. However, many found themselves disillusioned from to the conflict between the supposed fundamental and guiding principles of this country and the reality of U.S. conduct in South–East Asia. This was especially so once it became apparent that Vietnam was not the straight–forward battle between the forces of good and evil, as the government claimed.

Confronting the war, therefore, has not only been complicated by these dilemmas, but has been deliberately avoided by the nation's leaders, according to Young.

Successful, "healing wars," said Young, such as the Gulf War and the U.S. invasion of Panama, were transformed through the media into a quick remedy for the Vietnam syndrome — allowing this country to forget the pain, confusion and tragedies some 20 years in the past without fully coming to terms with what it all meant.

American disaffection with Vietnam is further evi-

Turn to YOUNG, page 3

Lecture series is first step for an Asian Studies certificate

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Forty Asian American students gather every Thursday night as part of a grass roots movement which has lead to a forum where Asian American students can address their concerns and explore their identity.

See Related Story, Page 3

Ethnicities of the Asian American students include Asian Indian, Chinese, Filipino, Japanese, Korean, Laotian, Vietnamese, Thai, Iranian, bi-racial and several others. These students represent a microcosm of the Asian American community which comprises 5 percent of the University population, according to an Asian American Studies fact sheet.

Education 396A, which is an independent study, has neither funding nor a professor. Yet the students, with the assistance of graduate student Lucy Burns, have compiled a series of lectures about Asians in America.

"The Asian American lecture series was created in response to Asian American students' desire to address their concerns and their own history, and to give them a forum in which to do so," she said.

"We need education about our own history in America," junior Mary Lucier added. "A topic which

Turn to ASIA, page 3

For Your Information

PIFs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PIF, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to The Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Monday, Dec. 4

Support Group — "Balance" is the subject of REFLECT's support group at 7 p.m. in the Psychological Services Center. REFLECT, the Five College student organization devoted to helping those who are coping with the serious illness or death of a friend or family member.

Workshop — The W.E.B. Du Bois Library is sponsoring a workshop on obtaining Internet resources related to Latin America at 9 a.m. Contact Lori Mestre in the Reference Department at 545–6851.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Debate — The Distinguished Visitor's Program is hosting "The Bell Curve Debate", featuring a debate between Dr. Charles Murray and Dr. Alvin Poussaint in the Fine Arts Center. Admission is free to UMass undergraduates, $3 for graduate students, staff and faculty, and $6 for the general public.

Tuesday, Dec. 5

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Lecture — Prof. Penelope Andrews of CUNY Law School will speak on "Perspectives on Race and Progressive Law" at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 805. For more information call the STPEC office at 545-0043.

Speaker — The Sylvan Cultural Center is hosting Ujaman Gordon as part of the Men's Week of its first annual "ALANA Women and Men Empowerment" Series at 7 p.m. in the basement of Cashin.

Toy Drive — UMass Army ROTC will be collecting money for "Toys for Tots" outside the Student Union, 9 a.m.–3 p.m. For more information call 549–6462.

Toy Drive — UMass Army ROTC will be collecting money for "Toys for Tots" outside the Student Union, 9 a.m.–3 p.m. For more information call 549–6462.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542–2277.

Notices

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Overeaters Anonymous — Does eating control your life? Overeaters Anonymous meetings are held on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and Sunday at 10:30 a.m. in the Campus Center. Monday and Friday meetings are cancelled for the rest of the semester. For more information call 548-9040.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995-96 issue. Any Five-College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Semi–Formal — The Southwest Area Government is throwing a semi–formal on February 10, 1996 in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are on sale now in the SWAG office, with Early Bird prices of $10 a person, $12 a couple. Prices will increase next semester. For more information call 5–0960.

Writing — The National Library of Poetry is currently accepting entries for the North American Open Poetry Contest. Deadline for entries is Dec. 31. Poets should submit one original poem of no more than 20 lines to The National Library of Poetry, 11419 Cronridge Dr. P.O. Box 704–1986, Owings Mills, MD 21117.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five–College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10–11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8–10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549–6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323–6330.

Health — Worried about HIV/AIDS? Call 1–800–750–2016. The Family Planning Council's HIV Hotline counselors can tell you whether or not you are at risk for contacting HIV; how you can protect yourself from contracting the virus; where, when and how to get a free, anonymous HIV antibodies test at over 70 sites throughout the state.

Health — The Family Planning Council Tobacco Cessation Project offers free, confidential individual & group counseling/support to smokers trying to quit. Variety of methods including "the patch." Call Lynne at 1–800–696– 7752.

Meeting — Hillel House is sponsoring "Being Jewish in a Sorority", an opportunity for women considering rushing in the spring to hear from sorority members themselves about being Jewish in a sorority. Located in Campus Center Room 168 at 7:30 p.m.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Mon.–Thurs. 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Center examines multiple identites

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

Staff at the Latin American Cultural Center say a small gathering last Tuesday night may be a forerunner of a movement within the Latin American community to address the needs and concerns of gays, lesbians, and bisexuals at the University of Massachusetts.

"We just got frustrated with a lot of the stuff we've been seeing around here," said Mercedes Betanco, a UMass undergraduate who helped coordinate the event. "We figured that we needed to put something like this together."

The gathering began with a presentation by three Latina women and evolved into a general discussion of GLB issues in the Latin American community and Latin American issues in the GLB community.

Hampshire College Professor Laura Ramos and UMass graduate student Rosie Castaneda identified as lesbian, while social justice educator Maria Veronica Frankel–Cobo identified as bisexual. All three spoke of their struggles to bridge the gap between their identities.

"I find I am constantly being encouraged to pluck out some aspect of myself and present this as a meaningful whole," said Ramos, quoting an essay by African–American writer Audre Lorde.

When Ramos came out eight years ago at the University of Californi, Los Angeles, people she interviewed for research told her "there's no such thing as a Latina lesbian."

Ramos volunteered a personal anecdote about a convention she attended a few years ago. The gay, lesbian and bisexual caucus held a dance one evening and she attended in wearing a suit and tie. At that dance, her appearance was accepted and she felt comfortable being the "butch" lesbian in the group.

Immediately after that dance, there was another party, this one for members of the Latino/a caucus. Ramos said she felt much less welcome there.

"When I walked into the room people stared at me," she said, adding that she eventually ended up sitting with a lesbian couple. Throughout the evening, her appearance was met with stares and silence.

According to Ramos, in that situation, being lesbian among a GLB crowd was easier than being lesbian among a group of Latin Americans.

Struggle against assimilation

Frankel–Cobo said she experienced the gap between the two communities in a different way. Frankel–Cobo was born in Chile and moved with her family to Texas at the age of seven.

"My father... did his damndest to assimilate us and forbid us to speak Spanish after we moved here," she said.

As a result, she grew up facing a lot of pressure to conform, especially when she found herself the only Latin American in an all–white high school. Even though she was attracted to other women at her school, she felt she had to ignore these attractions in favor of these she felt toward men.

At college, where she completed a women's studies minor, the Chilean–American found that lesbianism and bisexuality made her feel confused and threatened. She was still not ready to make herself conspicuously different.

This situation took a dramatic turn after she spent two years in Central America.

"That experience sort of woke me up in a lot of ways to the... dominant Latina part of myself," she said. "I regained the Spanish language, which opened up a lot of memories and helped me in a lot of ways to express myself. And I came back to the United States and 'came out' as Latina again."

Shortly after her return, Frankel–Cobo met a group of bisexuals who did not seem to conform to stereotypes she had in her mind. She found that she was at last ready to break out of the English–speaking, heterosexual mold.

Frankel–Cobo said that her current goal in life is to merge and find acceptance for her identity as both Latin American and bisexual.

"When I'm in the queer community I feel like I'm bisexual and when I'm in the Latino community I'm Latina," she said. "I sort of feel like I'm betraying one if I say I'm the other. I feel like a lot of my life has been about fighting that isolation and pulling myself together."

Worries about acceptance

Castaneda grew up in an all–white neighborhood in Sacramento, California. Like Frankel–Cobo, she grew up with parents who encouraged her to hide her Latin American identity so she would not be like "those Mexicans." Both Castaneda's parents were of Mexican descent.

When Castaneda realized she was a lesbian, it was difficult for her to relay the information to her family.

"[The situation] is tense, it's not nice," she said. "It's that struggle of 'How can you be Latina and a lesbian?' You're not supposed to be both."

Castaneda admitted that when she first arrived at UMass, she was worried that she would not be able to find acceptance in the Latin American community. For example, when she visited the Latin American Cultural Center, she felt like she was going to arrive with only her Latina identity and leave her lesbian identity at home.

Center staff say they have made an effort to make the office more "queer–friendly" and scheduled the meeting last week as a first step in that direction. Betanco said she hoped that the LACC would be host to similar gathgrings next semester.

Collegian Elections Spring 1995

Applications for all Newsroom Editor Positions are being accepted.

Arts & Living	Jewish Affairs
Black Affairs	Managing Editor
Business	Multicultural Affairs
Developing Nations	News
Editor In Chief	Photo
Editorial / Opinion	Sports
GLB Issues	Women's Issues

Deadlines:
Applications due Dec. 8, 4 p.m.
Candidates Night, Monday, Dec. 11 7 p.m.
Elections, Tuesday, Dec. 12 8 a.m. – 3 p.m.

Applications are available on the Managing Editor's desk and should be dropped off in the Editor in Chief's mailbox. All questions should be directed to Matt Vautour, Editor in Chief.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Classifieds Now

VISA MasterCard™

Accepting Credit Cards

Conte

continued from page 1

extremely important."

Prior to the dedication, Conte discussed her husband's humble roots. "He came from a poor family, used to pick up coal that fell off boxcars on the railroads, and began working on a farm every day at the age of 12, so he could give money to his mother. Sil knew that education was the way up."

Conte would have been surprised by all the attention, said James G. Collins, former Amherst state representative. "Sil was a self–deprecating, down–to–earth guy, with a great sense of humor... Sil was the real article."

Still, Conte "would have loved it — he always loved a party," his widow said. "He absolutely loved people. We never had dinner alone, never — he was always bringing people home with him. I never knew how many people we'd be having."

Conte's gregarious personality prompted his successor, U.S. Rep. John Olver, (D–Amherst) to point to his bold tie and claim he was at least as colorful as Conte. Olver, known for his more reserved, cerebral approach to politics, laughed along with crowd.

Conte had more of an impact on this district than "any one in this room," said Olver, who once taught chemistry at UMass. He noted that had he continued teaching, he may have been working in the new polymer research center on campus named for Conte. Conte's support helped develop and fund the research facility.

His work on that project reflected "no late conversion," but a commitment from Conte that "always remained consistent," said Eric Einhorn, chairman of the political science department at UMass.

The papers, archived by Gail Giroux, orlginally arrived in "hundreds of boxes four high and nine deep." Giroux said the work of sorting through the documents was "arduous," but she said "I loved doing it, I loved the work."

Most agreed that Conte would have been extremely uncomfortable with the tone and nature of debate in Congress. "He would have went on the House floor" to scold Congress for its behavior, said Corrine Conte. And "he would have done it with humor," added their daughter Michelle, a graduate of UMass.

Conte's humor was recounted by U.S. Rep. Richard Neal, who once asked Conte for advice on foreign policy. The crowd roared as, in the tale, Conte listed only three things a congressman from Massachusetts needed to know: "Jerusalem is the capital of Israel; all of Ireland should be united and free; and Trieste is part of Italy."

Richardson, who is best known to many as the man who stood up to Richard Nixon by refusing to fire Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox in 1973, spoke eloquently of Conte's belief in politics as a source for good. He conducted his political work "with artistry and nobility," Richardson said, and called politics the "most difficult art and the noblest profession."

The Conte exhibit, which Heckler cited as the strongest such work she had seen, is on display until Jan. 31, 1996, and is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Young

continued from page 1

denced when compared to the triumphs of the Second World War, said Young.

"The war in Vietnam was portrayed as bad precisely in proportion to the U.S. struggle against fascism and Japan," Young said. The anti–war movement, she said, never once questioned U.S. intentions in World War II — a war which history views as a unifying force, mobilizing all the talents and abilities of the American people.

"Even in the grim years following the Vietnam War, people could still fondly remember the victories of 1945," Young said.

The death of over 50,000 American soldiers in addition to the massive destruction brought upon civilian populations "symbolized the lack of American innocence," Young said.

The intense debate sparked this summer by the Smithsonian's planned exhibit of the Enola Gay, which was originally intended to feature a large presentation of the effects of the bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, stems from a need of the American people to view World War II as a "good war," Young said.

"By suggesting that the war ended in a atrocity," Young continued, "the American people will be left with the same crisis of identity which Vietnam now represents."

This lecture was the last in a series of three sponsored by PAWSS in commemoration of the 20 years since the end of the Vietnam War.

vigil

continued from page 1

everyone," she said.

Tasha Morris, a freshman sociology major, recalled her experiences working with a 12–year–old girl who contracted HIV from her rapist.

"This little girl had seen safe sex posters in our health clinic before, and had asked her rapist to wear a condom because she had seen our posters," she said, explaining that the rapist, who gave the girl chlamydia, as well as getting her pregnant, refused to wear one.

"Here's a little girl, 12 years–old, and she was smart enough to ask him to wear a condom. She's been smarter than most adults," Morris said.

Sally Damon, one of the organizers of the event, told a story about her frustration with the barriers she encountered to AIDS awareness when she worked at Assumption College, in Worcester.

Michael, who had been diagnosed as HIV positive, had visited the college each year to speak to students. Each year, he received a larger and larger turnout. Over the years, Michael's health got considerably worse.

"His eyes were dull, and he was growing thinner, but he still had the power within him to motivate others," Damon said. "He let out a lot of his anger about losing his job, and having to lose his health care."

Damon continued by explaining that the next year, Michael was not allowed to come speak because the Dean of Students wouldn't allow it. Damon expressed her anger at a system that prevented Michael from teaching his lessons to others.

"I always think about how the door was slammed in his face," she said.

Tamara Gallant, a health educator at UHS, remarked on the vigil, and the meaning she derived from it.

"It was ironic that, with the wind, the only way to keep our candles lit was to relight our candles from the people around us, as well as trying to keep our own candles lit," she said.

According to Gallant, the larger message telling us how to cope with this disease, could be found simply by working together to keep each individual flame from being extinguished.

Coalition looks to create certificate

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

The Asian American Studies Coalition (AASC) hopes to establish, promote, advocate and support Asian American studies and other programs not traditionally supported in the University of Massachusetts curriculum.

The coalition, which began in late October, currently has a membership of 12 students who hope to create a certificate program for Asian American Studies.

Junior Mary Lucier, the group's special projects coordinator, said she realistically sets their achievement goal for three to four years. She states that the coalition is engaged in an on–going process which involves researching the Five College community for assistance, looking for qualified professors and attaining funds.

Presently, several coalition members have assisted in the creation of an Asian American Lecture Series established as an independent study in the Education Department. This class serves as a pilot program to explore the curriculum and processes of further engaging into Asian American Studies.

"Because our goal is long term, we need a class which focuses on Asian Americans which can help our community now," Lucier said.

By the fall semester of 1996, the coalition hopes that their independent study will be listed under the title of "Asian American Experience" in the English or Education departments. This process is similar to the creation of the African American Studies program which began as a subgroup of the English department.

Besides working to create a certificate program, the coalition has several other goals. The AASC hopes "to locate and support speakers, workshops, and seminars addressing diversity and race related issues traditionally not recognized in the University curriculum and to publicize and advertise multicultural events within but not restricted to the five College Community," as stated in their constitution.

Asia

continued from page 1

is not included in the Asian studies program."

In regard to the importance of this class, junior Lisa Chiu said she believes if she were white she "could take any class I wanted in any subject area about my ethnic heritage."

"If I were white I would feel more comfortable going to all of my classes," she said. "But I'm not. I need Asian American classes for the very selfish feeling of being comfortable."

The concerns of the students range from history and identity to representation, exclusion, and racism in American society. Sociology and activism are also explored.

Asian American concerns are being addressed by lecturers who are qualified to speak about the topic of Asian American studies.

"With the creation and proliferation of this class we will necessitate the hiring of faculty who are qualified in Asian American studies," senior Ahn Ly said. "Prof–essors of this expertise are extremely rare presently."

Ly said she feels this class will keep Asian American students in school by teaching them about their own history which they do not receive in any other classes. More importantly, she stresses that is integral for the future of the Asian American community since it is the first step in creating a certificate program.

Education 396A will take place again next semester as an independent study in order to continue the Asian American Lecture series.

Currently, the class is attended by over 40 Asian American students every Thursday night, 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Dong Il Lee, a professor of theater at Smith College, spoke about Asian–American writers on Oct. 26.

UMass Division of Continuing Education

· January 2-25 ·
Winter Session 1996

· More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
· Noncredit workshops
· Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
· Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register Now!
Call for a free course catalog · (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education · University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

IT WAS THE GREATEST SEASON EVER
RELIVE THE EXCITEMENT
THE 1994-95 UMASS BASKETBALL COMMEMORATIVE YEARBOOK
"A Moment in Time"

Available (while they last) at:
• The Mullins Center during the Wake Forest game
• The University Store
• By Mail:
Send $6.00 plus $2.50 to cover postage & handling to:
Tournament Publications
338A Cooley St. #126
Springfield, MA 01128

The Distinguished Visitor's Program presents
A Debate: The Bell Curve
What roles do genetics, race and environment play in determining future status?

Dr. Alvin Poussaint

Dean of Harvard Medical School, script consultant to the Cosby Show, psychiatrist and noted social critic. Author of Raising Black Children and Why Blacks Kill Blacks.

Dr. Charles Murray

Author of The Bell Curve and Losing Ground. Bradley Fellow at the American Enterprise Institute and one of the nation's leading conservative policy commentators.

Monday, December 4, 1995, 8:00 PM
Fine Arts Center, UMass
Free to UMass Undergrads with valid I.D., $3 for UMass faculty, staff, and graduate students, $6 for public is ...natural ..fun ...best when you can come .. to the:

S E X
NOT READY FOR BEDTIME PLAYERS
nov 8
nov 15
dec 6
dec 13
Mary Lyon
Coolidge
Dickinson
Patterson
8 PM
For more information, call the Health Education Division at 549-2671 x181.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtbt Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Herman Rosenberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist

Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1911, the Weekly Collegian in 1916 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opposing the debate, opposing racism

Sometimes it's very good to be away. Sometimes when you return home you wish you hadn't. With the past, present and future horrors of racism swirling around the globe and inside my head as I complete a novel whose characters are struggling with such horrors, I return to Amherst to find the equivalent of a cross burning in my front yard.

If a strange man ran up to you on the street and yelled, "Your mother's a whore," what would you do? Return the insult, turn the other cheek, punch him in the face, play the dozens, laugh, ignore him, feel pity for him? Would you be suspicious of your mom? Look for a cop? Would you be large-souled, compassionate, even forgiving? Wonder what horrible set of experiences — unloved, abandoned, abused by a mother — have filled the man with hate and violent impulses?

Whatever your response to the man and his nasty words, I bet you'd react quite differently if you knew the man had the power to make his words come true.

If you can imagine how you'd feel towards this stranger whose words are backed by the power to hurt people you love and literally change your world, then you are beginning to understand the sense of threat, share the outrage Charles Murray's imminent visit to UMass arouses in me.

Don't bother to raise the tit for tat of Farrakhan. His visit was a chimera, a diversion, a bone tossed the disenfranchised. Farrakhan didn't represent the trustees of the University, the administration or the faculty, etc. But neither does Charles Murray, you hasten to say. Yes. Identical warning labels adorn both speakers. The difference is, the moment Farrakhan departed, UMass reverted to business as usual — usual meaning that the University continues to reflect the mainstream biases of American society. And paramount among these biases is the fiction of "race". dividing Americans in order to conquer some and privilege others.

John Wideman

Though Farrakhan's rhetoric reveals awful things about our past and present, how the rules force us to be black or white, inferior or superior, oppressed or oppressor, though his insights should shake us up, the implications of his message, the endorsing apartheid part anyway, describes a familiar world. It's just upside down. The part about what black people might do after taking back control of their lives is a distant threat the white people, yet offers a pretext for gripping the reins of power tighter.

In contrast to Farrakhan's one-nighter, Murray's visit is not a visit. It's a foregrounding of what's always with us, sometimes percolating almost invisibly behind the scenes, sometimes scrawled obscenely on the walls of campus buildings. Look around yourself. What do you see? I see one group, designated by the fiction of race as "black", under- represented in the student body, faculty, administration, trustees, local, state and national government, the whole food chain of power and privilege that organizes and constitutes our country.

Black is the word Charles Murray is coming to UMass to say. Black as the cause rather than the victim of American ills. Black urban ghettos, black jails, black addiction, black orphans and homeless, black crime, black death. Black suffering the inevitable consequence of black mental inferiority. The lop-sided status quo of white supremacy is the natural, predictable, normal result of white mental superiority. Black and white, the racist construct most Americans to chose to identify and understand themselves.

American culture has transformed racial fantasies and canards — your mother is a whore, you people are not as smart as we are — into enduring markers buttressing an apartheid society. Not because the racial epithets and allegations are true or not true, can be proved "scientifically" or not, but because political and economic domination of one group over another allows the majority to proclaim the lies of race, behave as if they're true, and profit from them.

Majority power is rough justice. Ask the Bosnian Muslims. The Tutsi. Ask the Jews who were German citizens in 1937. Ask Nat Turner. Ask the nigger who was dragged from his car in suburban Pittsburgh a few weeks ago and beaten to death by five cops.

So someone has invited Charles Murray to campus for a good reason, I presume. In the spirit of free intellectual inquiry, the market place of ideas, free expression and free speech, I guess.

Free speech is one matter. Speech that frees the beast in human being, and speech legitimizing the treatment of other human beings as less than beasts, are two different things.

Speech that harms me or mine is not free. We pay for it. In a final, overriding sense, speech cannot be free when it's embedded in the conventional discourse of race. Race was invented to thwart communication, monumentalize difference, and discourage, at the cost of social death, contact with the "other."

Progress can occur only after we admit the intellectual and moral bankruptcy, the evil history of employing constructs such as "race" and "intelligence" to segregate and destroy lives.

I must apologize for my remark about beasts. The lion didn't invent race to justify his bloody predation. He eats what he can catch. Are we as brutally determined by our biology? Or biology destiny? Is it justice, beauty, truth?

Charles Murray isn't coming to UMass seeking or telling the truth, but preaching the gospel of a world he and others like him have created, a world ruthless, unforgiving and static. A world of white over black. His self-interest in this enterprise should be obvious. As is mine against it. The violently divided world we live in today need not be the one we inhabit tomorrow.

If a friend warned me about a foul-mouthed character hanging around down the block, backed by a vicious gang who often turn this threats and insults into actual hurts, I don't know about you, but if had to spend my 60 credits in any one of those places, I'd go nuts.

Here's another doozie. If we were on-campus and in an emergency situation or just wanted to call someone, we couldn't because there are no accessible call-boxes. Man, UMass is a barrel of laughs.

Cristina Zizza is a junior political science major here at the University of Massachusetts. She also happens to need a wheelchair to get around. She transferred from another Massachusetts' university two years ago because the non-accessibility there was astounding.

Zizza said UMass is better than the other school, but it has a long way to go.

"On a scale from one to 10, I'd give [UMass] a six compared to my last school," Zizza said. "The administration tries to be accommodating when I enroll in [a non-accessible class] ... my other school would just withdraw me."

UMass doesn't make life any easier for students in wheelchairs, though. According to Zizza, there are no accessible automatic teller machines and people often leave their bicycles on ramps, blocking the way.

What about the precious Mullins Center, though? That has to be immune to this kind of stuff. Nope.

According to Zizza, there are six sections for wheelchairs within the center. But when people buy season tickets to see the men's basketball team, the University sells those sections out as well — not to people in wheelchairs, but to anybody who has the seniority points and cash.

"I've gone to games and not had a place to sit," said Zizza.

And no, you can't sit in the aisles, that's a fire hazard.

I wonder if Coach Cal knows about this.

Zizza is also a representative on the Architectural Access Board here at UMass. Briefly stated, the board decides where to spend money given by the state to make the University more accessible. How much money? According to Zizza, Governor William F Weld granted $22,000.

Tim White

"That's chump change," Zizza said.

To put the figures into words, Zizza proposed lowering the panels in the elevators on campus so people in wheelchairs could actually use them. Just doing that would wipe out most of the funds.

Thanks a heap, Weld. Maybe we should make him sit in a wheelchair for a day and try to get around.

Most of us don't know what it is like to live with that kind of disability. We can use the call-boxes, grab 10 bucks from the ATM when we need to, and sit anywhere in the Mullins Center.

A student is a student — a university is supposed to encourage education, not hamper it.

"There always seems to be some aspect," said Zizza, "something that is brought to my attention, everyday, that reminds me that I'm different."

Tim White is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

I MISSED THE RALLY. I WONDER IF THERE'S STILL TIME TO GET IN.
I CAUGHT THE RALLY. I WONDER IF IT'S TIME TO GET OUT.
I GOT LAID OFF IN ORDER THAT THERE COULD BE A RALLY.
Business
DOW JONES HITS 5000!
CORPORATE PROFITS UP AGAIN
WANT ADS
TOLES
THAT'S A BAD SIGN. IF PEOPLE CAN'T FIND JOBS, THEY CAN'T BE LAID OFF AGAIN.

UMass isn't as accessible as it claims

Feelings are lost behind false smiles

Thanksgiving evening she walked into the annual town dance with a faint smile and finally received the attention she had so longed for during high school and throughout her life.

Glances were plentiful as secret whispers were heard by all in the room as Cate, the 21-year-old young woman, walked towards the bar at the opposite side of the old, traditional party room called the Elks.

Laura Schmidt

It was noticeable that Cate had lost an excessive amount of weight.

She began to drink that evening, a pastime she had taken up when the glory years of high school soon came to a close, and the reality of responsibility and life set in.

How could you blame her?

Anyone who would have met Cate for the first time that evening probably would have believed she was enjoying herself.

Her beautiful smile and the manner in which she socialized with others painted the perfect picture of a person enjoying her friends company over a few drinks.

Cate was good at hiding things.

As the night progressed, our paths crossed a few times and with each encounter, I never knew what to say to her.

We had not been good friends since high school so what should I have said to her, who once knew me like my own sister does?

Eventually, she waltzed over to me and began talking to a mutual friend of ours. The three of us stood in a circle and our trivial conversation grew scarce.

I asked Cate how she was doing, and her contagious smile quickly left her face.

She confessed to me that she was not happy with herself or anything in her life.

Her life now consisted of going to work at a dead end job and hanging out in the local bars.

"Come on Cate, things can't be that bad," I said.

"Yes they can, and they are," she replied.

I left the dance that night feeling sorry that my close friend in high school was unhappy. I also left with a feeling of relief that Cate and I are so different now, and a touch of sadness about how friends drift apart over time and circumstances.

Cate feels trapped, something with which many of the people I knew in high school struggle with today.

Some have not moved on, maybe because of money, or because of the security that a small town holds where it is difficult not to know everyone's name.

Nonetheless, whatever the situation, somewhere in the heart of my hometown sits my once, close, but distant friend. She is dieting and drinking away her problems, and she confessed to me that she wishes she was somewhere else.

I thought about that one for a minute. I can't change her.

The only way she can ever be happy with herself is if she stops accepting what is now as a finality, and creates what will make her happy as a reality.

As the DJ played the last song, flipped the lights on and wished everyone a happy Thanksgiving, I looked over at Cate. She appeared lost and confused as to how to act and as to what to do next.

She looked as if she was waiting for something, another song, another drink perhaps.

What Cate needs right now is perhaps a new start to her life... something that will make her happy.

She, as we all do, needs to find a way to make our smiles real.

Laura Schmidt is a Collegian staff member.

Clinton's Bosnia policy baffles

Achtung! Gotterdammerung!

Well, not quite. Commander Bill's attempt to re-enact World War I is not exactly a "great and glorious battle." In fact, even the Germans who coined the phrase knew enough to avoid Bosnia, Serbia, et al. Otto von Bismarck warns us that "nothing in the Balkans is worth the healthy bones of a single Pomeranian grenadier."

Or one 19-year-old G.I.

Probably the best thing you can say about Bill Clinton is that, if you wait around long enough, eventually his position on every issue will agree with your own, for at least a minute or two. But the Commander-in-Chief, who himself did not serve, has always been steadfast in his gung-ho calls for intervention in Bosnia. Clinton is a kid playing with toy soldiers.

"Why, then, do we now hear the Congress saying, in chagrined voices, that they will probably let Clinton have his little war?"

Peter Orvetti

The most principled thing Clinton has ever done was skipping out on Vietnam. He believed in two great principles: that intervening in a civil war is wrong; and that, generally, the best thing one can do in life is avoid getting killed. But Clinton will be thousands of miles away from the Bosnia-Serb border when the bullets fly. He won't feel a thing.

Sixty thousand troops are expected to go into Bosnia and Croatia to hold the peace; 20,000 of them will be American. But the American troops will be right on the border between the new, reduced Bosnia-Hercegovina and the makeshift "Serb Republic" of indicted war criminal Radovan Karadjic. German and Russian troops will be nestled in safer parts of the region.

Which leads to the obvious question: If a peace has been reached, why do 60,000 troops, no matter where they come from, have to go in the first place? The word "peace" generally implies the absence of war. But Field Marshal Clinton is preparing a troop movement comparable to operations in Haiti and Somalia, and the invasion of Panama. If that's not enough, still more troops might have to go to Bosnia later.

Just after the Dayton agreement was reached, Karadjic, who had stayed home in Europe because of that pesky war- criminal thing, demurred. The Serb statesman said that his troops may very well fight for Sarajevo. Other dissenting voices from Serbia have also been heard.

Clinton's attitude toward Bosnia is utterly baffling. It is politically unpopular. It is unsolvable. American troops will certainly be killed, if not tortured as well. There is no quick way to leave if disaster strikes. America has no vital interests in the area, and no pretige to lose by staying at home.

Right now, Clinton's re-election looks like a lock. He leads Bob Dole by 20 points in some polls, and beats Dole's two closest rivals, Phil Gramm and Pat Buchanan, by 60-25 margins. Why would the President, who famously avoided a pointless conflict as a young man, now want to jump into one of his own?

Vietnam ruined Lyndon Johnson's presidency, which would otherwise have been a successful one, and led to riots and insurrection at home. Clinton should stop looking to JFK and instead remember Kennedy's successor. Bosnia, and Bosnia alone, can destroy Clinton's presidency.

Dole and Newt Gingrich have not been shy about taking on Clinton in the past. Why, then, do we now hear the Congress saying, in chagrined voices, that they will probably let Clinton have his little war? Is it because they know he will fail miserably? Why is most of the dissention from within Mr. Clinton's own Democratic Party?

Senator William Cohen, the moderate Republican from Maine, has publicly wrestled with his conscience on the Bosnia deployment. Cohen's somber conclusion: "Let me say, after listening to all of you, it seems to me that we find ourselves in a position that we may very well regret a decision not to support the President, and we'll probably rue the day that we did."

Clinton rather foolishly compared Bosnia to World War I in his Gulf of Tonkin-esque speech Monday night. The comparison was a foolish one because it was right. Clinton forgets two things: Woodrow Wilson waited until after he was safely installed in the executive mansion for a second term before he rode off to Europe.

And, more importantly, World War I spread from the Balkans to create a bloody, inconclusive quagmire in which a quarter of Europe's young men died, destabilizing Europe for nearly a century.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Editorial/Opinion page apologizes for not printing the letters that have been sent via e-mail. We are still learning how to "work the system."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Letters to the Editor can also be sent through our e- mail account: letters@olt.umass.edu

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Republicans are stealing the American dream

As the Republicans in Congress begin their assault upon the American way of life, they will ravage institutions and citizen's lives.

The Republicans have vowed to balance the budget and lower taxes, but the programs they want to cut hurt the most vulnerable in our population — the old and the young. Vital programs like education and financial aid will see the budgetary axe. The near sighted Republicans are more interested in the political popularity of quickly balancing the budget, then considering the long term impact such cuts will have upon our society.

Matthew Wurtzel

Education is an investment in the future. Republicans, however, seem to think in the terms of the 19th century robber barons who deemed such things a privilege. In today's economy, an individual needs at least a bachelor's degree to enjoy a middle class lifestyle, unlike the 1950s when there were still manufacturing jobs available for the less educated. During the 1980s millions of manufacturing jobs were lost to other nations because productivity in the United States had grown more slower since the 1970s then during any other period in history. According to a report in the Aug. 19, 1991 issue of Business Week, economists say this trend has continued.

Today, someone with no college education will probably see their wages top off at about $10 per hour, while a person with some college education, or a skill (such as electric or plumbing expertise) will see slightly higher wages. However, people with college degrees will almost always enjoy the highest wages and salaries, and have the opportunity to reach the penthouse of the rich.

Today's college graduates will not enjoy the same affluence their parents did at the same age. For a young family headed by a college educated couple under 30 to live a middle class lifestyle — own a home and two cars — both parents must work. Most individuals without a college education cannot afford to live a middle class lifestyle. The real income of people without college degrees has dropped by 16 percent in the past 20 years.

Therefore, the fallout from Republican cuts in financial aid and higher education has dramatic implications. If fewer people can afford to receive a college education, they will also be unable to afford many luxuries that drive the American economy. The cuts to education in the long run will lead to a downward spiral of the American economy and an increase in the unequal distribution of wealth. In other words, there will be fewer two car families and new homes. Both construction work and automobile production are important sectors of the economy which employ the under educated. As fewer people graduate from college into the middle class lifestyle, there will be significantly fewer job opportunities for many individuals.

However, as early as next autumn when college students usually return to campus, many will remain home unable to further better themselves and pursue knowledge. They will be forced into taking a few part time jobs, or low paying full-time jobs, while they dream of rejoining their old friends in school and finishing their education. They will probably never realize these dreams if the Republicans continue indiscriminately cutting such vital programs.

Students should make sure they are registered to vote before next year's elections, and become active in politics. Students should call their legislators in both houses of Congress and tell them to oppose these cuts. Tell them that if they support these cuts they are unpatriotic, and are helping to undo all the progress which our fore-fathers helped establish in 1863 when the Morrill Act was passed, and created the land grant institutions which later became the state college system. Do not let the American dream fade away.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

The fine art of spin

This evening, Charles Murray, author of The Bell Curve: Intelligence and Class Structure in the United States, will debate the notion of race-based intelligence. The Fine Arts Center will be packed with students, faculty and local people. Why? Because they believe in the spin.

Marni E. Helfner

Spin, the media hype that surrounds a person or persons, is what has made Murray and the whole idea of race-based intelligence as huge as it is.

Spin is what makes us buy books, watch movies, take courses with certain professors or go to debates. It is the advertising, controversy and gossip that surrounds us and narrows our decisions and beliefs.

Why is Murray's book so popular? Is it because people believe his theories? Because people are curious about his theories? Because people want to know what the enemy is thinking? Because it just sounds interesting? Because everyone else has an opinion about it?

Probably all of those reasons and just a little bit of spin. If you didn't hear about how controversial Murray's book is, then would you really search out his book and theories? The spin is what makes you want to read it.

Even if one looked at someone other than Murray, like Howard Stern or Joycelyn Elders, you could dissect how their spin promotes their lives. Stern gets people to watch his show and buy his books because his work is shocking and questions conventional wisdom. Elders gets people to listen to some of her more liberal ideas because they pale in comparison to her more radical ideas like legalizing marijuana.

So, what's the point? Take a closer look at who is going to see Murray in debate. Who is supporting the debate? Demonstrating against it?

If you are going yourself, question why. Is it because you're interested in what Murray has to say? Dr. Alvin Poussaint? What does it say about you that you're going? Does your going support the theories of Murray? Or does it support his spin?

I won't be going, because I don't believe in Murray's theories, and I don't want DVP to think that I want my student fees to support the payment of someone like Murray. But you won't find me at the demonstration either.

I refuse to buy into the spin or the negative spin surrounding Murray. I make my own decisions.

Don't think spin doesn't affect my life — spin helps me to make political decisions, or what classes and professors to choose or avoid. It helps me decide what I wear, or what car to buy, or whose lecture to attend. But I don't let it control me completely.

Spin can only control your life if you let it.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Taking a look at the new president

"I'm going to write an editorial on William Bulger," I told my friends. "I'm going to give my thoughts and opinions on the subject." They seemed distraught. One of them told me that the students here are so apathetic that no one really cares who the new president is. Hmmm... that gets me thinking. Will it make a difference?

Daniel Levenson

My first impression when I heard the news was something in the ballpark of "William who?", But as I started to see more on television and read the papers I quickly formed a first, and then somewhat confused impression of our new president.

The first time I saw him on television, he was telling reporters that the UMass system has a lot of problems. He discussed the outside perception of the University system: Not very good. And he also mentioned that it is often viewed as a place for people who aren't ready for higher education. That was a brilliant move. Even if half of the students here were, shall we say, "less than motivated," that leaves a hell of a lot of people who are here to learn and further their education. Well, if UMass is the mess that Bulger seems to think it is, then I hope that he has some concrete plans for fixing it up.

I can't help but admire the enthusiasm he will bring to the job. Bulger wants to spruce up the image of UMass. I respect that, I think he will be able to work with the state government to get things done, which is something that the University needs.

Overwhelmingly, I think that most students do not know enough about Bulger. I'll be the first to admit that I don't feel that I know enough. Many people that I talked to were not even knowledgeable enough to form an opinion on him. I think the most important thing is for the students to understand Bulger's plans for the UMass system. Communication will be key in determining how he is received. Hopefully, once things settle down, Bulger will present his plans for the University to the students.

I decided to try and find out what the outside world thought about Bulger. He definitely seems to have a way of getting things done. As Senate President, he was able to get difficult bills through Congress that aided the poor and elderly.

Bulger was, however, against legislation involving abortion and gay rights. With a school as diverse as UMass, I can't help but wonder if his opposition to these more liberal concepts will have an effect on the University.

Bulger has said in the past that he felt state aid should be given to private and parochial schools. Since he is about to become president of a public university system, I wonder about his views on public education.

Despite not having explained his plans for change, Bulger has stated that he would like to raise academic standards at the University and make UMass the first choice of students, not the fallback. I'm curious to see what will happen when Bulger finally does reveal his plans for the future of UMass. I'm sure whatever they are, nothing will stop him from accomplishing them. For better or for worse.

Daniel Levenson is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

University alumni is pleased with Bulger appointment

To the Editor:

"What do you think of Bulger as President of UMass?"— I hear that question everywhere I go. It is often said with a raised eyebrow and seems to imply, "You are a suburbanite, a Protestant, white with a touch of old class and you are a UMass graduate: certainly you agree this is a sacrilege." They betray the archaic idea that education and the traits some call "class" are somehow God-given.

When this happens, I recall an evening in my dorm at UMass, many years ago. A political science professor came to speak to us. He talked about (what else?) — politics. I opened my mouth and was sorry I had, except I learned something I will never forget. I asked how Massachusetts politics could ever escape the awful reputation it had earned under politicians like James Michael Curley. His response boomed through me as though he suddenly spoke through a microphone right into my head. He said something like, "If it weren't for James Michael Curley, I wouldn't have survived, not to mention gone to college."

So began the doses of realism, the contradictions of my parents' views, that would pry open my mind and force me to examine ideas so precious to my ego and identity. That is what education at its best should do.

I doubt that many of us know Mr. Bulger. We make a lot of assumptions based on other assumptions which we must examine. I think and hope he can do the job. Look around for someone better do it. UMass just received the money from the state to perform long deferred maintenance that has left many of the campus buildings looking neglected and dilapidated. The University system needs continuous and consistent support from the legislature.

All that should be asked is whether he can do that job. Education is not some God-given, magically bestowed gift. It is worked for by those who pay to build buildings and pay professors and those who actually build the buildings and keep them clean. It is worked for by the students and the teachers who teach them. It is always bought and paid for by someone. That is truth of public and private schools alike. Reality does not diminish the value of education that goes beyond what money can buy: it does not negate how it may enrich the soul. Indeed, the opposite view is from the myth of a time gone by, and ultimately it diminishes all of us.

Pamela Fleming Lee

Barnes lights up page, Bryce is simple-minded

To the Editor:

I am more than pleased to see another Erin Barnes editorial in the Nov. 30 Collegian. I must say that it is refreshing to read an editorial that has some true bearing on local and national issues. I was tired of seeing Andrew Bryce's ugly mug and reading his, for lack of a better term, crap.

Andrew's opinions and simple-minded thought process might appeal to those who cannot use a dictionary to define the word "cholce." However, I passed fifth grade English many years ago and do not need him to give me the meaning of such words as defined by our society. Does Andrew know the definition of such words as "meaningless," "insignificant" and "unoriginal?" Those are only a few of the stupid terms I have used in describing his work.

I have admired Erin's workin past semesters and hope that she appears more often in the semesters to come. I must say that I have seen few columnists in my four and a half years at the University that have motivated me to think and act on various issues raised in their columns.

Erin is one of those columnists that motivates and initiates thought that persists long after the paper is read and put away. I hope the editors and managers at the Collegian recognize Erin Barnes for her talent and will give her more opportunities to reach out to the campus community in the future. In my opinion her articles are worth the space afforded to her, and then some. Please continue to search for columnists such as Erin because they are the ones that truly make us think and act.

Nathan G. Staples
Amherst

Why should DVP pay for ignorance?

To the Editor:

We are appalled that Charles Murray, co-author of The Bell Curve, will be speaking on campus on Dec. 4 as part of the University's Distinguished Visitors Program. The Bell Curve is a lengthy rehashing of discredited genetic research purporting to show a connection between race and intelligence. The book's prominence in the media stems, not from the originality of any of its arguments, but rather from how well its conclusions support the overall right wing political agenda.

Simply put, the book seeks to justify the current concentration of wealth and power in our country in the hands of white people. For example, The Bell Curve's conclusions have been used to justify the racist aims of the war on drugs, which has locked up huge numbers of young blacks and Latinos.

The issue of DVP bringing Murray to speak on campus is not one of free speech — we do not oppose Murray's right to express his views. We do oppose giving his views the sanction, privileged platform and financial support of the DVP. One response would be that bringing such a speaker to campus promotes debate on the issue. However, what needs responding to here are not Murray's views.

These ideas have been advanced and refuted many times over the years. What needs to be discussed is why, in today's political climate, it has once again become acceptable to openly express racist ideology.

Many people protested Farrakhan's speaking on campus. White people have made a lot of noise when black people say things which they consider racist, but what are white people doing about the racism that fills the mainstream media every day?

Rush Limbaugh, Pat Buchanan and Pat Robertson espouse white supremacist views, yet the occupy positions of increasing power in the media and in the Republican party. Murray and his like provide the pseudo-scientific research, which people like Limbaugh and Newt Gingrich cite to back up their views. All people on campus who oppose racism should be out in force to on Dec. 4 to protest.

David Kastor,
Jennie Traschen
and Chigurupati Murali
Department of Physics and Astronomy

Questions surround tonight's debate

To the Editor:

Perhaps you, your readers or maybe Chancellor Scott himself can help John Wideman and me resolve an argument whose intensity threatens to rend apart a friendship of many years. It concerns the coming debate between the Professors Murray and Poussaint. To the more intelligent among you, the questions which vex and divide us may not seem at all difficult. But we openly confess that their subtlety has utterly confounded us, leaving us scratching our woolly heads in childlike bafflement and dismay.

The situation: Incredibly enough in 1995, a group of students at a "major" American university hire a white man, Charles Murray, to come here and parade his views on the genetic intellectual inferiority of the Negro. However, they also manage to find a Negro, Dr. Alvin Poussaint, willing to debate this subject with him. The Chancellor, Dr. David Scott, while "not pleased that theories of racial inferiority are to be aired here" is "encouraged" by "the debate format" because it offers "a context of real discussion," in which the "real worth of ideas might be examined."

First questions: What in this "debate format" is the Negro's role to be? Does he argue the negative: Blacks are not inferior, and if so to whom or what? Does he argue the opposite: Blacks are in fact "superior," and if so who is "inferior?" Or the correctly neutral: we are all equally stupid? So while the "debate format" may "encourage" the chancellor, it baffles the hell out of us.

Then too, we are told that the committee, which is investing some fifteen thousand dollars in this contemporary coon show, is paying the Negro (who is apparently quite content with this arrangement) half of what they are paying the white man. We can understand that in a culture in which your worth is equated with your pay, a man of Murray's convictions might well be insulted at a pay scale implying equality between himself and a Negro. Clearly, the committee is sympathetic.

Questions: Is this what is meant by the market place of ideas? Obviously, for the committee the fee structure must reflect the intellectual disparity of the races, but does it do so proportionately? By the committee's accounting is Poussaint half as intelligent as Murray, or more positively, Murray twice as smart? And what does this say about fair debate: Does the committee's fee distribution implicitly prejudice the issue from the get go? Or can this be what the Chancellor meant by the "real worth" of ideas?

Next question: In light of the above, how is the speaking time (important in a "debate format") to be divided? On the principle of equal work for equal pay, should the Negro be required to talk only for half as long as the white man and answer only half as many questions? As a matter of economic justice that would seem fair. The Fair Employment Practices Commission is very clear on this — half work for half pay. Otherwise, the Chancellor would have to be concerned about the University's reputation and law suits.

But then, what of intellectual justice? Financial fairness aside, this after all is a "debate: — a species of intellectual competition." How is parity, the proverbial level playing field, to be achieved here? It has been proposed that Poussaint, by virtue of his genetic intellectual handicap, be given no half but twice the time to try to make his case. Seems fair, but even here there are complications. Does not his reek of Affirmative Action paternalism — preferential treatment? Being unqualified, the Negro, with more time, can only demonstrate his deficiency and embarrass himself and his race, causing a loss of self-esteem. It is false kindness. Better to level the field of play by appealing to the white sense of sportsmanship and fair play. Perhaps the white man, being as his book proclaims a member of the "cognitive elite," might be persuaded to use no more than three-fifths of his brain in this encounter.

So, the questions continue to multiply. But we cannot be the only ones to whom they have occurred. Perhaps even as I write, the chancellor in his wisdom will have assembled an administration task force to "interface" with the student committee to resolve these delicate issues. Justice must not only be done, it must be seen to be done: fairly, sensitively, civilly. We await publication of the precise terms of engagement for this significant event in this University's cultural history, an event that can only further enhance this institution's reputation for "excellence."

I also understand that concerned persons are organizing to protest Murray's appearance. That impulse, while understandable, is, I am convinced, a mistaken one..The absolutely last thing we should do is to call attention to this modern-day cooonery. We should not stage the kind of media circus on which such charlatans feed. The most effective protest possible will be to leave the event to take place in the resounding silence of an empty auditorium.

Michael Thelwell
Professor, Afro-American Studies

Authors promote racism in books

Just one year ago, three academic books were published purporting that inequality is hereditarily determined. The most talked about of the three books, The Bell Curve: Intelligence and Class Structure in the United States, by Richard Herrnstien and Charles Murray, is a calculated attempt to give racism and racial discourse in this country a supposedly "scientific" and "objective" basis.

Colin S. Cavell

In essence, the publication of this book is a return to the 19th century when spurious arguments couched in pseudo- scientific terminology were churned out as propaganda for the perpetuation of slavery and white supremacy. The other two books are Race, Evolution and Behavior by J. Phillipe Rushton, and The Decline of Intelligence in America: A Strategy for National Renewal by Seymour Itzkoff. That individuals with academic credentials (i.e. Harvard University, Smith College, etc.) are publishing these tracts, should give pause to well-to-do liberals who continually berate "stupid workers" or "uneducated southerners" as originators of racist ideas.

In fact, ruling class apologists almost always obtain their "intellectual" training in the nation's so-called "best" colleges and universities.

Immediately after its publication, The Bell Curve became the focus of the media, as each report, article and talk show which featured the book, its authors, and their arguments made sure. That The Bell Curve coincided with Newt Gingrich's racist agenda and the far-right Republican's Contract On America in its attack on welfare, Medicaid and affirmative action appears more than merely coincidental.

These published tracts help to serve as the allegedly objective, and hence undisputable, facts explaining why there are great differences in income in this country and hence class divisions. In essence, if we are to believe Herrnstien and Murray, and the rest of their ilk, income inequality is a natural derivative of genetic differences. Their writing says there is no need for governmental programs to redress social inequality, and no need to feel guilty about the poor, particularly the African American poor and other non- white peoples existing below the poverty line. Why? Because human nature is immutable.

Thus, sit back and don't worry as the civil rights and social welfare gains made in the last 40 years are dismantled. The Bell Curve argument is the 1990s pabulum directed at liberals, telling them to quit whining about exploitation and imperialism and the asymmetrical distribution of goods and services which capitalism produces, forget compassion, and just be happy.

Though many have resisted this reformulation and repackaging of crude racism, and exposed the baseless pretensions of those so-called "scientific" arguments, some have fallen prey and capitulated to the racist myth. And so, too, here at the University of Massachusetts, students will be exposed on Monday night, Dec. 4, to one of The Bell Curve authors: Charles Murray. That Murray is to share the stage with another Harvard professor, Alvin Poussaint, in a presumably debate format, is apparently intended by the DVP to make this acid more palatable.

How the blitherings of a white supremacist qualify one to be a Distinguished Visitor is beyond me. The DVP — to their shame — apparently sees merit in Murray's arguments. In addition, it has been reported that $15,000 of student monies will be provided to the speakers a honoraria.

That a University is to deliberately serve as a forum for avowedly racist ideas is a disgrace. That UMass–Amherst is to not only host Charles Murray, provide him a forum for his blatantly racist ideas, advertise the fact, and then pay him for his services while treating him as a Distinguished Visitor, is an outright insult to the entire UMass community.

That some in our community would even think it was acceptable to question the genetic capacity of African Americans, other non-white people, and workers in general is a shameful indictment that the University community has not done enough to rid itself of its racist and elitist baggage.. As Professor David G. Du Bois pointed out in his letter to the Collegian editor of Nov. 17, the invitation of Bell Curve author Charles Murray to this campus legitimizes, and in fact, promotes to the student community of this University, patently fraudulent, pseudo-scientific "scholarship" in violation of the most fundamental responsibility of institutions of higher learning.

And, indeed, why should students adhere to the University's Policy Against Harassment, its Honor code, its Policy in Research and Scholarly Activities, and the Affirmative Action and Nondiscrimination Policy, if racial ideologist are openly invited to spew their venom on campus as distinguished visitors? Murray's speech seriously jeopardizes these policies, implying they are mere window dressing and, hence, documents not to be taken seriously, rather than the tools to back up a commitment towards a multicultural university.

Inviting Charles Murray to campus is wrong. Treating him as a Distinguished Visitor and paying him thousands of dollars is an insult. Undertaking to sponsor this defender of racial discrimination, the University becomes culpable — morally to the community, and legally under international law (viz. The International Convention on the Elimination of All Form of Racial Discrimination).

Protesting Charles Murray's talk at UMass is not an issue of free speech, for in the perpetuation of his racist ideas, he seeks to deny the rights of non-white citizens the world over. The appropriate response to such exclusionary and inflammatory rhetoric is condemnation. Open racists like Charles Murray should no more be invited to speak at a university than should killers, rapists or child molesters be invited to speak about the "science" of their professions.

Colin S. Cavell is a UMass graduate student.

Arts & Living

Phish invades UMass with jam-driven tunes

Burlington Vt.'s favorite sons return to town with two nights of improvised rock and roll

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

When rumors came out two months ago, fans literally bounced around the room. Was it possible that one of the greatest jam bands ever to grace a stage would dare to bring their wacky mix of fun loving tunes to the Valley — again?

That's right. Phish will be playing the Mullins Center for a second year in a two night extravaganza sure to sate the thirsting masses with their creativity, musical flare and catchy lyrics. With fans waiting in line for 24 hours just to get a wristband for the next day's ticket lottery, it is clear that the following Phish has amassed is no passing phase.

Like their mentors, The Grateful Dead, Phish (Page McConnell, Trey Anastasio, John Fishman, Mike Gordon) has managed to capture audiences with their unique combination of instruments, vocals and effects that have made them a musical giant. Their songs weave and bob around intricate chords and funky beats, sometimes stretching on for infinity, never losing artistic grace.

Their last album, recorded live, has presided on the Billboard charts for months. Their most recent studio album, Hoist, put them at a pinnacle, but their quiet and unassuming nature belays any thoughts that success might be going to their heads. If anything, success has only made them more dedicated to their fans and their music.

It has been over a decade since Phish began their heralded career playing live in Burlington bars on a regular basis. Slowly they gathered a loyal following. The past few years have seen the band jump almost overnight from headlining small clubs to large arenas. Unlike many bands who have struggled with arena performances, Phish has excelled. At heart they are a live band, and only on stage can one grasp the band's talent and originality.

The fab four have managed to garner musical acclaim, while maintaining their artistic integrity.

COURTESY B.C. KAGEN

Phun loving Phish appear at Mullins Center tonight and tomorrow night.

The band has increased its ability to change and evolve without seriously stopping to think along the way. Is it any wonder why such a lackadaisical attitude draws in so many laid back fans? Nevertheless, Phish-heads rejoice, for the fun is just about to begin as the Mullins Center turns into a haven for jam driven hippie rock and roll.

Phish will play the Mullins Center tonight and tomorrow. Both shows are sold out, doors open at 7 p.m.

University Dancers shine in weekend dance show

By Matt Sindair
Collegian Staff

THE UNIVERSITY DANCERS
Bowker Auditorium
Nov. 30 – Dec. 2

The University Dancers' most recent concert was performed at Bowker Auditorium last Thursday, Friday and Saturday. All three nights witnessed an encouraging turnout and the audience was both supportive and enthusiastic.

The concert consisted of five main pieces. The first dance, titled 3D's, was upbeat and modern. There was an urban feel to the dancing, which had a distinctly contemporary edge. Replay was the second dance and projected a more ethnic, almost aboriginal mood. The multiculturalism of this piece was appealing and the beat and rhythm had an almost mesmerizing effect.

The fourth dance, Presentation, consisted of four female dancers who imitated bored and frustrated dolls, playing around with each other to amuse themselves. This piece was quirky and comical, peals of laughter frequently ensuing from the audience.

Solid, Liquid, Jazz was the final piece before the intermission, providing yet another contrast and example of the dancers' talents. The mood was most definitely '80s, the pseudo-modern dance blending pop, jazz and ballet in an absorbing fashion.

After the intermission Young Goodman Brown was performed. Based on the latter-century novel by Nathaniel Hawthorne, this piece was beautifully performed and the large array of costumes and the colorful set all contributed to the historical mood.

The dance followed Goodman Brown from his homestead and relations with his wife, Faith, to his journey through the woods of Salem during which he comes across a stranger bent on evil, attempting to lead him astray. Lost in the woods, Goodman Brown suddenly comes across the townspeople of Salem and observes the wickedness in which they are involved. His wife, Faith, is in the middle of it, and his loathing ensures that the rest of his life is filled with desperate distrust.

The dances were a joy to watch — modern, traditional, and ethnic pieces combining to give the audience a taste of many different dance themes. The dancers performed admirably and their hard work and commitment was evident.

Jazz plentiful at UM

Those of you longing for an evening of jazz will have two opportunities to enjoy the music this week. The University of Massachusetts Vocal Jazz and African–American Music ensembles will perform tonight. The concert, directed by Tony Lechner, will take place at Bezanson Hall at 8 p.m.

On Tuesday, contemporary Big Band sounds will be performed at Bowker Auditorium. Among those performing will include the University Jazz Ensemble directed by David Sporny and the Chapel Jazz Ensemble directed by Chris Mertz. The program will include works by H. Silver "Ecaroh". Bob Brookmeyer's "First Love Song" and Klemmer–Lewis' "Just Friends." Works by W. Shaw will also be performed. The concert will begin at 8 p.m.

This event is co–sponsored by Pioneer Valley Saab and Pioneer Volvo, both of Deerfield.

Tickets to the concert are $6 for the general public and $3 for students, senior citizens and children. UMass students are admitted free with valid ID. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or at Bowker Auditorium prior to the concert. The box office opens one hour before the show. Please call 545–2511 more information.

— Seema Gangatirkar

An Evening of One Act Plays explores love and courtship

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

AN EVENING OF ONE ACT PLAYS
Curtain Theater
Dec. 1

Whether it's arguing over who owns what land or stone lions eating librarians, An Evening of One Act Plays explores the different ways people court and fall in love. The three plays, which opened to a full house Friday night, were directed and acted by undergraduate majors in the theater department.

The first play was A Marriage Proposal by Anton Chekhov. Directed by James Clark, the play told the story of how Lomov (Jase Woodruff) proposed to Natalia (Claire E. Davies). Lomov comes to Natalia's home all dressed up in "evening clothes" and asks Natalia's father, Tschubukov (Aaron Lyons) for his daughter's hand. The proud father agrees and then the time comes to actually ask Natalia herself. Natalia is quite the talker and doesn't let Lomov get a word in edgewise, not even waiting to hear the answers to the rapid fire questions she's shooting at him. The conversation then erupts into an argument over who owns a particular piece of land. Poor Lomov, who unfortunately suffers from heart palpitations, is thrown out of the house by Natalia and her father. When Natalia learns that Lomov was intending to make her a marriage proposal, she insists that her father bring him back.

Woodruff's performance of the ailing Lomov was particularly comical while Davies' portrayal of the haughty Natalia made one wonder why on earth would Lomov want to marry this woman in the first place.

A Day of Surprises looked into the lives of librarians in New York Public Library. The play, which stars Tara Efstathiou as A and Ben Hellman as B, is almost a surrealistic drama. It opens as A realizes that one of the stone lions in the front of the library is alive and it in the ladies' room, consuming poor Miss Pringle.

As A relates this information to B, she comes to find out Miss Pringle and B were engaged to be married. Much of the plays consists of B's monologue, as he tells the story of his passionate love affair with Miss Pringle that took place among the stacks.

The play, written by John Guare and directed by Daniel Blumenthal, offered another angle into the staid world of the librarians; how they live and how they love. The whole situation itself is fantastic, but there were moments that were touchingly funny and innocent.

The final play was The Loveliest Afternoon of the Year, also directed by Blumenthal. The play takes place in Central Park, as two lovers played by Julia T. Sears and Robert Ripley, meet clandestinely for three consecutive Sundays.

Ripley's character is married while Sears who has lived in New York City for six months hasn't spoken to a single person. Ripley tells outrageous stories that make Sears smile, but she cannot possibly believe them. The two lovers know they are destined to be together — unfortunately circumstances prevent them from being together at any time other than Sunday afternoons.

The three plays vary in length from 20 to 30 minutes. The message in each story varies and each one has its comic element to it. Overall, the plays are well done and the actors were enthusiastic about their roles. If nothing else, An Evening of One Act Plays will make you smile a little bit and put a bounce in your step.

An Evening of One Act plays will continue to run Dec. 5–9 at the Curtain Theater. All shows start at 8 p.m. with a matinee on Saturday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $3.50 for students and $6 for general public. For more information, call the box office at 545–2511.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Tara Efsatnion and Ben Hellman star in "A Day For Surprises."

Collegian Classifieds
YOU NEVER KNOW UNLESS YOU TRY.

Judies
Munchie Madness
Monday - Friday 3 -6
1/2 Price Munchie Menu

Nachos Especial (for 2 or more)	~~$7.25~~	$3.63
Gargonzola Buffalo Potatoes	~~$6.95~~	$3.48
Shrimp Tempura	~~$6.25~~	$3.13
Basket of Sweet Potato Fries (with Honey Mustard Dip)	~~$4.99~~	$2.50

51 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst • 253-3491

Trouble Finding Familiar Faces?
Come To Amherst Barbers and See Jim and Terri.
Formerly of University Barbers!
Amherst Barbers
Now Open
Unisex Hair Stylist
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
(Across Newbury Comics)
$8 and up
Hours: Mon - Wed 8am-5:30pm
Thurs & Fri 8am-8pm, Sat 8am-3pm
Proprietors:
Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini
Formerly Of University Barbers
Jim Terri

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD
ON THURSDAYS!

HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS?
If you want to earn some money during your holiday vacation, come to work for the Barnes & Noble College Division. To determine which of the more than 30 college bookstores in Massachusetts and New Hampshire will be closest to where you will be spending your holidays, please call Barnes & Noble Regional Office at (508) 934-6430.
Full and part-time jobs, immediate hires, flexible scheduling, friendly work environment, and store discount up to 35%.
We are an equal opportunity employer.
BARNES & NOBLE COLLEGE DIVISION

CUSTOMER EXPRESS CHANGE™
1st Service
QUAKER STATE. The Intelligent oil.
NORTHAMPTON HONDA
EXPRESS CHANGE™ $17.99
Service includes:
• Oil and filter change
• Genuine Honda Parts
with this coupon
expires 12/9/95
Northampton HONDA
171 King St. Rte. 5
NORTHAMPTON
586-8626
No Appointment Is Needed - Drive In anytime between 8:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. Monday - Thursday - Fridays till 5:00 p.m.. And we guarantee we will have you back on your way in 30 minutes or less or your next express change will be free!! Offer valid for Honda vehicles only!!!

Bowie changes tune once again

By Michael McCloskey
Collegian Staff

DAVID BOWIE Outside
Virgin Records

Is Outside the David Bowie album everyone has been waiting for him to make? No, its the album he's been waiting to make. Bowie's new album is not a Let's Dance sequel or the return of Ziggy Stardust, but rather an experiment in sound and vision that produces some intriguing material within an innovative format.

Following unsuccessful stints with Tin Machine and his recent return to solo work with 1993's Black Tie, White Noise, Bowie has shown that he is not content to return to his hit yielding formulas of the past. With the songs of yesteryear behind him, Bowie has allowed himself to focus more on his present and future projects.

The word "Changes" seems synonymous with David Bowie due to the chameleon–like nature of his music and image. Bowie strives to recreate himself and his sound with each successive album. His new album Outside is no exception. In an effort to avoid a stagnant and complacent sound, Bowie has abandoned his jazz/rock fusion sound from Black Tie, White Noise for a more hard edged, industrial sound.

Outside reunites Bowie with Brian Eno, his close friend and producer of his classic seventies albums Low, Heroes, and Lodger. This fruitful partnership played a key part in the development of Outside because it inspired Bowie to venture beyond the boundaries of modern music once again. Although his reluctance to get back to basics tends to irk some fans of his early work, his modernization and experimental innovation has won him a whole new fan base; thanks largely to artists like Nine Inch Nails and Nirvana who revitalize his more obscure songs. This type of reverence clearly demonstrates the enduring quality of Bowie's legacy and the direct influence he has had on today's music artists.

Following two years of talks with Eno, recording of Outside finally commenced in early '94 in Montreaux, Switzerland. In concordance with the album's overall enigmatic and ominous feel, Bowie chose to decorate the studio with an array of dark paper, paints and fabrics in order to create the proper working atmosphere. When it came to constructing the actual album, Bowie and Eno meticulously selected seasoned studio players "who were not weighed down with musical cliche." They also felt it was important that they be "a bit loony" in order to catalyze spontaneous compositions of controlled chaos. The resulting effects inspired Bowie, who said that recording the album "excited the urge in him to work live."

COURTESY ENRIQUE BADULESCU

David Bowie is still in tune with Outside.

Outside is an audio story line paralleled by the album's liner notes written in a diary format. The diary helps link the songs sonically and chronicles a 23-year span from 1977 to the last day of the millennium. In addition to his inspired sequencing and thematic convergence reminiscent of The Who's Pete Townsend, Bowie manages to maintain his avant–garde approach to his lyrics. The spontaneous and intriguing images provoked by Bowie are owed to his computerized version of Bill Burrough's famous 'cut–ups' technique which involves the random composition of three– word blocks of lyrics.

Throughout the 23 years the album encompasses, Bowie's lyrics mature and intensify within each respective decade, graduating from the optimistic view in the title track "it's happening now, not tomorrow," to the foreboding "stay away from the future." The bleak future is seen through the eyes of outsiders whose hapless existence forces them to be on the outside looking in.

In what he calls "a revelation," Bowie is surprised to find that he is able to "slip back into a musical character" almost twenty years after 1976's Thin White Duke. His never-ending quest to evolve and mature has Bowie undergoing yet another metamorphosis into not one, but seven new and distinct characters. On Outside, Bowie assumes the persona of a bevy of eclectic characters ranging from a fourteen– year–old girl named Baby Grace Blue, to Algeria Touchshriek, a seventy–eight–year–old man. The range of characters effectively encompasses each major group of modern society and succeeds in transcending the boundaries of race, gender and age.

Outside is funk, rock, jazz, jungle and ambient techno culled into one unique format. The closing track, "Strangers When We Meet," is a fitting climatic apex for the album. As the strongest track, it provides a strong conclusion and a promise of things to come. Like his ground breaking hit "Space Oddity" way back in 1969, Outside attempts to show us a glimpse of the future and perhaps stimulate societal introspection. Outside is an album you'll want to get into. B

Will Rogers met with laughter at FAC

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

THE WILL ROGERS FOLLIES
The Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Dec. 2

"Will–a–mania" swept the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall Saturday night as The Will Rogers Follies roped in the audience with fancy theatrics, exquisite costumes and visually stunning choreography.

The musical, which has won six Tony Awards, tells the story of Will Rogers, a cultural icon from the early part of the century who tragically lost his life in a plane crash.

The show is unusual in that it really tells two stories: Rogers' biography and the history of the Ziegfeld Follies, a wildly popular variety show of that era. The Follies, owned by Florenz Ziegfeld, hires Will to perform his rope tricks in New York City, where wild west shows were uncommon. Will Rogers (Bill O'Brien) bursts out into song with "Give A Man Enough Rope" to prove that you don't really need much to get on in the world.

Throughout the performance, Will addresses the audience, sprinkling in references to the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team, The Hampshire Gazette as well as pointed barbs at lawyers and politicians.

Not to be left out, the Voice of Ziegfeld occasionally interrupts in order to make Will's life more interesting. For example, in Ziegfeld's Follies, it's customary to meet the girl in the story by act three. Accordingly, Ziegfeld orders Will to meet his wife, Betty, by act three, though the fact that the two met a train station is too boring for Ziegfeld. So, with a sharp order to a stage manager, Betty and Will meet at rocket ship station on the moon. Only there's a problem here — Betty (Stephanie Morgan) and Will want to get married in "We're Heading for a Wedding."

Unfortunately, in Ziegfeld Follies, a wedding closes the act. So the show fast–forwards to Will's vaudeville career, while Betty laments "My Big Mistake." The act closes with the promised wedding.

Act Two opens with a reprise of "Give a Man Enough Rope." The Roper (Tomas Garcilazo) won applause from the audience as he performed incredible rope tricks. The choreography of the scene was also incredible. As Will sings, the background is completely dark and members of the chorus are dancing with neon orange boots and hats on. The blacklight effect is that of boots and hats dancing by themselves.

Will chronicles his 1928 bid for the presidency in "The Favorite Son." This scene was probably one of the highlights of the whole show with its spectacular visual effects and choreography.

Ziegfeld demands a damsel in distress and so Betty Blake, sitting on a run–down piano, belts out a jazzy rendition of "No Man Left For Me." Will comes to rescue the scene with "Presents for Mrs. Rogers," but the diamonds, rubies and pearls mean nothing when the Great Depression begins.

The show closes with "Never Met a Man I Didn't Like" and from the audience's response, it was obvious that they felt the same about Will Rogers.

Terrapins come back, destroy Colonials

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — One day later, the Maryland Terrapins could joke about their misadventure against Massachusetts.

Johnny Rhodes led a rejuvenated Maryland offense with 21 points, and the 19th-ranked Terrapins cruised past George Washington 98-81 Sunday in the consolation game of the Franklin National Bank Classic.

The Terrapins (2-2) scored only 47 points the day before against No. 5 UMass, their lowest offensive output since 1986. Maryland exceeded that total by halftime against the Colonials, shooting 56 percent in building a 52-35 lead.

"Walking in at halftime, I figured the game was over," Maryland coach Gary Williams deadpanned. "I figured it was over, not because we had a big lead, but because we had about the same amount of points we scored in the whole game yesterday."

The Terrapins blew a 16-point lead against UMass and shot only 26 percent in the second half. It was a performance that could have had a lingering effect Sunday, but the players wouldn't let it happen.

"I'm pleased with their effort because they had reason not to come out hard, losing the way we did to UMass," Williams said. "I've seen a lot of teams in that situation not go after it." Rhodes, held to seven points by UMass, had 10 before intermission and made three baskets in the opening 5:15 of the second half to help Maryland go up 67-39. George Washington (2-2) never got closer than 15 points the rest of the way.

"We really executed well today," Rhodes said. "We set some good screens. Yesterday, we weren't setting screens the way we should have. Today we at least got a body on someone."

Alexander Koul led the Colonials with 22 points and J.J. Brade had 19. Guard Kwame Evans, who had been averaging 23.3 points, missed all 10 of his shots and did not score.

"I can't remember a college game when Kwame Evans was held scoreless," GW coach Mike Jarvis said. "He may have been looking for jump shots rather than scoring opportunities. He probably took himself out of the game."

Maryland center Mario Lucas, the replacement for departed All-American Joe Smith, scored a career-high 20 points. Keith Booth had 12 points for the Terrapins, who made five of their seven 3-pointers in the decisive half.

Williams used 10 players by halftime, and five ended up scoring in double figures, including Duane Simpkins (11 points, eight assists) and freshman Laron Profit (10 points, six rebounds). The Terrapins outrebounded the taller Colonials 39-37 (including 16 offensive rebounds) after being hammered on the boards by UMass 44-23.

"We just came back today and went after the basketball," Williams said.

"Maryland won the game on the offensive boards. They also took good shots, and our defense wasn't as quick," Jarvis said. Maryland led 35-30 before Rhodes got six points and freshman Laron Profit four in a 12-3 run that made it 47-33. After a basket by Brade, Lucas hit a 3-pointer and Terrell Stokes got a steal and a layup to give the Terrapins a 17-point cushion.

Georgetown squeaks by West Virginia

By David Wilkison
Associated Press

MORGANTOWN, W.Va.— Frustrated by Big East newcomer West Virginia and trailing by as many as 13 points, Georgetown coach John Thompson knew just where to look for help.

"I don't think we could win without our bench," Thompson said after No. 6 Georgetown's 86-83 overtime victory on Saturday. "I told them the substitute mentality does not work. You've got to think you're going to get your minutes."

The Hoyas got 26 points from their bench in an 86-83 victory Saturday, rallying in overtime after overcoming a 12-point deficit in the final 2:34 of regulation. Reserves Jahidi White and Daymond Jackson scored 11 and nine points, respectively, all in the second half.

"They came off the bench and did a great job," said Georgetown guard Allen Iverson. "They were sending other people at me, so I had to look for the open man and I found Jahidi for a couple of dunks. Jahidi did a great job stepping in and filling in for me." After four early lead changes and four ties, West Virginia took the lead with 15:38 remaining in the first half and led at the half 40-32. The Mountaineers stretched the lead to 60-47 with 8:35 remaining.

For much of the game, West Virginia looked as if it would pull off the upset at it stacked Georgetown's full-court press with ease and had little trouble with the Hoyas' traps.

But the Mountaineers tried to slow the pace following a timeout with 7:18 left and forced shots as the 35-second shot clock were down.

"We made mental mistakes early and didn't settle down until the end and then we started playing Georgetown basketball," Iverson said.

The Mountaineers led 69-57 with 2:34 remaining before Georgetown went on a 19-7 run, sending the game into overtime at 76-all on a layup by Iverson with five seconds left.

The lead changed hands three times in the extra period. Georgetown (5-1, 1-0 Big East) took the lead for good at 81-80 with 41 seconds left when Othella Harrington scored underneath off a steal by Joseph Touomou.

West Virginia pulled to 84-83 with two seconds left on a 3-pointer by Seldon Jefferson, but Iverson sealed the victory with two free throws after he was fouled on the inbounds pass.

Boubacar Aw scored five of his eight points and had two of his four steals in overtime.

"I felt like I had to step up. I had no impact earlier in the game," Aw said. "I knew we were going to get back in the game, I just didn't know when."

The loss was reminiscent of West Virginia's 97-94 overtime loss at home last season to No. 1 Massachusetts, a game it led by 18 points with five minutes to play.

"It was the same scenario," said West Virginia coach Gale Catlett. "We find a way to lose it. One of these days we're going to win one of these."

Iverson, who was 7-of-17 from the field and 8-of-11 from the free-throw line, finished with 22 points and 10 rebounds, while Victor Page added 22 points.

Pats fall to Saints, postseason unlikely

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO — Three big scoring plays gave the New Orleans Saints a huge victory, moving them closer to the playoffs in a season that began with five losses.

Jim Everett's touchdown passes of 50 yards to Quinn Early and 69 yards to Lorenzo Neal, and Mario Bates' 66-yard run boosted the Saints to a 31-17 win Sunday over the New England Patriots. It was the fifth victory in six games for New Orleans (6-7), while the Patriots fell to 5-8, virtually ending their postseason hopes.

When the Patriots needed a big play to get back in the game, Drew Bledsoe was intercepted in the end zone by Shane Pahukoa with 6:11 left.

The Saints scored two touchdowns in the first 11 minutes of the first quarter and two more in the first 6 1/2 minutes of the fourth. For most of the time in between, the Patriots had controlled New Orleans. They tied the game 17-17 on Matt Bahr's 39-yard field goal on the first play of the fourth quarter.

But on the Saints second play after the kickoff, Everett dumped the ball off to 240-pound fullback Neal on a blitz. Neal, a three-year veteran with just 10 catches before Sunday, caught the ball at the line of scrimmage at the 31 and ran down the right sideline, eluding speedier defensive backs.

That gave the Saints a 24-17 lead. The Patriots then held the ball for nearly six minutes, but Bahr missed a 43-yard field goal attempt.

On the next play, Bates swept around the right side, cut back toward the middle to avoid cornerback Ty Law and scored for a 31-17 margin. Bates gained 123 yards on 15 carries.

For the first time, the Patriots lost a game in which rookie Curtis Martin rushed for at least 100 yards. Martin, who started the day as the AFC's second leading rusher, had 112 yards and two TDs on 31 carries.

His nine-yard run in the first quarter followed Everett's TD pass to Early and tied the game 7-7. Bates' two-yard run 10:34 into the game put the Saints ahead.

The Patriots tied the game 14-14 as Martin scored on a 3-yard run with 2:59 left in the half. It was Martin's 12th rushing touchdown of the year, tying Steve Grogan's team record. He has scored in eight straight games.

The Patriots hadn't allowed a first-quarter touchdown in their previous seven games, and the Saints had scored just 37 points in that period all season.

But New Orleans wasted little time after the Patriots couldn't get a first down on the game's first possession.

Everett started the drive with a 9-yard pass to Early. On the fifth play, Torrance Small gained 13 yards on a reverse, moving the ball to the 50. Then Early, who had a 70-yard TD catch earlier in the season, got behind Law down the left sideline for the first touchdown.

Surprise your folks.
When you stay awake in class, you tend to learn more. (Unless you have an uncanny talent of learning through osmosis.) So don't let fatigue get in the way of your A, Revive with Vivarin®. One tablet has the same amount of caffeine as about two cups of coffee. And it's just as safe. Hey, anything is possible, if you're up for it.
VIVARIN®
©1995 SmithKline Beecham Consumer Healthcare
Use only as directed Revive with Vivarin®

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK

	One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON	$140	$280
PARIS	$175	$350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA	$220	$439
TOKYO		$859

Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
212-986-8420
800-272-9676
in NYC

UMass fans rally behind Minutemen in record setting numbers

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

If there is one thing UMass can be truly proud of this weekend, it is the fans who showed up for Friday night's contest. The 7,089 in the William D. Mullins Center was a new hockey record for the building.

For the first time since the program's opening, the student section was filled and the rest of the arena was approaching capacity as well.

The fans were loud and got behind UMass, like never before at a hockey game.

When BU scored the first goal of the game, the few BU fans that were present began to yell "Sieve. Sieve. Sieve," as they usually do to an opposing goalie. As soon as they began however, they were immediately drowned out by the UMass crowd that began chanting "Let's go. U — Mass."

Despite the fact that its team was not victorious, the UMass crowd, many of whom were standing, gave a warm cheer to their team.

Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen thanked the fans for their support after the game.

"I want to thank the UMass community for the great turnout tonight," he said. "It was thrilling to see 7,000 people cheering for UMass hockey."

• • •

Easily overlooked in the somewhat lost weekend, was the solid performance by Chris Fawcett. The sophomore right winger played perhaps his best two-game series as a Minuteman. He picked up his second goal of the season on a blast by goalie Michel Larocque. His performance earned him time on both the power play and penalty killing units as the weekend progressed.

> "I want to thank the UMass community for the great turnout tonight,It was thrilling to see 7,000 people cheering for UMass hockey."
> -Joe Mallen

"Chris Fawcett is a very good player," Mallen said after Saturday's loss. "Right wing just happens to be the position that we are the deepest at. We think he can be a very good player for us in this league."

• • •

The competition between the UMass defensive core will increase this week. With Dale Hooper out with an injury and Brad Norton ineligible for Friday night's game with Yale, Mallen will be forced to dress a player at the blue line, who hasn't played there yet this season.

Mallen has several potential options.

Sophomore forward Keith O'Connell has some experience at the point and could see time there as well. The same is true for freshman forward Steve MacKinnon.

Otherwise Mallen will be forced to pick from a stable of untested freshmen. Brendan Shaw, Jason Hurley and Joe Trosky appear to be the leaders in the race to see which defenseman will see game action first.

■ Terriers

continued from page 12

from smaller players, Grier does this fake fall, that has him in contention for an Oscar nomination, in hopes of drawing a penalty call from Hockey East.

What is even more exasperating for Hockey East coaches is that he gets the calls half the time. Conversely, he gets away with stuff that some other people might not. When Grier was whistled for a boarding penalty late in the first period, he proceeded to throw a temper tantrum. After chucking his stick into the penalty box and slamming the door, he threw a water bottle across the ice.

You may ask what penalty was called for this blatant lack of sportsmanship.

The HE officials looked the other way and no call was made. None! Be assured if this incident was committed by a Wildcat, a Husky or a Minuteman, a 10-minute misconduct would have been assessed.

The entire team has a dirty streak to it as well. Several players on the Terrier roster finish each check with a little stick jab in the ribs. A sparring behind the play and out of the view of the officials is also not uncommon.

It seems that the HE officials either have too much reverence for Jack Parker and his troops or are just plain afraid of him.

For example, Parker will call an official over and say something like, "Watch out for so-and-so, he's been holding our player," and sure enough shortly after the whistle blows and BU will be on the powerplay. The refs seem to make pro-Terrier calls just to avoid hearing it in their ears.

The Terrier power play is devastating. Giving it any unnecessary opportunities can end upset bids in a hurry. Just ask the Minutemen.

After Jayen Rissling drew a very questionable boarding call midway through the second period, Chris Drury promptly scored. The goal took the wind out of the Minutemen's sails. They had just cut the lead to 2-1 and had momentum in their favor.

No team should be given any special treatment by the league, especially one that is already good enough to beat everybody without any help.

If Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen needs any additional motivation for the Feb. 9 game, when these two teams face off again, he can find it in post game comments from Terrier captain Jay Pandolfo.

"They're not as skilled as we are. That's all they can do is hold us and hack us," he said. "You have to stay disciplined against a team like that and they'll put you on the power play all night."

Either that or the refs will...

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

You are not a mooch. But when a hole in your pocket renders you changeless, you reluctantly call the folks collect. You dial 1 800 CALL ATT. Your pangs of guilt are minimal.

1 800 CALL ATT always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.®
Always works from any phone. And always gets you the reliable AT&T Network.
Use it whenever you're off campus.

Know the Code. 1 800 CALL ATT. That's Your True Choice.℠

AT&T
Your True Choice

* For interstate calls. Promotions excluded.
1-800-COLLECT is a registered trademark of MCI
© 1995 AT&T

The Top Ten Reasons to Use the UHS Eye Care Program and Contact Lens Service

1 We have a comprehensive contact lens program.
2 Emergency eye care delivered at UHS, is a covered benefit if you are a student plan member
3 Savings on eyeglasses from participating opticians are available if you are a student and have a complete optometric examination at UHS.
4 We can obtain almost any contact lens in the U.S.A.
5 On-site contact lens specialist.
6 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions.
7 Contact lenses can be mailed directly to you: free postage for normal delivery
8 Same day replacement of contact lenses, in many cases, due to our large in-house inventory
9 We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
10 Convenient hours and location.

University Health Services
549-2671 X244

Massachusetts 50, Maryland 47

At USAIR Arena
Landover, Md.

Massachusetts (2-0)
Dingle 3-8 4-5 10, Bright 4-13 6-6 14, Camby 6-14 2-4 14, Padilla 2-6 4-4 8, Travieso 0-5 0-0 0, Norville 0-0 0-0 0, Weeks 2-9 0-0 4, Nunez 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 17-55 16-19 50.

Maryland (1-2)
Hipp 2-7 0-0 4, Booth 4-6 3-4 11, Lucas 1-5 2-4 5, Simpkins 1-4 2-2 4, Rhodes 3-8 1-3 7, Elliott 1-3 2-4 4, Stokes 0-1 0-0 0, Ekezie 1-1 0-0 2, Jasikevicius 3-4 0-0 8, Kovarik 0-0 2-2 2. Totals 16-39 12-19 47.

Halftime-Maryland 28, UMass 19. 3-Point goals-UMass 0-7 (Padilla 0-1, Bright 0-3, Travieso 0-3), Maryland 3-11 (Jasikevicius 2-2, Lucas 1-2, Elliott 0-1, Stokes 0-1, Simpkins 0-1, Hipp 0-2, Rhodes 0-2). Fouled out-None. Rebounds-UMass 44 (Bright 10), Maryland 23 (Hipp 5). Assists-UMass 5 (Camby 2), Maryland 10 (Simpkins, Rhodes 3). Total fouls-UMass 16, Maryland 19. Technical-UMass bench.

Dana Dingle – 10 points, 4-5 from the line.

Highlights...

UMass shot poorly in the first half, and nearly entered halftime down by double digits. Dana Dingle went on a solo 7–0 run to bring UM within 9 (28–19).

Massachusetts 80, Florida 58

At USAIR Arena
Landover, Md.

Florida (2-1)
Thompson 1-7 0-0 2, Stolt 0-5 0-2 0, Hill 4-8 3-5 12, G. Williams 3-9 3-6 9, Shannon 4-11 1-2 9, Spruel 1-5 0-0 2, L. Williams 5-6 6-8 17, D. Williams 1-3 0-0 2, Maddox 0-0 0-0 0, Lee 1-1 0-0 3, McFarland 1-1 0-0 2, Griffiths 0-0 0-0 0, Bates 0-1 0-0 0. Totals 21-57 13-23 58.

Massachusetts (3-0)
Dingle 4-7 1-1 9, Bright 4-10 0-0 8, Camby 9-15 12-16 30, E.Padilla 1-5 0-0 3, Travieso 3-8 2-2 11, Nunez 0-1 0-0 0, Norville 4-6 0-0 8, Weeks 2-4 1-2 5, G.Padilla 1-1 0-0 2, Cottrell 0-1 0-0 0, Burns 2-2 0-0 4, Maclay 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 30-60 16-21 80.

Halftime-UMass 37, Florida 18. 3-Point goals-Florida 3-11 (McFarland 1-1, D. Williams 1-1, Shannon 0-3, Stolt 0-2, D.Hill 0-1, G.Willliams 0-1, Spruel 0-1, Bates 0-1), UMass 4-10 (Travieso 3-6, E. Padilla 1-3, Dingle 0-1). Fouled out-None. Rebounds-Florida 28 (L.Williams 7), UMass 46 (Dingle 12). Assists-Florida 12 (Shannon 5), UMass 22 (E.Padilla 12). Total fouls-Florida 18, UMass 20. A-16,358.

Marcus Camby – 30 points, 9-15 from the field, 12-16 from the line.

Highlights...

UM opened with a 7–0 run led by Camby's outside shooting. At the end of the first half, UM ran a 26–7 run to close the half with a score of 37–18.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

but was still able to sneak a 30-foot shot past Michel Larocque.

Chris Kelleher scored on a slap shot through a screen to give BU its third power play goal of the night, and Mike Sylvia added a four on four goal to put BU up 5–1 11:11 into the second.

The Minutemen retaliated as Chris Fawcett slipped a 35–foot wrister past Larocque just 51 seconds later, but that closed the night's scoring at 5–2.

UMass carried the flow of much of the first period Saturday night and found itself down just 1–0, on a Pandolfo power play goal, at the end of the first period.

BU tallied just one minute into the second as Pandolfo beat Regan with a backhander, but UMass came back to make it a 2–1 game, as Sal Manganaro scored on a power play at 4:45.

Tom Noble saved Tom Perry's initial shot, but Rob Bonneau worked the puck lose from the prone Noble and fed it to Manganaro who had a mostly open net.

That would be as close as UMass would get as Drury added a pair of goals, and Pandolfo completed his fourth hat trick of the season.

The Minutemen never folded and kept fighting to the end.

Bonneau was awarded a penalty shot after Coleman hooked him down on a clean break in. Bonneau was stopped on the shot, as he aimed for Noble's five–hole, but did tally on a two–man advantage at 18:07. The five on three had been set up by a major to Peter Donatelli for butt–ending, and a bench minor for arguing with the penalty shot call.

Manganaro held in a clearing pass, and fed Brad Norton behind the net. Norton hit Bonneau in front for a one–timer.

UMass' next shot at topping the Terriers will come Feb. 9 at Walter Brown Arena. For now the Minutemen must focus on beating a pair of ECAC teams, Yale and No. 6 Vermont this weekend. UMass will take on the Bulldogs Friday at the Yale Whale, before coming home to face Hobey Baker candidates Martin St. Louis, Eric Perrin and the rest of the Catamounts on Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Mullins Center.

Notes: One thing that follows the Terriers around this season is the nationwide concern for Travis Roy, the freshman forward who was paralyzed in BU's opening game. The Mullins Center operation crew has paid tribute to Roy all season, as "TR 24" is painted in the ice surface in front of the visitors bench. Parker made it a point to thank Mallen for the gesture following the game.

"It was a nice gesture," said BU defenseman Jon Coleman. "It inspires

MEDIA RELATIONS
Blair Wagar and the UM hockey team dropped two games to BU over the weekend.

■ men's b-ball

continued from page 12

Kruegger. "They're tough, they're hard–nosed, and they go to the ball aggressively. They got our attention."

UMass pulled away in the second half increasing its lead to a game-high 29 points. Although Florida made a couple of small runs getting as close as 14 on a Dametri Hill three– point play, UMass went on to win the game 80–58.

Camby continued to display his new–found outside prowess by knocking down an 18–footer, 15–footer, 12– footer, and 10–footer, finishing with 30 points along with eight boards and two blocks.

Dingle was a force on the boards pulling down a game– high 12 (nine points). Padilla and Carmello Travieso once again played almost the entire game. Pedilla was, as he was all weekend, solid, dishing out 10 assists while making three steals. He had five turnovers on the day, but Calipari was pleased with the junior's play.

"Two to one is a good ratio for him," he said. "He's really, really making progress. He's fearless out there."

Travieso finished with 11 including three treys.

In UMass' game against Kentucky and again in Saturday's game against Maryland, bench scoring was a problem. But against Florida the Minutemen got the bench scoring they needed. Inus Norville and Tyrone Weeks led the way scoring eight and five points respectively. Norville also grabbed six boards.

"Inus Norville was great [yesterday]. I was proud of him," Calipari said. "Tyrone was nasty [yesterday]. He did well."

Bright finished with eight points, six rebounds as UMass finished with a 46–28 rebounding advantage. Hill and LeRon Williams led Florida with 12 and 17 points respectively.

UMass, now 3–0, prepares for Wake Forest

■ Minutemen

continued from page 12

When UMass returned from the locker room, they were in striking distance and made the most of it. Behind the spirited play of Dingle (10 points, seven rebounds) and Donta Bright (14 points, 10 boards) along with a complete game played by both guards, Edgar Padilla and Carmello Travieso, the Minutemen came away with a 50–47 win.

The fatigue question of the two guards was put to the test after their extensive play in game one. Travieso came out of the gate quickly, hitting three of six from three–point land in the first half, while Padilla ran the point extremely effectively handing out seven assists, and committing just three turnovers in the first twenty minutes.

"[Edgar's] ratio was two to one," Calipari said of his point guard. "He had ten assists and five turnovers, that's a good ratio for him. He's really making progress and doing some great things."

Padilla played 36 minutes, while his counterpart was on the floor for 35 in game two. In Travieso's place for four of those six minutes missed was senior forward Rigoberto Nunez. With four forwards on the court, UMass continued it's stellar defense, though the offense needed time to adjust.

"At first I was really confused [on offense]," Padilla said about being the only true guard on the floor. "So I looked at Coach, and he was confused, too. It was hard at first but we really worked hard at it."

Just three games into the season, it appears the Minutemen will go as far as their defense takes them, as in both wins this weekend, they held the opposition to less than 20 points in two of the four halves.

"It doesn't matter, you can shoot great one night," Padilla said, "and not shoot well the next, but you can always play good defense and there's no excuse for not playing defense."

Collegian News
Because you can never have enough information

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

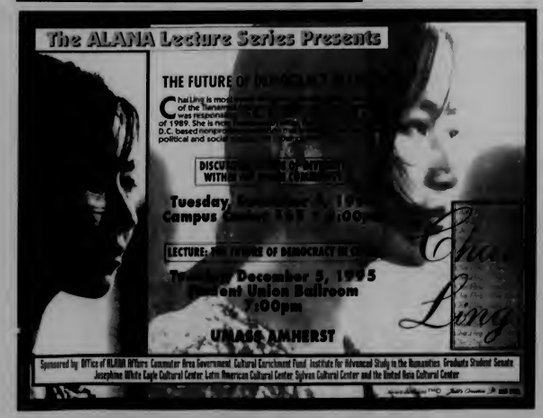
Collegian Graphics
We just work here
(and only on weekdays)

SNOW HAPPENS
We just work here.
Collegian Graphics

Collegian Classifieds
They Work!

Attention
UVC - TV 19
members!
The last general body meeting for the semester will be held on Monday, December 4th at 9PM. All members are asked to attend.

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW SERVICES
H-1B Specialty Occupations
Labor Certification/Special Handling
212(e) J-1 Waivers
Outstanding Professor/Researcher
National Interest/Extraordinary Ability
Relative Petitions
All Immigrant/Nonimmigrant Matters
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty
1160 Main Street - 2nd Floor, Springfield, MA 01103, 413-781-6078
10 Old South Street, Northampton, MA 01060, 413-584-3330



The ALANA Lecture Series Presents
Tuesday
Campus
LECTURE:
December 5, 1995
Union Ballroom
7:00pm
UMASS AMHERST
Sponsored by: Office of ALANA Affairs Commuter Area Government Cultural Enrichment Fund Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities Graduate Student Senate
Josephine White Cafe Cultural Center Latin American Cultural Center Sylvan Cultural Center and the United Area Cultural Center

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD
Call [illegible] Monday through Thursday 11:30am and Friday and Saturday 11:30am-[illegible]-1774.

Alnscr Pre-vet Club We'll miss the holiday party on Tues 12/5/95 Games, [illegible] & you! T-shirts will be there! Questions 549-5501 549-4372

Attn All Greeks by Women Or Omega invites you to a pre-rush holiday party on Dec 7 from 7-9 pm Call Becky at 549 [illegible] Please RSVP

Adult children of the mentally ill (ACOMA) Learn/share/study about issues of people who grew up with mentally ill parent. Meets w/Joan (413) 585-8618. Participants will be [illegible]

University Productions & Concerts! We [illegible] hiring new and vibrant concert committee to all about all our general [illegible] committee. Come Get Involved!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment for rent starting Jan 1st. 1 bath room, on bus line near [illegible] Contact Nagh 549-8415

Take over lease 1br apt on bus route in Amherst 665-4304

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Olds Ciera Runs good new parts $1000 obo Jeanne 253-0646

91 Hyundai Excel 5 spd very well maintained new parts 85,000 miles $2000 Call 256-8680

EMPLOYMENT

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $2,000-$3,000/week working to save the environment with Massprg Casual fun atmosphere Call Terri at 256-6434

Key DJ's! National spring break tour operator seeks experienced DJ's/keyists/m c's to host spring break parties and activities in Cancun's Mazatlan's and Nassau's hottest clubs for the 1996 season Room trans and salary prov Please fax resume to (617) 292-9235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel 76 Summer St Boston MA 02110 Attn Product Development

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics Absolutely no selling involved Computer/typing skills required Flexible hours Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm Must work a minimum of 20 hrs per week Start at $5.75/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr We're in the Mt Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri (413) 586-8635 ABT Associates, telephone research center Mt Farms Mall Rte 9 Hadley, MA 01035 An equal opportunity employer

Spring Break On Site Reps National spring break tour operator seeks resp people to work in Cancun Mazatlan Nassau and Florida during the 1996 season Room, trans, salary and training prov Pass IVI employment afterwards Please fax resume to (617) 292-9235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel 76 Summer St Boston MA 02110 Attn Product Dev.

Travel Abroad and Work Make up to $25-$45/hr teaching basic conversational English in Japan Taiwan or S Korea! No teaching background or Asian languages required For information call (206) 632-1146 ext J5001-2

We want you Unique liquor related product Retails for $700 Inventory required $2500 Follow our plan and it only 2 sales per day in each location your profit $37,400 first year! 941 766 9001

WMUA is looking for a sports director and women's affairs director. For more information call WMUA at 545-2876.

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn big money Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Alesis HR-16 Drum machine $200 Great condition Chris 256-1937

CD Rom games for Mac 7th guest, myst, gadget, Nut, throttle, original packaging 584-0942

Classic Video Game systems for buy/sell/trade Email ant@neptune.oit.umass.edu or call 256-1995

Double bed practically brand new, mattress, boxspring, frame $225 Call Elaine 549-9971

For sale black leather biker jacket never worn must condition $85 Call 546-8897

Furniture 2 futons bed mattress all just three months old Call Tob 256-6608

IBM pc dot computers both come with mon Make great wp, cheap! Call (l-0540)

Kastle speed machine 1kis 205cm only skied two days like new 325 00 or best offer Carl Ray at 6-0788

Kegorator $200 2 year old iguana 4' x 2' tanks all supplies incl $200 specialized hardrock 18" mountain bike $175 or bo 549-9166 Larry or Denise

Large Dorm sized fridge $100 Excellent condition Chris 256-1937

Pioneer VSX 453 dolby surround receiver 100 watts/channel remote 6 month old $ 98 583-9886

Top of the line Volkl skis for sale at an unbeatable price- boots for sale too Lorri 253-1801

UMass vs Maryland 2 tickets for bas ketball tourney in Maryland 4 games If interested call Anthony @ 549-7224.

286/386 Computer System $105/$255 Keyboard CPU monitor Call Steve (413) 566-3324

FOUND

Cross Pen with inscription near bus stop by the grad tower on 11/28. If yours please call to identify, Dmitry 549-6081

Found a pair of glasses in the parking lot of fraternity/sorority park on Nov 24th Please contact the University Career Center info desk at 545-2225

Found near LGRC A gold charm give dimension Call 545-6076

Found passport in Machmer hall call the Anthropology dept 215 Machmer Call 545-2221

INSTRUCTION

Take guitar lessons and earn one to two credits during winter session Call Peter 253-5263

LOST

Lost a yellow spiral bound notebook in Totem 304 Contact Karen 545-5893

MISCELLANEOUS

Reward $500 CASH!!! for any info regarding the robbery of 45 Southpont Dr over Thanksgiving leading to the arrest those involved All names anonymous Please call Cory at 253-1540

I'll love you for always I'll like you for ever as long as I live, my baby you'll be Happy Anniversary, my lover honey bunny Black opera tonight?

Stickstera -I missed you guys while I was in Maryland but I'm sure we'll make up for it this weekend I'll be off the drugs and back on the bud Rock on girls!
Love ya, Nitz

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst Jasper 546-7942

Siegla famala seeks room for rent immediately Must be on bus line Call Maria @ 549-5049

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for upbeat female to share 2 bedroom apt Available Jan 1 Aug 27/mo negotiable Call 549-4935

One bedroom in a five bedroom house Smoking Ok $270 per month 256-6295

Room for rent Private home quiet neighborhood kosher/vegetarian kitchen laundry, parking furnished $325 incl Jan 30 549-4853

Room for rent in townehouses $715/mo Call Jamie 549-5767

Room at Cliffside Avail Jan 1 For spring sem $315/mo inc all utils Grad stud pref 665-7810 Chris

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate needed to share room in Crestview Apt Begins 1/96 $180 per month call Nicole 549-1291

Fully furnished one bed in 3-bd bed apt $750/mo quiet Female only Graduate preferred 256-1285 Hyon

Large Bedroom in Belchertown apt for 1/2 people New, quiet, on bus route Available whenever Scott 253-1768

Person wanted to share room in great house in great location Call 549-4827 ASAP!

Rent 1 bedroom in 4 bedroom apt on bus route Very nice 270/month all inc! Call 253-3736 Now!

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located (1/2 mile to UMass and center of Amherst), beautiful 3 bedroom, 2 1/2 bath condo in Amity Place Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen and great sunset views Must be responsible cat loving non-smoker $475.00/month plus utilities Available January 1, 1996 Contact Gary at 549-3866

Rzammata wanted non-smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month On bus route Start Jan 1st Call Anne 253-1805 heat & hot water included

SERVICES

Foreign Students DV 1 greencard program available 1-800-660-7167

Free financial aid! Over $ billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income Let us help Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext F50012

RESUME
Inexpensive professional resume services Packages $15 $30 Only at Campus Design and Copy The affordable alternative Upstairs in the Student Union 549-7221

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing Silverscape Designs 264 N Pleasant St Amherst 253-3224

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Available month of Jan 1 bedroom Apt in North Amherst on bus route $475 Call Julie 549-5666

TRAVEL

JAMAICA
Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

Cancun Bahamas Book now and receive all meals and unlimited drinks all week long! "Free" Free! As low as $349.00/100% guarantee prices you originize your friends and now you go free it's that easy call now 1-800-4A4-7816 code SURF

Winter Break Special Kingston week $269 Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Wanted UVC TV 18's graphics department is looking for Amiga software that can generate text and continuous loop Contact Dan at 545-1336

Models Wanted National published sports and actions photos seeks attractive models for photo shoot we'll photo you and your sport 413-584-8585

WANTED TO RENT

Two females looking for a place to stay over winter/session Please contact Tara at 549-6170 or Stacey at 549-7105 if you are interested

MASS.DAILY COLLEGIAN 113 Campus Center - 545-3500

You're reading it now.

HOROSCOPE

Aries (March 21-April 19) Get an early start today if going to the post office Order gifts from holiday catalogs Greater personal effort will bring higher pay Refuse to let friends determine how you spend your time and money

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Responsibilities that rightfully belong to others fall into your lap Expect financial compensation for the extra work you do Your quiet competence attracts the attention of VIPs

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Heed someone's body language Confusion will reign unless you do what you promise Offer loved ones encouragement, not condemnation Put any health and diet resolutions at the top of your priority list

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Hold fast to recent business gains without trying to enlarge on them right away Too much daring could prove costly If your efforts make a favorable impression on an employer, a Christmas bonus is likely

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) The attitude you take to a difficult person or situation will set the tone for the day Be wary and wise Many little matters need immediate attention

Virgo (Aug 23-Sept 22) Make the most of every minute today Delegate routine tasks to qualified people Teamwork is favored Be prepared to play an active role in a reconciliation attempt

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A thoughtless move may boomerang Think before you act Adopt advanced methods for learning and self-improvement Do not allow special requests to clutter your schedule

Scorpio (Oct 23-Nov. 21) Distant affairs can be unpredictable Handle business negotiations personally A new friend or business contact could urge you to change your goals Think it over

Sagittarius (Nov 22-Dec 21) Your financial luck will soon change for the better You find yourself in a position to volunteer your assistance An unexpected visitor from out of town could show up on your doorstep Be hospitable

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan 19) A good week to work at rejuvenating certain relationships Your excellent professional instincts put you in the spotlight Commit to a new venture only if you feel your efforts will bring highly desirable results

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb 18) Relations between you and an authority figure could be tense this morning Keeping your cool will help you win an argument Compromise keeps a key alliance intact A rewarding home life helps you handle stress

Pisces (Feb 19-March 20) Your friends' affiliations can help you move closer to a special goal A gabfest over lunch will lift your spirits

The Collegian Graphics Department is currently taking applications for Night Supervisors and Night Staff for the Spring 1996 Semester.

If you're computer literate, artistically inclined, interested in the field of publishing or flat broke and in need of a job, come down to 113 Campus Center and speak to Jim or Tony.

Collegian Graphics

Because somebody has to fill all this space.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

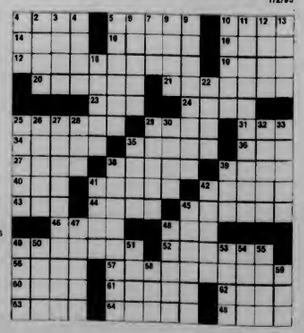
ACROSS
1 Sound from a kennel
5 Likeness
10 Snakes
14 Diabolical
15 Part of USNA
16 Actress Miles
17 Mediocre
19 Chills
20 Fix
21 Hires
23 Articulate
24 Joie de vivre
25 Some Italian cuisine
29 Bill of fare
31 Egregious grade
34 Ryan or Tatum
35 Salamanders
36 Pork product
37 Early native of Scotland
38 Floor coverings
39 Grotto
40 Ike's arena
41 Man from La Mancha
42 Skin cleanser
43 Evening, to a poet
44 Premonition
45 Inferior
46 Plunge
48 Word with boot or bob
49 Sales incentives
52 Pittsburgh player
56 "... you'll be —, my son!": Kipling
57 Also-ran
60 Main idea
61 Choo-choo
62 Leisure
63 French seasons
64 With remorse
65 Pony's gait

DOWN
1 Affirmative reply
2 Always
3 Parasites
4 Watery sound
5 Hiawatha, for one
6 Tie the knot
7 Gardner who played Julie
8 Box office
9 Components
10 Wailed cry of Spain
11 Indirectly
12 Quarry
13 Back talk
18 Twangy
22 A good thing
25 Lightweight helmet
26 Wed
27 Jackie Robinson's bag
28 Cool —
29 Edible gourd
30 Jug
32 Like most roofs
33 Polishing mineral
35 Baseball team
38 Teacup storms?
39 Murmur
41 Chimney powder
42 Degree or dimension
45 Underweight
47 Scolds
48 Pamper
49 Fad or fit
50 Give off
51 Evening, in Venice
53 Assist
54 Sad sign
55 Former name at U.S. pumps
58 Scoundrel
59 Asian holiday

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

I	L	I	A	D				T	H	E	B	A	N	K
N	O	S	H	O	W		E	V	A	M	A	R	I	E
E	N	H	A	L	O		V	A	L	I	D	I	T	Y
				L	O	D	E		E	T	D
A	G	E	N	A		A	R	F	S		I	T	C	H
R	O	T	O	R		S	Y	R		H	E	R	O	S
T	R	E	N	D	Y		B	O	B	O		O	D	E
	D	R	E	A	M	C	O	M	E	T	R	U	E
T	I	N		Y	A	R	D		A	S	H	P	I	T
R	E	A	M	S		E	Y	E		T	E	E	N	S
I	S	L	E		S	E	W	N		R	E	S	E	E
			T	S	P		I	D	L	E
A	U	D	I	T	I	O	N		F	A	B	I	A	N
G	R	E	E	L	E	Y	S		S	K	I	T	C	H
O	N	A	R	O	L	L			S	T	A	H	L

1/2/95



CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1	1
2	2
3	3
4	4
5	5
6	6
7	7
8	8
9	9
10	10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply • Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

I LIKE THE SOUND OF SLEET HITTING THE WINDOW PANES AT NIGHT.
AND I LIKE WHEN THE SLEET TURNS TO HEAVY SNOW AS IT GETS COLDER, SO YOU KNOW THAT TOMORROW THE WORLD WILL BE BURIED IN ICE AND SNOW.
IT'S ONE OF THE FEW PLEASURES RESERVED FOR THOSE WHO DON'T DRIVE.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

BORED WITH WAITING FOR PETER, MARY JANE WANDERS DOWNSTAIRS...
EVERYBODY'S TALKING ABOUT AN ACTION SHOW STARRING SPIDER-MAN!
BUT IT WAS MORE THAN A "SHOW!"
I'VE EVERY RIGHT TO SHOOT A TRESPASSER!
IT'S COMFORTING TO KNOW MY DEATH WILL BE LEGAL!
WHILE, IN THE HALL OUTSIDE...
THE DOOR'S BREAKING! SPIDER-MAN'S MINE!

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I WAS SO LATE I HAD TO PUT ON MY MAKEUP IN THE CAR.
YEAH, I HAD TO SHAVE IN THE CAR.
THAT'S NOTHING. I WAS SO LATE THAT I HAD TO GIVE MYSELF A SPONGE BATH IN THE CAR.
AREN'T YOU THE DRIVER FOR YOUR CARPOOL?
YOU'VE NEVER HEARD SUCH WHINING.

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

GeoFrey By Embryo

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Don't Go There By K and Justine

Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand

Hey Genius!
Hi DJ.
What's wrong?
Marble bought a computer today.
So?
He wants me to help him set it up.
What's wrong with that?
Hey Genius you still ain't shown me where the batteries go.
How do you see
See what?

Bruno By C. Baldwin

"EXCUSE ME...I SAW YOU STANDING OVER HERE AND...WELL...YEAH, I JUST WANTED TO TELL YOU THAT I THOUGHT THAT YOU WERE VERY BEAUTIFUL.
THANKS, YOU'VE ALREADY TOLD ME. REMEMBER THAT PARTY AT LENNY'S? I BELIEVE YOUR NAME IS GREGORY. AM I CORRECT?
YEAH...GREG...WHO, DID I DON'T REMEMBER THAT PARTY...IT WAS PROBABLY...
THE EXCESSIVE CALCIUMS, DO YOU SUFFER FROM CONSUMED?
YEAH...PROBABLY, BUT LIKE IT'S...LIKE I'D RATHER HAVE A BOTTLE IN FRONT OF ME THAN A FRONTAL LOBOTOMY.
WELL, I'M GOING TO BREAKFAST BECAUSE I'D RATHER HAVE A WAFFLE IN FRONT OF ME THAN A FRONT WAFFLE-OTOMY, IF YOU'D CARE TO JOIN ME.
A FRONT WAFFLE-WHAT?
A FRONTAL LOBOTOMY. I WAS SAYING YOU COULD BARELY TELL THE SCARS IN YOUR FOREHEAD DID IT HURT?

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My dad didn't want anybody to notice his birthday.....as if he was ashamed.

I know when I was young it meant presents or cake maybe, or a party.

When I was a teenager I was proud of myself. You made it through school another year, you're getting bigger, your friends say, "You look great!"

My dad says he's happy to be still alive and not dead from terminal poison ivy or a rotten attitude.

He says as you get older you start holding back and scheming on how to live as long as you can.

Then you get real old and you're out there trying to enjoy every single morning because it might be your last sunrise ...looking at flowers and listening to birds....like a little kid.

I was born on March 3rd &4th.

I guess that's why I'm a little ashamed of myself. I can't keep the first day straight. Once I settle my birth date,.....

I'll try to tackle my growing shoplifting problem.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Our anesthesiologist is out with a head cold. When I say 'now,' bite on this stick as hard as you can."

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Marni E. Helfner
Copy Editor.....Amy Paradysz
Photo Technician.....Elizabeth Brown
Production Supervisor.....Tony Morse
Production.....Jeff Hodge
Dan Bergeron

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Chicken Cacciatore
Italian Sausage Grinder
BASICS LUNCH
Chicken Cacciatore
Flat Bread Sandwich

DINNER
Lemon Pepper Cod
Quarter Pound Burger
BASICS DINNER
Lemon Pepper Cod
Oatburgers

Tuesday

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie
Mac and Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Tri Bean Casserole
Mac and Cheese

DINNER
Chicken Kiev
Baked Ham
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Kiev
Cauliflower + Eggplant

Wednesday

LUNCH
Beef Stew
Chicken Pucks
BASICS LUNCH
Greek Style Skillet
Chicken Pucks

DINNER
Hot & Spicy Chicken
Baked Ziti
BASICS DINNER
Korean BBQ Tofu
Baked Ziti

Top 10

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN By Brian Manchanda

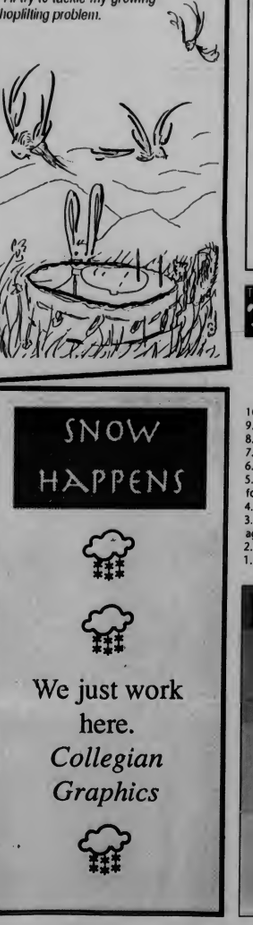
Top 10 Least popular quotes taken from "get well" cards

10. "Thinking of you on the toilet."
9. "Wishing you die in your sleep."
8. "Cancer shmancer! Get well!"
7. "Get your hypochondriac ass out of bed."
6. "Here's hoping we can have sex again soon."
5. "The doctor shouldn't be touching you there for a broken arm, you know."
4. "Try and bring some morphine home for me."
3. "Even though I'll probably never see you alive again, hope you're feeling better."
2. "What are you a wuss?"
1. "Nice knowin' ya sucker!"



Quote of the Day

"You gotta be alert. The world needs more lerts."

–Overheard

SportsWeekend

Collegian Sports • Monday, December 4, 1995

Inside this issue:

- The volleyball team competed this weekend in the National Invitational Volleyball Championships in Kansas City. See tomorrow's Collegian for the results.
- The men's and women's indoor track teams competed this weekend in Boston. The men placed first out of five teams at a meet hosted by Boston University. The women, in a tri-meet at Northeastern, took second. See tomorrow's Collegian for the stories.
- The men's gymnastics team hosted the UMass Invitational this weekend. Gabe Columbus led the Minutemen to a third-place finish. For a complete wrap-up see tomorrow's Collegian.

Minutemen beat Maryland, Florida

UM extends win streak to 3, Camby and Dingle carry team

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

It's been synonymous with Massachusetts basketball — the "refuse to lose" attitude — and in Saturday's match-up with Maryland, the Minutemen wrote a new chapter.

Down by 13 with 15:19 to go in the game, and with Marcus Camby playing with three fouls, the Minutemen mounted a comeback — and it was Camby who led the way. After a first half that was spent mostly on the bench due to foul trouble, Camby came back to score 10 second half points to lead No. 5 UMass to a 50–47 win over the No. 19 Terrapins.

Massachusetts	50
Maryland	47
Massachusetts	80
Florida	58

"Camby did a great job," said Maryland coach Gary Williams. "We couldn't get the next foul on him, which we really tried to do in the second half. He did a great job."

The win advanced UMass to the championship game yesterday, where they met Florida, which beat up on George Washington 75–66. Maryland came out fired up at the start of the game and raced to an 11–2 lead in almost five minutes. The Terps increased their lead to 16 (28–12) on a Sarunas Jasikevicius trey. Jasikevicius provided Maryland with a spark off the bench scoring eight points during a 10–4 run that made it a 60 point game.

"We played a very aggressive, very intense basketball team today," said UMass coach John Calipari.

UMass shot poorly in the first half (21 percent) and could have entered the half down double digits if it weren't for Dana Dingle. Down 16, Dingle went on a 7–0 run all by himself to bring the Minutemen within nine at the half, 28–19.

At the start of the second half it looked as if Maryland might pull away — two alley-oops to Keith Booth kept the score and momentum in the Terps favor. But that's when Camby took over.

The Terrapin defense was tough, trying to take Camby out of the game but he wouldn't let them.

"A lot's been said about Camby, about how good he is and you saw it out there [Saturday]," Williams said. "He just brings different elements to the game with his quickness and his size. He was the difference in the game today."

In the 15–4 UMass run that brought the Minutemen back from 13 down, Camby showed his improved outside touch by sinking three outside jumpers including one just under the three-point arc.

UMass got within two on a Edgar Pedilla 15-footer and then two free throws by Donta Bright tied it up at 41. Bright gave UMass it's first lead moments later on a give and go between himself and Camby. The Minutemen took the lead for good with two minutes to go when Camby sank a turn- around jumper on the left baseline.

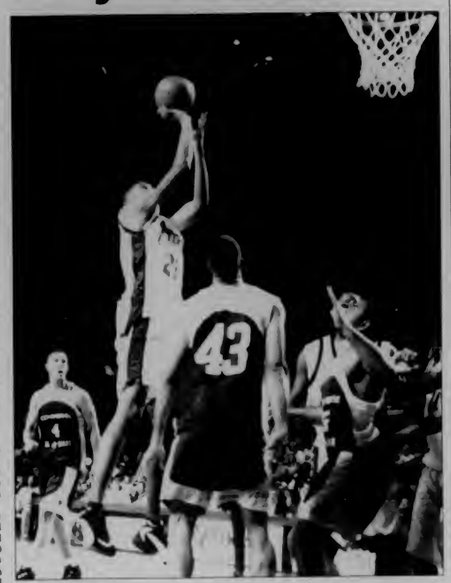
"I'm very happy with my team's 'refuse to lose' attitude. Down 15 we found a way to get back into the game," Calipari said."We found a way to make it close and found a way to win."

A last second three-point attempt by Johnny Rhodes missed giving UM the tough victory. Bright finished with a double-double (14 points, 10 rebounds) while Camby had 14 points and Dingle added ten. Booth led Maryland with 11 points and also had five steals and two blocks.

Against Florida the question as to how the Minutemen would come out after the tough, high-intensity game against Maryland was answered with UMass' 7–0 run to start the game.

On the strength of Camby's outside shooting UMass went on a 26–7 run to close out the half with a 37–18 lead. The run included a 7:05 stretch where UMass' stingy defense held Florida to no field goals (16–0 run).

"UMass really got the respect of our guys," said Florida coach Lenny



EMILY BEELY / COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby and the men's basketball team defeated Maryland 50–47, and Florida 80–58.

Turn to MEN'S B-BALL, page 9

Defense is key in win for UM Minutemen

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

LANDOVER, Md.— Entering this weekend's Franklin National Bank classic, there were many questions still surrounding the Massachusetts men's basketball team.

Would there be a let down after the upset of top-ranked Kentucky? How would the two guards hold up playing games in consecutive days? Would Coach Calipari use anyone else at the position? What players would step up for UMass? And could Marcus Camby continue his dominance over the opposition?

The answer to the last question was a resounding "yes." In UMass's two wins over Maryland and Florida, Camby, who was voted the most valuable player of the two day tournament, was nothing short of awesome. The Hartford native scored 44 points on the weekend, 30 of them coming in the championship game, as well as grabbing 15 boards, and swatting six shots. More important than the statistics may be the fact that the confidence of a go-to-guy was exhibited when the Minutemen needed someone to look to in the clutch.

With Saturday's contest with Maryland tied at 47, and just over two minutes remaining in regulation, the UMass offensive set got Camby the ball on the baseline. From there he hit what is quickly becoming his best offensive weapon, a turn around jumper which was the decisive basket of the game. The Minuteman defense shut down the Terrapins the rest of the way.

In fact, when Duane Simpkins made a lay-up with 4:30 left, it was the last Maryland points of the game. That was caused by the tenacious defense and rebounding of all five Minutemen on the floor.

"We don't want Marcus to feel like he needs to be Superman," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "Just play ball, be Marcus Camby, and if that's not good enough, we'll go home."

Though with just 19 points on seven-for-32 shooting in the first half after the win over Kentucky, it seemed UMass was the victim of a let-down. Late in the first half however, senior co-captain Dana Dingle and junior Tyrone Weeks contributed to getting the Minuteman deficit to single digits before half-time by keeping the Terps off the boards.

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 9

Massachusetts drops two to No. 1 BU

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — As the Massachusetts hockey team tries to ascend to the top of Hockey East, there are a multitude of steps to be taken.

The team has taken many of those steps so far this season, but one eluded the Minutemen this weekend; beating two- time defending league champion Boston University.

Boston University	6
Massachusetts	2
Boston University	5
Massachusetts	2

UMass fell 5-2 to BU Friday night at the William D. Mullins Center, before a school record 7,089, and 6-2 the following evening at a hostile Walter Brown Arena.

"I thought it was a very competitive weekend for us," coach Joe Mallen said. "For a [new] Hockey East school, that's a pretty good performance. We played BU evenly all weekend five on five, but we've got to find a way to take less penalties and find a way to kill penalties.

"This is in my eyes the No. 1 team in the east and the No. 1 team in the country. There's been a lot of good teams that have come in here and lost by as big or bigger scores. For a program in its infancy, these are the right steps for us."

The Minutemen showed a marked improvement over last year's performance against BU, but the Terriers top two lines, which feature five legitimate All-America candidates in Chris O'Sullivan, Chris Drury, Jay Pandolfo, Shawn Bates and Mike Grier, proved to be more than enough for the Minutemen to handle.

The fact that officials awarded the Terriers a total of 20 power plays over the two nights certainly did not help the UMass cause, but the Minutemen looked fairly good on the penalty kill, despite allowing six goals. Sophomore netminder Brian Regan made 75 saves over the weekend, many of them show-stoppers on BU power plays.

On Friday, a near-capacity Mullins Center crowd saw the Minutemen and Terriers play a scoreless opening 15 minutes, but the Terriers took control on a two-man advantage at 15:10. Regan saved shots by Jeff Kealty and Drury, but Pandolfo put the second rebound in.

BU's Jon Coleman tallied on the same power play at 15:50 and freshman St. Sebastian's product Albie O'Connell scored his first collegiate goal at 18:27 to put BU up 3-0.

UMass kept fighting though, as Blair Wagar scored before the end of the first period. Mike Evans and Jon Iacques sent Wagar through the BU defense with a pair of quick breakout passes up the right wing. Wagar was ridden away from the net nicely by defenseman Dan Ronan,

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

Boston University, sacred cow of HE

BOSTON — The Boston University Terriers are good. They are. Really.

Now that is out of the way, it's time to pick apart the sacred cow defending National Champion hockey program.

Matt Vautour

Because BU is BU, it gets away with things that are unheard of for the mere mortal programs that make up the rest of Hockey East.

Why is Mike Grier treated like Wayne Gretzky? As a 6- feet, 240-pound football coach's son, one would expect Grier to have some toughness in his repertoire.

While the big guy can dish it out, when he gets hit, he becomes the biggest cry baby since Danny Ainge.

A year ago, the Holliston native became one of the most respected players in Hockey East. After being considered slow his freshman season, Grier dedicated himself to improvement and it paid off as he earned All-America honors.

This year however, Grier has reverted back to his lazy habits. Instead of being the Hobey Baker candidate he was projected as, his numbers are down and he's not the best forward on the Terriers squad. Some of his muscle has reportedly atrophied, making the "Hobey Bacon" more likely than the more prestigious Hobey Baker.

Instead of shrugging off checks

Turn to TERRIERS, page 8

Minutewomen level Miss. Valley St.

By Mike Brown
Collegian Staff

UMass basketball is accustomed to knocking off the No. 1 team in the land.

After defeating then No. 8 Stanford just a week ago, the Massachusetts Minutewomen entered the Louisiana Tech/Dial Soap Classic with their sights set on the host. Louisiana Tech sits at the top of the national poll, and had to dispose of St. Johns before facing the Minutewomen in the finals.

UMass however, had one obstacle in its way of playing Louisiana Tech, which they had no problem overcoming — Mississippi Valley State.

La. Tech	75
Massachusetts	62

Louisiana Tech 75, UMass 63

The Mississippi Valley State game served as a good warm- up for the surging Minutewomen. UMass was hoping to catch the No. 1 Lady Techsters on an off day, but it wasn't meant to be.

Louisiana Tech's Debra Williams dominated the game, pouring in 31 points to help her team win the tournament. The game keeps Louisiana Tech's record perfect at 5–0, while the Minutewomen fall to 3–2.

Massachusetts	84
Miss. Valley	66

The Lady Techsters controlled the game, jumping out to a 15 point first half lead. The Minutewomen were able to decrease a 16 point deficit late in the first stanza and get to within 11 by the half. Senior Melissa Gurile and junior Crystal Carroll kept UMass within reach, as they each contributed eight first half points.

The Minutewomen took the floor in the second half looking to climb out of the hole they dug in the first half. They kept digging. Louisiana Tech started the second half with a 13–5 run to take a 19 point lead. UMass then buckled down a bit and fought to get to within 12.

A bright spot for the Minutewomen in this game however, was the second half shooting. UMass outshot the Lady Techsters 62.5 percent to 40.6 percent on 4 for 5 shooting from Gurile and a perfect 3 for 3 from Carroll. Gurile was stellar in the losing cause with a 21 point, eight rebound effort.

UMass 84, Mississippi Valley State 66

Stepping up for the Minutewomen in this match-up was Carroll. She led all scorers with 17 points, to help UMass defeat Mississippi Valley State. The victory advanced the Minutewomen to the finals of the Louisiana Tech/Dial Soap classic, where they faced the host.

UMass held an eleven point lead at the 12:50 mark in the first half and led by as many as 17 in the contest with the aid of Carroll's 15 first half points. They led at the half 42– 31. In the second half, the Minutewomen came out on fire, scoring the first three hoops. Then the momentum shifted as the Deviltes came storming back to get within nine points of UMass. Then the Minutewomen decided to insert the nail into the coffin, going on a 12–2 run doubling the lead to 66– 48 at the 8:54 mark. UMass was able to bury Mississippi Valley State in the waning minutes thanks to freshman Lucia Madajova's eight points in the final 2:32 of the game. Madajova ended the game with 14 points. Also scoring in double figures for UMass were seniors Octavia Thomas and Gurile who had 12 and 11 points, respectively.

EMILY BEELY / COLLEGIAN

Octavia Thomas and the Minutewomen destroyed Miss. Valley State, then fell to No. 1 Louisiana Tech.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 61 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, December 5, 1995

UMass, Luviano take fourth place

John Luviano and the men's water polo team finished in fourth place, the best-ever placing by a team in the East (See Sports, page 10)..

Women making Waves

A look at three women who have made a difference in Women making Waves. See page 3.

Action speaks louder than words

Spoken word artists Lydia Lunch and Exene Cervenka will bring the art form Henry Rollins made famous to NoHo (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forcast

It's gonna still be cold out there so if you haven't busted out the winter clothes, what are you waiting for! There is a potential for snow this weekend. Be prepared.

	Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH:	40	35	40
LOW:	20	15	25

Murray and Poussaint debate race & intelligence

EMILY BEELY/ COLLEGIAN

Dr. Charles Murray, author of The Bell Curve, and Dr. Alvin Poussaint, a psychiatrist specializing in race relations, debated the ways in which intelligence is related to race Monday evening at the Fine Arts Center.

Bell Curve stirs social reform controversy

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

In what students repeatedly referred to as a "show", Dr. Charles Murray, co-author of The Bell Curve: Intelligence and Class Structure in the United States, and Dr. Alvin Poussaint, author of Raising Black Children, debated the connection between race and intelligence last night in the Fine Arts Center.

Despite his opening comment that "race was one small transidiary topic" in his controversial 845-page book, Murray could not turn the debate away from that aspect.

From the moment he was introduced by Distinguished Visitors Program Moderator Rafail Maryakhin, Murray was met with negative comments from the audience, who proceeded to question his motives, and in one case to accuse him, during the lengthy question-and-answer period.

Murray said that his book, The Bell Curve, primarily deals the "cognitive elite" and the "creation of a cognitive underclass" in this country.

"During the last 50 years, but especially during the 1950s and '60s... the United States has become much more effective in sifting people according to ability," Murray said.

For example, at Harvard — where Murray received his doctorate — the average SAT scores increased, as places were made available for the less economically advantaged, according to Murray. Thus, Harvard became more a place for the able, as opposed to a place for the wealthy.

"We are talking in many ways about a Great American success story," Murray said.

However, he didn't have good news for everyone.

"Muscles simply aren't worth as much in the job market these day," said Murray, who began to talk about the increasing complexity of life.

Murray's "political error"

It was when Murray gave his first example of this "increasing complexity" that he opened the way for attack by Poussaint and students.

Talking about young unmarried women giving birth, Murray said, "It's a dumb thing to do... It's bad for the mother, bad for the child."

According to Murray, if the stigma is lifted from such a lifestyle, as has been happening since those less complex days in the 1950s, and the short term economic burden is eased through welfare, the woman may not be able to see so clearly that she is making a poor decision.

Murray said that lower IQ people tend to make this type of choice more often.

When it was Poussaint's turn to speak, he said that these types of attitudes must have some sort of correlation to Murray's political attitude.

"What was their purpose?" Poussaint asked, referring to the authors of The Bell Curve, Murray and Richard Herrstein, who has died since the October 1994 publication. "He means 'all these social programs are not going to make any difference to the population. They are doomed.'"

Turn to DEBATE, page 3

Students break silence in protest on SU steps

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

A wolf, a bear, a bunny, a skull, a man in a gas mask and others staged a protest on the Student Union steps yesterday.

Picket signs read, "Stop the complacency of silence and awaken" and "Silence = Violence. Stop the slaughter. Children, Women, Animals."

The "silence" in which the protest addressed involves the nonrecognition of problems existing on campus. The protestors said they felt the silence was due to complacency within students and the administration.

The protestors wore masks and dressed in costume to emphasize the silence on campus. They said felt their masks, signs and refusal to speak with onlookers offered a visual aid to express silence.

Unity among students was the major solution to the campus wide silence offered by the protesters.

"To root out the silence," senior political science major Jeremiah Hayward said, "we need to start with just two people willing to discuss an issue. We then need to expand outward into community discussion. As members leave their communities and enter others, they need to continue vocalizing."

Hayward and his fellow protestors hope to stop the silence surrounding an abundance of factioned issues. A man wearing a wolf mask stated that living in silence was infectious and surrounds all issues from animal rights and nuclear waste to campus economics and violence against women.

In particular another protestor said that following the ways of the Student Government Association concerning violence against women will not work.

"Installing more call boxes and improving lighting will not stop rape," the unidentified masked protestor said. "We need to attain unity and truly support each other. How many rapes does it take to attain unity?"

Turn to PROTEST, page 3

EMILY BEELY/ COLLEGIAN

An unidentified student, dressed as a wolf, participated with other UMass students in a silent protest on the steps of the Student Union yesterday afternoon.

Murray visit draws protest

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

Last night, in front of the Fine Arts Center, students and members of Maoist International Movement (MIM) protested the debate between Alvin Poussaint and Charles Murray, author of the highly controversial book The Bell Curve.

The Bell Curve argues that African-Americans are genetically inferior to whites and that it is genetics, not prejudice or oppression, which is the reason for their lowly status in contemporary American society.

"We oppose Murray's pseudo-scientific theory, because it's a justification for natural oppression," said one MIM representative who refused to give her name.

Murray finds the basis for his argument through results of standardized testing, which Murray defines as intelligence. He then uses those results as a criterion for the theory that those with material advantages (money, education, health care, etc.) are by nature, inherently smarter. Because African-Americans have been oppressed in America and don't have the material advantages that most whites have, Murray is trying to convey the idea that the problems plaguing African-Americans is genetic and "natural," not economic or social.

The protest started one hour before debate time. Demonstrators carried signs and passed out information discouraging Murray's book and his theories on intelligence. It is reported that Murray received $7000 to come to UMass. The question of why UMass would pay so much for Murray, even though many consider him a racist and white supremist, was a major concern for the protesters.

"We [MIM] aren't surprised the campus invited him, because of the elitist nature of the American educational system as a whole and the purpose that it serves, which is to perpetuate inequality and maintain status quo," remarked another one of the demonstrators who also preferred to remain nameless.

In the fliers posied around campus to get students to support the protest, there was a comparison of Murray and his ideals to that of Hitler and the Aryan nation.

"It is no more appropriate for UMass to give [Murray] money and a stage to argue why black people are inferior to white people than it would be to give a Nazi a forum to argue why Jews are inferior to Aryans," the flyer read.

Regardless of the protestors presence at the debate, little could be done to detour people from lining up to hear what Murray had to say about race and intelligence. Protestors of the debate agree it is Murray's right to speak his mind and express his views, they just wished he would've expressed his ideals someplace else.

EMILY BEELY/ COLLEGIAN

Sugene Yang, a freshman at Amherst College, signs a mailing list from Peter Couvares, a senior Computer Science major from Hampshire College, as part of the protest concerning the Bell Curve Debate Monday night at the Fine Arts Center.

SAFA set to lobby Congress

By Dave LaFontana
Collegian Staff

The Students Advocating Financial Aid (SAFA) have begun planning their yearly trip to Washington D.C. The group will travel to the nation's capital to lobby members of Congress concerning federal cuts in financial aid.

In the past, a group of 50 University of Massachusetts students have met with members of Congress and their aides to let them know how important financial aid is to many students.

"We go down there to [relate] our personal accounts of how cuts to federal financial aid affect us as students, not only as members of a large university, but also on a personal level," SAFA president Allison Cervini said.

The group was founded in 1978 by Gerry Grady, then a political science professor at UMass.

"Professor Grady was discussing how legislation gets passed during one of his classes, and one of the hot issues that year was financial aid," Cervini said. "The student body president was in the class, and asked Grady how students could do something to help. Grady then helped organize around 50 students to go down to D.C. and lobby." The group has gone every year since.

"This year is especially important, since the House has been taken over by the Republicans," SAFA member Mike Elliott said. "Many of the financial aid programs are on the chopping block."

Programs, such as direct lending, are in danger of being cut because of the changes in Congress.

"Direct lending saves a lot of money for students because money comes directly from the school and the federal government to the student," said Mike Meyer of the Financial Aid office. "The process eliminates the banks and their origination fees from the financial aid process."

"We don't know the exact reason why Congress wants to do away with direct lending, but we assume it's because the bank lobby is so strong," Cervini said.

In Washington, the group will speak with John Olver (D– Mass.) who will give them the most recent information on what programs have been saved or cut.

Currently, the group is in the process of forming the 50- member team for this year's trip.

"We want to reach out to people to say, 'If you want a trip to Washington D.C., all you have to do is join our team,'" Cervini said.

Once the team of 50 is organized, group leaders will begin training sessions throughout the early spring. During these sessions, team members will learn proper procedure concerning lobbying and political analysis.

The large team will be separated into smaller groups, and they in turn will meet with different members of Congress, finding out how the politicians intend to vote. Each smaller

Three alleged Springfield gang members arraigned for Southwest shooting

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

The three alleged "gang members" who were responsible for the shooting at the Malcolm X Cultural Center were arraigned yesterday. The three males were from Springfield — two were adults, and one a fifteen-year old juvenile.

"The three individuals led police on a chase through Amherst, South Hadley, Chicopee, and back to South Hadley where the three individuals were caught and arrested," — Karin Sherbin, of the UMass News Office.

On Saturday, the three individuals came to a UMass party at the Malcom X Center, and got into a fight with several UMass students, which resulted in multiple gunshots being fired.

One of the three was charged with possession of a firearm on school grounds, and all three were charged with theft of a motor vehicle and stolen property.

The revolver used in the shooting was recovered in the Southwest Residential Area by University police.

It was confirmed by the UMass police that the three individuals had indeed stolen a car from Springfield, and had stolen license plates for the car, as well.

"The three Individuals led police on a chase through Amherst, South Hadley, Chicopee, and back to South Hadley where the three individuals were caught and arrested," said Karin Sherbin, of the UMass News Office.

One student, Paula Griffith, a first-year student, said that the fight at the party was not a spontaneous thing.

"Before a lot of people arrived, there was an altercation between a couple of UMass students, and the group from Springfield," Griffith said.

Then at 3 a.m. on Sunday, when the tension reached a boiling point, a fight broke out, and shots were fired.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Dec. 5

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545-2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Recycling — Information session on recycling on the fifth floor of John Adams Residence Hall at 7 p.m. Meet a speaker from waste management. For more information call 546–5562.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Lecture — Prof. Penelope Andrews of CUNY Law School will speak on "Perspectives on Race and Progressive Law" at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 805. For more information call the STPEC office at 545-0043.

Speaker — The Sylvan Cultural Center is hosting Ujamaa Gordon as part of the Men's Week of its first annual "ALANA Women and Men Empowerment" Series at 7 p.m. in the basement of Cashin.

Toy Drive — UMass Army ROTC will be collecting money for "Toys for Tots" outside the Student Union, 9 a.m.–3 p.m. For more information call 549–6462.

Wednesday, Dec. 6

Performance — The Stonewall Center is presenting "Self Expressions", a night of readings and performances by gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender students. Five College GLBT students will present new works and works in progress in the Campus Center Room 917 at 7 p.m. Admission is a sliding scale donation of $3–$5. The event is wheelchair accessible. For more information call 545–4824.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Speaker — The Sylvan Cultural Center is hosting Brother Jamie X as part of the Men's Week of its first annual "ALANA Women and Men Empowerment" Series at 7 p.m. in the basement of Cashin.

Meeting — Hillel House is sponsoring "Being Jewish in a Sorority", an opportunity for women considering rushing in the spring to hear from sorority members themselves about being Jewish in a sorority. Located in Campus Center Room 168 at 7:30 p.m.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14.

Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Toy Drive — UMass Army ROTC will be collecting money for "Toys for Tots" outside the Student Union, 9 a.m.–3 p.m. For more information call 549–6462.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542–2277.

Thursday, Dec. 7

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Social Gathering — UMass Hillel is sponsoring "Singled Out", a mix and match social at 8 p.m. in the Hillel House Lounge.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 545–2277.

Lecture — Prof. Charles Nero of Bates College will speak on "Re/Membering Langston: Homophobic Textuality and Arnold Rampersad's The Life of Langston Hughes," at noon in Campus Center Room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. For more information call The Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Notices

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545–4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587–9884.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Writing — Nommo News and Drum Supplement holds general body meetings on Thursdays at 5 p.m. in the New Africa House Library. The meeting is open to all students and all faculty. For more information call 546–2363 or 546- 5562.

Overeaters Anonymous — Does eating control your life? Overeaters Anonymous meetings are held on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and Sunday at 10:30 a.m. in the Campus Center. Monday and Friday meetings are cancelled for the rest of the semester. For more information call 548–9040.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College students is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545–2240.

Semi–Formal — The Southwest Area Government is throwing a semi–formal on February 10, 1996 in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are on sale now in the SWAG office, with Early Bird prices of $10 a person, $12 a couple. Prices will increase next semester. For more information call 5-0960.

Writing — The National Library of Poetry is currently accepting entries for the North American Open Poetry Contest. Deadline for entries is Dec. 31. Poets should submit one original poem of no more than 20 lines to The National Library of Poetry, 11419 Cronridge Dr. P.O. Box 704–1986, Owings Mills, MD 21117.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Theater — The University of Massachusetts Theater Department has designed Dramatic Discoveries to showcase quality works by student playwrights in the Five–College area. Dramatic Discoveries is also searching for directors, stage mangers and dramaturgs who are interested in working on these new plays. Course credit may be available for students working on this production. The submission deadline for scripts is Dec. 14, 1995. Submission should be sent to: Dramatic Discoveries, 112 Fine Arts Center, Theater Department, University of Massachusetts, Amhers , MA 01002. For more information about the festival, please call Kelli S. Clark 545–3490 or 545–6818.

Religious — Rides to Chapel: Christ Community Chapel of Amherst sponsors "Pick Me Up." Worship time 10–11:30 a.m. every Sunday. Bus stop points 9:45 a.m. at the GRC, Fine Arts, North Village, Southpoint, Prince House, Southwest parking lot and Amherst College at Converse Hall.

Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8–10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French ... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information call 549–0271.

Correction

The headline on the story on the front page of yesterday's Collegian incorrectly identified the program as an Asian Studies Certificate and should have read Asian American Studies Certificate. The Collegian regrets the error.

Campus Police Log

Motor vehicle theft

Nov. 29

A vehicle which was reported stolen from Parking Lot 13 on Nov. 26 was recovered in Palmer, completely stripped.

Annoying behavior

Nov. 30

Jason M. Eves, 23, of 40 Plain Rd., Westford, was arrested for trespassing in the Campus Center. He had previously been caught trespassing, and was sleeping in the seventh floor hallway of the Campus Center at the time of his arrest.

A smoke alarm was activated in MacKimmie Residence Hall and it could not be shut off.

There was a dispute between two individuals in John Adams Residence Hall.

Medical emergency

Nov. 30

An individual having an insulin reaction in Washington Residence Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

An individual cut her finger and then fainted in Chenoweth Lab. No transport was necessary.

An individual with a cut finger in Berkshire Dining Hall was taken to University Health Services.

An individual in the Campus Center had a severe migraine headache. No transport was necessary.

An individual with a back injury in Pierpont Residence Hall was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Larceny

Nov. 29

An individual in James Residence Hall reported his credit card stolen.

An individual in Hills Residence Hall reported his wallet stolen.

An individual in Morrill Science Center reported her purse stolen from her office.

Nov. 30

There was a bicycle stolen from Johnson Residence Hall.

An individual reported that a backpack was stolen from a lounge in John Adams Residence Hall.

A bicycle, which had been reported stolen, was located on Eastman Ln.

Accident

Nov. 29

A two vehicle accident was reported on Massachusetts Avenue. No vehicles were located when police arrived.

A vehicle at the meters by Fearing St. was struck by an unknown vehicle.

There was an accident when parked vehicle rolled out of a space on Infirmary Way. The vehicles were gone when police arrived.

There was a minor two vehicle accident in Parking Lot 64.

Nov. 30

An individual reported damage to her vehicle in Parking Lot 22.

Disturbance

Nov. 30

Staff in University Health Services requested assistance with a patient.

Vandalism

Nov. 30

An individual reported that a tar–like substance was put in the door locks of his vehicle in the Campus Center Garage.

A pumpkin was thrown through a lobby window in John Q. Adams Residence Hall.

Alarm

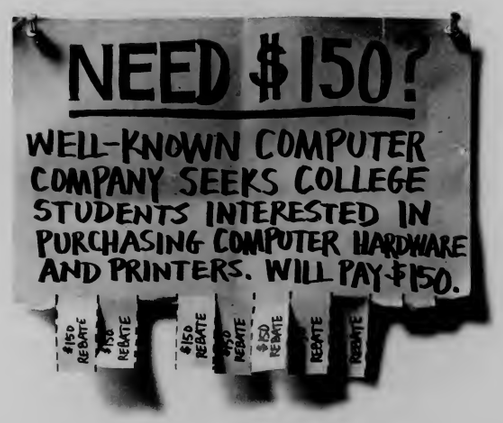
Nov. 29

A fire alarm was activated by cooking smoke in Brett Residence Hall. The same thing also happened in Gorman Residence Hall.

Health/safety hazard

Nov. 29

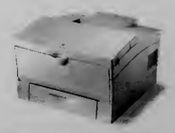
There was a request for sand in Parking Lot 44, where several people had complained about slippery conditions.



NEED $150?
WELL-KNOWN COMPUTER COMPANY SEEKS COLLEGE STUDENTS INTERESTED IN PURCHASING COMPUTER HARDWARE AND PRINTERS. WILL PAY $150.
$150 REBATE

Macintosh Performa 636CD
8MB RAM/250MB hard drive, CD-ROM drive, 15" color monitor, keyboard, mouse and all the software you're likely to need.

Looking for a great deal on a computer and a printer can be a whole lot easier than finding a roommate. Because right now, when you purchase a Macintosh® Performa® from the 630 series and an Apple® printer, you'll get $150 back. Just think about it. You can get your work done faster, it will look great and you can receive an extra $150 at the same time. So take a moment to look into the power that can keep you ahead. The power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.® Apple



Personal LaserWriter® 300
Toner cartridge and cables included.

Stop By The University Store Computer Department For More Information

UNIVERSITY STORE ☆ Campus Center 545-2619 Mon. - Fri. 9-5 Sat 11- 3

Purchase any Apple Macintosh Performa 630 series or 640CD/DOS compatible computer along with any Apple printer and receive a $150 mail in rebate. Offer valid through January 15, 1996, while supplies last and subject to availability. If you have any questions about the "Performa + Printer + Payback" offer please call 800 950 6354 or see stores for a complete list of details. ©1995 Apple Computer Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the apple logo, Macintosh, Performa, PowerDrive and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. PowerPC is a trademark of International Business Machines Corporation used under license therefrom. CardMinder Plus is a registered trademark of Monadnock. All Macintosh computers are designed to be accessible to individuals with disabilities. To learn more (U.S. only), call 800 600 7808 or TTY 800 755 0660.

WOMEN making WAVES

New women's center

The Spence Center for Women's Health in Charles Square, which opened last May, seems more like a health spa than a doctor's office.

The Spence Center in Cambridge was created as the first of a planned national network of innovative, outpatient health care facilities designed specifically for women.

The center is different from other, more traditional women's health clinics in two ways.

First, it makes internal medicine and primary care its cornerstones rather than reproductive services, something many leaders in women's health care say is important.

Second, Spence Center combines the services most often used by women under one roof, including many alternative ones such as acupuncture, chiropractic and herbalism.

The general market for the center is for women.

According to businesswoman Rina K. Spence, who began the program, women spend two out of every three dollars devoted to health care in the United States.

Spence's market is also a paid female work force which is bigger and better educated than ever before — 67 percent of all new workers by the year 2000 will be women — with an increasing number of working single mothers responsible for the health of their families.

A mother's love

A anonymous women recently wrote to the Globe Santa, a program which began 40 years ago to distribute gifts to parents or guardians who cannot afford to buy them for their children.

The woman's letter revealed that she had two children with ADHD–attention deficit disorder, a six–month old daughter and a husband who has been housebound for two years after a series of major operations.

The woman asked the for the Globe Santa's help.

"My husband cannot work, I cannot get a job either, because I have so much to do at home," the mother told the Globe Santa. She asked him to send toys to her three children this Christmas, a request that Globe Santa will fulfill.

Whatever the cause of people's misfortunes, Globe Santa is there to help.

Requests for toys must be received by midnight this Thursday night. Each request must be authenticated by a member of the clergy or a social worker who is aware of the family's financial hardship. Toys will be sent to children under 15 years of age.

One–woman industry

Martha Stewart, a former stockbroker and New Jersey native's catering company is currently making waves as it teaches people how to care about what their food and tables look like.

When this talented woman knocked off the tops of wedding cakes, replacing the traditional bride and groom off the tops of wedding cakes with homegrown fresh flowers, countless brides followed her example.

Stewart has been on national television advocating Easter baskets with real grass growing inside. She sows her grass seed in baskets just months before to get just the right turf for Easter eggs.

People magazine profiled Stewart in the Oct. 2 issue and credited her with writing 14 books, reaching more than five million TV viewers per week and another 1.3 million with her magazine, "Martha Stewart Living."

Stewart is a one–woman industry who is worth millions, and she shows no signs of slowing down.

Big Y scholarship given to UMass sophomore

By Bryan C. Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts sophomore Kristen Dorm of Longmeadow was recently awarded a $5000 scholarship from Big Y Supermarkets. The scholarship, which is merit– based, is in recognition of Dorm's rank in her class.

Before receiving the good news, Dorm said she was planning to leave school for the semester for financial reasons, and was preparing to work full time in order to return.

"If I wouldn't have gotten the scholarship," she said. "I wouldn't have come back to school."

When she first received the news over the phone, Dorm said her first response was, "Are you kidding?"

Dorm was a sports management major at the time, but has since applied to the School of Management. If accepted, she plans to study marketing.

Big Y is a family–owned supermarket chain with its headquarters in Springfield. Dorm described Big Y as a company that "started out small but ended up big."

The scholarship was funded by proceeds from Big Y's annual Paul H. D'Amour memorial Golf Tournament.

Big Y added an additional scholarship this year to acknowledge former UMass basketball player Derek Kellogg's participation in the tournament.

"Education has always been important to the founders of the company because their mother was a teacher," said Claire D'Amour, a UMass alumna and vice president for corporate affairs at Big Y.

David Wilbur at the UMass Development office was crucial in negotiating the scholarship. He said the scholarship "was based solely on merit" and that "it is unfortunate that good students are forced to leave school for financial reasons."

Wilbur said, "losing out on good students is a national trend" and that many "are getting better financial aid packages from other schools."

He described the increase of merit–based scholarships as "a priority of the system and a priority of the chancellor."

Wilbur also said merit based scholarships flourished in the 1960s, only to fade out due to government and corporate budget cuts. He expects an increase in the number of merit–based scholarships in the near future.

Murphy suing Enquirer

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The National Enquirer faces a trial over its story about actor Eddie Murphy's illegitimate son and the boy's mother because the Supreme Court refused to kill an invasion-of-privacy lawsuit Monday.

The court let stand rulings that said a California jury should decide whether the tabloid newspaper's report · its accuracy unchallenged · was "newsworthy" and therefore legally unassailable.

In other matters Monday, the court:

• Rejected Colorado's attempt to deny Medicaid-funded abortions for women impregnated by rape or incest by letting stand a ruling that forces states participating in the federal Medicaid program to pay for such operations.

■ protest

continued from page 1

Another issue of silence which was being voiced was the execution on Ken Saro Wiwa, one of several Ogani Africans who were executed for protesting the Shell Company.

"Who is Ken Saro Wiwa?" a man in a bear costume asked the crowd. "Who won the Dallas Cowboys game?" The first question was followed by silence, the second by "the Washington Redskins."

"Students need to be made aware of these issues," the bear–costumed protestor said. "This knowledge enables them to make an informed decision to stop supporting Shell."

The $190,000 salary of new president William Bulger was another topic of protest.

"If he were truly concerned about the quality of education, he would take an eighty percent pay cut," the wolf–costumed protestor said. "And if more students knew about his outrageous salary, perhaps they would take action."

A protester summarized the protest by saying that because of the silence he and his peers were driven to action and had found a creative way to express their concerns.

"We hope that others will express themselves," he said. "The silence is deafening."

• Turned down a Minneapolis–based charter airline's challenge to federal requirements, to take effect Feb. 1, on the length of airline flight attendants' work shifts and minimum rest periods between flights.

• Refused to hear the appeal of celebrity divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson, convicted in 1993 for failing to report almost $2 million in income on his federal tax returns.

• Refused to reinstate a $275,000 libel award won, and then lost, by an unsuccessful mayoral candidate against a Fayetteville, Ark., newspaper, the Northwest Arkansas Times.

• Heard arguments in the unusual case of a Georgia death row inmate who says he wants to be executed in a way that doesn't interfere with donating his organs. At issue is whether state prisoners can forfeit their right to appeal in federal court by waiting too long.

■ debate

continued from page 1

In response to student questions, Murray said he supports any attempt to help underprivileged children, but stressed how difficult it is to make such a change from the outside.

According to The Bell Curve, IQ accounts for 60 percent of a person's intelligence, while environment accounts for only 40 percent. Poussaint says the scales are tipped even more than 60 percent toward IQ in the book.

Therefore, the "show" last night was a classic nature– nuture debate — except this time it was played out against the backdrop of the debate about welfare and social reform.

"What are you going to do?" asked Poussaint. "Stop low IQ people from reproducing?"

One student asked Murray about an alleged "closed" meeting between himself and political figures in Washington "after the Republican sweep."

"I did not see any armed guards keeping anyone out" of the meeting in a hotel, said Murray, who stressed that he was invited based on his work on welfare reform.

"The topic of The Bell Curve never came up," he said.

Yet, Poussaint said, "If he feels low IQ people are producing low IQ babies, that's going to influence his welfare policies."

Race and The Bell Curve

"The fate of this nation is still primarily dependent on the 75 percent of the population that is white," Murray said. He had previously explained that white Americans have an average IQ of 100, black Americans average at 85 and Asian Americans averaged 103.

Murray said only 20 pages of his book deals with genetics. However, Poussaint said, "Genetics is all over that book." The chapters on Affirmative Action were used as an example.

Besides, argued Poussaint, how do you define black when "one drop of the stuff does it to you."

Murray and Herrstein mentioned at the beginning of The Bell Curve that the genetic differences within races are larger than the differences between races.

A student asked Murray why he spent only two paragraphs discussing this, while so much of the book dealt with racial differences.

According to Poussaint, The Bell Curve says the average IQ in Africa is 75, but slighter higher among non–blacks.

"A slavemaster could use this book as justification," Poussaint said.

However, Poussaint pointed out areas where he believes The Bell Curve is scientifically incorrect. For example, while Murray and Herrstrein wrote about IQ, they were actually using another intelligence test for their data.

The University of Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Your source for UMass news

Office of Information Technologies

Remote Access Status Report

December 5, 1995

The Office of Information Technologies, provider of dial-up access to the UMass Amherst campus network from both off campus (through modems) and on campus (through TAU's), provides this update on our continuing efforts to keep pace with the rapidly expanding needs of our user community.

This fall we compounded our rapid growth in users (tripled in 24 months) by offering the new and very popular UMAccess service, that provides dial-up access to network applications directly from the desktop environment. The most obvious impact of the increased demand is the busy signal our users get when they dial into the OIT modem pools, especially with the on-campus dial-up service. This is happening in spite of our continuing increases in capacity, which have been planned since before the current saturation of available connections.

We are taking two steps to help assure that all of our users get a chance to access the services available through our dial-up systems.

The first is to accelerate the expansion of our dial-up systems by increasing the number of lines, modems, and TAU's. The table below shows the expansion plans for the number of on and off campus lines.

In an 18-month period we will nearly triple the number of access lines. In addition, we have upgraded the on-campus system to 19,200 bps, and, within a few weeks, as previously ordered modems arrive, the entire off-campus system will operate at a maximum speed of 28,800 bps.

	On Campus	Off Campus	Total
Sep. '94	160	128	288
Now	287	186	473
Jan. '96	384	228	612
June '96	576	250	826

Unfortunately, the expansion is a lengthy process, and will not alleviate the problem immediately. We are forced to look at additional mechanisms to equitably improve access.

The second step, recommended to us after lengthy discussion by the Faculty Senate University Computing and Electronic Communication Committee and the PPP Policy Working Group, (two bodies with faculty, student, and staff representation), is to institute a session time limit policy.

Beginning on Monday, December 4, we placed a six hour time limit on dial-up connections when use nears the capacity of the service. This limit is only applied during the hours that the dial-up systems are saturated (roughly 10 AM to midnight for on-campus connections, and 7 PM to midnight for off-campus connections). Thus if the dial-up service saturates, and you have been connected for six hours or more at that time, your connection will be terminated. It is important to know that the dial-up connection mechanism precludes us from giving you a warning prior to the disconnection. This policy is applied to all OIT dial-up services.

In closing, we have a plea and suggestion. The plea is to remember that the dial-up systems are a shared and limited resource. Don't abuse them. One of the benefits of UMAccess is that you can do your work without staying connected. For example, you can connect, download your e-mail, disconnect, read and compose answers to your e-mail off-line, reconnect, and upload your answers. Your total connect time is then only a few seconds.

Finally, it is clear that there will still be times when you may have to wait for a chance to use our services. As the end of the semester approaches, and deadlines for your work (and everyone else's work) get closer, plan your time accordingly. Work during the less busy hours. Don't put things off until the last minute, because, at that last minute, . our systems will no doubt be saturated.

Duncan Chesley
Director of Computing Administration
Office of Information Technologies

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN Presents

A Spectacular Sports Extra

The 1995-96 UMass Basketball Preview

Coming to a newsstand near you December 6, 1995

LOOK FOR IT!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief
Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager
James P. Gurley Production Manager
Ethan Blumfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager
Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor
Gen Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaelis Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor
Daymion Smith Photography Editor
Candice Flemming Sports Editor
Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Adam Chace Systems Manager
A.J. Stewart Financial Manager
Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Perfection finds a home in Disney World

Intellectuals have long pondered the questions: What exactly constitutes the perfect society? What makes a particular community the best? How can I live there?

Enter Celebration, the new utopian community in central Florida, which once completed will be so bizarre and backwards you'll know it could only have come from those visionaries at Disney. Yes, its next new exhibit will have real live people living in a harmonious community labeled as utopian, so tourists may gawk as they pass through its streets.

The town of Celebration is being constructed 15 miles south of Disney World, and will eventually have a booming population. The people who live in Celebration will have the best of everything, the most modern conveniences. Among the advantages of living there will be the schools. They will be county run, but boosted by all the new technology Disney's money can buy and a teachers' training school that will be linked with the system. Other aspects of the municipal government, such as the sewers, water and police, will also be run by the county.

Therefore, to achieve perfection, it is necessary for them to step on the common people, men and women who don't have the time or money to concern themselves with living in such a place.

Mark McGrath

What, you may ask, is controlled by the people? That is certainly a tough question, because when the residents sign their papers to move in, they give up many of the rights which residents in other suburbs possess. Most of the agreed terms have to do with uniformity. In other words, to live in the perfect community, you must agree to be like the rest.

I can only imagine the perfect people who will be living under the glass ... I mean in this community. Those who are lucky enough to be slaves to Disney were chosen at random from a pool of applicants, all of whom thought the perfect community was just a perfect idea. Good for them. I mean, what could be better for them than knowing their neighbors are just like they are, married with a couple kids, cute kids, and we can't forget the family dog.

There's no room in the perfect community for outsiders, you know, minorities. I wonder how many of the smiling faces will be black ones. I wonder how many will suffer from the problems that burden society today. I have trouble visualizing the Celebration bag lady, as with those suffering from poverty, alcoholism and AIDS.

Once the supposedly perfect people become part of the spectacle, they'll be systematically brainwashed by the people at Disney. It'll all start very innocently, no clothes- line in the front yard. No strange colors for your house. Forget the wooden cutout of the woman bending over in the garden. Everyone will worship in the same church, because the tourists don't want to see more than one church. You must also keep your living room spotless, so the visitors can see what a perfect house you keep. Before long, the cast of characters in Celebration will differ about as much as Huey, Dewey and Louie. That's perfection, postmen with Mickey Mouse ears.

The problem with this community and others like it, which will undoubtedly sprout up, is the fact they are not self- sustaining. In other words, this community will depend on workers from the outside to keep it running smoothly. Therefore, to achieve perfection, it is necessary for them to step on the common people, men and women who don't have the time or money to concern themselves with living in such a place.

Did I mention the Disney corporation will be making a cool $200 million profit in selling the plots of land alone, and will still maintain control over the public spaces and commercial districts of the community?

Success in this venture will surely encourage other huge corporations to begin communities of their own. Before long, it is possible these planned communities could dominate every corner of the country. Where would that leave the common people?

I, for one, just don't have the resources to worry about such matters as pseudo-utopian communities pushed by giant corporations in order to make a buck and expand their influence over thousands of people.

Time should prove the idea of a utopian community is something we'll never see. It's also something the visitors to Celebration will never see either, for a homogenous community of people who cannot express themselves freely is hardly perfect at all.

Disney makes its money off of pure fantasy, and Celebration does nothing to change the formula. Countless numbers of people have been enchanted by them over the years, and it seems their utopia is just more of the same old garbage.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Flush the system

If you live in the residence halls, you would understand the University Bathroom Policy has been ignored many times and has become a big problem. However, if you are a person living outside the dorms, and you only look at the statistics regarding the Bathroom Policy, you will be missing the big picture. Residents will always violate the Bathroom Policy until some changes are made in the design and set up of the residence halls.

First of all, it is the responsibility of the students in the residence halls to adhere to the Bathroom Policy, but they don't. Why do students continue to break this policy? It is in the Residence Hall Manual, but my mistake, how many students actually read the manual thoroughly? Maybe a few. The point is, students know about the Bathroom Policy and have been warned not to violate this policy. If they do, their behavior will be documented and they'll have to meet with the RD. But this does not seem to affect their behavior.

Students have no respect for the Bathroom Policy, and even if their behavior is documented some still continue to break the policy.

Chinedu Ogbuike

Let's look at the Bathroom Policy violation statistics for the 1994-1995 academic school year. There were 119 total cases. In Southwest South alone, there were 50 violations, while there were 27 violations in Southwest North. Orchard Hill had three, Central had 12, Northeast had only one, and Sylvan no violations. Southwest made up roughly 65 percent of the Bathroom Policy violations. Why? Maybe because of how the buildings in Southwest have been designed.

For example, the towers in Southwest have only single sex bathrooms on each floor. So if you are a female and the bathroom on your floor is labeled MEN, you must go up or down the stairs to use the bathroom facility. Students in the resident halls who break the Bathroom Policy refuse to walk up or down the stairs, and instead they use the bathrooms on their floor hoping they don't get caught.

If caught, the behavior of the student is documented on a Witness statement and is given to the Resident Director. Once in the hands of the RD, the RD has the power to hear the case and choose to give the student a sanction, or decide to throw the case out. This is a typical scenario of what is done in the towers.

The fault, however, is not of the students, but of the University because the towers were designed for single sex floors and bathrooms, not for coed floors. Nevertheless, the floors in the towers were made coed, but the bathrooms at first were not. The students were happy for awhile, until they realized the bathrooms were still single sex. Students complained, and the bathrooms were supposedly made coed, until some safety issues unfolded forcing the University to make the bathrooms single sex.

However, students are not happy, and show their anger through the violation of the Bathroom Policy. Several things need to be changed fast. Changes can be made if students try to get their voices heard either through SGA or Housing Services. Things aren't changed by themselves, and they won't change over night, but they will change if some form of action is taken in a constructive manner. So those students who don't like to walk up or down the stairs to use the bathroom need to get their voices heard if they want things to change, especially in the towers where the bathroom utilization issue is out of control.

Wait, there is more. Resident Assistants and other staff members in the building are left with the dirty work. They must enforce the Bathroom Policy, which I must say is difficult. The residence hall staff have lives of their own to live and don't have the time to wait outside the bathrooms making sure students don't use the wrong one.

Believe it or not, some students will utilize the bathroom even when a staff member is present. Students have no respect for the Bathroom Policy, and even if their behavior is documented some still continue to break the policy. Are the sanctions harsh enough, or are students who break the policy ignorant, stupid or lack morals? I say it is both, but also the fault of the University and the design of the residence halls which don't fit the needs of the students.

Yet, how come in the Student Union or in the Campus Center students don't go into the wrong bathrooms? Males go into the men's bathroom and females go into the women's bathroom. Or another example, in the malls or in a restaurant, why do men and women use the proper restrooms instead of each others? But in the dorms students enter each other's bathroom. Why? Isn't it a safety hazard outside the dorms as well as inside the dorms to utilize the wrong bathrooms. If it is not a problem outside school then why is it a problem inside school.

Students must be responsible enough to realize that by entering the wrong bathrooms in the residence halls things won't be changed. They must take action. SGA and Housing Services can help students change the way things are now. Remember, if you don't ask for help, you may not receive it.

My suggested solution to the Bathroom Utilization issue is either change the floors back to single sex matching the bathroom gender label, or fix the bathroom facilities so there are coed floors and coed bathrooms. This won't be an easy task, but something must be done.

Moreover, until changes are made, students will continue to break the Bathroom Policy despite the sanctions given and the fact it is a safety issue. Yes, we want to educate students after they have broken the Bathroom Policy, but some students won't listen and must be punished for that.

Chinedu Ogbuike is a Collegian columnist.

WE COULD GET AN OLD LENIN TAPE, REMIX IT WITH US SURVIVING COMMUNISTS, AND WHO KNOWS...
OLD SOVIETS HOME
BEATLES ANTHOLOGY
I WILL YOU STILL NEED ME WILL YOU STILL FEED ME WHEN I'M NINETY-FOUR JJ TALES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
OPPOSITE FOR US ARE IS E WORLD REPORT

Down in Dixie

As I walk across the rugged countryside of New-England, I am truly overwhelmed with a sense of history. My bosom wells with the souls of brave colonists who sternly believed in the independence and prosperity of America. The flashing colors of crimson and gold, gently twittering in the Indian Summer sunshine, transports my mind to a time when this country was struggling for its identity.

It was indeed a time when men, not unlike myself, took up the cause for freedom, an idea that men could, by their own will, achieve anything they set their mind to. America is indeed the light of the world — and New England is a perfect reflection of this. I could quite easily go on at some length about my ever growing fondness for the North, but I can never forget my heart lies within the Southland.

When crossing the Mason–Dixon line into the South, one must realize he is truly in God's land. Only the blessed hand of the heavenly father could bestow such resplendent landscapes unto a good–hearted people. The rolling hillsides from Maryland to Tennessee are covered with blankets of rich corn, wheat, greens and tender blue–grass. The mighty Atlantic, in all her wisdom, has chosen to crash her purest of waters along the coasts of the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida, offering a fruitful bounty of delicious crustaceans and fish.

Benevolent manners and courteous hospitality cannot be attributed to any other region of people like southerners. We may not always agree with you, hell, we may not even like you, but we will always welcome you with a smile or hello.

Matthew Pugh

The deep, mysterious bogs of the Alabama and Louisiana bayou seem to murmur a melody of ancient wisdom. The Appalachian mountains are by far the keepers of the South. They stand tall, like a great stone–wall, against those who wish to intrude and harm this delicate land. Those who are not native simply stand atop, gandering in unspeakable awe, hoping someday they may call this sacred garden their home.

However, a man must do more than wander or pass through the South to really appreciate its blessings. One must stop, take time to sip some Comfort (the Grand Ole Drink of the South) and share a tear under the shade of a Weeping Willow or inhale the bitter–sweet aroma of the Magnolia tree. Things certainly are different down in Dixie. The seasons need more time to simmer, the sun shines warmer, the water runs bluer, the stars gleam brighter, and the days live longer. However, my unbounded love is for the people of the South.

Benevolent manners and courteous hospitality cannot be attributed to any other region of people like southerners. We may not always agree with you ... hell, we may not even like you, but we will always welcome you with a smile or hello. We hold strong to simple values like family and brotherhood. We labored for, tilled and plowed the earth, so generations of our blood may one day inherit its riches.

My eyes well with mist when my naked feet and hands sift through the soil that was once churned by my great grand– fathers. Be that as it may, there is nothing more worthy of upholding my southern heritage than my family name. Without a doubt, my grandfather instilled this value within my heart.

Born and raised in the core of Richmond, Va., my grandfather was the epitome of a southern gentlemen. Our relationship was a very close and loving one. Sometime during his last few precious days of life, I visited him to bid farewell. As he gazed across my face with his sickly eyes, he managed enough strength to whisper to me his final wish.

He asked that I, the last generation of Pugh men, carry on his name with honor. Without hesitation I promised, reassured him with a kiss upon his age withered brow, and wept as the Lord called him home. From that day on I vowed to keep the family strong in the same brotherhood I had grown accustom to. Regardless of where I may rest my head, I will always keep the Stars and Bars waving high above — as a symbol of my southern way of life. In the South with live free, deliberate, with heads up high, and never bow in shame or remorse for our union.

The South shall never rise again, simply because it never fell. I promise under the spirits of my grandfathers and in the eyes of my father I will fight to uphold our way of life until the last drop of Rebel blood is wrenched from my body. For I am American by birth, but southern by the grace of God.

Matthew Pugh is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Right wing's own PC

To the Editor:

I'm so happy Matthew Pugh's favorite cliche is the "right– wing politakkkally correct" (When Will They Learn, Nov. 20), especially since the expression was already in common usage. He's obviously referring to the letter I wrote (Nov. 16), because I don't recall seeing that phrase anywhere else, let alone with that spelling.

The new phrase is meant to emphasize the ironic fact that the American right–wing has always had, in a manner of speaking, a "PC" convention of its own — except that deviants from the code are labeled as "liberals," "do– gooders" or my personal favorite, "communists." In addition to other such unimaginative terms, the right–wing PC loves to throw around the much overused "politically correct."

I take it Mr. Pugh wouldn't consider that appellation a cliche (Notice the recursion of concepts embedded within the phrase "right wing politikkkally correct," I think it's one of the things that makes the phrase even more amusing.)

Mr. Pugh asks if liberals are assuming the right–wing party is directly affiliated with the KKK. I hope the following is a thorough answer.

I used the kkk spelling to underscore the observation most American racists come out of the right–wing. In fact, the phenomenon is so salient, the correlation between racism and conservatism is so strong, it just can't be ignored. Books like The Bell Curve come from and are funded by the conservative side of the political spectrum, and to argue otherwise is absurd. The conclusions of The Bell Curve itself are consistent with the conservative political agenda. The book not only provides a warped explanation of differences in economic–prosperity — it argues for why those inequalities should continue to exist and justifies how government intervention is thus not necessary.

Furthermore, it was conservatives who, during the 1950's and 60's, chose to oppose and slow down even the most modest Civil Rights legislation. And, it's conservatives who are today trying to turn back the clock on Civil Rights by at least 30 years. Many conservatives even openly argue — and I'm not joking — we should decriminalize discrimination based on race. By then, we would truly have a "free–society." Supposedly, any "excesses" from newly– legalized discrimination would be controlled by the "free market," just like they had been before the Civil Rights movement.

In the same column, Pugh gives us readers nothing less than a history lesson on how Abraham Lincoln is regarded as "the Great Emancipator," as if this slogan means that African–Americans should feel some sort of gratefulness toward the current Republican party. The intent is repugnant, but nevertheless typical of right–wing rhetoric. A slightly more in–depth analysis would have revealed to Mr. Pugh that Lincoln held many antiquated (read: "racist") ideas regarding blacks and other ethnic minorities. And when Abe was president, the newly established Republican Party was a liberal party of change, unlike what it is today.

Continuing to educate us, Pugh also writes "without an open mind, (the left) discredits the messenger." No, no, no. When the message is easy to defeat, the messenger discredits himself. Especially when he gives us a flowery invitation to "hop aboard," a "conservative train heading for the Promised Land ..." Yet, again, in Mr. Pugh we find another Collegian columnist perceiving himself as being victimized merely for being a "white American and nothing more."

He makes a ludicrous claim, but one we should expect to see whenever conservative ideas are effectively challenged. Mr. Pugh's final thesis is rather banal. For him, there are no legitimate criticisms of conservative policy. Conservatism is perfect. All arguments against the conservative agenda just boils down to name–calling. When I make a systematic analysis of how Mr. Pugh is wrong, I'm just being PC.

Which brings me back to the main point — the ultimate irony is that the phrase "politically correct" is used by the right in an attempt to invalidate the legitimate struggles of oppressed people in our society. They're just being PC, so everyone should ignore them.

If that's not the height of name calling and debate stopping (and hypocrisy, on Matthew Pugh's part), I don't know what is.

Okwa Fox Tree
Amherst

Arts & Living

Lydia Lunch

COURTESY STEVE ZAMBRANNA

Lunch and Cervenka to keep art of spoken word alive in NoHo

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

Spoken word has definitely come a long way. Years ago it was strictly underground, considered a pseudo art form at best by the majority. But now, pop culture has brought it into itself, with considerable help from the second coming of punks and beatniks.

While punk icon Henry Rollins is the most visible figure in the spoken word genre, Tuesday night will prove just how broad the genre really is when the Terror Twins Spoken Word Tour, featuring Lydia Lunch and Exene Cervenka, hits the Iron Horse Music Hall stage.

A onetime CBGB waitress, Lydia Lunch started her musical career in the NYC band, Teenage Jesus and the Jerks. Contemporaries with the likes of Sonic Youth and the Swans, Teenage Jesus brought atonality to punk rock and an edge that neither sacrificed art nor energy. Lunch has had an equally impressive solo career, in music and spoken word, as well as collaborations with Thurston Moore and Nick Cave.

Exene Cervenka is most know for her part in the seminal L.A. punk band X. While X is still alive and well, Cervenka has found time for her poetry and prose. Her latest spoken word album, Surface To Air Serpents, was released earlier this year on Rollins' 213 label.

Together, Lunch and Cervenka are hardly strangers. Both collaborated on a book of poetry some years back while their spoken word can be heard on the recent Rykodisc Voices series release, Rude Hieroglyphics. Whether through poetry, anecdotes or dialogue, both women will surely incite the audience at hand as they rampage through the social and political issues of the day.

Lydia Lunch and Exene Cervenka will be performing at the Iron Horse Tuesday, Dec. 5 at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance, $12 at the door.

Exene Cervenka

COURTESY STEVE ZAMBRANNA

Synaesthesia's show gives audience new pop songs

By Rob Stevens
Collegian Staff

SYNAESTHESIA & PHINEAS GAGE
Pearl Street
Nov. 30

NORTHAMPTON — On Thursday night, Synaesthesia and Phineas Gage, two popular local bands, played a double– bill at Pearl Street. The opener, Phineas Gage, played one solid set of original, fast–paced, fun rock songs. Meanwhile Synaesthesia, a Pearl St. mainstay, played two sets unveiling a bunch of new material to support their already impressive batch of original material. The last night of November's cold and stormy weather seemed to have a mysterious effect on the show.

Phineas played 13 songs and like many other bands they combined many styles of modern rock into their repertoire. The only way to describe this band, which originated in the Westfield area, is to put a musical mixture together of switched tempos, funk, grooves and jams all led by an impressive female vocalist. Phineas is a crowd pleaser and throughout the whole set they had the fans dancing. To add some spice they played "99 Luftballoons" as a cover. This set fully displayed Phineas as a talented and happy band.

Phineas Gage's energy–driven opening was followed by the improvisational instrumentation of local UMass favorite Synaesthesia. This writer noticed a significant change in the music that Synaesthesia played. Whereas before, the typical Synaesthesia show presented long Grateful Dead type jams, Thursday night's songs were shorter and more verse–chorus– verse driven. Not to be mistaken, at least half of the songs were still in the long–jam form, but it was the new shorter songs which grabbed the audiences attention.

These new songs worked well, giving the audience a chance to listen to the lyrics and sing a long. Many of these songs provided a wide array of different sounds. Throughout the show the lead guitarist, Darren Ray, frequently experimented with various distortion and sound–altering peddles.

Although new songs were abundant, the old Synaesthesia was still in full force. One of the first songs played was a long version of the popular "Backwards Man." On this tune the band jammed close to 10 minutes, flowing beautifully in and out of transition. The long jams which the band played clearly showed that the band has come a long way from its early Listless beginnings. All of the songs were very technical and well–orchestrated. During the peaks of their extended jams, Darren Ray was a sight to see, quickly picking away and ripping through solos that virtually no other local band can touch.

Velocity Girl takes classic pop to new level

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

From the Beatles to the Beach Boys to the Monkees, the 1960s were a prime period for pure pop music. It is hard to believe now, in the age of Nine Inch Nails and Rage Against the Machine, that pop music was once a popular form of music that the masses listened to. Today most pop bands such as Papas Fritas or Heavenly are confined to small smoky nightclubs the size of your closet.

Tonight will be different, though, as Pearl Street will host Velocity Girl, a fine pop band from Maryland that knows how to write a catchy tune without the added cheese factor that clogs pseudo pop bands such as Letters To Cleo. Signed to the world famous Sub Pop, Velocity Girl have risen from an obscure little five piece on the tiny Slumberland Records to international stars. They might not be as popular as Green Day but compare to their peers, Tsunami, Air Miami and Chisel — Velocity Girl are huge.

And with good reason too. Their single "My Forgotten Favorite" ruled the airwaves of college radio back in 1991 and the music world has never been the same. Their formula is simple, just write simple catchy pop tunes and add loud noisy guitar for an extra edge. It may sound easy but it has worked the band wonders and their albums have been well received both critically and by adoring fans.

Their debut Copacetic was filled with loud noisy guitars while the follow up, Simpatico, was a more written pop songs, it didn't seem like straight forward record minus the feedback.

Velocity Girl (Archie Moore, Brian Nelson, Jim Spellman, Sarah Shannon, Kelly Riles)

COURTESY JOHN FALLS

"On our first record we wanted to sound basically like we did when we practiced," stated drummer Jim Spellman, "[but] since we've always written pop songs, it didn't seem like a compromise to make a polished record [like Simpatico]."

Last spring the band was scheduled to perform at Pearl Street but cancelled due to illness in the band. Tonight Velocity Girl should be in top form as they play their sing–along pop tunes that will keep your feet tapping.

Velocity Girl performs at Pearl Street tonight. Doors open at 8:00. The show is 18+. Call the club at 584–7771 for more information.

Egyptian art exhibition celebrates ancient culture

By Julie Yamamoto
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Like no other ancient culture, the Egyptians tell us about their lives through their monuments to the dead.

The nobles we know only as slim, painted figures with proud, almond-shaped eyes have long fascinated Westerners, and the U.S. scholarly contribution to telling their life story is the subject of an ambitious exhibit at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Curator Nancy Thomas' fascination with the culture that inspired the glamour of two Cleopatra epic films and lent hieroglyphics to our pop-culture vocabulary began in the 1970s, with fieldwork in Giza and other locations.

Thomas measured and mapped, photographed and, most importantly for her, visited the huge monuments.

She followed in the footsteps of other American explorers, whose careers flourished in the early part of this century. The exhibit, which she has been planning since 1989 with Gerry Scott III of the San Antonio Museum of Art, brings together more than 250 examples of what Americans found.

Egypt continues to be fertile ground for American discoveries.

In May, Kent Weeks of the American University in Cairo, unearthed what may be the largest burial chamber ever discovered in Egypt: the tombs of 50 of Ramses II's sons in the Valley of the Kings. Weeks found the 3,200-year-old structure in 1987, but only recently discovered its size — 67 chambers.

Among the well-preserved artifacts in the LACMA exhibit are a haunting gray sarcophagus lid dating to 575 B.C. and purchased by William Randolph Hearst in 1900; a 12-ton Ptolemaic gateway reassembled for the first time; and a limestone statuette of a king still sporting his blue and gold gilding.

In addition to the beauty of the objects, with their sophisticated designs executed by hands wielding iron tools, Thomas says museum-goers are attracted, perhaps astounded, by their sheer age.

"It's a link for us to that removed time," she says. "When you look and see how that [statuette of a king] was made in the 1330s [B.C.], and start adding that up to how far away it is from 1995, it catches people off guard."

The LACMA show contains items spanning 4 1/2 millennia, from 4000 B.C., to the Roman occupation of Egypt.

The links to the past were uncovered by Americans such as James Henry Breasted, credited with introducing Egyptology to the U.S. university system, and George Andrew Reisner, who found a carved slab of limestone from 2551 B.C., detailing how a royal acquaintance would be sent off into the next world.

In one of the many dramatically lit rooms of the exhibit, museum-goers can discover a clay incense holder the size of a soup bowl, dating back to 3000 B.C., and bearing what may be the earliest known depiction of royalty in the Nile Valley.

50,000 eyes will look at your ad if placed in the

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS.

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.

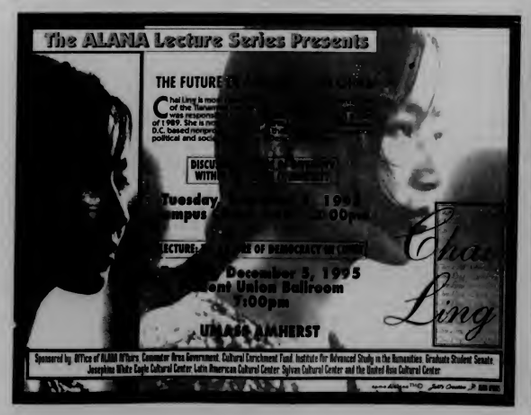
Ask for our specials.



The ALANA Lecture Series Presents
THE FUTURE
Tuesday
December 5, 1995
7:00pm
UMASS AMHERST
Sponsored by Office of ALANA Affairs, Commuter Area Government, Cultural Enrichment Fund, Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities, Graduate Student Senate
Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center, Latin American Cultural Center, Sylvan Cultural Center and the United Asia Cultural Center

Campus Activities Office Sponsors It's First Annual Day Trip To New York On December 16th

DETAILS:

• Leave UMass at 7:00am - Arrive at Penn Station at 11:00am
• Leaving N.Y.C. at 9:00pm (tentatively) - Arrive at UMass 12:00pm
• $20.00 Per Person

If there are any questions or concerns, please contact the Campus Activities Office at 545-3600.

~ MOVIE ~

Burden plot boring, cliché

John Travolta can't top Pulp Fiction role with new movie

By Justin Daniel Smith
Collegian Correspondent

WHITE MAN'S BURDEN
Directed by Desmond Nakano with John Travolta, Harry Belafonte
Playing at Hampshire Six

John Travolta has turned from Hollywood's premiere has– been to Hollywood's premiere star over the past 12 months. His asking price for his next feature is an astounding 21 million dollars (the highest in all of Hollywood). The reason — Pulp Fiction.

In White Man's Burden, a film which creates a literal role reversal of the relationship of whites and blacks in America, Travolta once again teams with Pulp producer, Lawrence Bender. Bender persuaded Travolta into taking the role before the commercial onslaught of Pulp Fiction. Without its success and the stepladder it created (that led him to such pivotal roles in Get Shorty and the upcoming Broken Arrow), then White Man's Burden probably would have gone straight to video.

Travolta plays Lewis Pinnock, a blue–collar worker who loses his job when he is accused of being a peeping Tom. Pinnock's life crumbles thereafter — his truck breaks down, he gets beaten Rodney King style by angered police officers, and he is evicted from his house. His two children and his wife (played by Kelly Lynch) move into his mother–in– law's, where he is not wanted.

The down–and–out Pinnock is pushed to his breaking point. He demands retribution from his racist former boss, Thaddeus Thomas (played by former calypso icon, Harry Belafonte), so he kidnaps him.

To no surprise that the two become friends. White Man's Burden is brimming with these clichés, the only difference is that things are reversed. Instead 40–ounce–drinking, rap– listening hoodlums are replaced by head–shaven, facially pierced punks. African American derogatories are replaced with things such as "ghosts" and so on.

The film is far too literal for it's own good. Whereas a abstract movie like Alien Nation examines races in a subtle manner, it still is able to convey its message. Debut writer/director Desmond Nakano does everything short of smacking you over the head with his message of equality.

Travolta is better than White Man's Burden allows him to be. With Pulp Fiction and Get Shorty he was able to shine as a smooth character — a slick–dressed, cool tempered criminal that garnered him a Oscar nomination. His short cropped red coif and over–played redneck accent recall the Look Who's Talking Travolta of the '80s. In White Man's Burden he proves he might not be worth the 21 million dollar pricetag. C–

Fitness hostess tells it like it is from top

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. — If you're seeking dispensation for holiday gluttony, don't bother appealing to Kim Alexis.

The former model, host of the syndicated fitness show "Your Mind & Body," is as likely to grant forgiveness as she is to make a pick from the dessert side of the menu.

"I just have to say ... I'm not ordering it ... but chocolate bourbon pecan cake with chocolate sauce?" a wide-eyed Alexis murmurs, scanning a restaurant's offerings. "Who would do that?"

Not Alexis, fat-free perfection in a yellow linen pantsuit. Not the equally trim husband by her side, former hockey pro Ron Duguay.

And certainly not her lunch companions, shamed into abstention.

Alexis refuses to spoil her fish-and-salad lunch with a sugar chaser. And she accepts no excuses from those who enter a plea of insufficient time or energy to eat right and exercise.

"Then live with your body," Alexis says. "That's the way it is. If you want to change, then drop something or prioritize ... you don't need to go with your first fix for a second cup of coffee. That's not healthy. Go work out."

She's a working mother. Son Noah was born to her and Duguay in 1994. They each have two children from previous marriages. She doesn't cut anybody slack. Not even her for her own mom, Barb Alexis.

"My mother started doing a bit of modeling with me 10 years ago. Now she's a little bit heavier and talking about plus-size modeling," Alexis said. "I said, 'You're copping out. You used to be thinner than I was and now you're copping out.' "Americans, she says, 'are thinking with their tongue."

The 5-foot-10 Alexis, glowing with blondness and vigor, is certainly a great example of the virtue of living right. In fact, her beauty nearly kept her from getting the "Mind & Body" hosting job.

"The first thing (test audiences) said was they did not want a supermodel, that they couldn't relate to them," said Alexis, recounting what she was told by the show's producers.

But after considering dozens of other candidates, Alexis emerged as the winner for the series based on Health magazine.

She had the broadcast experience needed, covering fashion for "Good Morning America," and hosting the cable-TV programs "Healthy Kids" and "Ticket to Adventure with Kim Alexis."

And Alexis had the right image, looks notwithstanding.

"It came back to me because I was a model, but I was beyond that. I'd done many other things, including gaining quite a bit of weight with babies, coming back and running marathons," she said. "I'm perceived more as a real person who's hands-on approachable.

"Your Mind & Body" wears that same air of practicality. It includes easily swallowed, bite-sized bits on self-improvement for women, ranging from stress-busters to the joys of at-home facials and mud baths.

The program avoids the lavish indulgences, like expensive spas, that send a "tough luck if you can't afford it" message, Alexis says.

For the body, there are exercise tips on yoga, running and 10-minute muscle-firming routines presented by fitness expert Kathy Kaehler. Sports adventures include rock climbing, kayaking and fly fishing.

Nutritionist Carrie Latt Wiatt offers ways to eat healthfully, with meal make-overs and suggestions on how to resist cravings and learn portion control.

For the mind, Alexis looks at ways to deal with stress, work, family and love, with advice from psychologist Ellen McGrath.

"It's real issues that real women have," the ex-model says. Segments were filmed on location in Mexico, Hawaii, Arizona and San Francisco.

"We try to make the sports fun," she says. "We're encouraging women to have more information about what the sport is so they might try it."

Her own regimen includes two-hour workouts three times a week with a women's "survival group" in her suburban community in Orange County, south of Los Angeles. She's a dedicated runner — and diet policeman, as well.

"It's the way I live my life," she says. "I'm into nutrition and I try to preach it. I want to be an inspiration to other women."

■ NHL

continued from page 10

Montreal take that risk? Rotating Jablonski and Labrecque would only rekindle last season's ruin. So, it might be Colorado, which could ante up either Stephane Fiset or Jocelyn Thibault, both Quebecois, plus a talented package of skaters (the Avalanche are steeped more in forwards that defensemen).

The depressing part of this upcoming trade is its ugly similarity with exchanges made in the other major pro sports leagues. Then again, that's what NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman wants — to make this the NFL or NBA on ice. Sure, it's not common for players to demand trades, but in those circles it's routine for superstars to dismiss team allegiance and follow the money. If ever a player should finish his career with the team he began it with, it is Roy. His dispatch is sure to be compared with that of Bobby Orr, whose exile to Chicago for his last year of skating in pain brought further pain to Bruins' fans.

It seems quite probable there's more to Roy's desire to bolt than one night's embarrassment, though why insist there isn't? If Corey and General Manager Rejean Houle want to be sure they sell out the new building opening night, perhaps they'll find out for sure.

• Trivia: name the only player from a 1994–95 Hockey East roster currently with an NHL club. (Answer later.)

We pose this one because another HEA blueliner (hint), Boston University junior Jon Coleman, should get a serious opportunity with Detroit (which drafted him in the second round) when he leaves school. At 6–foot–3–inches and almost 200 pounds, he has the size, and in this past weekend's two– game set with UMass, especially the Friday game on the Mullins Center pond, he came across as a poor man's Orr with his puck handling prowess and offensive inclination.

• Dwayne Norris, an AHL first–team All–Star winger last season and brother of UMass center Warren, has been recalled to his second NHL team, the Mighty Ducks of Anaheim. Norris was playing with the expansion Baltimore Bandits of the AHL after starring last season with the Cornwall Aces and having a cup of coffee with their former parents, the Quebec Nordiques.

Baltimore, incidentally, may recall defenseman Brian Corcoran (UMass '95) from Raleigh of the ECHL somewhere down the line.

•Trivia Answer: Mark Cornforth, a former standout at Merrimack College, is a rookie with the Boston Bruins.

Ted Kottler is a Collegian Columnist.

■ swim

continued from page 10

both the three and one–meter diving events. In doing so, Rodriguez qualified for the NCAAs for her zone in the one– meter event — the first time a diver has qualified since Newcomb became coach.

"The divers dove well this weekend," Newcomb said. "They put UMass diving back on the map, and they deserve a huge pat on the back."

On Sunday, sophomore Kerrin McCarthy placed second in the 200–yard backstroke with a time of 2:08.84. Third place finishers for the Minutewomen included freshman Julie Alexander (200–yard breast stroke), sophomore Irina Kossenko (200–yard butterfly) and Barbara Hickey (1,650– yard freestyle).

At the end of the first day, UMass held a strong second place with over a 100–point lead on BC. But by the end of the second day, BC had closed that gap to less than 10 points.

"That kind of scared me when they came within that close after we had that big of a lead," Newcomb said. "But this group will not give up to anybody. They came to swim on the third day. They are so positive and so sure of themselves."

BC finished with 1168.5 points in third place, Providence obtained fourth with a total of 1019.5, and Northeastern was fifth out of the 10 teams, in what looked like the best of the worst, with 662.5 points.

The Minutewomen will take the rest of the year to continue to train, as they will return to action at the start of the new year (Jan. 2) when they will compete in the Lake Worth Invitational in Florida.

■ women's track

continued from page10

Anya Forrest had an outstanding performance in the 55m– hurdles, clocking an 8.0 to finish first. Alyssa Angers took third for the Minutewomen in the event, posting a time of 8.7.

"Our sprint group did well. They had some tough races because NU is such a strong sprinting team," LaFreniere said. "Anya had an outstanding performance, an absolutely great run. And Bell and Bryan ran strong for us."

The UMass relays did not fare as well as expected, or as hoped, with UMass taking third in both the 4x400m and the 4x800m.

Northeastern had a marked advantage in the field events, but UMass was able to produce several scoring opportunities.

UMass' star for the day was Christie Martin, who took second in the 20–pound weight throw and fourth in the shot put. Martin's 15-26 meter throw (50–feet, 3/4–inch) set a new school record and was a New England, ECAC, and NCAA Provisional qualifier. Her 12.66–meter (41–feet, 6 1/2–inch) throw in the shot put was one of her best career throws.

"Christie was outstanding," LaFreniere said. "She was great. To be a NCAA provisional qualifier this early in the season is outstanding."

Bryan and Shelanda Irish both scored in the long jump for Massachusetts. Bryan took first (19–feet, 1 1/4–inch) and Irish third (17–feet, 9 1/2–inch).

Nicole Way and Angers broke into the scoring for UMass in the triple jump, taking second and third, respectively.

"Overall, we had a pretty good meet," LaFreniere said. "There were some very good races and we ran well. It was the first meet of the season and we know now what we have to work on. We were competitive and it looks to be a good season for us."

Massachusetts had four New England Championship qualifiers and three ECAC qualifiers. The Minutewomen compete again Jan. 13 at Dartmouth.

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.

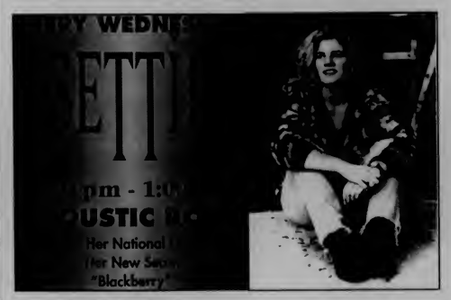
Ask for our specials.

El Ché says:

"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"

Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS



fun•food•spirits THE PUB

1/2 Price Appetizers and Nachos 9:30 - 10:30

15 east pleasant street • amherst

DICK VITALE

WILL BE

HOLDING COURT

At the UNIVERSITY STORE

CONCOURSE LEVEL - CAMPUS CENTER

Wednesday - Dec. 6 - 11:30am to 1:30pm

Dick Vitale Will Be Signing

Copies of his New Book

HOLDING COURT

REFLECTIONS ON THE GAME I LOVE

WRITTEN WITH DICK WEISS

~ SPORTS ~

Volleyball ends year with four losses at NIVT

EMILY REILY / COLLEGIAN

Dionne Nash and the Minutewomen volleyball team ended its season at the NIVT winning just one game in four matches.

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

So much for ending the season on positive note. In the four matches the Massachusetts volleyball team played this past weekend in the National Invitational Volleyball Championship in Kansas City, MI, the squad managed to win only one game.

Other teams in the Minutewomen's pool included Arkansas, Michigan, Butler and San Diego, and UMass lost to all of them in that order.

"We got beat by some good teams," UMass coach Bonnie Kenny said. "But we learned a lot over the weekend. I think we got a lot better. But we have a long way to go."

Arkansas 3, UMass 1

UMass jumped out to a 1–0 lead against Arkansas, after winning the first game, 15–7. By the looks of things, no one would have guessed that would turn out to be the team's only win of the tournament. The Minutewomen went on to drop the next three, 15–8, 15–11, 18–16.

The Razorback were led by Krystal Osborne, who managed 15 kills and 22 digs. The Minutewomen received 20 kills and 11 digs from Lesley Nolan; and 14 kills and 19 digs from Rachel Sky. Giza Rivera led the team with 24 kills, but managed only a .219 hitting percentage.

One interesting note is while UMass hit only .224 as a team, Arkansas' percentage was a mere .209.

"I feel we could have beaten Arkansas," Kenny said. "But I think that at this point in time they have a better team than us."

Michigan 3, UMass 0

For the second time this season the Minutewomen fell to the Lady Wolverines, as Michigan was also victorious in the UMass Invitational earlier this season. Michigan controlled the entire match, winning 15–7, 15–4, 15–13.

UMass lost not only the match, but also Sky for the rest of the tournament. The senior went down with an ankle injury in the second game and wasn't able to return.

Dionne Nash (.267) and Nolan (eight digs) each led the team with 12 kills apiece, while Leigh Readey hit .600 with 10 attempts and no hitting errors. Freshman setter Katie Pearce gave another solid performance totaling 38 assists.

"[Katie] got some good experience playing in the postseason," Kenny said, "as did our whole team. Anytime you play in the postseason it's a positive.

"But losing Rachel really hurt us. She's one of our team leaders. Playing without her was tough."

Butler 3, UMass 0

The Minutewomen fell to a strong Butler team, which lost to San Diego in five games in the pool's final match. Once again, UMass hit the ball poorly, averaging .184 as a team, while Butler averaged .273.

Rivera had 15 kills and 14 digs, both team–highs. Nash (11 kills, 10 digs) and Nolan (13 kills, 11 digs) also contributed.

"Dionne had a great tournament," Kenny said of the junior outside hitter.

San Diego 3, UMass 0

The final score in this one was 15–12, 15–13, 15–9. Rivera had 22 kills to go along with her 11 digs. Nolan registered 15 kills and 13 digs, Nash totalled 15 kills and Pearce had a whopping 54 assists.

Robinson leaves Baltimore's front office

By Michael Schneider
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Frank Robinson, one of the greatest Baltimore Orioles players, is leaving the team's front office and will be looking for work with another organization.

Under the new leadership of general manager Pat Gillick and manager Davey Johnson, the Orioles on Monday chose not to keep Robinson as assistant general manager. His contract expires Dec. 31.

Robinson, 60, has spent 19 years in the organization as a player, manager and executive.

Leaving the club "doesn't feel good," said Robinson, who wanted to end his baseball career with the Orioles.

"I was hoping that would take place, but I guess it's not to be," he said.

He said he has no plans to retire and interviewed last month for the San Diego Padres general manager position before the job was given to Kevin Towers. He said no other clubs have asked permission to talk to him.

"I'm going to take some time to reflect on what direction I want to go in and hopefully answer some inquiries," Robinson said by telephone. In the meantime, he planned to spend his time fishing and watching movies.

The decision to release Robinson was made a week after Gillick was hired to run the front office and more than a month after Johnson was named manager.

"In fairness to Frank and his years of service to the Orioles organization, we wanted to be up front and honest with him," Gillick said. "As we begin to lay out the future of the organization, we did not see a meaningful role for Frank in the Orioles baseball operation."

When asked if he thought he had been treated fairly by the Orioles, Robinson said "I don't really want to get into that at this time."

Robinson was an outfielder for the Orioles from 1966 to 1971. He coached the Rochester Red Wings, the club's Triple A team, in 1978 and became an Orioles coach in 1979. He was a coach in 1980 and from 1985 to 1987.

In 1987, he became special assistant to then-Orioles president Edward Bennett Williams and became the Orioles manager in 1988. He was succeeded by Johnny Oates in 1991 and moved into the front office.

Before joining the Orioles, Robinson played for the Cincinnati Reds from 1956-1965.

Robinson was told of the decision at a meeting Monday at the Orioles offices. Johnson and owner Peter Angelos were out of town and weren't present.

Robinson had offered his resignation to Angelos after the Oct. 20 firing of former manager Phil Regan and the resignation of former general manager Roland Hemond. Robinson offered to resign again last week following Gillick's hiring.

Batiste taken first

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kim Batiste, who won a 1993 NL playoffs game for Philadelphia, was selected Monday by the San Francisco Giants in the annual major league draft.

Batiste, a 27-year-old infielder, was taken by the Giants on the eighth pick. He hit .282 for Philadelphia in 1993 with five homers and 29 RBIs in 156 at-bats, but slumped to .234 in 1994 with one homer and 13 RBIs in 209 at-bats.

He began 1995 at Philadelphia's Triple-A farm team and hit .230 in 32 games with Scranton/Wilkes-Barre, then was released May 15. He signed with the Baltimore Orioles' organization on June 2, hit .358 at Double-A Bowie and then hit .281 at Triple-A Rochester. Batiste helped the Phillies to the NL pennant two years ago with a game-winning single off Atlanta's Greg McMichael in a playoffs game.

Seventeen players were selected in the draft. Teams must pay $50,000 for each player chosen.

Players taken in the draft — those left off 40-man rosters after several years in the minors — must be kept on the major league roster for the entire 1996 season. If their new teams want to send them to the minors, they must first be offered to their old teams for $25,000.

Minnesota used the first pick in the draft to take right-hander Joe Jacobson from the Los Angeles Dodgers' organization.

The major league draft used to be the start of the winter meetings. Major league general managers, at the order of acting commissioner Bud Selig, are staying away from the winter meetings for the third straight year. Instead, they will attend the owners' meetings in Los Angeles from Jan. 16-18.

Pats begin to look ahead; Biggio could sign next

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

FOXBORO — Instability. Flux. Annual roster upheavals. Ricky Reynolds thought he was leaving it all behind when he came to New England from Tampa Bay.

With three games left in the season, though, the Patriots cornerback is already worrying about what coach Bill Parcells has in mind for the team when this disappointing season is over.

"He doesn't want to clean house, but he will if he has to," Reynolds said Monday, a day after a 31-17 loss to New Orleans convinced the Patriots (5-8) they won't make the playoffs. "I don't think it was a threat. I played with so many guys (with the Buccaneers). It's tough. I don't know what's going to happen later on, after the season's over."

Parcells said Monday it was too soon to talk about how he will change the team in the off-season, or even what changes he might make for next week.

Of course that's what he told reporters two weeks ago, after he had just cut cornerback Maurice Hurst. It turns out, Hurst wasn't the problem. He wasn't even the right scapegoat, because after cutting him Parcells moved Ty Law into the lineup, Law was burned on two long plays that led to touchdowns Sunday.

Linebacker Willie McGinest also blew his coverage on two Saints TDs. One of them was specifically rehearsed in practice, Parcells said.

"I'm not blaming it on one player, but it's frustrating. It shows you didn't go over it enough, I guess," the coach said. "If they catch you by surprise, then you look at yourself and say the player didn't have an opportunity to perform."

Parcells said human nature tempts him to plan for the future, but it's an impulse he's fighting for now. The most he will concede at this point is that he might promote someone from the practice squad and use the last three games as an audition.

For the rest of the players, the last three games provide plenty of motivation.

"I don't want to be looked at as part of the problem," linebacker Vincent Brown said. "I think there will be changes. If we don't get something done, a lot of changes will be made."

Even with seven losses, the Patriots would have needed a lot of luck to make the playoffs. With a 5-8 record, they now accept they won't be going this season.

But that doesn't mean the games are meaningless.

"It's your job," running back Dave Meggett said. "Go tell your wife there's no more money. You get motivated real fast."

Reynolds had another reason.

"Coaches will be evaluating you. Other teams will be evaluating you," he said. "Because not everybody on this team will be here next year.

That's a far cry from the mood at the beginning of the year, when the Patriots were still riding a high from the seven-game winning streak that finished the last season.

"(It's like) night and day," Reynolds said. "It was unbelievable last year to win all those games. This year we had all those high expectations. It's been tough."

"You figure you're going to win coming into the season," he said. "But it hasn't turned out that way."

After McGriff, Biggio could be next

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that Fred McGriff has re-signed with Atlanta, the agent for Craig Biggio and Mark Grace expects the pace of his negotiations to quicken.

"We're going through the process, talking to a lot of people today, seeing if we can narrow it down," Barry Axelrod said Monday.

The New York Mets have expressed interest in Biggio, as have Colorado and San Diego. The St. Louis Cardinals are said to have made a multi-year offer. Cardinals general manager Walt Jocketty and manager Tony La Russa met with Biggio last week.

"It's important for him to go to a place where the team is going to be competitive," Jocketty was quoted as by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. "I think he would enjoy playing here. He's a guy who would be very important to our program. Now, we'll just see what happens."

Grace may want to return to the Chicago Cubs, but Yankees general manager Bob Watson has said he may make an offer. Watson has denied rumors that he has agreed to acquire first baseman Tino Martinez from the Seattle Mariners. Seattle general manager Woody Woodward said he broke off talks Sunday after five days of discussions.

The status of the Yankees' talks with third baseman Wade Boggs also is unclear. Boggs is expected to re-sign, but Watson on Sunday night denied reports that a deal had been completed.

McGriff, another first baseman who Watson expressed interest in, agreed Saturday to return to the Atlanta Braves for $20.5 million over four years. He gets a $1 million signing bonus, $4.5 million in 1996 and $5 million in each of the following three seasons. He can earn an additional $250,000 bonus each year if he makes 550 plate appearances.

Meanwhile, union head Donald Fehr said the players' association may need additional time before it is ready to respond to the new proposal made by owners.

Players discussed the offer last week during their annual board meeting in Aventura, Fla.

"The more we look at it, the clearer it is that it will take some substantial evaluation," Fehr said.

Fehr is unsure whether the union will have a response for owners before the holiday break.

Muhammad Ali says:

"WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS"

Contact Hernán • 113 Campus Center • 545-1851

BUCCI

HAIRCUTS always $10.

25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733

45 main st. northampton 586-0155

Voted BEST in the Valley

FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS

PETE'S

ROUTE 9 HADLEY, MA YEAR 'ROUND

GET MORE FOR YOUR MONEY WITH METPAY. WE'VE GOT SOME OF THE BEST RATES IN TOWN.

Getting more value from your auto insurance is easy for University of Massachusetts employees. With METPAY, you can take advantage of:

- A 5% group discount off Massachusetts state-mandated auto rates.
- The convenience of payroll deduction with no down payment, interest or service charges. This option may not be available to non-benefit-eligible employees.
- Person-to-person contact with full-time, on-site METPAY Account Consultants.
- Free Massachusetts registry service to verify your auto registration renewals or process registration forms for newly purchased cars.

Isn't it time you got more for your money? Call METPAY at 5-9465 (Amherst Campus) or visit Debbie Bowker, located at Lot # 41 trailer next to the Physical Plant. Free parking is available.

METPAY is underwritten by Metropolitan Property and Casualty Insurance Company and Affiliates (Met P&C®), Warwick, RI

Met P&C

Metropolitan Property and Casualty Insurance Company and Affiliates, Warwick, RI

PEANUTS © United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

SUMMER 1996

RESEARCH EXPERIENCES FOR UNDERGRADUATES

MIT HAYSTACK OBSERVATORY

Undergraduate science, mathematics and engineering students are invited to apply for summer research opportunities at the MIT Haystack Observatory in Westford, MA. Research projects include radio astronomical studies, atmospheric physics, instrumentation, and hardware and software development for data acquisition systems and radar sounding systems. The positions are nominally three months in duration, August and carry a stipend of $1,900-$2,500/month depending on academic level and experience. Women, minorities, and students with disabilities are encouraged to apply.

For further information and application materials write to:

Director/REU Program
MIT Haystack Observatory
Off Route 40
Westford, MA 01886-1299

Tel: (508) 692-4764
Fax: (617) 981-0590
email: lhp@newton.haystack.edu

Application deadline is 1 February 1996.

TRAVEL SMART! FROM NEW YORK

One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON	$140 $280
PARIS	$175 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA	$220 $439
TOKYO	$859

Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Earlipseaks Available. Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-Immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Auto Glass Center — American & Foreign

- Same Day Service
- Billed Directly To Insurance Company
- Windshields Replaced

North Amherst Motors CARSTAR

A CARSTAR Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT

EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS

586-6843

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD
Kai Chi delivering Sunday through Thursday 12-11pm and Friday and Saturday to 3am 546-2774

Assoc Pre vet Club Don't miss the holiday party on Tues 12/5/95 Games, munchies & your t shirts will be there! Questions? 549-5911 546-4177

Attn: All University Women Chi Omega invites you to a pre rush holiday party on Dec 7 from 7-9 pm Call Becky at 549-7251 for more info

Adult children of the mentally ill UMass researcher conducting study about the experiences of people who grew up with a mentally ill parent seeks volunteers. Call 413-585-8678 Participants will be compensated

University Productions & Concerts! We need you! Come see what concert production is all about at our general committee meeting in the campus center tonight at 6:00pm in room Come Get Involved!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment for rent starting Jan 1st 2 bathrooms, on bus line near school Contact Nagib 549-8415

Talks over lease 2br apt on bus route Call Meagan 665-4304

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Olds Ciera Runs good new parts $1000 obo Heather 253-5646

91 Hyundai Excel 5 spd very well maintained lots of new parts 85 000 miles $1300 Call 256-6680

EMPLOYMENT

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $275 $375/week working to save the environment with Massprig Casual, fun atmosphere Call 1am at 256-6434

Hey DJ s! National spring break tour operator seeks experienced disk jockeys m c s to host spring break parties and activities in Cancun s Mazatlan s, and Nassau s hottest clubs for the 1996 season Room trans and salary pay Please fax resume to (617) 292-9235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel 76 Summer St Boston MA 02110 Attn Product Development

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics Absolutely no selling involved Computer/typing skills required Flexible hours Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm Must work a minimum of 20 hrs per week Start at $5 25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7 00/hr We re in the Mt Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line Call between 3pm-5pm Mon-Fri (413) 586 8535 ABT Associates tele phone research center Mt Farms Mall, Rte 9 Hadley MA 01035 An equal opportunity employer

Spring Break Dr Site Reps National spring beach tour operator seeks responsible people to work in Cancun Mazatlan Nassau and Florida during the 1996 season Room trans salary and training provided Perfect for employment afterwards Please fax resume to (617) 292-9235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel 76 Summer St Boston MA 02110 Attn Product Development

Travel Abroad and Work Make up to $25-$45/hr teaching basic conversational English in Japan Taiwan or S Korea No teaching background or Asian language required For information call (206) 632 1146 ext J50012

We want you Unique liquor related product Retails for $200 Inventory required $7500 Follow our plan and it only 7 sales per day in each location your profit $32 400 first year! 941-766 9001

WMUA is looking for a sports director and women s affairs director For more information call WMUA at 545-2876

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn big money Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Alesis HR-16 Drum machine $700 Great condition Chris 256-1937

CD Rom games for Mac 7th guest, myst gadget, fatt throttle original packaging 584-0942

Classic Video Game systems for buy/sell/trade Email ezo@hebuta ori ottass.edu or call 256-1985

Double bed practically brand new mattress &bagging frame $225 Call Elaine 549-9911

For sale black leather biker jacket never worn mint condition $85 Call 546-8892

Furniture 7 futons bed mattress off sale three months old Call Tobi 256-6606

IBM pc 8x1 computers both come with mon Make great xw cheap! Call 6 0940

Kastle speed machine skis 205cm only skied two days like new 325 00 or best offer Call Ray at 6-0788

Kogorator $200 2 year old iguana 4 x 2 tanks all supplies incl $200 specialized handrock 18" mountain bike $175 or bo 549 9166 Larry or Denise

Large Dorm sized fridge $100 Excellent condition Chris 256-1937

Plush Tickets!! Great seats, call Geoff @ 253-9609

Pioneer VSX 453 dolby surround receiver 100 watts/channel remote 8 month old $188 562 9689

Top of the line Vinki skis for sale at an unbeatable price- boots for sale bo Lori at 253-1862

UMass vs Maryland 2 tickets for basketball tourney in Maryland 4 games !!! interested call Anthony @ 549-7324

286/386 Computer System $105/$205 Keyboard, CPU, monitor Call Steve (413) 566-3324

FOUND

Cross Pen with inscription near bus stop by the grad tower on 11/28 If yours please call to identify Debby 549-4761

Found a pair of glasses in the parking lot of fraternity/sorority park on Nov 24th Please contact the University Career Center info desk at 545-2225

Found near LGRC A gold charm give description Call 545-6025

Found passport in Machmer hall call the Anthropology dept 215 Machmer Call 545-2221

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons Enjoy your semester learning guitar with a patient and support ive teacher Call Peter 253-5763

LOST

Lost a yellow spiral bound notebook in Tobin 304 Contact Karen 545-5983

MISCELLANEOUS

Reward $500 CASH!!! for any info regarding the robbery of 45 Southpoint Dr over Thanksgiving leading to the arrest those involved All names anonymous Please call Cory at 253-1540

MUSICIANS

Bootleggers/Deadheads want to sell your recording equipment? Call RT 549-5816

PERSONALS

Andrea It s been a long 3 years Maybe one of these days I ll call you Rosco

Congratulations new sisters of AXO Amie Heather Jodie Corriney Stacey and Shannon

Hey Mr Gillis Youve made me the happiest girl in the world I love you always Love Melon

Hey There Jerkeys-You guys rock my world Candice hope you feel better and Tove you re always styling love you two love shnits

HI SUNSHINE

I'll love you for always I'll like you forever as long as I live my baby you'll be Happy Anniversary my lover honey-bunny Black bacca tonight?

Slickstars- I missed you guys while I was in Maryland but I m sure we ll make up for it this weekend I'll be off the drugs and back on the bud Rock on girls!

Love ya, Nitz

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst Jasper 546-2942

Single female seeks room for rent immediately Must be on bus line Call Marie @ 549-5049

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for upbeat female to share 2 bedroom apt Available Jan 1 Avg 275/mo negotiable Call 549-4935

One bedroom in a five bedroom house Smoking OK $270 per month 256-6295

Room for rent: Private home quiet neighborhood kosher/vegetarian kitchen Laundry, parking furnished $325 incl Jan 30 549-4853

Room for rent in townehouses $275/mo Call Jamie 549-5787

Room at Cliffside Avail Jan 1 For spring sem $315/mo wc all util Grad stud preferred 665-7810 Chris

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted to share room in Crosthewn Apt Begins 1/96 $190 per month call Nicole 549-1291

Fully furnished one bed in two bed apt $250/mo quiet Female only Graduate preferred 256-1285 Hyon

Large Bedroom in Bertchertown apt for 1/2 people Now, quiet, on bus route Available wherever Scott 253-1768

Person wanted to share room in great house in great location Call 549-4827 ASAP!

Rent 1 bedroom in 4 bedroom apt on bus route Very nice 270/month all incl Call 253-3736 Now!

Roommate wanted to share a convenient located 11/2 mile to UMass and center of Amherst; beautiful 3 bedroom 2 1/2 bath condo at Amity Place Laundry, fireplace central air, patio, full kitchen, and great sunset views Must be responsible cat-loving non-smoker $475 00/month plus utilities Available January 1, 1996 Contact Gary at 549-3866

Roommate wanted non smoker to share room by Spring semester $185 per month On bus route Start Jan 1st Call

SERVICES

Foreign Students DV-1 greencard processed 1-800-660-7167

Free financial aid! Over 6 billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income Let us help Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext F50012

RESUME
Inexpensive professional resume services Packages $15 $30 Only at Campus Design and Copy The affordable alternative Upstairs in the Student Union 545-2271

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing Silvercape Designs 264 N Pleasant St Amherst 253-3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 549-1906

One Room Available in three bedroom apt for spring semester in Amherst Ctr 253-4985

TRAVEL

JAMAICA
Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

Cancun Bahamas Book now and receive all meals and unlimited drinks all week long! *Free!*Free!Free As low as $349 00/100% guarantee prices you organize your friends and now you go free it s that easy call now 1-800 464-7816 code S U R F

Winter Break Special Killington week $269 Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Wanted UVC-TV 19's graphics department is looking for Amiga software that can generate text and continuous loop Contact Dan at 545-1336

Models Wanted National published sports and actions photos seeks athletes/models for photo shoot will photo you and your sport 413 584 8545

TO SUBLET

Two bedroom apt for spring semester in Amherst Ctr 253-4985

WANTED TO RENT

Two females looking for a place to stay over wintersession Please contact Tara at 549-6170 or Stacey at 549-7105 if you are interested

SNOW HAPPENS

We just work here. Collegian Graphics

COLLEGIAN NEWS Because it happens everyday.

HOROSCOPE

BY JEANE DIXON

Aries (March 21-April 19): Go ahead and accept a last- minute invitation. Other people benefit from your interest and financial help. You look forward to greater tranquility at home.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Focus your attention on routine tasks and paperwork. Adopt streamlined methods. New alliances and partnerships enjoy highly favorable influences. Forge ahead.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Work at top speed and you will make greater progress. What you say and do today will be remembered for a long time. Order new business cards or stationary. You need to write more letters.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Stay alert. A special message or change in travel plans deserves a prompt response. Pay closer attention to details to keep a project from spinning out of control. Avoid buying things you cannot afford.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Refuse to let news from afar upset your plans. Friends and family members are highly supportive. New relationships are forming. Make certain you know what you want from an alliance before making a commitment.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Paint a glowing picture of the future and people will listen to you with rapt attention. Discuss your plans with your mate or best friend. Get in some social fun tonight. Call old pals.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Launch a personal project that will take time to complete. Do not be drawn in by the pie- in-the-sky proposals of friends. The arts beckon this evening. Attend a play or concert.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have high ideals and can plan an influential role in the science or art world. Become the peacemaker when family squabbles arise. Put the lid on emotional scenes.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You need to arrive at a better understanding with your co-workers. Be on your best behavior and display a "can-do" attitude. A financial proposition may be confusing, avoid taking unnecessary risks.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A good day for gathering your thoughts and deciding on a better course of action. You meet a challenge successfully. A newspaper or magazine subscription makes a good gift for someone interested in current affairs.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Refuse to be drawn into a whirlpool of rumors. A surprising announcements may be in the works. Keep your own counsel. Travel could be complicated. Guard against being absent-minded. Follow directions to the letter.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone's recollection of an event may not dovetail with yours. Review a situation with an open mind. Study your loved ones' reactions and needs. Build up good will through diligent effort and considerate gestures.

Monday Ticker

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Market closes as of 4 p.m. December 4

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	5,139.52	+52.39
NYSE Index:	327.60	+3.17
Nasdaq Composite Index	1069.79	+14.48
AMSE Index	538.33	+1.69

Market Reports

Compiled by Matthew Wurtzel

NEW YORK (AP) — American manufacturing slowed for a fourth straight month in November in its worst performance since June, according to a survey of manufacturers.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said Friday that U.S. factory output declined at a slightly faster rate than in October. Economists said the report suggested manufacturing remains sluggish.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Decrying "billion dollar ripoffs," Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt reluctantly turned over to a private company an estimated $2.9 billion worth of mining rights for $1,745.

The sale was required by a mining law enacted 123 years ago to promote development of the West.

"This process has gone from distasteful to obscene," Babbitt declared Friday at a news conference where he dramatized his outrage by rolling onto the stage a large Christmas-wrapped box with "$2.9 billion" stamped on the side.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

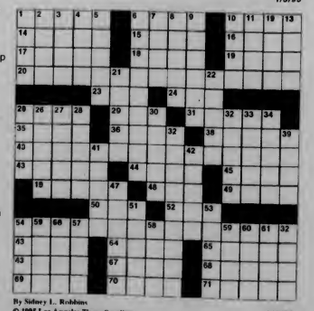
ACROSS
1 Defeats
6 Bikini tops
10 Exchange
14 One and all
15 Corrode
16 Josip Broz
17 Carly or Paul
18 "— bird..."
19 Insects
20 Verbal misstep
23 Police abbr.
24 Total
25 Swimmer's lengths
29 News network
31 Sates, another way
35 I smell —
36 Dye plant
38 Rasp
40 Describing Kate Moss or Twiggy?
43 Swiss city
44 Canary's place
45 Burden
46 Purple shade
48 Gal of song
49 Musical component
50 San Francisco hill
52 Deer
54 Sent packing
63 Ready for sleep
64 Landed
65 Boot country
66 Squeal
67 Snack
68 Not even once
69 Folksinger Seeger
70 Took a dip
71 Student's concern

DOWN
1 Porgy's woman
2 Immorality
3 Rig
4 Too much, for Pierre
5 Church assemblage
6 Her — Majesty
7 Baseball's "Babe"
8 Silly ones
9 Condition
10 Amusing Laurel
11 Fowl part
12 Aleutian Island
13 Sit for a portrait
21 Central
22 Alpha's opposite
25 Mary's pet
26 "This was — nice clambake"
27 Zoroastrian sect
28 Superman makeup?
30 Thatching palms
32 Gaseous element
33 West Indies natives
34 Swagger
37 Math exponent
39 Otherwise
41 Point of view
42 Lawbreaker
47 George M. and family
51 Underneath
53 Making do, with "out"
54 Express astonishment
55 His Rose was Irish
56 Opening
57 Advantage
58 Leaning Tower site
59 Game or gang ender
60 Molten rock
61 "— Three Lives"
62 Bonfire of dead leaves

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

Y	E	L	P		I	M	A	G	E		A	S	P	S
E	V	I	L		N	A	V	A	L		Y	E	R	A
S	E	C	O	N	D	R	A	T	E		I	C	E	S
	R	E	P	A	I	R		E	M	P	L	O	Y	S
				S	A	Y			E	L	A	N
T	U	S	C	A	N		M	E	N	U		D	E	E
O	N	E	A	L		N	E	W	T	S		H	A	M
P	I	C	T		T	I	L	E	S		C	A	V	E
E	T	O		S	E	N	O	R		T	O	N	E	R
E	E	N		O	M	E	N		S	H	O	D	D	Y
		D	R	O	P		S	K	I
R	E	B	A	T	E	S		P	I	R	A	T	E
A	M	A	N		S	E	C	O	N	D	B	E	S	T
G	I	S	T		T	R	A	I	N		E	A	S	E
E	T	E	S		S	A	D	L	Y		T	R	O	T

1/3/95



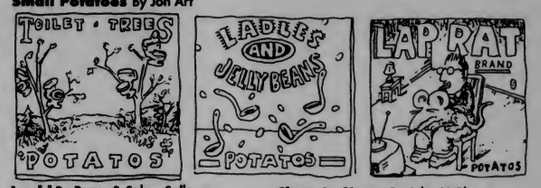
By Sidney L. Robbins
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

1/3/95

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

DEAR SANTA, HI, IT'S ME, CALVIN.
I HAVE BEEN EXTREMELY GOOD* THIS YEAR.
OBVIOUSLY, YOU'RE HOPING SANTA WON'T READ THE LONG, FINE PRINT DISCLOSURE IN THE FOOTNOTE.
I GOT THE IDEA FROM CAR ADS.

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



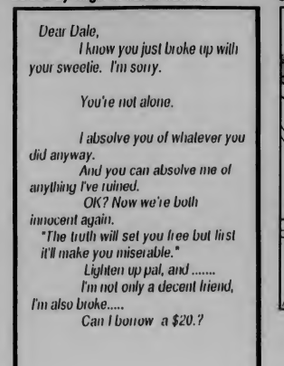
Dilbert By Scott Adams

THE PROBLEM
WE'RE SO UNDER-STAFFED THAT THE PROJECT IS SIX WEEKS BEHIND SCHEDULE.
THE ANALYSIS
I CAN'T ADD PEOPLE I CAN'T CHANGE THE DUE DATE... I CAN'T IGNORE IT
THE RESULT
HE WANTS DAILY STATUS REPORTS UNTIL THE SITUATION IMPROVES

Dilbert By Scott Adams

BAD NEWS
WE'RE NOT GIVING ANY RAISES
MAKING IT WORSE
BUT WE THINK WORK IS ITS OWN REWARD
MAKING IT MUCH WORSE
EXPECT TO GET REWARDED ABOUT TWICE AS MUCH NEXT YEAR.

Loeld By Roger & Salem Salloom



Dear Dale,
I know you just broke up with your sweetie. I'm sorry.
You're not alone.
I absolve you of whatever you did anyway.
And you can absolve me of anything I've ruined.
OK? Now we're both innocent again.
"The truth will set you free but first it'll make you miserable."
Lighten up pal, and.....
I'm not only a decent friend, I'm also broke.....
Can I borrow a $20.?

Close to Home By John McPherson

"We could save ourselves a lot of time and energy if you'll just follow me over to that toy store and get me the stuff I want right now."

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

I'LL BE MR. BAS TO THE MOB ONCE I'VE SHOT YOU!
BUT THINK OF THE DOWN SIDE...
YOU'LL HIT A NEW LOW IN MY ESTIMATION!
DON'T DO IT, ROSARIO! YOU'LL GET YOUR MONEY!
MAKING THE MONEY! THIS'LL MAKE ME A LEGEND!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

LISTEN GREG, I CAN'T DO THIS. IT'S NOT THAT I THINK IT'S UNETHICAL IT'S JUST...FOR A WHILE I STARTED GETTING ATTACHED TO THE PEOPLE I SLEPT WITH, AND NOW I'M HAVING DIFFICULTY GOING BACK.
WELL, THAT'S WHERE MAYBE A GOOD TYPE TO PRACTICE? IT'LL BE LIKE THE NFL PRE-SEASON SOON YOU'LL BE SCORING RUNS LEFT AND RIGHT...YOU KNOW...A HOT BABE LIKE YOU.
AS MUCH AS YOUR CONTEMPT MY LIBIDO TO FOOTBALL IS INTENDED AS AN ATTEMPT AT ENDEARMENT... ...I MUST SAY, THE ANALOGY FAILS A WEE-BIT SHORT.

Generation X By Chris Lehman

I LOVE BEING A "MALL SANTA."
COSTUME PARTS
IN THESE TROUBLED TIMES, IT'S GOOD TO KNOW THAT KIDS ARE STILL KIDS.
HELLO, LITTLE GIRL. WHAT DO YOU WANT FOR CHRISTMAS?
I WANT AN UZI, AN AK-47, A SHOTGUN...

Geofrey By Embryo

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Loser Crew Comics By Mike Krozy

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Vautour
Copy Editor ..... Andrew Brice
Photo Technician ..... Emily Reily
Production Supervisor ..... Marc Dionne
Production ..... Dmitry Abramson
Dan Bergeron

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Dutchess Meat Pie
Macaroni and Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Tri-Bean Casserole
Macaroni and Cheese

DINNER
Chicken Kiev
Baked Ham
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Kiev
Cauli/Eggplant Cass.

Tomorrow

LUNCH
Beef Stew
Chicken Cutlet Sand.
BASICS LUNCH
Greek Style Skillet
Chicken Cutlet Sand.

DINNER
Hot & Spicy Wings
Baked Ziti
BASICS DINNER
Korean BBQ Tofu
Baked Ziti

Thursday

LUNCH
Cheese Pizza
Reuben Sandwich
BASICS LUNCH
Cheese Pizza
Garden Vegan Burger

DINNER
Blk Pepper Roast Beef
Fried Shrimp
BASICS DINNER
Beans and Rice
Carrot/Onion Schine

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Top 10

By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Punchlines to engineering dirty jokes

10. That's not an oscilloscope but you can keep turning the knobl
9. I got your exponential growth right here in my pants!
8. Now that's a landscape I'd like to survey.
7. Resistor?!?!? I just met her!
6. A body with a set of curves a 10th order polynomial couldn't even describe.
5. A resistor, four diodes, and a proctologist.
4. I said floppy disk!
3. Windows '95
2. It took me a fortnight just to debug it.
1. Newton's cherry.

Collegian Graphics

We control what you read; And your Mind!

Quote of the Day

"That which doesn't kill me; Only makes me stronger."

–MegaDeth

Sports

Associated Press Top 25 – Men's Basketball

1 Kansas	6 Georgetown	11 Missouri	16 Georgia Tech	21 Illinois
2 Villanova	7 Memphis	12 Iowa	17 Cincinnati	22 Massachusetts
3 UMass	8 Mississippi St	13 North Carolina	18 Duke	23 Louisville
4 Arizona	9 Connecticut	14 Utah	19 Virginia Tech	24 Stanford
5 Kentucky	10 Wake Forest	15 Virginia	20 Maryland	25 Santa Clara

UMass grabs a school–best fourth place

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

The men's water polo team took fourth place at the NCAAs, marking the best finish ever for any team from the East coast.

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's water polo team went into the NCAA Championships as the fourth seed, looking to put a ripple in the western domination of the sport.

But the Minutemen flew home from Palo Alto, Calif., dejected, as they lost both the first round and consolation matches to powerful California squads. UMass finishes the season with a 28–7 record, recording a school–best fourth place finish at the NCAAs, the best ever for any school from the East.

"I'm really proud of the kids. They stepped it up, as they did all season long," UMass coach Russ Yarworth said. "Obviously we wanted to come away with the win but we came as close as we could."

Massachusetts was forced to jump right into the thick of things taking on the Golden Bears of California, the No. 1 team in the country, in the semifinals.

To be successful, the Minutemen had to minimize their mistakes and come out strong early. Before three minutes were gone, Cal led 3–0 on goals from Nick Kittredge, Pat Cochran and Brad Kittredge.

UMass made a game of it, pulling to within one score at 7–6 early in the third quarter, eventually falling 10–6.

After the Minutemen played a strong second quarter, they went into halftime trailing 7–4 on the strength of a Brian Stahl two–pointer and a second quarter tally from fellow freshman Gabriel Marrero. Senior co–captain and Eastern Championship MVP Luis Limardo (two goals) led the charge with Stahl in the third period, each with single goals, bringing UMass as close as it would come.

The Bears scored three unanswered goals after the Minuteman charge to wrap up a berth in the finals against No. 2 seed UCLA, who beat third–seeded UC–San Diego in the other first round match.

Massachusetts again started off slow in the consolation game, falling behind 3–1 in the first quarter against UC–San Diego.

San Diego pulled out to a 6–2 lead midway through the second quarter, but UMass controlled play for the rest of the contest, outscoring UCSD 5–2. Limardo posted the first two Minuteman scores while senior co–captain John Luviano and sophomore Marc Staudenbauer closed out the first half scoring to pull UMass to within two.

Senior Frankie Mariani struck first in the third period making the score 6–5, but San Diego star Michale Nalu tossed in a two–point goal to give the California squad its final margin of victory.

UMass got another goal each from Mariani and Staudenbauer, but were unable to convert on several last ditch scoring opportunities, falling 8–7.

Senior goalie Alex Mujica was brilliant between the pipes for Massachusetts, stopping 14 shots in the consolation match along with recording four steals. Mujica made 24 saves in the tournament allowing 17 goals in the two games.

Two Minutemen were named to the All–Tournament team. Limardo was named to the first team while Marrero was named to the second.

"I think we played really well," Limardo said. "We were hoping to prove to the rest of the United States that we could play even with the west. We did something that no other team has done — play with the best California teams."

The Minutemen, although losing twice in the tournament, secured one of the most successful seasons in Eastern Water Polo Association history. Their 28–7 record, their continued dominance in the EWPA North and the Eastern Championships and their No. 13 ranking have made Yarworth and his squad a team to watch.

Men's gym places third at UMass Open

Columbus, Funk and Shupak superb for Minutemen

By Jason Rubin
Collegian Staff

A third place finish at the UMass Open does not seem to be too impressive. However, when teams such as Ohio State and Penn State are competing, it truly is, as the two teams were ranked in the nation's top five last year.

Massachusetts, showing improvement from last season, finished with a score of 212.150, less than eight points behind Penn St.

"We scored five points higher than last year, with a scoring system that is 4.8 points harder," UMass coach Roy Johnson said. "You have to be pleased with a performance like this."

"We placed well for our first meet. Everyone seemed to strive to achieve their best results."
- Keith Showstack

The Minutemen were led by junior Gabe Columbus, who was the team's top all–around finisher with a score of 52.00. It was good enough to place him at 13th overall. Considering that Ohio St. captured the top three overall spots, Columbus placing is all that more impressive. He placed in the top 10 in three events and was pleased with his performance.

"I had a few high spots, as well as a few low spots. Overall, I am pretty excited with my meet," he said.

The one event the team truly owned was the still rings. Last year the Minutemen had one of the best teams in the country with this event. The results from the Open suggest this will continue this season. UMass was clearly the top ring team, placing four out of the top six finishers. Juniors Chris Funk and Ruslan Shupak had outstanding performances on the rings. Senior co–captain Steve Goldman also had a superb day with this event.

A positive sign for the Minutemen was the level at which their rookies competed. This is a huge transitional year for the school, as 11 new recruits were brought in.

Two freshmen, Phil Lieberman and Brad LeClair, had tremendous meets, and showed why they were brought to UMass. Lieberman's performance on the high bar was impressive. LeClair joined an already strong gummel horse team and fit right in. "Phil Lieberman and Brad LeClair were outstanding for us," Johnson said.

"They showed a lot of poise and they are only going to get better," Goldman said.

A scary moment for UMass occurred when sophomore Dan Young attempted his vault. As he came down he appeared to turn an ankle, and immediately the trainers came out to care for him. After some time, Young was taken from the gym. With a little luck, the injury will not be too serious as the team can hardly afford to lose an athlete with Young's abilities.

Finishing third at a preseason meet of this caliber is a great way to begin a new season.

"We placed well for our first meet. Everyone seemed to strive to achieve their best results. I am very proud of the outcome," sophomore Keith Showstack said.

"This was a great performance so early on. I am real happy with the team," Johnson said. "However, we have some work to do. We have a young team and as we get more consistent, we'll make things work."

Ohio St. and Penn St. were clearly the best teams at this meet. However, the Minutemen stuck with them, and proved a lot to themselves.

"Overall, we did pretty well. We definitely have a lot of room to improve. I look forward to better performances," junior Chris Funk said.

After the meet, Johnson was visibly worn out. His team had just competed with some of the best gymnastics schools in the country and did well.

"You know, last night I really did not sleep much. I'm pretty tired," said Johnson, who paused for a moment. "Tired, but happy."

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

The men's gymnastics team took third place at the UMass Open, behind Ohio State and Penn State.

Turn to NHL, page6

Marriage over for Roy, Habs?

Welcome to Pendant que le Monde Tourne (As the World Turns), the most suspense–filled show in Quebec. In today's episode, Patrick Roy, this soap's hottest heart–throb, prepares to switch networks in what's sure to be the highest– rated 60 minutes in French–Canadian television history.

I don't think the curse of this column will approach that of the Sports Illustrated cover, but doesn't it seem like only yesterday I extolled the exavated virtues of St. Patrick?

Kottler on the NHL

For those not in the know, here's what you'll hear if you call the HAB HOTLINE: Detroit racked up about 600 total yards in its 11–1 demolition of Montreal Saturday, and Roy, whose career goals–against–average hovers below 3.00, hung around his net long enough to read the Separatist and Unified Canada platforms (Roy regularly talks to his goalposts) as the Red Wings put up a touchdown and tacked on a safety.

After coach Mario Tremblay at last yanked Roy, the dejected goaltender told Canadiens President Ronald Corey that this was it. (The Montreal Forum, unique in that it has no partition between the team benches and the first row of the stands, where Corey sits, made for the perfect setting for Roy's proclamation — don't those soap writers think of everything?)

So now the latest chapter of the Montreal Canadiens' proud history will have two new subdivisions — Before and After Patrick. Though all may rest assured that Corey will not hinge his franchise's hopes on Pat Jablonski and Patrick Labrecque, the St. Catherine's faithful will be asking themselves for a long time what might have been if Roy had come out, say, before the extra point.

And those script–writers have really outdone themselves with this plot, which seems more suitable for "Melrose Place." While Roy awaits his New Deal, so does Kirk Muller, who, of course, would be pretty happy to return north of the border for the opening of the New Forum.

Patrick Roy — an Islander? Initial reports on ESPN's SportsCenter were that Colorado expressed the greatest interest in acquiring him, but if Mike Milbury wants Roy, here's what he can offer: Muller, Eric Fichaud, and one or two of New York's excellent youngsters — Bryan McCabe, Todd Bertuzzi and Wade Redden. If Roy must be replaced, his successor is likely to be a Native Son, which Fichaud is. Montreal's defense is still recovering from last season's losses of Eric Desjardins and Mathieu Schneider, and Redden and/or McCabe would go a long way toward restoring its customary tenacity in its own zone.

Of course, the Islanders, mired deep in the Atlantic Division cellar with more points than only Ottawa and San Jose, never risked deploying Fichaud, only 20, in its goal. Would

Turn to NHL, page6

NU women down UMass in Boston

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

If the Massachusetts women's indoor track and field team has a nemesis, it is Northeastern University.

The Huskies were the only team to beat the Minutewomen on the track last winter, and UMass looked to avenge that loss this weekend. The team travelled to Boston for a tri– meet with New Hampshire and the host Huskies.

But Northeastern relied on its sprinting, throwing and jumping strengths to power past UMass and UNH, scoring 68 points. UMass took second with 57 points while UNH finished third (23).

Playing on their distance running strength, the Minutewomen featured several cross country runners in the line–up. Massachusetts scored nine points in the 3000m, as Katie Greenia (10:40.6) and Molly Dunlap (10:54.7), first and second overall, paced the pack. Bonnie Davis took fourth with a time of 11:17.

Rebecca Donaghue cruised to victory in the mile (4:59.1), and battled for first place in the 800m (2:16.1). Kristin Donaldson ran to a third place finish in the mile with a time of 5:12.8.

"I was very happy with our distance runners," UMass coach Julie LaFreniere said. "Katie has been running well lately, and things are coming together for her. I expect a lot of good things from her this season.

"Rebecca single–handedly scored 10 points for us, and I think she ran very well. She had a tough battle in both races, but she pulled through and ran well. I was very happy with Kristin's performance, too. She really stepped up and competed."

Several Minutewomen stepped up to score points in the sprint events, with Rose Bryan and Melanie Bell leading the way. Bryan took second in the 55m dash (7.0) and third in the 200m (26.4). Bell finished right behind Bryan, taking third in the 55 (7.1) and fourth in the 200 (26.7).

Turn to WOMEN'S TRACK, page6

LeFebvre, young talent help men's track win first

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's indoor track and field team displayed its young talent in winning seven events — four by freshmen — at the Boston University meet this weekend, defeating four other local universities.

The University of New Hampshire came the closest to the Minutemen, winning four events and scoring 74 points to Massachusetts' 86. Maine, Hartford and BU competed in the meet, none of the three being very competitive.

Junior Ron Tauro led the way for the Minutemen, taking first place in two events. Tauro won the high hurdles, narrowly edging Peter Root of UNH, and fellow UMass runner Ben Baraldi. In the high jump, Tauro tied Wildcat Erik Ehmling with a leap of 6–feet–4 inches, an inch below last year's team mark set by Tauro himself.

Senior captain Mark LeFebvre, as expected, won the shot put with a personal best throw of 49'5.5". UMass freshman Jan Stevens finished third to LeFebvre and Jon Gray of UNH. Stevens' throw (48'9") was also better than last year's team mark (48'3") set by LeFebvre.

With their throws, both LeFebvre and Stevens have already qualified for the New England Championships at the end of February in Boston.

The freshman contribution was even more potent in the sprints. Tom Toye and Neil Concepcion won the 200 and 400m dashes, respectively. Toye, with a time of 22.74 seconds, was helped out by junior Chris Abbott (fourth, 24.20) and Lamar McKay (sixth, 24.57). Toye's 200m performance also earned him a spot in the New England Championships.

Concepcion, a native of Haworth, NJ, ran away from the field eclipsing David Cahill's team mark from last season by nearly two seconds. Concepcion recorded a time of 50.94 beating two more Wildcat sprinters. Cahill led a crew of four Minuteman runners who filled out the seventh through tenth spots.

"I didn't have a doubt that any of the freshmen had the athletic potential to do well in terms of contribution to the team," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said. "As a coach watching a freshman entering their first contest, you never know how long it's going to take for them to make the adjustment."

Alberto Vazquez, O'Brien's only pole vaulter, got four points in his first collegiate meet while another freshman, Alex Ampontuah, took six points in winning the triple jump. The Minutemen collected 14 of 16 possible points in one of UMass's deepest events.

"The triple jump and the shot put are usually considered critical events for us," O'Brien said. "But, if we can avoid being swept in other events like the 55m, the 200m, and the hurdles, we have a good shot at winning the meet."

In the absence of sprinter Scott Price, sophomore Mike Tessitore and Abbott split up two BU runners in the 55m race, garnering six points for Massachusetts.

Another big event for the Minutemen was the high jump. Tauro took the event, but more importantly Ryan Fortune finished third and split up three UNH jumpers, while the performances of Tauro and Baraldi in the hurdles again took points away from the Wildcats.

The Minutemen are off until halfway through the winter break when they travel to Orono, Maine, to compete in the New England Challenge Cup Trials on Jan. 13.

Women's swimming pulls off impressive second place finish

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Last week Massachusetts women's swimming and diving coach Bob Newcomb predicted his team would probably get second place at the New England Championships in Storrs, Conn.

This weekend he received just that, as UMass pulled off a impressive second place finish — the best–ever in Newcomb's 12 years with the team.

In a meet with 10 other teams, UMass finished with 1,201 points, also a career–best for the long–time coach.

Finishing ahead of the Minutewomen was heavy favorite UConn with 1,543 points, as the Huskies won the meet for the third year in a row. However, the finish for UMass was outstanding and Newcomb was pleased with the improvement.

"Last year we finished fourth — over 500 points behind UConn," Newcomb said. "We picked up almost 200 points on UConn [this meet], which is a very significant advance as well as finishing in second place."

UMass finished ahead of BC and Providence, two teams that had the nod over UMass last year.

"Beating BC was a major accomplishment for this team," Newcomb said. "I knew this was going to be a tough meet, but our team set their mind to it. They continue to impress me every time out there."

In a three–day meet that started on Friday, UMass put forth another great total team effort — nothing short of the first three meets before this one.

"I don't think I can pick out just one swimmer," Newcomb said. "This was a whole team effort, no one gave up at any point."

Junior Barbara Hickey, with a time of 5:11.80, placed third in the 500–yard freestyle and junior Jessica Farley took third in the 200–yard individual medley with a time of 2:12.23.

Senior Sarah Baker came away with her second consecutive New England title in the 50–yard freestyle event with a time of 24.47. She also finished second in the 100– yard freestyle on Sunday.

The 200–yard medley relay team of junior Toni Youngdahl, freshman Amy Mc"en, senior Jessica Griffith and Baker also finished third wi. ' time of 1:39.55.

In probably some of the most significant events in the meet, diver Angelique Rodriquez captured third place in

Turn to SWIM page 6

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 62 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, December 6, 1995

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Phish fans at the Mullins Center were left out in the cold last night while Housing locked its doors to non–students.

Housing locks doors as Phish fans descend upon Pioneer Valley

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Often compared to the Grateful Dead musically, the band Phish also draws hoardes of followers across the country like its predecessors. For this reason, Housing Services took the precaution of locking University of Massachusetts dormitory doors at all hours through Wednesday morning.

Normally the doors are under 24–hour lockdown on weekends only. From Monday through Thursday, the doors are locked from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m.

Gorman residential assistant Johanna Blumberg said she believes the temporary policy is in the best interests of dormitory residents, likening it to an extension of the weekend lockdowns.

"[Housing] doesn't want people who aren't residents of the buildings wandering around," she said. "[The concert] can be a problem because non–residents come in and can cause problems. These are people we don't know.

"The Phish concert has bad connotations. There's a tendency for problems to occur, but they don't always occur. It's just a precaution."

Chris Mutz treks across the United States year–long to see Phish, having seen the group on campuses from Nebraska to North Carolina. Despite his being a non–student who, like many other traveling fans, does not always have shelter planned ahead, he said he understands the safety issue at hand.

"I think it's definitely necessary to have the security in place," he said. "Because there are a lot of kids who don't have anywhere to stay, and they're going to try to say anywhere. All the colleges do it."

Mutz said he also supported the security measure based upon his experiences at concerts where fans have been involved in illegal activity at dormitories.

Concert–goers from the University agreed that the lockdown was a valid decision on the part of Housing Services, including students Brett Ruttenberg and Christine Cook, both of whom live on campus.

"The scene for the most part is pretty benevolent but no one should believe that the whole scene is benevolent," sophomore music major Ruttenberg said.

"I don't see what's so bad about it," first–year undeclared major Cook said. "I have to carry my key with me all the time anyway."

Lecture series examines issues in ALANA community

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

Yesterday the Sylvan Cultural Center presented week two of the "Women and Men Empowerment" Series. Last week, the Cultural Center had a group of graduate, and professional women come to UMass in order to educate minority women on a range of topics from health to black love.

This week's topics of discussion for the men focus on physical/mental health, ALANA consciousness, black love, the ALANA males responsibility to his brother, and his responsibility to others.

Last nights speakers were Brother Iaime X, of Mosque #13, an accomplished speaker, and Michael Alderman, Assistant Director of Admissions for Minority Graduates.

Alderman advised the students of the many options of going to graduate school that are available to them. He told them that his job is to go out and try to recruit minority students to consider UMass as one of their options for graduate school, should they want to go.

The students asked Alderman a variety of questions of whether or not UMass, as a graduate school, was for them.

Grad school isn't too far away for you. If you don't have a road map, you won't know where you're going,
– Brother Jaime X

"It is a good choice [UMass]," said Alderman, "but we try encourage students to choice other schools because competition comes from all across the country, and many advisors won't accept their own undergraduates."

He also stressed the need for students to be very critical about choosing their majors.

"You may not be able to change where you came from," said Alderman, "but you can change where you're going."

At the end of his talk, Alderman handed out pamphlets about graduate school options, and several applications.

Brother Jaime spoke to the men that night from a religious standpoint. He spoke about trying to find out the reasons why they were chosen by God to go to college, and not end up a statistic.

"Grad school isn't too far away for you. If you don't have a road map, you won't know where you're going," Brother Iaime X advised.

"You have to keep reminding yourself that you're here."

Brother Jaime X assured the students that graduate school can still be an option for them in the future, despite the fact that they may have messed up a semester.

Brother Jaime X suggested to the students that they should take time each day to remember their connection with God and each other.

"We should all take some time, a day, or part of a day, to reaffirm our connection with God, and one another."

He also brought up that Million Man March should serve as an impetus to drive minority students to work harder in school.

Student receives travel award

By Victoria Yakunin
Collegian Correspondent

Amy Auzenne, a member of the class of 1997 at Mt. Holyoke College, was recently awarded the prestigious Karen Snyder Sullivan Memorial Travel Award.

This award was created in memory of Sullivan by her husband, who wanted to provide opportunity for young women like Karen to learn about other cultures and themselves.

Auzenne will begin her six week trip in May of 1996 departing from her hometown of Houston, TX for Madrid, Spain. She will travel the Spanish countryside, immersing herself in the unique culture of Spain's people, food and magnificent cities.

After Spain, her travels will take her to the Moroccan cities of Tangier, Casablanca and Marrakesh.

"This trip will be a spiritual journey for me," Auzenne said. "A time for me to get to know more of myself through visiting mosques, cathedrals and temples."

Auzenne is a Creole Black Catholic woman with a genuine interest in exploring cultures that have spawned form other cultures. She plans to focus on the Islamic, Catholic and Judaic religions while traveling in southern Spain.

"I have always been attracted to crossroads–places where people and things collide with and change, adapt, and influence each other," Auzenne said.

She said she is looking forward to experiencing and practicing the Catholic faith in an environment where being religious means more than just going to church on Sunday morning.

Auzenne, a double major in American Studies and English, is currently working on a novel. It is an autobiographical work about a young woman who leaves home and travels north for college. Coming from a tight knit family, Auzenne said "home is Houston."

When Auzenne returns from her travels in the summer of 1996, she will be an intern at The National Conference in Houston. The National Conference dedicates itself to educating people about sexism, racism and all other prejudices. Auzenne hopes to work with children and teach them about the different prejudices in society.

"This internship is exactly what I want to do with the rest of my life," Auzenne said. "Work for a grass roots organization that works for social justice."

France must deal with state workers strike

By Christopher Burns
Associated Press

PARIS — Around wood fires on the picket lines, in strikebound universities and in streets choked with commuters without public transit, France is struggling with its past and future.

It's a far cry from the student–worker rebellion of May 1968 when the issues were mostly ideological. Now, the battle is for jobs, money for higher education and to retain France's generous social benefits.

Powerful unions that have ground much of the nation to a halt for nearly two weeks are in a war of attrition with the conservative government of Premier Alain Juppe.

While they represent less than 10 percent of the work force, the unions are strong in transportation, communication and other key industries in the bloated state sector.

At stake is France's — and Europe's — effort to establish a single currency by 1999 that could help turn the European Union into an economic superpower. Paris needs to slash a $64 billion budget deficit to meet the requirements, and a Juppe retreat would likely cause havoc in the financial markets.

"There's a moment when a great country like France can't keep putting off reform," Labor Minister Jacques Barrot told a live talk show on French television.

"France is at a crossroads. The golden age for state workers is over," added Ezra Suleiman, professor of international studies at Princeton. "A lot of people will have to give up their privileges, and I think there will be a lot of tension in the short–run."

With cameras trained on state workers in several French towns, a postal worker in Strasbourg shot back: "They say we're privileged. But we work around the clock. We don't know what's going to happen to us, to our status, our retirement, and our future is blocked."

"What have they possibly got to complain about?" Jean–Marie Golette, a bookkeeper for a small Paris company, muttered as he rode a government–leased bus aimed at breaking the strike. "These people have got everything — decent pay and the best benefits in the world."

Turn to HOUSE, page 3

NATO backs plan to send troops

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — NATO's foreign and defense ministers, acting with "unity of purpose," endorsed a plan today to enforce peace in Bosnia with 60,000 troops engaged in a hazardous and historic mission.

In their first joint meeting in 16 years, the ministers said the plan attests to NATO's capacity to fulfill a new mission of crisis management and peacekeeping.

Russia's participation — NATO's former adversary will contribute 1,500 to 2,000 troops — was singled out as "especially significant as a concrete example of our evolving relationship."

Secretary of State Warren Christopher called the peace mission "a coalition of power and principle" and said it would help ensure another half–century of life for an alliance formed to contain a Soviet Union that no longer exists.

Having cast about since the 1991 dissolution for a reason to keep its generals and bureaucrats busy, NATO has found it in the rubble of ethnically torn Bosnia–Herzegovina. The largest deployment in NATO's history began Monday with the arrival in Sarajevo of a scattering of French, British, Belgian and U.S. troops.

"It is a dangerous mission," said Brig. Gen. Stan Cherrie, the U.S. general to reach the dreary front–line town of Kiseljak, 13 miles northwest of the Bosnian capital.

The troops beginning to pour into Bosnia will run the risk of treacherous weather, snipers, thousands of land mines and potentially hostile militias.

But Christopher emphasized the "noble," unique and historic aspects of the mission. "Most immediately, it

Turn to NATO, page 3

Town moves on after destroying house of horror

By David Crary
Associated Press

ST. CATHARINES, Ontario — It was the typical house next door, before it became Canada's house of horrors.

On Tuesday, a volunteer demolition crew tore it apart in a ritual intended to help this city move beyond the trauma inflicted by Paul Bernardo, who tortured, raped and killed two schoolgirls behind the pastel–pink walls.

"I'm glad it's coming down," Debbie Mahaffy, mother of one of the slain girls, said as she watched from behind a police barrier. "But it's not the house that was evil."

Her 14–year–old daughter, Leslie, was abducted from the nearby town of Burlington in June 1991, taken to the two–story, Cape Cod–style house near the shore of Lake Ontario, raped and beaten, then strangled.

In April 1992, Bernardo and Karla Homolka, his wife at the time, abducted 15–year–old Kristen French off a St. Catharines street. She suffered the same fate as Leslie.

The house has been abandoned since Bernardo's arrest in February 1993. The ground–floor windows were boarded up after being shattered by vandals. Graffiti was spray–painted on the pink clapboard: "Burn in hell." "One day, Paul, you'll pay." A few obscenities.

Neighbors grew disgusted by a steady stream of curiosity–seekers who came to gawk at the house where Canada's mostly widely publicized sex crimes had occurred. After a few bureaucratic hitches, local

Turn to HOUSE, page 3

DAYMON SMITH/COLLEGIAN

Tis' the season. . .

Chris Wilkie, a senior political science major, seeks to by a Christmas tree from Amanda Karch who was helping out the Boy Scouts from Pelham.

Basketball preview is here
The Collegian's annual college basketball preview has arrived. Read all about your favorite UMass Minutemen as they, "Strive for Five" (See special insert).

Getting a new perspective
Find out what UMass students think about censorship on the Internet in this week's Campus Perspectives (See story, page 3).

Action speaks louder than words
Spoken word artists Lydia Lunch and Exene Cervenka will bring the art form Henry Rollins made famous to NoHo (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Bundle up because today will be cold with a chance of snow or rain. Thursday will be partly sunny with a chance of flurries. Friday will continue with more of the same.

Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.
HIGH: 35 LOW: 20	HIGH: 35 LOW: 20	HIGH: 30 LOW: 20

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Dec. 6

Performance — The Stonewall Center is presenting "Self Expressions," a night of readings and performances by gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender students. Five College GLBT students will present new works and works in progress in the Campus Center Room 917 at 7 p.m. Admission is a sliding scale donation of $3-$5. The event is wheelchair accessible. For more information call 545-4824.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545-2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Speaker — The Sylvan Cultural Center is hosting Brother Jamie X as part of the Men's Week of its first annual "ALANA Women and Men Empowerment" Series at 7 p.m. in the basement of Cashin.

Meeting — Hillel House is sponsoring "Being Jewish in a Sorority," an opportunity for women considering rushing in the spring to hear from sorority members themselves about being Jewish in a sorority. Located in Campus Center Room 168 at 7:30 p.m.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Toy Drive — UMass Army ROTC will be collecting money for "Toys for Tots" outside the Student Union, 9 a.m.–3 p.m. For more information call 549-6462.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542-2277.

Thursday, Dec. 7

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545-2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Social Gathering — UMass Hillel is sponsoring "Singled Out," a mix and match social at 8 p.m. in the Hillel House Lounge.

Meeting — Alpha Lambda Delta, the Freshman Honors Society, is having a meeting at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 101. Information on initiation, study breaks, tutoring and dues will be available.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542-2277.

Lecture — Prof. Charles Nero of Bates College will speak on "Re/Membering Langston: Homophobic Textuality and Arnold Rampersad's The Life of Langston Hughes," at noon in Campus Center Room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. For more information call The Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Friday, Dec. 8

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545-2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m., Campus Center. For more information call Utama at 256-8482.

Religious — Shabbat services will be held at Hillel House at 6 p.m.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition is having the last meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. A group photo will be taken, a video shown and all are encouraged to attend. For more information call 546-0358.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Meeting — The Community of Intentional Conversation is holding an open forum for the community to discuss the Chancellor's restructuring plans at 2 p.m. in Campus Center Room 163.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542-2277.

Saturday, Dec. 9

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel–chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542-5896.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel–chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542-5896.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Craft Fair — Butterfield Dining Room will feature a craft fair at 3 p.m. Featured items include jewelry, clothing, pottery and other hand–made goods.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542-2277.

Monday, Dec. 11

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Meeting — The Community of Intentional Conversation is holding an open forum for the community to discuss the Chancellor's restructuring plans at 2 p.m. in Campus Center Room 163.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542-2277.

Tuesday, Dec. 12

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Benefit Coffeehouse — People's Market, Earthfoods and Campus Design & Copy are sponsoring a free coffeehouse with local performers, poets and artists to benefit Necessities/Necesidades from 7 p.m. – 11 p.m. in Earthfoods. No admission, but donations are accepted.

Wednesday, Dec. 13

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545-2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Astronomy — The Amherst Astronomy Association is conduction a free public planetarium show at 4 p.m. in the Amherst College Bassett Planetarium and a free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at the Amherst College Wilder Observatory. For more information call 256-6234.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542-2277.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Thursday, Dec. 14

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Study Break — The Stonewall Center is sponsoring a study break for five college GLBT students at 7 p.m. in the Stonewall Center. For more information call 545-4824.

Friday, Dec. 15

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m., Campus Center. For more information call Utama at 256-8482.

Saturday, Dec. 16

Religious — An Eastern Orthodox Divine Liturgy will be celebrated on Saturday, Dec. 16 at 10 a.m. in the Helen Hills Chapel at Smith College. The pan–Orthodox service will be conducted in English and followed by a light meal. For more information contact Irene at 545-5470.

Astronomy — The Amherst Astronomy Association is conduction a free public planetarium show at 4 p.m. in the Amherst College Bassett Planetarium and a free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at the Amherst College Wilder Observatory. For more information call 256-6234.

Notices

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact The Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.

Writing — mOthertongue, a multi–lingual journal is seeking submissions. Original poetry, short prose in any language except English. Submit rough or polished English translation. Bring entries to third floor South College or call Janet at 587-9884.

Meeting — The African Student Association holds a general body meeting on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the SWAG office. Meeting is open to everyone.

Writing — Nommo News and Drum Supplement holds general body meetings on Thursdays at 5 p.m. in the New Africa House Library. The meeting is open to all students and all faculty. For more information call 546–2363 or 546–5562.

Exhibit — International Programs presents "You Had To Be There..." a selection of photographs submitted by students who have travelled and studied abroad, in the Admissions Center, weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Overeaters Anonymous — Does eating control your life? Overeaters Anonymous meetings are held on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and Sunday at 10:30 a.m. in the Campus Center. Monday and Friday meetings are cancelled for the rest of the semester. For more information call 548-9040.

Writing — The Spectrum Magazine is now seeking submissions for its 1995–96 issue. Any Five–College student is encouraged to submit art, photos, poetry or prose. Submissions should be brought to the Spectrum office at 406E Student Union, or call 545-2240.

Semi-Formal — The Southwest Area Government is throwing a semi–formal on February 10, 1996 in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are on sale now in the SWAG office, with Early Bird prices of $10 a person, $12 a couple. Prices will increase next semester. For more information call 5-0960.

Writing — The National Library of Poetry is currently accepting entries for the North American Open Poetry Contest. Deadline for entries is Dec. 31. Poets should submit one original poem of no more than 20 lines to The National Library of Poetry, 11419 Cronridge Dr. P.O. Box 704–1986, Owings Mills, MD 21117.

Writing — The BIOSCI undergraduate science journal is seeking submissions for its 1996 publication. Any UMass student doing research in biological science is encouraged to submit. Guidelines are available in 348 Morrill Science Center, or call Karen at 253–9622.

Tournament Schedule

Game	Team	Venue	Location	Time
December 26, '95	Czech v. Russia	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:10pm
	Finland v. Switz	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	1:10 pm
	Sweden v. Slovaki	Centrum	Worcester	1:10pm
	Opening Ceremonies	Centrum	Worcester	6:00pm
	USA v. Canada	Centrum	Worcester	7:40pm
Dec. 27	Slovakia v. Russia	Matthews Arena	Boston	1:10pm
	USA v. Ukraine	Matthews Arena	Boston	7:10pm
	Czech v. Germany	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:10pm
	Switz v. Canada	Mullins Center	Amherst	7:10pm
Dec. 28	Germany v. Slovakia	Matthews Arena	Boston	2:10pm
	Ukraine v. Finland	Matthews Arena	Boston	7:10pm
Dec. 29	Slovakia v. Czech	Matthews Arena	Boston	1:10pm
	Canada v. Finland	Matthews Arena	Boston	7:40pm
	Russia v. Sweden	Civic Center	Springfield	2:10pm
	USA v. Switz	Civic Center	Springfield	7:10pm
Dec. 30	Germany v. Slovakia	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	12:10pm
	Ukraine v. Switz	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	5:10pm
Dec. 31	Sweden v. Czech	Matthews Arena	Boston	12:10pm
	Canada v. Ukraine	Matthews Arena	Boston	5:40pm
	Finland v. USA	Mullins Center	Amherst	12:10pm
	Russia v. Germany	Mullins Center	Amherst	5:10pm
January 1, '96	Qualifying Rd.	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:10pm
	Qualifying Rd.	Mullins Center	Amherst	5:10pm
Jan. 2	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	1:10pm
	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	7:10pm
Jan. 3	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	1:10pm
	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	7:10pm
	SEMIFINAL	Conte Forum	Boston	3:40pm
	SEMIFINAL	Conte Forum	Boston	7:40pm
Jan 4	5th/6th Place Game	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	12:10pm
	Bronze Medal Game	Conte Forum	Boston	3:40 pm
	Gold Medal Game	Conte Forum	Boston	7:40pm

THE COLLEGIAN "CATCH THE EXCITEMENT" TICKET GIVEAWAY! 50 UMASS STUDENTS AND THEIR CLOSEST FRIEND AND/OR ANY LOCAL COMMUNITY MEMBERS MAY SEE THE NEXT WAYNE GRETZKY PLAY IN THE WORLD JUNIOR HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIPS! ENTRY FORM BELOW...

Tickets also available at TICKETMASTER (617) 931-2000

Ticketmaster phone orders, outlet stores and venues will begin sales November 3, 1995

MASSACHUSETTS SPORTS PARTNERSHIP

BLOOM'S BUSINESS SYSTEMS

Gretzky, Lemieux, Lindros, Leetch, Roenick, Fedorov, Bure, Jagr, Kariya, Tkachuk, Forsberg, Carey,
Who's Next?

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • (413) 545-1592

- Catch the excitement... Liven up your holidays with GREAT Hockey Action.
- Win tickets to see World Junior Hockey Action at any of the MA locations.
- Enter today! The Collegian has 50 pairs of tickets to draw and give away.
- Drop off or mail entry forms to the Collegian office in the Campus Center today.
- Drawings will be held @ 3:30 p.m. Thursday, November 14, 1995

Collegian staff or family members not eligible

CONTEST ENTRY FORM

Name _____

Address _____

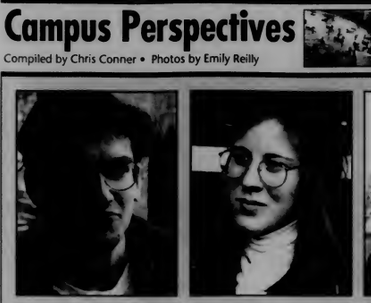
Phone _____

Location of Game Preferred _____

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Chris Conner • Photos by Emily Reilly

What is your opinion of the possible governmental censorship of the Internet?



"I'm against it. I don't think it should be censored. There should be some sort of software if they want to protect kids from it, but it should be a free trade of information."

Adam Colby
computer engineering, freshman
Ipswich

"I really don't think that censorship's a good idea. I'm not really into the Internet, but I don't think government censorship is a good idea."

Darcy Barry
biology, junior
Munson

"I think it sucks. Really sucks. The Internet is the fastest– growing source of world information, and for the government to censor it would halt that growth."

Rich Awn
undeclared, freshman
Chatham, N.J.

"I would rather not censor it. There are so many other ways supervision can be done on an individual level, like parents censoring it."

Musa Nsereko
public health, graduate student
Uganda

"I don't think they should censor it. There are a lot of positive things on the Internet, not just pornography."

Shawna Robinson economics, freshman
Minneapolis

"I don't really think it needs it be censored. The government doesn't a police program. The Internet is an entity within itself, so it can govern itself. I don't think things are wildly out of control, but if they were, then the government could step in."

Andrea Catalano
undeclared, freshman
Hingham

NATO

continued from page 1

means that the killing in Bosnia can stop for good," he said. "It means that the children of a European country will be able to walk to school and play in the streets without having to fear a sniper's bullet or a falling mortar shell."

All the NATO allies will participate in the operation, as well as 14 other countries: Austria, the Czech republic, Estonia, Finland, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Pakistan, Poland, Romania, Russia, Slovakia, Sweden and Ukraine, acting NATO secretary-general Sergio Balanzino said.

Three other countries, Bangladesh, Egypt and Malaysia, are being considered, the NATO official said at a news conference.

France gave NATO unity a boost by ending a 29-year boycott of the alliance's military wing. Foreign Minister Herve de Charette said French generals and defense ministers would participate more fully in decision making meetings.

house

continued from page 1

authorities finally completed arrangements for the demolition.

On Monday, Bernardo's sports car — used to abduct the two girls — was towed away to be scrapped. Early Tuesday a demolition crew of 20 volunteers, equipped with two backhoes and a small fleet of dump trucks, got to work.

A few dozen residents, outnumbered by reporters and TV crews, watched silently as one of the backhoes tore into the shingled roof at 8:04 a.m. Within an hour, the house had been leveled, and trucks were loading the rubble for shipment to a landfill at an abandoned quarry.

Mrs. Mahaffy, who cried briefly as the demolition began, said she hoped the owners of the lot — who had rented the house to Bernardo — would build a new house there.

Vagabond remembered by residents

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. — His 42-year life of wanderings shuffled him from the South, to a Boston ghetto, through Salem with its dark history of witches, to this college town where everyone — or no one — feels at home.

Born Ray Hollins, he later went by Ray Hollis or Benjamin Johnson, choosing aliases for no other apparent reason than to deepen his anonymity. Like a shadow, he passed quietly through a psychiatric hospital and shelters before finally refusing all help.

Last week, another street person found his gaunt body lying face down, his arms pinned under his chest in a vain search for warmth, his half-open eyes frozen in a stare. He was dead from exposure by railroad tracks in an industrial no-man's-land where he had lived his final months.

It took a full week before a check of old records at a Salem homeless shelter turned up an emergency contact, his sister, Mary Canada, of Lynchburg, Va. His family had been trying to track him down in recent years, her husband, Warren, said in a telephone interview.

Hollins lived with his sister for about a year in the mid-'80s and then headed to Boston. The family stopped hearing from him afterward and can't say why he chose the life he did, his brother-in-law said.

"He ... kind of disappeared," he said Tuesday. "It seemed like for some reason, he just wanted to be on the go."

Even before his family was found, some who knew him — or tried to — in Northampton were organizing a memorial service for this lost soul.

"From the moment I saw him, he stirred something in me. I don't know why," said Steve Freeman, who is helping to organize the church service on Sunday. "There was a sadness about him. There was something in his eyes."

COME AND TAKE A RIDE TO: NEW YORK CITY!

Campus Activities Office Sponsors It's First Annual Day Trip To New York On December 16th

DETAILS:

- Leave UMass at 7:00am - Arrive at Penn Station at 11:00am
- Leaving N.Y.C. at 9:00pm (tentatively) - Arrive at UMass 12:00pm
- $20.00 Per Person

If there are any questions or concerns, please contact the Campus Activities Office at 545-3600.

UMass Division of Continuing Education

· January 2-25 ·
Winter Session 1996

- More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
- Noncredit workshops
- Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
- Courses for recertification points for teachers

Register Now!

Call for a free course catalog - (413) 545-0107
e-mail: continued@admin.umass.edu

Division of Continuing Education · University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

ΑΒΔΕΦΓΗΙϑΚΛΜΝΟΠΘΡΣΤΥΩΧΨΖ

"BEING JEWISH IN A SORORITY"

Wednesday, December 6th
7:30pm
Campus Center Room 168 (new location)

Are you a female who is thinking of rushing in the spring? This is a chance to hear an unbiased view from sorority members themselves about being Jewish in sorority. Sorority members will specifically address being a Jewish minority within a house.

ΑΒΔΕΦΓΗΙϑΚΛΜΝΟΠΘΡΣΤΥΩΧΨΖ

DICK VITALE
WILL BE
HOLDING COURT
At the UNIVERSITY STORE
CONCOURSE LEVEL - CAMPUS CENTER
Wednesday - Dec. 6 - 11:30am to 1:30pm
Dick Vitale Will Be Signing
Copies of his New Book
HOLDING COURT
REFLECTIONS ON THE GAME I LOVE
WRITTEN WITH DICK WEISS

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Gurley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Letters to the Editor

Student lecture series successful

To the Editor:

First of all, I want to thank Jonathan Liberty for writing about the Asian American Lecture Series. The UMass community needs to know about this student-initiated course because it is yet another example of what students of color have to do on this campus in order to know about our histories. Many events on this campus served as catalysts for Asian American students to organize and create this course.

I want to add a few more crucial details about the independent study. This course is a two credit course on Asian American experiences. So far, it has focused on the experiences of Asian Americans/Asians in America. What we are aiming for is a certificate granting program in Asian American Studies, not Asian Studies. There needs to be a distinction between the two fields of study, because although they are related, they are not the same. Asian American Studies focuses on our life here in the states, yet our connection and past/present relationship with Asia is included in this inquiry.

Although student-generated, the lecture series could not have been established without the support of the two faculty sponsors, Dr. Sally Habana Hafner, director of CIRCLE project, and Dr. Theresa Austin, director of Bilingual Education Program. Both are professors in the UMass Education Department. Their help is indispensable. Dr. Peter Kiang of UMass-Boston has been instrumental in their effort as well. Collaboration between students and faculties cannot be ignored.

The lecturers who have come do so out of the goodness of their hearts. Lecturers come from different disciplines, from history to theater. However, the lecturers are solely from academic fields. Some are graduate students; others are community leaders. They travelled from as close as Amherst College and as far as Boston. They come willing to share their knowledge on Asian America, with no compensation. They have given unquestionable support and are more than happy to do so because they recognized that demands are coming from the students.

There are many others who have supported us in other ways, such as planning the course, suggesting lecturers, photocopying materials. I want to name just a few — New WORLD Theater, CIRCLE project, Danny Rivera, Student Activities Office, UALRC. I would like to express our deepest gratitude, on behalf of the students in the Asian American Lecture Series, to all of you who have shown your true commitment.

Lucy Mae San Pablo Burns
Belchertown

Local businesses make charity events successful

To the Editor:

We, the volunteers of Boltwood's Northampton Pediatric Unit, would like to publicly express our thanks to businesses that gave the children who live in the Northampton Pediatric Unit the opportunity to participate in some wonderful experiences.

Every Monday, for the past ten weeks, we have provided activities for the residents. These program nights have included a quiet "camp" evening with pet therapy from Dave's Soda and Pet Food City, a crashing night at the Northampton Bowling Alley, and many other activities which used resources provided by businesses from the area.

It is the enthusiastic support of businesses that allows campus service organizations, like Boltwood, to continue providing quality programs which are entertaining, challenging and educational. Such memorable occasions would not have been possible without the gift of donations, time and support of the following businesses and companies: Atkins Orchard, Century 21 in Fairfield, Ct., CVS on North Pleasant St., Dave's Soda and Pet Food City, Friendly's in Hadley, Michael's Crafts in Springfield, Northampton Bowling Alley and Pioneer Valley Transportation Authority.

This is a time of the year when we recognize all that has been given to us. The volunteers from the Northampton Pediatric Unit of Boltwood would like to again thank and recognize all who gave generously to us to make this semester a success.

Shannon Youtsey, Assistant Supervisor
Jeffrey Chapdelaine, Supervisor
Northampton Pediatric Unit of the Boltwood Project

The humor of bathroom graffiti

To the Editor:

Have you ever wondered why someone would spend the time writing on a bathroom stall? I have spent some time trying to understand this desire to express oneself in a public restroom (usually while I'm in the restroom). I have come to the conclusion that no stall in the bathroom is a special place where they can express themselves. The restroom now becomes a gallery for artwork, a stage for comedy, and a place of debate. There are several different forms of graffiti, and I have taken it upon myself to break it up into different categories.

Art is one of the most popular forms of graffiti in the stalls. Biological drawings with oversized anatomy make up about 90 percent of the artwork that can be found. Every once in a while, however, you can find a drawing that is pleasing to the eye. Why someone would waste their time drawing next to a toilet is beyond me, but they do.

Poetry is another popular item. Sometimes people express themselves through words rather than art. I must admit, some creative thinking must have gone into some of the poetry I have read, but I do not think the subject matter would go over well at a poetry reading. One of my personal favorites begins "There once was a girl from Nantucket..."

Next is the ever popular opinion category. People seem to feel the need to write down their favorite or least favorite sports team, or heavy metal band, right above the toilet paper. Soon afterwards, someone who disagrees with the opinion will express their views on the subject. This is the start of what I like to call the argument. The argument usually starts out as a conflict of two opinions and proceeds to digress to name calling.

Comedy is also widespread in the restrooms. Off the top of my head I can't remember any jokes I have read (at least that can be printed), but we've all seen them. Who knows, maybe some of today's top comedians got their start in a bathroom stall. I can almost picture Seinfeld during an interview: "How did I get started in comedy? Well, now, that's a rather funny story..."

Sometimes, individuals feel the need to share his or her favorite quote with us. Why someone would write "Life is like a box of chocolates," at that particular time in their life made me think for a little while. Most of the time the quotes are a warped (usual perverse) versions of the original quote. Usually, these warped quotes reflect some personal experience or joke nobody, but the person that wrote it would understand. "Life is like a box of condoms..." I guess you had to be there.

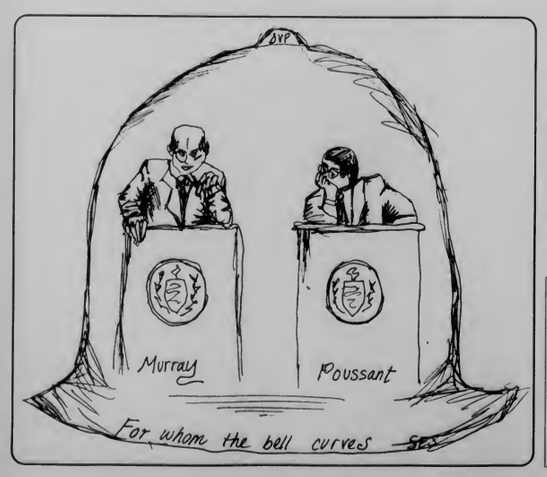
Love is the subject that confuses me the most. The fact someone would proclaim their undying live for someone while sitting on the throne is almost sick.

While sometimes graffiti is harmless and even funny, most of the time it is not. Sexist remarks are found in almost any bathroom. "Jane Doe is a slut," or "for a good time call," are common expressions written by the unimaginative.

Racial slurs and homophobic comments are scribbled everywhere. It seems to me as long as we have closed minded people on this earth, we will always have bathroom graffiti.

Any individual who has to write graffiti in a bathroom stall, or anywhere else for that matter, does not deserve to be taken seriously. All they're showing to me is they are not mature enough to handle a pen.

Jason Richard
UMass



Opinion/Editorial

click ...
I DON'T WANT YOU WATCHING THIS GARBAGE.
EXTRAMARITAL AFFAIRS, DYSFUNCTIONAL FAMILIES, SELF-MUTILATION, LOW SELF-ESTEEM, DEPRESSION, EATING DISORDERS...
WHY DO YOU WATCH THAT STUFF?
I WANT TO GROW UP TO BE A PRINCESS.
THERE SEEM TO BE A LOT OF THEM

Debating the protesting issue

I'll take away many things with me when I leave this glorious University in May. I'll have visions of things that happened over the last four years and probably laugh out loud. First and foremost though I'll remember the vast number of protest rallies I've encountered and endured throughout my higher educational pursuit. With those memories I'll continue to feel puzzled and intrigued.

I must say up front I respect and admire those who have stood up for what they think they believe in for the most part. I have found occasion to stop and listen at times to what the speakers ranted about. There were things they said that made me think, good or bad. There have also been times, however, when I find myself hurtling bodies in a struggle to get to class. Then I have to think what the hell does this accomplish, besides undue aggravation?

What disturbs me is the method behind the madness. I wonder if these protesters stop to think about the effect their words carry, or how all this rhetoric will benefit their cause of choice. The bigger question is, do these acts of protest highlight the wrongs of the world, or draw unnecessary attention to it?

I don't have a definitive answer to this question, but I do have some thoughts on the subject.

More often then not, when groups gather to rally about some controversy or atrocity, their adversaries get free press. I'd have to venture a guess that a lot of what people hold signs about is unheard of by the common ear. Suddenly, when you're faced with stepping on someone's head to get to class or getting ambushed on the way to the Munchy Store, you're interest will get peaked. Usually you don't stay for the whole sermon, but you'll manage to glean the most loud and colorful cries. You may not have cared less about the adult video store down the street, but now you're going to want to know more.

A case in point would be the debate between Professors Murray and Poussaint that was held here on Monday night. On Monday afternoon I was faced with four, lone masked protestors on the steps of the Student Union. Whether or not they accomplished anything by their "hidden" message remains to be seen, but I do think they inadvertently encouraged students to see what this debate was all about. I don't see this as a good thing at all.

Whether or not you attended this debate in defiance or curiosity, I think above all else you supported the bigger message behind the talk. By the same token, if you protested the event on the front steps of the Student Union, you also added to the hype.

Of all the press that's been written about this debate, I found two pieces in particular that explained the situation most concisely and intelligently. Professor Michael Thelwell spoke in the pages of the Collegian twice, and said both times basically the most powerful protest would be to miss the event entirely. This would seem to prove more than a hearty rally outside the Fine Arts Center.

Silence, at least in this case, does not equal apathy. I'd much rather hear about low attendance at the debate rather than mass hysteria outside captured by local television cameras. We don't need to submit our ideas in the small spaces of the television screen. In this case maybe we don't need to submit to anyone at all, but ourselves.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

What disturbs me is the method behind the madness. I wonder if these protesters stop to think about the effect their words carry, or how all this rhetoric will benefit their cause of choice.

Tara Ruelle

Me, wrong? Never

I like to argue. No wait — I love to argue.

Plus, I also have a bad temper and for the longest time the hardest thing for me to do was control it. So, I didn't leave my room for long periods of time, thinking I wouldn't have to deal with confrontations.

It didn't work — I'd just get into arguments with my parents as to why I spent so much time in my room. My best offense is a good defense composed of one word answers, eyes rolling and a "sullen" look as my Mum likes to call it.

I am very sarcastic — even when I'm not arguing. Sometimes I am sarcastic when I don't mean to be. My friend William said if I cut down on the sarcastic level about 60 percent, then I'd be more, ah tolerable. I said, "Yeah, okay. Whatever."

He wasn't impressed with my effort.

My father used to accuse me of always having to have the last word. He would lecture me at great lengths on the importance of "keeping my damn mouth shut" and asked if I was ever taught listening in the classroom.

"That mouth will get you in trouble you know."
"Okay."
"See! There you go again. Always the last word."
"Yeah, okay, Dad." Oops.

My housemate says I argue too much.

"You know, Tara, you never just say anything. You always have to argue with me — about everything. You have to have an opinion about everything."
"No I don't."
"Yeah, you do."
"No, I don't."
"Then what are you doing now?"
Oh.
So I try to practice patience and keep an open mind. But it's a lot harder than it looks. Sure everyone is entitled to their own opinion, but what if their opinion is well, wrong? Not just wrong, but blatantly wrong. So wrong that if you didn't point it out then you'd be committing a major injustice, because aren't mistakes after all, something to be learned from?

Hasn't anyone ever felt that supreme moment when you know you can't be wrong? A gut wrenching feeling that twists your head in the right direction? And is there anything wrong with being right all the time? It can happen you know. I'm living proof ... just kidding.

But seriously, sometimes you are just right. But I have to admit a lot of it is delivery. Pure and simple. It's not what you say, but rather how you say it. It's asking versus demanding. It's intonation, inflection and body language. It's also tact and, yes, the ability to admit defeat when necessary; with grace and eloquence of course, a certain devil may care attitude that says, "So what if your right — I don't care." (But you do and you grind you teeth over it.)

I think the hardest thing a person can do is to admit they're wrong. I would personally rather walk over hot coals in a room looping the "Barney" theme over and over than admitting defeat. I would rather dig myself into an impossibly deep hole with denials and excuses than admit I'm wrong. But of course there comes the inevitable moment when I have to buck up and face the facts and say, "Yeah, okay. I guess you're right ... But I won't let it happen again."

Tara MK Connelly is a Collegian columnist.

Hasn't anyone ever felt that supreme moment when you know you can't be wrong? A gut wrenching feeling that twists your head in the right direction?

Tara MK Connelly

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

The Ed/Op page is also always looking for columnists for next semester. If you are interested in writing columns for the Collegian, come down to the office, or call at 545-1491, and ask to speak to Geri Sahn.

Multicultural Affairs

Wednesday, December 6, 1995

The Privileges Of Global Domination:

Brutal rape of Japanese girl exemplifies continued American imperialist legacy

By Lisa Chiu and Shyamala Ivatury
Special to the Collegian

News Analysis

The arsenal of American soldiers — rape, murder and torture. One more indigenous girl gets assaulted and raped by U.S. soldiers stationed overseas.

Dutch U.N. peacekeepers engage in child prostitution in Mozambique. Canadian peacekeepers torture Somali children, women and men in the name of "restoring hope."

During the Gulf War Filipino women are imported to Saudi Arabia to "service" American soldiers. In Haiti, Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) sponsored armed militia such as FRAPH rape and torture Haitians.

Since World War II, the United States has been one of the preeminent military powers in world. In the past 45 years, the United States has intervened directly or by proxy approximately once every 18 months. Consequently, the United States has maintained a large arsenal of weapons and military bases in strategic locations all over the world. This was done by the recruitment of lackey states such as, Pakistan, Japan, South Korea, Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

Since 1945, Japan has prostituted itself to the United States. The master-slave relationship infested the Japanese psyche, despite the U.S. occupation of Japan and the horrific bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Under the paternal guidance of Douglass MacArthur and other U.S. officials the Japanese constitution was created to consolidate the enslavement of Japan. Article IX of the Japanese Constitution explicitly prohibits the remilitarization of Japan. Furthermore, Japanese security was entrusted to the "capable hands" of the United States. And even as the American occupation of Japan ended, American servicemen continued to haunt Japanese soil.

In an ironic twist of fate, today Japanese commerce dominates the world protected by American brawn. For example, Japan paid $10 billion to hire the mercenary American war machine to fight the Gulf War.

The incestuous nexus between the Japanese merchants and U.S. imperialists has been encouraged by the ruling circles in both countries. American soldiers' rape on Japanese soil while the Japanese government stands by shaking Bill Clinton's hand and propping up the U.S. dollar.

There are 29,000 U.S. troops stationed on the small island of Okinawa, totalling 75 percent of all U.S. troops in Japan in this city alone. While the island is under Japanese rule it is populated by indigenous Okinawans, whose culture and history is distinct from that of Japan.

Ever since 1972, there have been over 4,500 documented criminal cases involving American servicemen in Okinawa.

The events that took place on the night of September 4, 1995, are not in any way new neither to Okinawans nor to many other third world countries with U.S. military bases.

The prosecutors in this case have stated that on the night of September 4, 1995, Seaman Marcus D. Gill, Pfc. Kendrick M. Ledet, and Pfc. Rodrico Harp, rented a car, whereupon Gill suggested that they find someone to rape. The lawyer representing Harp stated that they discussed hiring a prostitute, but Gill stated that he had no money and suggested a rape instead. At first they were joking about it but the conversation intensified and Harp's lawyer said that his client "didn't do anything to stop it, he just let things go."

Prosecutors also stated that they drove to a grocery store where Ledet and Harp bought tape and condoms. The men drove around looking for a victim. It was at 8 p.m. that they found the girl, a 12-year-old Okinawan elementary school girl. Gill stopped the car and Ledet and Harp got out.

The young victim, who remains unidentified, said in her statement that when walking home, she was hit in the face and grabbed around the neck from behind.

The prosecutor then stated that Harp acted as if he were asking for directions as Ledet put his arm around the girl's neck from behind and Harp hit her in the face. Ledet then shoved her into the backseat of the car, taped her eyes and mouth, and tied her hands and feet. Gill drove to a remote area and stopped the car. He went to the backseat, hit the girl once more, and raped her.

Ledet went next, but "was not able " to penetrate her, due to her size. Harp then went to the back seat and raped her one last time. The three drove away, leaving her alone to seek help at a nearby farm.

Thus far, only Seaman Gill has admitted guilt over the rape. Ledet and Harp both claim that they didn't go through with the rape when they saw how young she was, something they were not aware of when they abducted her.

Ledet claims that he did not achieve penetration. Harp stated that he did but his lawyer will challenge that statement on the basis that it was taken under pressure.

All three can be convicted of rape even if they did not physically rape her. They can be charged with rape by conspiring to rape. Both Ledet and Harp have testified that they were willing participants in the abduction and preparation of the rape.

Once again, one must recall — this incident is just one of 4,500 criminal cases relating to U.S. servicemen in Okinawa since 1972 and rape is a common tool of American servicemen. This is by no means an isolated incident, and rightly justifies the Okinawan citizens' plea for U.S. troops to go home.

As expected, the subservient government of Japan does not want to see their American "allies" leave. The U.S. military bases in Japan are fully funded by the Japanese government. Both Prime Minister Murayama of Japan and President Clinton have pledged to continue the joint security agreement between the U.S. and Japan.

85,000 people rallied in Okinawa with another 10,000 supporters in Tokyo in protest of this incident. These people want justice not only for this young girl but justice from U.S. imperialism. How many times does the U.S. have to rear its ugly penis into third world countries in the name of protection? How many young girls have to be raped by U.S. servicemen so that something is actually done about this?

They Say Everything But Do Nothing
By Hugh Collins

They say it's a free country
Only as long as you pay your dues,
Don't eat cow skin that good for your nerves
Else you ain't wearing no shoes
Don't help out your brother
Cause him have no power
It's better you build up the white man
That rob you by the hour.

They say education is the best,
But gallivant all you want
They cut financial aid
Ready to go to college,
You can't apply to Princeton or Harvard
They say you lack
Cause they don't wan' tell you
It's because you're black

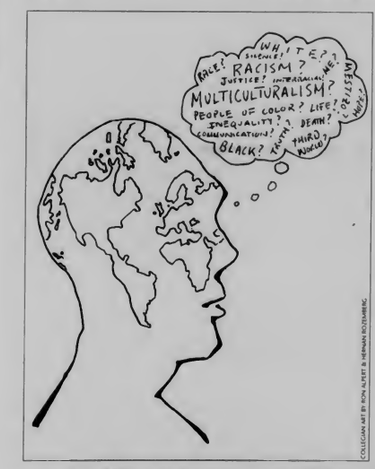
Time come to work
They turn you in a clerk
Went to school fo' engineering
But still you eyes you use steering

They say it will be fine
When they whippin' yo' behin',
Strangling your neck
An' serving your food on the deck.

They treat us like swine
An' say that it's the wine
They throw us in the cell
Deeper than a well
They dress us like masquerades
An' sentence us for ten decades

Even though they say it's new
By the same system we get screw
They throw us in the lake
After they hit us like a quake
No respec' they have
To even give us a decent wake.

They say it' s a free country
Only as long as you pay your dues
But brother, I got to tell you
This country is bad news.



COLLEGIAN ART BY RON ALPERT & HERNAN ROZEMBERG

Curving Bells: The American Racial Saga Continues

I am disappointed that Chancellor Scott believes providing a platform on this campus for Charles Murray, co-author of The Bell Curve, was merely offering the University community an opportunity "to look at the unpalatable and the controversial." There is much more involved here than disagreeable debate: 400 years of white America being forced-fed the belief that it is inherently superior to black America — and accepting it.

The Bell Curve's appearance at this moment, with its claim of the heritability of I.Q., is no accident of history. It promotes a current political agenda that reenforces a belief in white superiority, representing a potentially horrific contribution to a renewed and intensifying racist consciousness. This consciousness is on view today in Washington, D.C. and across the country in the growth of right-wing conservatism in the guise of "a religious right."

David G. Du Bois

How ironic, but also how instructive: a black convert to Islam, Minister Louis Farrakhan, allegedly calls Judaism "a gutter religion" and promotes a book, The Secret Relationship Between Blacks and Jews, which draws mainly from Jewish academic sources, and which does little more than unfairly single-out Jews — those that were involved in the most lucrative international business of the period, the African slave trade— by name, location and organization. For days preceding Farrakhan's appearance on this campus, the entire University establishment, including the police, organized itself to expose and challenge his alleged racist anti-Semitism.

Conversely, the best that was done to mobilize on this campus in order to expose and challenge the acknowledged, anti-black racism of Murray's The Bell Curve — a book cloaked in blatantly dishonest, fraudulent pseudo-scientific "scholarship"— was the voices of two members of the faculty of the W.E.B. Du Bois Department of African- American Studies, a black faculty member of the English Department, some individuals from the Department of Physics and Astronomy and a graduate student.

The American Behavioral Scientist Journal has just published a special issue entitled The Bell Curve: Laying Bare the Resurgence of Scientific Racism. Contributors to this issue are a mix of sociologists, anthropologists, a psychologist, an educator and a political scientist. Publishers of the journal, Sage Publications, Inc., write in its brochure announcing this special issue, "Editor Robert Newby [of Central Michigan University] and his colleagues provide not only scientific challenges to The Bell Curve, but place the work into a context which shows the dangers it harbors. The authors examine not only misleading findings and conclusions, but also the ominous and discredited genetic research tradition upon which its foundation rests."

In the Germany of the 1930s, few Germans raised their voices in protest against the promotion of the racist anti- Semitism that declared the Jews responsible for the hard times of the German people. As a consequence, the Germany of the 1940s was responsible for one of the two most horrific crimes against humanity in modern history, the Holocaust (the other was the European slave trade out of Africa during which an estimated 50 to 100 million souls were uprooted, sold into slavery or perished). The genetic research tradition upon which the foundation of The Bell Curve rests is the same tradition German scientists promoted to justify the extermination of Jews, Gypsies, homosexuals and others.

In the America of the 1990s, are we witnessing a similar silence of the American people in the face of the promotion of an anti-black racism that identifies the breakdown of the family, teen pregnancy, crime and the flourishing drug trade with black Americans? In a steadfast and ubiquitous manner, blacks are told they are responsible for job loss and job insecurity because of affirmative action; that they are responsible for deteriorating urban communities and schools because of black violence and black irresponsibility; that they are the undeserving beneficiaries of our tax dollars for welfare because they refuse to work and keep having more babies; that they are lazy, and on and on and on ... Are Americans being prepared for an America of the 2000s in which they will also keep silent in the face of the wholesale disabling or even extermination of black Americans?

If our examination of The Bell Curve is limited to a debate over the psychology of its premises and to academic or technical challenges or rebuttals of its methods and conclusions, or accepts as intellectually permissible even a hint of genetic superiority or inferiority connected with race within the human family, we contribute to an already accelerating division of this country into two nations — one white, one black, separate and unequal, setting the stage for genocide.

David G. Du Bois is a Visiting Professor of African- American Studies and Journalism at UMass.

At The Margin Of The In–Between

A few weeks ago, I was asked to articulate my position of Puerto Rico, and more importantly, on the alternatives of its condition; in turn, this has since made me want to analyze the issues of bi–polarism, empire–colonial relationship building, the importance of geographical identities and the poverty of Eurocentric alternatives vis–à–vis Puerto Ricans.

With regards to the first issue, the argument suggests that Puerto Ricans are subjected to the oppression of the Anglo– American government, which in traditional language equals the "white man." This idea is not historically and textually inaccurate; it is simply myopic at score. When we talk about democracy — not to say that Puerto Ricans have ever experienced a democratic régime — we give some power to what people say. When 90 percent of the voting population (which is usually 80 percent of the population) in Puerto Rico votes in favor of either statehood or colonial status — thus negating the possibility of independence — it is clear that people are having a say in what is happening.

To articulate an independence–oriented argument, relying on liberal democratic values is useless. Also, if the "white man" was so racist — as most conservatives are labeled — and interested in cutting welfare benefits, then wouldn't it make sense that they would want nothing to do with a tiny island full of "spics?"

The second argument along these lines is that Puerto Ricans are so brainwashed by their colonial experience that they don't know what to do. Puerto Ricans who are involved in the political scene for the most part can and do govern themselves and fend for themselves. To claim that we are naive as a people is to ignore the possibility that many Puerto Ricans are in fact happy with their condition, for they are getting fat and making lots of money in the process.

This raises another issue: bi–polar ways of looking at this relationship not only ignore the hierarchies in between, but also obscure the possibility that some Puerto Ricans are truly oppressing each other independently of an alienated Anglo– American citizenry. I mean, how many Anglo–Americans actually know anything about Puerto Rico? If Puerto Ricans themselves are so blinded by their colonial experience, imagine what those gringos must be going through in their Northern Empire?

With regards to the issue of geographical identities, it is clear that the solutions which Puerto Ricans in the United States articulate, namely to reform the status quo; i.e., to put people in positions of power, develop political and economic enclaves, are all positions which stand in absolute opposition to establishing our identities as Puerto Ricans, Latin Americans, as free and independent from the oppression of the "system." Why? Well, for once the idea of being Puerto Rican is not to become an ethnic minority, nor is it to become an equal American in an Anglo–American nation. On the contrary, the idea is to become a citizen of Puerto Rico — in a free and independent nation–state. How many people would actually renounce their US citizenship for a Puerto Rican one? How many have already done so?

Finally, it must be clear that we need to strive for alternatives which do not privilege Eurocentric values. By this I mean to suggest that, clearly, Spain is part of our collective identity, but the idea of the Nation as well as the Flag (undoubtedly a French invention), should not be privileged over other creole alternatives. Likewise, the Anglo–American republican principles should not be applied to a people which have never experienced self–government. We need to start thinking of other creative approaches to the Puerto Rican situation, and stop trying to insert Puerto Rico into the European model of power.

Charles R. Venator Santiago

The call is made to overcome our situation, considering that while the Anglo–American people may be racist, many Puerto Ricans are in fact participating in the oppression of an already marginalized island–community. Moreover, we need to accept that radicals in Anglo–America may in fact be standing for the same principles which Latin Americans have been resisting for over a century. Last but not least, let us recognize the possibility of our indigenous experiences which form part of our very beings. Puerto Ricans cannot ever forget or deny that they come from an indigenous culture which shares Taíno, Spanish, Anglo–American, African and a plethora of other influences.

Charles R. "El Pirata" Venator Santiago is the Coordinator of the Latin American Cultural Center.

A Dinosaur Battling Extinction

In the film Jurassic Park, Steven Spielberg's 1993 production about genetically-engineered dinosaurs, there was an interesting scene where a group of scientists were discussing how to control the dinosaur population. A technician explained that a hormone was manipulated during the reproductive process, producing an exclusively female population of the prehistoric beasts. One scientist, however, challenged the aim of limiting the dinosaurs' ability to reproduce, stating that "Life finds a way."

Science, indeed. White Supremacy has found a way as of late to stave off its impending extinction, although such efforts are proving increasingly futile. One such effort came in the form of Dr. Charles Murray, a self–described social scientist with undergraduate studies in history from Harvard and a doctoral degree in political science from MIT. Last year, Murray and the late psychologist Richard Herrnstein co–authored The Bell Curve: Intelligence and Class Structure in the United States, causing a great deal of controversy in the social science field. (Herrnstein died before the book was released, perhaps symbolic of the dying theories he and his colleague call "scientific.")

Martin F. Jones

The Bell Curve, in a nutshell, asserts that intelligence is hereditary, and that America was becoming divided into a cognitive underclass (black) and a cognitive elite (white). The book also states implicitly that genetics and race play a significant role in determining the ethnic makeup of the two groups. According to Murray, blacks and non–white Latinos have, on average, a lower I.Q. than whites, with Asians having the highest I.Q. of all. Considering the demographics of the U.S., the geographic focus of his "study" contends that the minority population in America is genetically doomed to remain concentrated among the underclass, and that this assertion should be given major consideration in mapping out future social policies in America.

This controversial piece of social pseudo–scientific research earned him an invitation to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst as a "distinguished visitor," with the more credible Dr. Alvin Poussaint of Harvard Medical School agreeing to debate Murray at a 50 percent discount. While there were many who cried foul at Murray's visit, I saw no real inconsistency between this act and the standard operating procedures of the University. In fact, there are more than a few "Dr. Murrays" who are tenured professors here, carrying the authority to pass or fail students on the basis of their acceptance of white supremacist views.

During the debate Dr. Poussaint was more analytical, poking hole after hole into Murray's thesis, and often serving as "interpreter" for Murray, who at times appeared to be speaking a foreign language. The biggest blow, however, came from the audience, as professor William Strickland questioned Murray on a secret closed–door meeting he held with Republicans In Congress. Murray fell into immediate denial, and while disputing whether or not the meeting was open to the public, he avoided disclosing the nature of what was discussed there. He continued to be evasive before finally admitting that the topic was welfare reform, and that his position was to "get rid of it."

Immediately, the intellectual tone of his voice lost its Harvard/MIT sophistication and took on an Midwest cornbelt country drawl. There Dr. Charles Murray stood in all his naked racist glory, exposed as a hired gun for conservative policy makers, and masquerading as a nebulous, pseudo–scientist (as it turns out, Murray's research was funded by a $500,000 grant from the conservative American Enterprise Institute). Throughout the remainder of the debate, Dr. Murray was evasive and avoided many of the questions posed to him.

I used the Jurassic Park analogy at the beginning of this piece because the film deals with genetics, extinction, and the ongoing chaos and destruction caused by too many arrogant people like Dr. Murray, who aim to recreate society to their liking. Like the scientists in the film, Murray and his fellow scientific racists will find out soon enough that their dream of an all–white world created through genetic and social engineering (eugenics) is a hollow one indeed, one that may not end with the extinction of the darker peoples of the world, but rather with the extinction of their own twisted white supremacist ideology.

Martin F. Jones is a Multicultural Affairs contributing writer.

Arts & Living

COURTESY CHRISTINE ALCINO

Tracy Chapman played Sunday night at Smith College.

Chapman makes new beginnings

By Marni E. Helfner
Collegian Staff

TRACY CHAPMAN
John M. Greene Hall, Smith College
Dec. 4

Before Tori Amos, Sarah McLaughlin, Natalie Merchant and Suzanne Vega, there was Tracy.

Tracy Chapman, to be exact. Touring the United States to promote her latest album, New Beginnings, Chapman and her band played John M. Greene Hall on Monday night.

Starting off the show, Chapman sang the title song of her new album. She then launched into "For My Lover," a favorite with the Northampton crowd which cheered as Chapman played the beginning strains. Chapman continued the evening, playing mostly tracks off her first and most popular album Tracy Chapman. Touring to promote her new album, one would expect that Chapman would play more off of New Beginnings than the five or so songs that the audience was treated to.

Chapman then moved into "Heaven Here on Earth" a new track looking at just what the title portrays — earth as a paradise. "Baby, Can I Hold You" and "Across The Lines" from the first album were played with the usual mournful vocals that Chapman is famous for.

Chapman then moved into some new tunes off her second and third albums, Crossroads and Matter of the Heart. After playing a pumped version of "All You've Got is Your Soul," the stage went dark. Chapman then reappeared on a spotlighted stage sans guitar to sing the a cappella "Behind the Wall," a track from her first album about domestic violence.

Chapman performed her most famous track, "Fast Car," with the audience singing along. Chapman continued the evening with songs from all four albums, ending with two encores, one of "Talkin' About a Revolution" and the other of a frolicking version of "Proud Mary." As usual, Chapman left the Pioneer Valley, a happier, folkier, kinder kind of place.

O.J. & CNN discuss potential interview

ATLANTA — O.J. Simpson met with a legal analyst from Cable News Network to discuss a no-holds-barred interview, but he and the network could not agree on the terms, a CNN spokesman said today.

Steve Haworth confirmed that Simpson met with Greta Van Susteren for four hours on Saturday at Simpson's home in Los Angeles. He would not comment further except to say "there are no plans for further discussions at this time."

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported today that the interview would have been with Van Susteren and her fellow legal analyst, Roger Cossack.

"If Mr. Simpson does want to give someone an interview, I suspect that he would be the one to announce it," Van Susteren said today in an appearance on CNN. "I simply don't know who he is going to give an interview to and how it would be announced."

The newspaper also said Simpson told Van Susteren that he was planning a direct-to-market video about his life and the trial.

Simpson was acquitted Oct. 3 in the slayings of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

He agreed to an interview with NBC a week after the verdict, but backed out the day of the interview on advice of his attorneys.

They were concerned about a wrongful death civil suit filed against him by the victims' families.

In Santa Monica, Calif., on Monday, the judge in the civil suit said Goldman's father has seven days to decide which of Simpson's confiscated possessions are crucial to his case.

Police and the district attorney are still holding dozens of items for possible use as evidence in the civil case. Simpson is seeking the return of 144 items — including a knit cap, a loaded gun and Ms. Simpson's house keys.

The civil trial is set for April.

Software makes resumes easy

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

If you are unfamiliar with writing resumes, then there is a new Windows application which makes the job a cake walk

WinWay Resume 3.0 makes writing resumes easy. Not only does the program help you write resumes, but it assists in the creation of cover letters and reference lists. The CD-ROM version even offers an interview tutorial.

Like many Windows applications the interface is relatively easy to learn and intuitive. The tool bar resembles the Microsoft Word 6.0 tool bar, and employs a feature similar to Word. Any time the cursor comes to rest on the tool bar, a brief phrase pops up explaining the action of the icon. Each group of icons on the tool bar are laid out in a grouping, instead of one long monotonous bar which many applications like WordPerfect employ.

On the bottom of the screen is a status bar which allows the user to switch between the resume, cover letter, reference list and tutorial screens. The screen is different for each function, but all the writing screens operate in a similar manner.

Each writing screen displays a page layout view. On the screen, the cursor can highlight an area of the page which is designated for a certain topic such as address and phone number, career objectives, education, etc. Double clicking on the specific area of the page leads the user to a window which simply asks you to fill out the information such as addresses.

An excellent feature is the "AutoWriter" which includes a comprehensive selection of ready-to-use phrases. "AutoWriter" lets an individual simply fill in the blanks about their jobs or activities.

In addition to easing the writing process, WinWay Resume simplifies the layout process. The application allows for the addition of borders and the use of color which some traditional word processors do not provide. Another important feature which word processors lack is the ability to click on an icon which re-sizes a long resume to one page.

The CD-ROM tutorial includes three hours of video and sound. There are two parts to the tutorial. The first part consists of a woman explaining the best methods to search for a job, write a resume, and conduct yourself during an interview. The second half of the tutorial is an interactive interview. There are 25 different interviewing subjects which provide hints and even sample answers.

Although a resume can be created using a standard word processor, WinWay Resume is worth the $39.95 price tag because it provides excellent advice on how to create a great resume.

The application requires at least a 386 processor, 4MB RAM, 2.5 MB hard disk space, 256-color VGA, a sound card, and Windows 3.1 or higher. Grade: A

Rather optimistic about evening news

By Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It just plain galls Dan Rather to finish third.

It grates on him that "CBS Evening News," the flagship of the news division, trails ABC and NBC's evening newscasts.

"I'm not the vice president in charge of excuses, but fortunately I don't really need any, because the broadcast day in and day out is very competitive with the other two," Rather said.

Give him a moment and he will elaborate on CBS' coverage of the Rabin assassination. "We moved quickly," he said. "We got the story fast, and we got the story right. We had by far, I think, the best combination of straight reporting, analysis and background.

"There was one big interview to have following that weekend — his successor, Shimon Peres — and we had it on the air that Monday night."

Rather reels off the contributions of distinguished correspondents like Bob Simon in Israel, Tom Fenton in Moscow, Alan Pizzey in Bosnia and David Martin anywhere at all.

"We've long been a writer's network," he said.

Granted. So why is once-dominant CBS in third place?

"That's a little like trying to determine exactly when a war started," Rather replied. "I think several things happened."

He likened TV news' growth to a glacier: In the '50s and '60s, CBS and NBC were American TV's only international news organizations; most cities had only three channels, and the glacier barely moved.

"In the '70s, ABC emerged and you could hear (the glacier) creak," Rather said. "In the '80s, there was a rush of competition brought on by broadcast deregulation and cable. In the '80s, it was an avalanche."

The ar avalanche also brought networks the budget-slashing, layoffs and takeovers that marked the recessionary 1980s.

All three networks changed hands in 1986, but CBS changed hands again last month, bought for $5.4 billion by Westinghouse Electric Corp.

"I hope we get people with an understanding of and a passion for news, who know how important news is for the network " Rather said.

The late '80s were not kind to CBS. In June 1986, NBC's "Nightly News" snapped the CBS newscast's 213-week winning streak; "Nightly" then beat CBS in the last quarter for the first time in 19 years.

Newscast parity was a fact. CNN's evening newscast arrived in 1989, and ABC's "World News Tonight" began the ratings dominance it enjoys today, with little more than half the TV audience watching the network newscasts.

Rather, nevertheless, declined to discuss the ratings-driven decision that led to his ill-fated, two-year pairing with co-anchor Connie Chung. Neither her arrival nor her departure has lifted CBS from third place.

"My job is to help CBS be in position so that if there's going to be one survivor, ours is the one that survives," he said. "To do that, our delivery system has to get better."

Part of the newscast's ratings trouble derives from a series of station affiliate switches in major markets which, in many cases, moved the network off the low-numbered channels and cost CBS a strong, local news lead-in.

By his count, CBS has undergone 19 affiliate swaps in the last 18 months.

"In Detroit, we have a station that's so high up on the dial you have to have a telescope to see it," he said. "It has no news department. Has not now, nor has it ever had. But that's the hand we were dealt."

Rather is sanguine that CBS will climb back to the top by keeping up the quality of its report and by improving its distribution system.

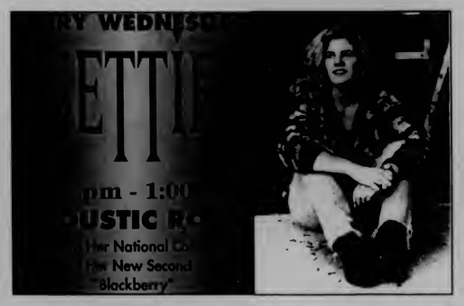
"My hope is that once Westinghouse gets aboard, we'll have a great rush of new thinking — including an overall strategy — that will allow us to improve steadily. It won't come back overnight."

Whatever happens, Rather, 64, says he's there for the long haul. A 34-year CBS Newsman, his contract runs to Dec. 31, 1999.

"I love it when somebody says about me, 'He's been there, he'll be there,' " Rather said. "I think there's no higher compliment."

COLLEGIAN NEWS: Now you know, and knowing is half the battle.

HOME FOR THE holidays



THE PUB
fun · food · spirits
1/2 Price Appetizers and Nachos
9:30 - 10:30
15 east pleasant street · amherst

Come to Barnes & Noble at Boston University's JOB FAIR!
and get off to a great start this winter . . .
If you want a fast-paced job that will get your Winter off to a great start, it's here at Barnes & Noble at Boston University. Boston's best source for books and the best choice for retail jobs. Find out more at our JOB FAIR on December 13th.
• Part-time jobs
• Immediate hires
• Flexible scheduling
•Store Discount up to 35%
• Friendly work environment
You could be a sales associate or a cash office associate – just long enough to get us through the Winter rush and get your bank account in shape. Get here early enough, and you could be hired on the spot!
WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13TH 9AM-3PM CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
If you want to get a closer look at us, but can't come to our JOB FAIR, call (617) 236-7402 for more information.
We are an equal opportunity employer
Barnes & Noble AT BOSTON UNIVERSITY

TRAVEL SMART! FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $140 $280
PARIS $175 $350
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $220 $439
Roundtrip
TOKYO $859
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

COMMUTER AREA GOVERNMENT
Proudly Presents
DR. M. JOYCELYN ELDERS
FORMER U.S. SURGEON GENERAL

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1995
UMASS AMHERST • FINE ARTS CENTER
8:00 PM
FREE ADMISSION
During the Senate hearings on her confirmation, Dr. Elders stated, "I want to change the way we think about health by putting prevention first. I want to be the voice and vision of the poor and powerless."

Men's swim second at NE's

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Perhaps the practices at 6 a.m. did it. Or maybe it was the afternoon workouts. Possibly the weight training. Whatever the Massachusetts men's swim team did to prepare for this weekend's New England Championships certainly worked.

Competing without some of the team's top athletes who were in California for water polo competition, the Minutemen scored 1356.5 points to take second place at the meet. Host Connecticut took home the title with 1379.5 points.

UMass head coach Russ Yarworth, who was also away with the water polo team, handed over the coaching responsibilities to assistant Ben McBride. Yarworth kept in touch with his team via frequent phone calls to the pool in Storrs, and praised McBride's transition into the head coaching role.

"All the credit, all the accolades go to him," Yarworth said. "He did a great job. He's a real leader. Ben got the team to focus on who was there, rather than who was not, and that was key for how we did."

The Minutemen were led by senior tri-captain Keith McLarty. With strong swims in both the 200 and 400 yard individual medleys, McLarty captured two individual New England titles.

McLarty clocked a 1:53.69 in the 200 IM, and a 4:01.47 in the 400 IM. He also took home second place in the 200 yard backstroke, and was the anchor on the 400 yard free relay.

Junior Sean Anderson was a driving force behind the UMass team, scoring points in six events. With a personal best time of :20.98, Anderson took home the individual 50- yard freestyle crown. He also swam the anchor legs of the 200- and 400-yard medley relays, as well as a leg of the 400 free relay. Anderson also placed in the 100 free (second in :45.74) and the 100 back (third in :52.58).

A pair of freshmen impressed Yarworth with their showings. B.J. Brannon and Brian Wisniewski each contributed to the Minutemen's standing. Brannon, who according to Yarworth has been "training his tail off," set freshman records in the 500 yard free and the mile.

Wisniewski had a personal record setting performance in the 200-yard backstroke. Turning in a time of 1:51.36, he claimed the New England title for the event. He placed second in the 100 back, clocking a :51.92. Wisniewski was also part of the 400 free relay.

Yarworth was extremely pleased with his team's performance, especially with key team members unavailable for the meet.

"Everyone really pulled together for this meet's performance," he said. "I can't think of enough superlatives to say about how this team did. No matter how many points they scored, these guys can hold their heads high, because they were the best team out there.

"There was so much comraderie, so much determination," he continued. "Now that they have a little success under their belts, I'm hoping the level of training and that winning attitude will just keep improving."

No. 2 Villanova avoids scare

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI — Villanova squandered a nine-point lead in the final minute and still won.

Kerry Kittles hit a layup with 1.8 seconds left and the second-ranked Wildcats held off Miami 70-68 Tuesday night. The Hurricanes rallied from a 67-58 deficit in the last 53 seconds and tied the game on Steve Edwards' 3-pointer with 12.4 seconds to go.

Kittles then bobbled a pass but grabbed the loose ball, then drove through the lane as a defender fell down and sank the winning layup — his only points of the second half.

"I'm fortunate to have had it in my hands at the end," Kittles said.

"We had an opportunity," Hurricanes coach Leonard Hamilton said, "but a great kid picked it up and scored. He is one of the best players I've ever seen."

A 60-foot shot by Miami's Kevin Norris at the buzzer bounced off the rim.

The Wildcats (6-0 overall, 2-0 Big East) are off to their best start since 1984-85, when they won the national championship. Their No. 2 ranking is the highest in school history.

"We're very happy to go on the road and get a win," coach Steve Lappas said. "That's something that's always tough to do." The Hurricanes (3-1, 1-1) lost despite their frantic rally in the last minute.

"A lot of kids in our locker room are crying and very emotional," Hamilton said, "because they know we had an opportunity to win."

After Miami's Alex Fraser hit two free throws to reduce the deficit to 67-60, Villanova's Rafal Bigus missed the front end of a 1-and-1. Anthony Rosa's 3-pointer for the Hurricanes with 38 seconds left made it 67-63.

Miami forced a turnover, and Fraser scored with 27 seconds left. After Alvin Williams hit one of two free throws for Villanova, Edwards rebounded a teammate's miss, dribbled into the corner and hit a 3-pointer to tie the game 68-68.

"The game was in our hands," Lappas said. "We made mistakes down the stretch that we cannot make. But I'm not complaining. I'll take the win."

Kittles scored 18 of his 20 points in the first half. Williams added 17 points, and Bigus and Eric Eberz scored 10 apiece. "If teams are going to pay more attention to Kerry, the rest of us have to get more involved and make the difference," Williams said.

Kittles scored six points during a 13-2 spurt that helped the Wildcats transform a nine-point deficit, their biggest of the game, into a 32-30 lead. They were ahead 37-34 at halftime.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

losses to the Tigers by a combined score of 32-5. Led by senior Peter Geronazzo's 25 points, CC has eight people over 10 points.

CC also has an exceptional net-minding tandem in Ryan Bach and Judd Lambert, who split the team's minutes. Lambert, a draft pick of Lou Lamoriello and the goalie-smart New Jersey Devils, leads the WCHA with a 1.97 GAA and a .924 save percentage.

All the tools necessary for a serious title run can be found in Colorado Springs. The only question is whether or not the Tigers, a weak post season team in recent years, can make it to the Final Four. The talent is clearly there.

• Much has been said about how coach Anson Dorrance was able to establish the UNC women's soccer dynasty by using his role as coach of the US National side in recruiting.

It's interesting to see similar happenings in college hockey where Jack Parker coaches the US Junior National team, in addition to defending national champion Boston University.

Of the four high school players on the Team USA roster, two signed letters of intent during the early signing period. One, Bloomington-Jefferson High School star defenseman Ben Clymer surprised almost no one when he signed with Minnesota. A vast majority of key players for the perennial Minnesota state champion have gone on to play for the Golden Gophers. The team's second early signee, Cushing Academy's highly touted forward Tom Poti, has signed a letter of intent to attend BU. Surprise, surprise.

• The race for Hockey East Rookie of the Year is down to two, Maine defenseman Brett Clark and Reasoner. The two have either won or shared the league's top rookie honor for six of the past seven weeks.

Reasoner has certainly scored some key goals, leading the otherwise listless Eagles, but doesn't have substantially more points than Clark, while Clark has also played steady defense to accompany his scoring.

Clark has helped to fill a tremendous void left by the graduation of Chris Imes, Dave MacIsaac and Jacque Rodrigue. In addition, Clark and his Maine defensive cronies shutout Reasoner's Eagles twice at Alfond Arena, which gives Clark a slight edge in this tooth-and-nail race.

• Yet another has left the Black Bears' den. Last month Barry Clukey quit the team after squabbling with coach Shawn Walsh about his ice time or lack there of. Clukey has since returned to his hometown of Waterville, Maine and applied for admission to Colby College.

Senior Wayne Conlan also left the team this past weekend after a dispute with Walsh over his ice time. Conlan's decision to leave the potentially NCAA bound club during his final season in Orono seems rash. Unable to transfer and maintain eligibility, even one shift a month would be more than what Conlan will get now.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

■ NFL

continued from page 10

final two wildcard berths. Oakland (8–5) should clinch one of them as soon as Jeff Hostetler is healthy.

John Elway can always put points on the board for the Broncos, so it's their defense that will determine whether or not they go to the playoffs. The last two games they have given up 67 points (to Houston, a loss and Jacksonville, a win). If that continues, they won't be in the playoffs.

The clubs that have a pulse, but need more help than William "The Refrigerator" Perry getting into a tutu, are Seattle and San Diego, both at 6–7. If not for early season losses that should have been W's, like Seattle's debacle vs. the Jets two weeks ago, these teams would be in good position. Now they aren't even in good shape for the draft.

The NFC is even more confusing at this point, because of teams far exceeding expectations.

San Francisco has finally gotten itself to look like the team everyone thought they could be. The 49er turnaround has been spurred from an often over-looked force, their defense. The Niners have forced 16 takeaways the last four weeks while blowing out whatever team opposes them.

There wasn't much I was right about in my pre-season picks, but Brett Favre's success is one thing that I did foresee. He alone has brought Green Bay to the top of the heap which is the Central division. Robert Brooks has filled the very big shoes of Sterling Sharpe and Mark Chmura has blossomed at tight end in Keith Jackson's absence.

Provided Dallas beats Philly (8–5) this week they will have sewn up the East which leaves a horde teams looking at the three wildcards.

Eagle coach Ray Rhodes has no faith in either of his QB's Rodney Peete and Randall Cunningham, which hurts his teams chances. The defense has put them in a position to make the playoffs, but the same can't be said for the offense. Philadelphia looked passed Seattle and got beat. It's a loss they'll lose sleep over during the long off-season.

Scott Mitchell is finally playing like his salary suggests he should. His $12 million contract was criticized in Motown but he and Herman Moore (101 catches) have become as good a pitch-and-catch duo you'll find in the NFL.

They also have Barry Sanders in the backfield who can turn a game around quicker than it takes Liz Taylor to change husbands. The Lions finish with three teams playing for nothing but better draft positions to help out their cause.

Atlanta could have put themselves in the driver's seat had they held off Miami in the closing minutes Sunday. Now they must play the Saints and Carolina, both 6–7 and need to knock off the Falcons to have a shot at the postseason. Then comes the finale against the Niners who have outscored Atlanta by over 100 points the last three meetings.

Minnesota (7–6) has been hot and cold all year and Dennis Green does what it takes to make the playoffs but can't seem to get passed the first round. Chicago has also looked like they can play with anyone at times, but then games like Monday night's shellacking by the Lions. It's tough to gauge these two teams.

St. Louis (7–6) has made the most of its Mickey Mouse schedule and their last three games are at home, but that shouldn't be enough to get the Rams into the playoffs.

The most interesting thing is that Tampa Bay (6–7) could be the most influential team in the playoff picture. They play Green Bay, Chicago and Detroit, all potential playoff teams to close out the season. And if they were to win out...Oh I forgot, these are still the Succaneers.

Justin C. Smith is a Collegian columnist.

Collegian Graphics
We just work here (and only on week-days)

Show Your UMass SPIRIT!!

Call today for your appointment
PATRICK & Company
104 Russell St. (Rte. 9) Hadley
586-7477

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS...
DOING THE JOB NO ONE ELSE WANTS TO DO

It looks like the real world.
It feels like the real world.
It pays like the real world.
It's an internship.
Unreal.
Call for more information on this unbelievable opportunity.
Kathleen M. Kane
The Steffen Agency
1551 Main Street
Springfield, MA 01103
413/748-6000
Northwestern Mutual Life
The Quiet Company

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Rental Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $49.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(One Mile from UMass bus route)

50,000 EYES WILL LOOK AT YOUR AD IF PLACED IN THE
COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Now for your convenience at the Campus Center Concourse on Thursdays.
Ask for our specials.

When Was The Last Time You Had A Good Meal?

Come to Bueno Y Sano and try the healthiest, most filling food in the valley.
Bueno Y Sano
1 Boltwood Walk • Amherst • 253-4000

Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists. LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares. Call for great Spring Break packages.
HELLER TRAVEL
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berkley
Boston MA 02115 • 1-800-843-1544 - Toll Free

Ever Think of writing for Sports?
Stop by the Collegian Office at 113 Campus Center

This Wed Nite at Mikes
Our usual great prizes
Tee's, Mikes Money & Bruins Tickets
Come watch UMass Basketball
Free Buffet at Half Time
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Thursday Nite is Bud Ice Nite lots of Great Prizes
Drink Specials
16 oz. Bud Ice 99¢
16 oz. Rum & Coke $1.25

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD
Kai Hin delivering Sunday through Thursday 11:30pm and Friday and Saturday till 3am 549-2774

Attn: All University Women: Dr. Omega invites you to a pre-rush holiday party on Dec. 14th, 1-5 pm. Call Becky at 549-1551 to reserve one.

Sigma Kappa Open rush Wednesday, December 6th - 9pm 19 Allen St. Townhill Hillside. Questions? Call 256-6887

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment for rent starting Jan 1st. 2 bathrooms, on bus line, near school. Contact Nagh, 549-8415.

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Olds Cutra Runs good, new parts $3000 obo. Heather 772-0648

91 Hyundai Excel 5 spd very well maintained, new parts $5,995, miles $7,995 Call 256-6689

EMPLOYMENT

$40,000+ Triathlon training firm is looking for hard-working graduates with a bachelor's degree. Must be able to work 60-70 hrs per week. Call Mark at (401) 596-0141 or fax (401) 596-0140.

BABSON COLLEGE BOOKSTORE
Help Wanted for Babson College bookstore from mid-December until late January. $5.00 per hour. Call 617-239-4179.

Environmental Jobs Two winter break positions available. Earn $250/week working to save the environment with Massirg (usual $5/week). Call Jen at 746-6438.

Fund Raiser Motivated group needed to earn $500s promoting AT&T Discount Calling Cards. Since 1969 we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina 1-800-592-2121 Ext. 190. Free CD to qualified callers.

Hey DJ's! National spring break tour operator seeks experienced disk jockey/mc's to host spring break parties and activities on Canyon's Mazatlan's and Nassau's hottest clubs for the 1996 season. Room, trans. and salary grow. Please fax resume to (617) 267-9235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel, 76 Summer St. Boston MA 02110. Attn: Product Development

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday 5pm-10pm Saturdays 11am-5pm and Sunday 3pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hrs per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hr. We're in the Mt Farms Mall, which is a stop on the free bus line. Call between 9am-5pm Mon-Fri (413) 586-8535. ABT Associates Inc. phone research center Mt Farms Mall, Rte 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An equal opportunity employer

Local Representatives Needed Post circulars. Receive lifetime commissions! No investment! 1-800-796-7351

Looking to hire enthusiastic, dedicated, and experienced personal trainer who gets results! Call 549-5539

Spring Break Da Sisa Reps National spring beach tour operator seeks resp people to work in Cancun, Mazatlan, Nassau and Florida during the 1996 season. Room, trans, salary and training prov. Fax resume to (617) 262-3235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel, 76 Summer St. Boston MA 02110. Attn Product Dev.

Travel Abroad and Work Make up to $25-$45/hr. teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

Wa want you Unique liquor related product. Retails for $200. Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and if only 2 sales per day in each location - your profit $32,400 first year! 941-768-9001

WMUA is looking for a sports director and woman's affairs director. For more information call WMUA at 545-2876

FOR RENT

Two 900 Rs Be creative to earn big money. Call 253-5782

FOR SALE

CD Rom games for Mac. 7th guest, myst gadget, full throttle, original packaging 584-0942

Classic Video Game systems. For buy/sell/trade. Email act@nebula.ont.umass.edu or call 256-1995.

Double bed practically brand new, mattress, boxspring, frame $225. Call Elaine 549-9811

Furniture 7 futons, bed, mattress, all just three months old. Call Tobi 256-6606

IBM pc 8x4 computers both come with mon. Make great wp cheap! Call 6-0540

Kegerator $200. 2 year old iguana 4 x 2' tanks all supplies incl. $700 specialized handrock 18" mountain bike $175 or bo 549-9186 Larry or Denise

Phish Tickets!!! Great seats, call Geoff @ 253-9609

Pioneer VSX 453 dolby surround receiver, 100 watts/channel remote 6 month old $188 582-9889

Printer for sale Laser printer quality output for mac. Great for papers. Asking $175. 256-1688

Running shoes Asics gel-ds trainer mens 9. Worn once (runs 1/2 size small) 546-7738. Cost $110 asking $80 obo

Top of the line Volkl skis for sale at an unbeatable price---boots for sale bc Lon at 253-1882

UMass vs Maryland 2 tickets for basketball tourney in Maryland 4 games. If interested, call Anthony @ 549-7324

Women's K2 salmon skis 170 w Bindings & poles included. Asking $200 or bo. Call 546-1444

1995 Irish $30 Excel cond $450 or bo Call Peter @ 253-2617

286/386 Computer System $105/$205 Keyboard, CPU, monitor Call Steve (413) 566-3324

FOUND

Cross Pen with inscription near bus stop by the grad tower on 11/28. If yours please call to identify. Debby 549-4261

Found a pair of glasses in the parking lot of fraternity/sorority park on Nov 24th. Please contact the University Career Center, info desk at 545-2225.

LOST

Lost a yellow spiral bound notebook in Tobin 304. Contact Karen 545-5893

MISCELLANEOUS

Reward $500 CASH!!! for any info regarding the robbery of 45 Southpoint Dr over Thanksgiving leading to the arrest those involved. All names anonymous. Please call Cory at 253-1540

MUSICIANS

Bootleggers/Deadheads want to sell your recording equipment? Call RT 549-5976

PERSONALS

Congratulations Amanda, Jody, and Todd. I'm proud of all of you. Love Always, Jackie

Congratulations new sisters of AXO. Amy, Heather, Jodie, Cortney, Stacey and Shannon

Hey There Jerkeys You guys rock my world! Candice hope you feel better and Tara you're always styling. love you two. love shnns Slicksters - I missed you guys while I was in Maryland but I'm sure we'll make up for it this weekend. I'll be off the drugs and back on the bud. Rock on girls!

Love ya, Nitz

HEY * 2!!!
Thanks for another great weekend. When can I come over and hibernate?? 5+2=Goofy

ROOM WANTED

Danish exchange student looking for room near Amherst. Jasper 546-2942

Single female seeks room for rent immediately. Must be on bus line. Call Marie @ 549-5049

ROOM FOR RENT

Large room for rent 1 or 2 people prefer M/F. Large house, close to campus. Call 549-6942

Looking for upbeat female to share 2 bedroom apt. Available Jan 1 - Aug 31. Negotiable Call 549-4935.

One bedroom in a five bedroom house. Smoking OK. $270 per month. 256-4295

Room for rent Private home quiet neighborhood kosher/vegetarian kitchen. Laundry, parking furnished. $325 incl. Jan 30 549-4853

Room at Cliffside Avail Jan 1. For spring sem. $315/mo inc. all util. Grad student pref. 665-7810 Chris

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted to share room in Crestview Apt. Begins 1/96. $190 per month call Nicole 549-1291

Fully furnished one bed in two-bed apt. $250/mo. quiet. Female only. Graduate preferred. 256-1285 Hyon

A Woman wanted to share room in great house in great location. Call 549-4827 ASAP!

Rent 1 bedroom in 4 bedroom apt on bus route. Very nice. 270/month all incl. Call 253-3736 Now!

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located (1/2 mile to UMass and center of Amherst) beautiful 3 bedroom, 2-1/2 bath condo at Amity Place. Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen, and great sunset views. Must be responsible, cat-loving, non-smoker. $425.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3866

Roommate wanted non smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month. On bus route. Start Jan 1st. Call Anne 253-1605 heat & hot water included

SERVICES

Free financial aid! Over $ billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income, or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext F50012

RESUME
Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union. 545-2271

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silverscape Designs 764 N. Pleasant St Amherst 253-3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

One Room Available in three bedroom apt for spring semester in Amherst Ctr 253-6985

Room to rent in Puffton 2 rooms available. Call Kevin 549-5221

TRAVEL

JAMAICA
Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril! $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

Cancun-Bahamas Book now and receive all meals and unlimited drinks all week long! *Free*Free* As low as $349.00/100% guarantee prices, you only pay for your friends and now you go free, it's that easy. call now 1-800-484-7816 code S-U-R-F

Catch a jet! Cancun/Mexico $189 r/t Europe $169. Call $129. Call Airtech for more info! 800-326-2009

Intercollegiate ski trip Ski with 200 Jewish students form the Northeast and Canada Jan 26-28. Sign up by December 15 with Beth at 549-1710

Spring Break Bahamas or Florida Keys. Spend it on your own private yacht! One week only $385.00 per person including food and much more. Organizers go for free! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters 1-800-783-4001. See us on the net http://www.shadow.net/~xsail

Winter Break Special Killington week $269. Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

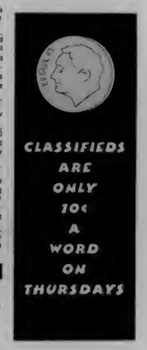
WANTED

Wanted UVC-TV 19's graphics department is looking for Amiga software that can generate text and continuous loop. Contact Dan at 545-1336

Models Wanted National published sports and actions photos seeks athletes/models for photo shoot will photo you and your sport. 413 584-8585

WANTED TO RENT

Two females looking for a place to stay over winter/season. Please contact Tara at 549-6170 or Stacey at 549-7105 if you are interested



HOROSCOPE

Aries (March 21-April 19): The urge to gamble on a new hair and you will save sour hours, time, money and embarrassment. Minor decisions merits careful thought. Be diligent.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Persistence can be solved if you apply them carefully. Do not let a frivolous acquaintance interrupt an important conversation. Try not to make advice just because you think it's what they give you.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Know a good thing going. Compliment others on their successful accomplishments. With your quick mind, you can turn a situation to your advantage. Keep savings in the bank.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): You can easily overcome obstacles today. Your intuition should tell you when to keep silent and when to divulge to the majority's wishes. You are headed in the right direction where romance is concerned.

Leo (July 23-Aug 22): If problems arise face them with poise. Taking a gloomy attitude will accomplish nothing. Think positive! Solutions are close at hand. Romance is a source of happiness.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Aim high today but also take a close look at your schedule. Go over personal procedures, then proceed with vim and vigor. With a positive attitude you cannot lose!

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Certain things are inevitable. Do not allow emotionalism to take over. Consider every aspect of an issue. Realize the importance of saving monies for investment purposes.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do some holiday cooking in advance. Borrow cookbooks and experiment with new recipes. Loved ones will be happy to give their opinion. Trust an intuitive hunch over logical analysis.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Experience may be a costly teacher but there is no better way to learn. Be philosophical about a loss. Reach out for new opportunities. Your generous ways are widely admired.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Minor irritations could lead to a major outburst unless you exercise self-control. A problem cannot be solved in the conventional way do what must be done and do it thoroughly. Mail holiday greetings.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay alert. Watch for those special moments when you can advance your best ideas. You benefit and so do your dependents! Teamwork can boost profits. Small favors will be repaid in a big way.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): If a big business deal is on the line, others may be willing to compromise. Take the initiative when it comes to drawing up agreements or contracts. Welcome newcomers into your social circle.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tuesday Ticker

Market closes as of 4 p.m. month ##

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	5,177.45	+37.93
NYSE Index	329.79	+2.19
Nasdaq Composite Index	1065.89	-3.90
AMSE Index	539.41	+1.08

Market Reports

Compiled by Matt Wurtzel

NEW YORK (AP) — Sales of everything from homes to heavy equipment could benefit if interest rates continue their dramatic declines, economists said as a key government bond hovered around a major milestone.

The yield on the government's 30-year Treasury bond dipped below 6 percent during trading Monday, a level last seen more that two years ago. It settled at 6.02 percent, the lowest level since October 1993 for the rate that serves as a benchmark for many consumer and corporate loans.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

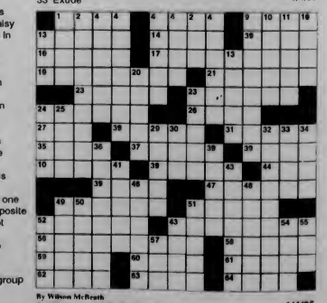
ACROSS
1 Fees: Abbr.
5 Place —: wager
9 Air pollution
13 On the ball
14 — contendere
15 Table d'—
16 Rajah's consort
17 Pianist Alec in Mass.?
19 Imperil
21 Strains apples for sauce
22 Major followers
23 Deserves
24 Individual
26 Saharan
27 Ernie of golf fame
28 Peruses
31 Secluded spots
35 Love god
37 The March King
39 Appellation
40 Copier component
42 Paper measures
44 Author Anais
45 For fear that
47 Yearly differences
49 Type of daisy
51 Miss Loos in Iowa?
52 Halfpiece
53 Dramatist Maxwell in Indiana?
56 Satchmo in Iowa?
58 Hindu aphorisms
59 Malarialike fever
60 Piscivorous birds
61 Indian, for one
62 Profit's opposite
63 Manuscript mark
64 Social flop

DOWN
1 Highland group
2 Actress Florence in Kentucky?
3 Important people
4 Loud-voiced orator
5 Sweetens
6 Transvaal war
7 Shade tree
8 Silk hat
9 Actress Ann in Wyoming?
10 Choral composition
11 Midwest Indians
12 Ike and others
13 Exist
18 Melodramatic
20 Heredity units
23 Italian marble center
24 Bog product
25 Admiral Zumwalt
29 Main artery
30 Rightful
32 Actor Burt in Pennsylvania?
33 Exude
34 Mems. of Congress
36 Falls back
38 Change the Constitution
41 Bowling alley button
43 Observes secretly
46 Cubic meters
48 Sign —: suspend hostilities
49 Syrup source
50 Organic soil material
51 Feeling of dread
52 Luzon volcano
53 Actress Archer
54 Toward the mouth
55 A Bobbsey twin
57 Leftover

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

B	E	S	T	S		B	R	A	S		S	W	A	P
E	V	E	R	Y		R	U	S	T		T	I	T	O
S	I	M	O	N		I	T	S	A		N	T	S
S	L	I	P	O	F	F	T	H	E	T	O	N	G	U	E
				D	O	A		S	U	M
L	A	P	S		C	N	N		S	E	A	T	S
A	R	A	T		A	N	I	L		G	R	A	T	E
M	E	R	E	S	L	I	P	O	F	A	G	I	R	L
B	A	S	E	L		C	A	G	E		O	N	U	S
	L	I	L	A	C		S	A	L		N	O	T	E
				N	O	B		R	O	E
G	A	V	E	T	H	E	P	I	N	K	S	L	I	P
A	B	E	D		A	L	I	T		I	T	A	L	Y
S	I	N	G		N	O	S	H		N	E	V	E	R
P	E	T	E		S	W	A	M		G	R	A	D	E

1/4/95



By Wilson McBeath
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 1/4/95

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

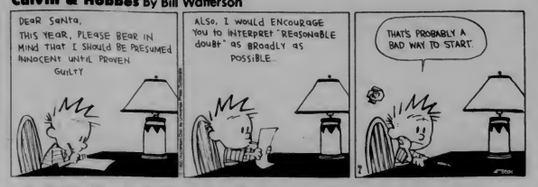
Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



DEAR SANTA,
THIS YEAR, PLEASE BEAR IN MIND THAT I SHOULD BE PRESUMED INNOCENT UNTIL PROVEN GUILTY
ALSO, I WOULD ENCOURAGE YOU TO INTERPRET "REASONABLE DOUBT" AS BROADLY AS POSSIBLE.
THAT'S PROBABLY A BAD WAY TO START.

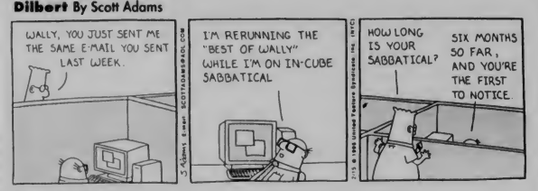
The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

I DID IT! ONE MORE WHACK AND THE DOOR'S HISTORY!
SO YOU GUYS TAKE OFF! NO ONE'S GETTIN' THE WALL-CRAWLER BUT ME!
WHILE, INSIDE ROSART'S OFFICE...
GOODBYE, SPIDER-MAN!
NOOO!
WAAAH!

Dilbert By Scott Adams

YOU SHOULD ALL FOLLOW WALLY'S EXAMPLE OF HOW HE QUANTIFIES HIS CONTRIBUTION TO REVENUE.
BASICALLY, I ASSUMED MY PROJECT WOULD FAIL WITHOUT ME. THEREFORE ALL THE REVENUE IT GENERATES CAN BE ATTRIBUTED TO ME.
AREN'T WE ALL ON THE SAME PROJECT?
YES, BUT EVIDENTLY WE'RE NOT ALL EQUALLY VALUABLE.

Dilbert By Scott Adams



WALLY, YOU JUST SENT ME THE SAME E-MAIL YOU SENT LAST WEEK.
I'M RERUNNING THE "BEST OF WALLY" WHILE I'M ON IN-CUBE SABBATICAL
HOW LONG IS YOUR SABBATICAL?
SIX MONTHS SO FAR, AND YOU'RE THE FIRST TO NOTICE.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

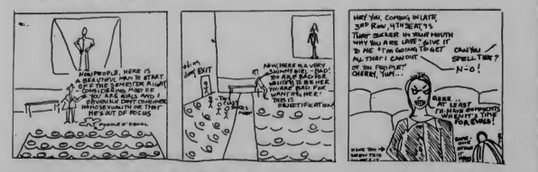
SO...I SIMPLY ASKED HIM TO GO HOME.
SO YOU DRAGGED THIS POOR BOY HOME TO YOUR LAIR, AND THEN YOU DIDN'T SLEEP WITH HIM?
YEAH, CRAZY, HUH?... I FEEL LIKE I'M GETTING OLD. THE TEMPTER, WILDER ME WOULD HAVE NEVER DONE THAT...EVER.
COULDN'T KEEP UP IN THE FAST LANE. NO LONGER THE JOLLY BUNGER OF LEGEND. CAN'T EVEN LIVE UP TO HER OWN CONQUESTS.
LISTEN, DON JUAN, I DON'T SEE YOU GETTING ANY.
ZEBRA CUPS

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

I'LL BE DESIGNATED DRIVER TONIGHT.
WHY'S EVERYONE LOOKING AT ME?
GREAT! PASS ME ANOTHER BEER!
THE SIAMESE TWINS DISCOVER ONE LAST DISADVANTAGE TO HAVING A SHARED BLOODSTREAM.

GeoFrey By Embryo

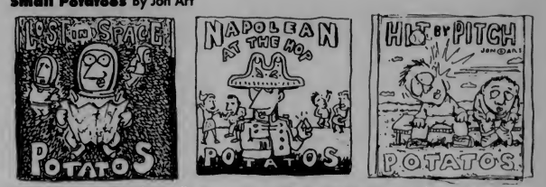
Don't Go There By K & Justine



HMMPROFF! HERE IS A BEAUTIFUL DAY TO START A DIET! THIS TIME I'M GOING TO DO IT RIGHT! NO MORE SNACKS BETWEEN MEALS! NO MORE FAT FOODS! NO MORE SWEETS! YOU ARE GIRLS AND I SERIOUSLY DON'T CONSIDER MYSELF ONE OF THOSE WHO SEEMS TO THINK THAT IT'S ALL IN THE MIND! IT'S ALL IN THE FOCUS!
MACHINE GUN VERY IMPORTANT! ALSO BAZOOKA! ALSO BOMBS! ALSO FIRE EXTINGUISHER! ALSO BAIT FOR WHATEVER WE WANT TO KILL HERE! THIS IS PROJECTILE WAR!
HEY YOU, COMING IN LATE, 3RD RAW, 4TH SEAT'S TOOTHPICK IN YOUR MOUTH WHY YOU ARE LATE - GIVE IT TO ME - I'M GOING TO GET ALL THAT I CANNOT GET OF THE FOOLISH CHEESE, TOO...
CAN YOU SPELL THIS? N-O!
BEEP BEEP AT LAST I'LL HAVE DIFFERENCES WITH WHICH I CAN FORGIVE!

Monkey Socials By Boogaloo Shrimp

Small Potatoes By Jon Art



Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Did you ever meet an insensitive stutterer? I already told you that only sensitive people stutter.

Sometimes when life was getting too hectic I used to force myself to stutter when ordering a donut. It was my way of being kind to myself.

What I haven't told you is that I found a better way to be tender to myself...
I'll stop my hectic day and go over to this beautiful brook by the grass and listen to the water talk to me.

Wha wha wha wha what do do do do you think?

Close to Home By John McPherson

Police in Wagmon County devise an effective method for pulling over speeders.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Matt Audette
Copy Editor ..... Allison Connolly
Photo Technician ..... Daymion Smith
Production Supervisor ..... James Ganley
Production ..... Brian Inocencio
Dave Voldan

Dining Commons Menu

Today

LUNCH
Beef Stew
Chicken Cutlet Sand.
BASICS LUNCH
Greek Style Skillet
Chicken Cutlet Sand.

DINNER
Hot & Spicy Wings
Baked Ziti
BASICS DINNER
Korean BBQ Tofu
Baked Ziti

Tomorrow

LUNCH
Cheese Pizza
Reuben Sandwich
BASICS LUNCH
Cheese Pizza
Garden Vegan Burger

DINNER
Blk Pepper Roast Beef
Fried Shrimp
BASICS DINNER
Beans and Rice
Carrot Onion Schine

Friday

LUNCH
Fishburger
Ravioli
BASICS LUNCH
Red Beans
Fishburger

DINNER
Savory Beef Strudel
Turkey Tenderloin Fillet
BASICS DINNER
Curried Chick Peas
Turkey Tenderloin Fillet

Wanna earn a buck?
NOW HIRING
NOW HIRING
NOW HIRING
NOW HIRING
NOW HIRING
Collegian Graphics
The Buck Stops Here

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10 By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Things that just don't go together

10. The end of the semester and doing work.
9. Beer and hard liquor.
8. Top 10 lists and the University Tour Services.
7. Billy Joe Armstrong (of 'Day) and flawless dental work.
6. Talking dolphin jokes and making people say, "Gee, I don't think I'll ever get sick of that one!"
5. Tarantino and children's films.
4. UMass hoops and losing the A-10.
3. Cool, mature people, and those who write "top ten sucks" on my door.
2. Joining the century club, then having a nice, fresh bowl of cottage cheese.
1. Purity and Madonna.

Quote of the Day

There are two kinds of truth. There are real truths and there are made-up truths.

–mayor Marion Barry, Washington, D.C.

Sports

Duncan, Demon Deacons duel Minutemen

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

When the 1995-96 Massachusetts men's basketball schedule was announced, and college basketball fans would run their fingers down the list of dates and opponents, they stopped on tonight's match-up and smiled widely.

The No. 10 Wake Forest Demon Deacons will be at the Mullins Center tonight to take on the No. 3 Minutemen. What seems to intrigue fans even more is the battle that will ensue between pre-season All America selections, Tim Duncan and Marcus Camby.

Who could argue their enthusiasm?

Both Duncan and Camby would have been selected in the NBA draft had they chose to declare themselves eligible. Instead, they rule the college hardwood scene as they continue to torch opponents with their superlative talent.

Duncan, a 6 foot-10, 240-lb. junior, has averaged nearly 36 minutes in the Demon Deacons first three games, all of which they won. He accounts for almost 40 percent of the team's scoring and rebounding.

Along with those lofty statistics, the 19-year-old leads the team in blocked shots (5 blocks per game) and assists (5 assists per game) as well.

Camby has looked equally, if not more impressive in his play this season. Though he doesn't play the amount of minutes (29 mpg) that his counterpart does, he still contributes 25 points, 8 rebounds, 4 blocks and 2 assists per game for the Minutemen.

Though the two players have similar numbers on paper and mean the most to each of their respective teams, they are decidedly different players on the court.

"Tim has a variety of good low post moves," Camby said. "Where I like to run the floor and beat my man for easy baskets, play on the perimeter more, and be more of a slasher."

What seems to be forgotten with all the hype is the play of each big man's supporting cast.

In UMass' claiming the championship of the Franklin National Bank Classic, the team defense and steady half-court offense play of Dana Dingle and Edgar Padilla were exemplary. Without those such players as well as help the of Inus Norville and Tyrone Weeks off the bench in Camby's absence, UMass would not have been as successful.

"Dana Dingle played outstanding. He should have been on the All Tournament team along with Edgar Padilla," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "Donta Bright also played well, got a double-double against Maryland and he didn't play well in the first half."

Junior Ricky Peral is the other main scoring threat, besides Duncan from Wake Forest as he cashes in with 15 points a contest, with a remarkable shooting percentage on three- pointers at 70.7 (12 of 17). Sophomore Tony Rutland also drops in 12 ppg.

Both big men acknowledge the excitement surrounding the game and are downplaying the showdown between them.

"This game is five-on-five, not one-on-one," Duncan said. "My teammates and I will have to be aware of Marcus Camby at both ends of the floor, but there are four other guys on that team we have to be aware of too."

"This game has been hyped since the beginning of the season," Camby added. "I want to play, play my hardest and get it over with. After it, I'm not going to look at how I did and how Tim played. We just want to hit our stride around tournament time."

Camby vs. Duncan

Monsters of the middle – Both UMass' Marcus Camby (left) and Wake Forest's Tim Duncan were selected to the pre-season All-America team and the two will square off in against each other tonight as the No. 3 Minutemen host the No. 10 Demon Deacons.

No.10 Wake Forest Deamon Deacons (3-0)

F	Sean Allen
F	Ricky Peral
C	Tim Duncan
G	Rusty LaRue
G	Tony Rutland

No.3 Massachusetts Minutemen (3-0)

F	Donta Bright
F	Dana Dingle
C	Marcus Camby
G	Edgar Padilla
G	Carmelo Travieso

On the Air

TV: ESPN Sean McDonough, Dick Vitale

Radio: WMUA 91.1 FM Anthony Guido, and Dan Welch
WHMP 99.3 Mark Vandemeer, Jack Leaman, and Tony Barbee

Boston College is scoring goals; on itself

It not only rains but it pours for Boston College.

North Carolina's women's soccer team wasn't the only team victimized by an own goal on Friday, as the Eagles one-upped the Lady Tar Heels by giving UMass-Lowell not one, but two freebies in a span of just 1:51, erasing a 3-1 second period BC lead.

The first Lowell goal came as a delayed penalty was being called against the River Hawks. Goalie Greg Taylor came to the BC bench for the extra attacker, and while regrouping in his defensive zone, the Eagles' Greg Callahan lost control of the puck. Despite throwing his stick at it, his efforts were in vain and Callahan could only watch painfully as the puck struck the far post and into his own net.

Due to the uneven placement of the benches at Conte Forum, Taylor had not yet physically left the ice as the puck crossed the line, so yes, BC bashers, the empty net goal is counted against Taylor's goals-against-average.

Leigh Torbin on College Hockey

On the following Eagle power play, Martin Fillion sent Ed Campbell and Brendan Concannon in two on one against BC's super rookie Marty Reasoner. Not exactly a Hockey East Rookie of the Year candidate for his adept defensive play, Reasoner redirected a harmless pass from Concannon past Taylor, to tie the game at 3-3.

This is just the latest chapter in what has so far been a winter of discontent for the Eagles, who find themselves tied with Northeastern and looking up at every other Hockey East team, except for underachieving Merrimack.

• I have been asked by a few people exactly how good No. 1 Colorado College is and if the "Buffalos" are indeed a better team than No. 2 Boston University, which looked phenomenal against Massachusetts this weekend.

The answer is "yes, CC is incredible."

The Colorado College Tigers are 9-0-3 on the season while wallowing in virtual anonymity to the general public.

The two-time defending WCHA regular season champs rode a 12-game undefeated streak, tied for the longest in school history with CC's 1956-57 NCAA championship team, into last night's tilt with 1-10-3 Air Force. The Falcons were swept at home this weekend by Division III RIT.

The Tigers are an explosive team on offense. CC has tallied twice in a minute four times this season, and twice within two minutes 10 times. The Tigers have also scored five goals in a period thrice.

Ask Northern Michigan if CC's a good team. In four meetings so far this year, the Wildcats have four

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

Moger nets winner as B's outshine Stars

Boston (AP) — Sandy Moger and Steve Leach scored third-period goals and Adam Oates added two more to lift the Boston Bruins to a 6-4 win over the Dallas Stars on Tuesday night.

Moger's goal came with 2:33 left in the game, on a rebound of his own shot to put Boston on top 5-4. Leach got his fifth of the season into an empty net with 27 seconds left.

The win broke a five-game (4-0-1) unbeaten streak for the Stars, who got power-play goals from Grant Ledyard and Greg Adams. The win was the second straight and eighth of the season at home for the Bruins.

Oates, who was playing in his fourth game since returning from a sprained right knee, got his first goal since Oct. 12 against San Jose at 7:08 of the first period.

His second goal of the game and fourth of the season came with only seven seconds left in the second period to tie the game at 4-4. He also assisted on Leah's goal.

Cam Neely's 14th goal of the season came at 3:58 of the first period to give the Bruins a 1-0 lead.

Scott Bailey (5-1-2) turned back 24 shots while Andy Moog (5-5-3) stopped 31.

Shawn McEachern scored Boston's other goal, his ninth the season, on a power play in the second period.

Darien Hatcher and Richard Matvichuk both scored their first goals of the season for the Stars. Ledyard has three goals in his last five games and Adams three goals in his last six. Mike Modano and Dave Gagner assisted on three of the four Stars goals.

Penguins 6, Islanders 3

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Mario Lemieux extended his point-scoring streak to nine games with a goal and three assists as the Pittsburgh Penguins won their sixth straight, 6-3 over the New York Islanders on Tuesday night.

Markus Naslund had a goal and two assists and Tomas Sandstrom, Glen Murray, Chris Joseph and Jaromir Jagr also scored for the Penguins, who are two points behind the Eastern Conference-leading Florida Panthers.

Ken Wregget stopped 19 shots for his fifth victory this season. Tommy Soderstrom made his second straight start for New York, and stopped 21 shots. Bob Sweeney, Wendel Clark and Zigmund Palffy scored for the Islanders, who had a two-game winning streak snapped.

Sweeney's disputed goal at 5:37 of the first period gave New York a 1-0 lead.

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Defensemen Don Sweeney (in white) and the Boston Bruins exacted revenge for their earlier loss this season to the Dallas Stars as last night the Bruins won the rematch 6-4.

Playoff picture hazy as season winds down

With just three weeks left in the regular season, the first two divisional titles have been clinched. The AFC Central and West crowns were won this weekend by the Pittsburgh Steelers and Kansas City Chiefs respectively.

First lets say au revoir to the nine teams that have already been eliminated, i.e. teams with eight losses already. That leaves 10 spots remaining, with 19 teams still having legitimate shots at post-season play.

Justin Smith on the NFL

What comes into play at this juncture of the season is the strength of the remaining schedule. If you play cupcakes the rest of the way, your chances are good. I'll attempt to dissect the combatants, starting in the AFC.

The East is still looking for someone who wants to win it. The Bills (8-5) had it under control until losing back-to-back games against the Pats'-ies and 49ers. Now its up in the air as the Dolphins (7-6) finally won a late season game and the Colts (7-6) don't seem to go away.

Key here for the Bills is that two of their last three are on the banks of Lake Erie. There is no offense that likes to enter Rich Stadium in December and they have the Dolphins over for dinner in two weeks. Not even Green Peace can save them from getting eaten by Buffalo.

Just as the leaves do in Autumn, the Dolphins free fall when the weather turns cold. They got by due to bad coaching on Atlanta's June Jones' part but won't be so lucky Monday night as they face Marty Schottenheimer's Chiefs.

Jim Harbaugh is a gritty player. If he can walk though injured, he'll be on the field come game day. His teammates will respond with the effort needed to play in January.

That leaves the remainder of the Western division to decide the

Turn to NFL, page 7

Dickie V is "Holding Court" today in the Campus Center

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

He's all over the place. He a celebrity. He's a media mongrel. He's a coach. He's an author. He's loud. He's enthusiastic. He's arguably the most recognizable voice in sports. He's Dick Vitale and he's coming to the University of Massachusetts today.

Vitale, the color commentator for both ESPN and ABC's college basketball, will be signing copies of his new book Holding Court: Reflections on the Game I Love at the University Store between 11:30 and 1:30 p.m. this afternoon. Copies of the book will be available at the Campus Store for $22.95.

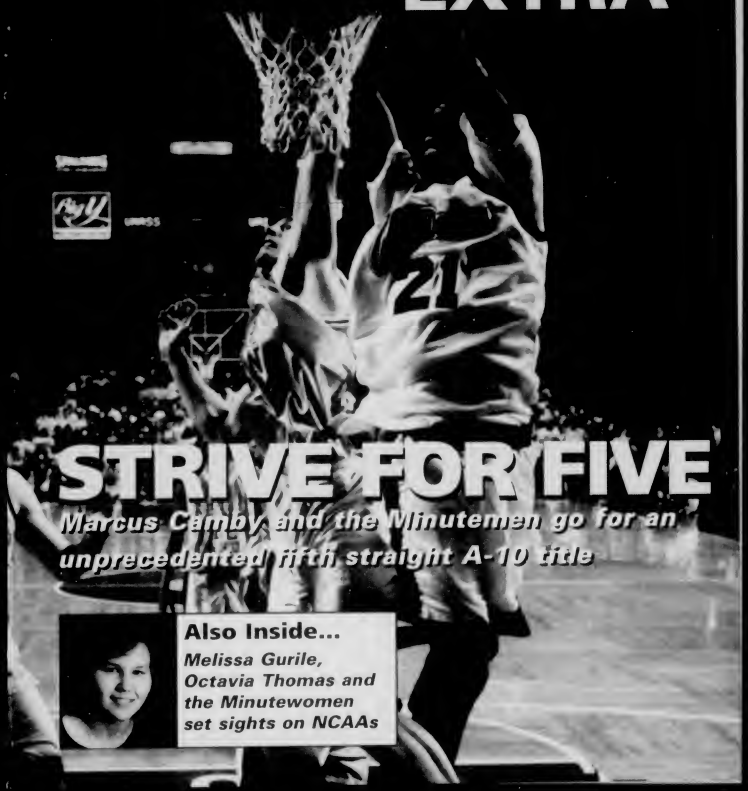
Vitale is the former coach of the University of Detroit and the Detroit Pistons and has been working as a broadcaster for ESPN ever since. He will be in Amherst tomorrow to broadcast the basketball game between Massachusetts and Wake Forest, in what will be one of the most heavily media covered games in the history of the William D. Mullins Center.

The book is Vitale's fifth and in it he discusses: coaching, who's the best in the business, and how the profession has changed; academics, and has the increased emphasis on them really helped; players leaving school early; and the NBA salary cap.

The book, like his four other offerings, is written entirely in Vitalespeak, the unique hybrid of English that has turned Vitale from an ex-coach into a legend in the broadcasting industry.

A Special Publication of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

EXTRA



STRIVE FOR FIVE

Marcus Camby and the Minutemen go for an unprecedented fifth straight A-10 title

Also Inside...

Melissa Gurile, Octavia Thomas and the Minutewomen set sights on NCAAs

TEXTBOOK BUYBACK

To Students...

The Annex buys books from students throughout the school year. But, the best time ti sell is during the buyback at the end of the semester. At that time the Annex will pay 50% of the list price for a book if we have an order for that book for the following semester and we need to purchase copies. If we do not, the wholesaler may make you an offer.

To Faculty...

Please order your spring semester books before December 12. If you do, we may be able to offer students (who want to sell their copies and get some money back) 50% of the publisher's list price. Then your spring semester students will have the choice of buying used books and saving some money. When you order early your current and future students benefit.

Textbook Scholarship Fund

For every spring semester course order placed before the start of buyback on December 14, the Annex will contribute 5$ to the Textbook Scholarship fund. Then, during buyback students can enter a drawing for $100 Textbook Scholarships. During the last school year 55 Scholarships were awarded! We would like to award more this year but, for the program to grow faculty must remember: Order Early!

When is Buyback?

December 14 & 15
Textbook Annex - 9a.m. - 4p.m.
Campus Center - 9a.m. - 5p.m.

Saturday, December 16
Campus Center - 11a.m. - 5p.m.

December 18 & 19
Textbook Annex - 9a.m. - 4p.m.
Campus Center - 9a.m. - 5p.m.

December 20 & 21
Textbook Annex - 9a.m. - 4p.m.
Campus Center - 9a.m. - 5p.m.
Hampden in Southwest - 10a.m. - 6p.m.

December 22
Textbook Annex - 9a.m. - 4p.m.
Campus Center - 9a.m. - 5p.m.
Hampden in Southwest - 10a.m. - 6p.m.

December 26 & 27
Textbook Annex - 9a.m. - 4p.m.

Other Important Textbook Information

The Spring Semester Opening Buyback will be held January 29, 1996 - February 6, 1996 in front of the University Store.

We discount all new copies of books at 5% off the publisher's list price.

We have a large selection of used books.

Textbook Annex

1995-'96 Basketball Preview

Page 4
Senior co-captain Donta Bright will need to score more points this year with the loss of All-American Lou Roe.

Page 8
Senior co-captain Dana Dingle will need to take up more of a leadership role this season for UMass.

Page 14
Player of the year candidate Marcus Camby leads the Minutemen in their quest for a fifth straight A-10 title.

Page 32
Senior captain Melissa Gurile has one more chance to lead the Minutewomen to an A-10 title.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
SPORTS EXTRA
A Supplement to New England's Largest College Daily

Project Supervisors

Matt Vautour ..... Editor-in-Chief
Kara Kilduff ..... Special Issues Coordinator
Candice Flemming ..... Sports Editor
James P. Ganley ..... Production Manager
Earl T. Martin ..... Business Manager
Ethan Bloomfield ..... Advertising Manager

Contributing Writers

Justin C. Smith ..... Sports Associate
Chris Stamm ..... Sports Associate
Casey Kane ..... Sports Associate
Andrew Bryce ..... Staff Writer
Matt Vautour ..... Staff Writer
Brian Perillo ..... Staff Writer
Mike Brown ..... Staff Writer
Leigh Torbien ..... Staff Writer
Steve Grant ..... Staff Writer
Ted Kottler ..... Staff Writer
Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. ..... Staff Writer

Photography

Daymion Smith ..... Photography Editor
Emily Reilly ..... Staff Photographer
Paul Bilodeau ..... Special to the Collegian

Production and Design

Tony Morse ..... Editorial Production
Natasha Kahn ..... Advertising Production
James Bruneau ..... Production Staff
David Voldan ..... Production Staff
Scott Sisun ..... Production Staff
Leah Wheary ..... Production Staff

Advertising Sales

Luis A. Luna ..... Account Executive
Rachel Haselkorn ..... Account Executive
Andrew Frescura ..... Account Executive
Jason Endich ..... Account Executive
Erica Marrama ..... Account Executive
Tony Cielakie ..... Account Executive
Alison Costello ..... Account Executive
Jaclyn Alberti ..... Account Executive
Rebecca Stefansky ..... Account Executive
Lori Segal ..... Account Executive
Craig Brody ..... Account Executive
Ryan Duques ..... Account Executive
Dave Smith ..... Account Executive
Christine Stewart ..... Account Executive

Professional Staff

Lyle A. Henry ..... Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski ..... Asst. Oper. Manager
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. ..... Graphics Advisor

Publisher

Turley Publications Inc.
Palmer Massachusetts

Sports Extra is a special publication of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, a registered student organization at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. The Collegian reserves all rights to this magazine. No portion may be reproduced or distributed without prior written consent from the Collegian Executive Board.

Smart sex is like basketball.

When it's one-on-one you need good defense.

Use a condom.

University of Massachusetts,
University Health Services,
Health Education Division
549-2671 ext.181

Peer Health Connections Hotline
549-2671 ext.168(confidential)

Ski with us this year!

We're Bigger and Better Than Ever!

NEW Triple Chair!
NEW Lodge!

and the new SKI HAUS at Berkshire East

Call 413-339-6617 for:
• Season Passes
• Group Rates and Family Specials
• Up-to-the-minute SKI REPORTS

Berkshire East Ski Area
Rte. 2 • Charlemont, MA – Just 18 miles west of Greenfield

$3 OFF any full-day adult pass!
Bring this ad to the ticket window. Valid for the 1995-96 season. Cannot be combined with other offers. Some restrictions apply.

HU KE LAU
RESTAURANT & DINNER THEATER
CHICOPEE, MA 01020

LET THE HU KE LAU HOST YOUR NEXT EVENT

Fraternity, Formal, Banquet • Birthday, Family • Parties • Luau

Come enjoy the food and great atmosphere. Dance the Hula, or be amazed by the spectacular fire dance!

Call Bonnie at 593-5222

A Total Polynesian Experience.

UMASS SEEKING A FIFTH STRAIGHT A–10 TITLE

By Candice Flemming • Collegian Sports

The Massachusetts men's basketball team had a dream season a year ago — an Elite Eight appearance, as well as a fourth straight Atlantic 10 Championship, on its way to a 29–5 record.

Entering the 1995–96 season, the Minutemen will shoot for an unprecedented fifth straight A–10 championship, and look to go farther in the NCAA tournament. But there are huge holes to fill — mainly Lou Roe and Derek Kellogg.

The losses leave UMass with little depth, as opposed to last season when depth was one of the Minutemen's strength.

Roe's shoes will be the biggest to fill as he was the heart and soul of last year's team, leading the Minutemen in scoring and rebounding on his way to becoming the first consensus All–America in UMass history.

Now the leadership roles fall on senior co–captains Donta Bright and Dana Dingle. Both will be looked upon to score more with the loss of Roe. Bright averaged 9.2 points last season, often showing flashes of his tremendous potential. Dingle is known mainly for his defense and versatility, but he needs to develop a more consistent shot in order for the Minutemen to be successful.

"These guys are big parts of what UMass basketball is all about," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said.

Junior National Player of the Year candidate Marcus Camby returns to man the paint, putting off the NBA for at least one more year. Camby is without a doubt the key to the team — and the Minutemen will go as far as his mobility and shot–blocking ability will take them.

As important as Camby is to the Minutemen, Calipari stresses the fact that UMass is not "a team that will rely on one guy."

The rest of UMass' frontcourt is solid, making it the Minutemen's strongpoint. Tyrone Weeks and Inus Norville should both see a lot of minutes.

In the exhibition opener against Dinamo, Weeks was impressive grabbing a team–high 11 boards, but he could be slowed by the foot surgery he had in July. Norville came off the bench all of last year but could start occasionally this season, which he did against Dinamo. Over the summer Norville gained valuable experience playing in the Olympic Festival, and enters the season much–improved.

Senior Rigoberto Nunez is another player who should see a lot of playing time, mainly coming off the bench. Nunez' hard work over the past three seasons as a walk–on has earned him a scholarship for his final season.

Senior Ted Cottrell, who saw limited action a year ago, will come off the bench again this season.

UMass is thinnest at the guard position as only two, Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso, return from last year's team. Those two juniors, along with freshman Charlton Clarke, will be counted on heavily to take the pressure off Camby down low.

Walk–on Ross Burns and Giddel Padilla, the older brother of Edgar, round out the backcourt for the Minutemen. Burns and the elder Padilla will likely see little action but according to Calipari "if they deserve to play, they'll play."

Clarke, who had knee surgery during the preseason, will contend for time at both guard positions. The flashy Bronx native should make an immediate impact on the Minuteman squad with his size (6–foot–3–inch, 210 pounds) and quickness.

"He works his tail off. He's physically ready to play," Calipari said. "We're expecting him to be able to add some things and help us."

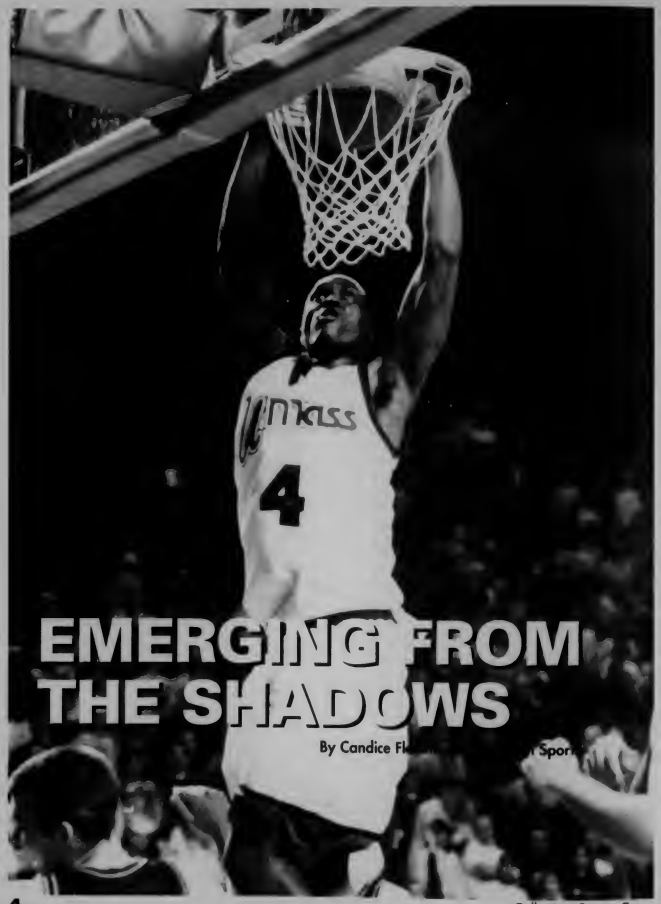
With the lack of depth in the backcourt, both Bright and Dingle could see time at the two–guard.

Expectations are once again high for the Minutemen. In the preseason polls, UMass has been ranked as high as No. 7 (Associated Press and ESPN) and as low as No. 17 (Sports Illustrated). Street & Smith's poll had UMass at No. 10 while The Sporting News had UMass at No. 15.

"It will be hard for the team to match what people expect," Calipari said. "[But] we have the chance to be special again. We are the team everybody wants to beat."

UMass' schedule is once again extremely tough, as the Minutemen will face off against such teams as Kentucky, Maryland, Wake Forest, Louisville and Memphis.

"We've overscheduled and I worry about that. There is not a lot of room for error or foul trouble. We are ready to go out there and challenge the best." Calipari said.



EMERGING FROM THE SHADOWS

By Candice Fl... ...Sport...

When Donta Bright first came to Massachusetts four years ago, he was a highly-touted recruit, the highest rated prep to ever sign with UMass. He came from one of the best high school program's in the country — Dunbar, where he helped lead his team to a 29-0 record and the nation's No. 1 ranking from USA Today as senior. He was a Street & Smith's Top Five Player and the Gatorade Player of the Year in Maryland.

Needless to say, there were high expectations when he signed.

But Bright was forced to sit out his freshman year under Prop 48 requirements. The time away from the game set him back a bit, and on the whole, Bright has yet to live up to the potential he came to UMass with.

Will he finally live up to all the hype?

He did show flashes of his potential earlier on in his sophomore year. In his fifth collegiate game, he earned his first start — and made the most of it. In 24 minutes of action, he scorched Oklahoma for 28 points on 13-for-15 shooting, while also pulling down 10 rebounds.

Other flashes came against Cincinnati, when he scored 21 points, and during the final 11 games of his sophomore season, when he reached double figures in all 11 games except one. On the season, he averaged 10.8 points and 5.8 rebounds.

Entering his junior season, most were expecting Bright to increase his scoring output. And in the season opener against Arkansas, he did just that, scoring 24 points to help the Minutemen upset the No. 1 Razorbacks.

Bright had more flashes during last season, but again, he still hadn't performed as was expected coming out of high school.

As much as the UMass fans wanted to see Bright scoring more in his first two seasons, he really didn't need to score much, because the Minutemen had Lou Roe. But now with the graduation of the All-American, Bright must step it up offensively.

"I'll be looking to score more points but I'm going to try to do other things," Bright said. "Like the hard work that Lou did, rebounding and defense, and being a leader out there on the floor."

In his two years of action, Bright has been a steady rebounder, averaging 5.8 boards as a sophomore and 4.6 a year ago. With the loss of Roe, UMass' all-time leading rebounder, Bright will have to pick it up in that department as well.

"I have to," Bright said about grabbing more rebounds. "Everybody's got to do it collectively. Everybody's got to be like 10 percent of what they did [last year]. I think if we do that, we'll be fine."

Entering this season, Bright is looked at once again to break it open offensively, to finally play to his fullest potential. He's been named to various preseason All-Atlantic 10 teams and was rated as the No. 21 small forward in the nation by Dick Vitale's College Basketball.

Along with scoring more this season, Bright, along with fellow co-captain Dana Dingle, must become a leader.

"I'm going to have to [be in a leadership role] because I'm one of the experienced players coming back," he said.

With the lack of depth at the guard position, Bright could see a lot of time at the two-guard spot, a situation that is fine with him.

"Hopefully, [I'll see time there]. I've been working on it up to this point," Bright said. "I'll do anything to just help the team win."

One part of Bright's game that has been impressive but goes unnoticed, is his shot-blocking ability. His 68 career blocks put him at No. 7 on UMass' all-time list.

Bright feels confident about the Minutemen's chances as they begin the quest for their fifth straight A-10 title.

"[How far we go] all depends on how much work we put in. If we work real hard, we can go far. But if not, we're going to have a miserable season," Bright said. "But we got a bunch of guys who are going out there to work hard to try and improve themselves, and also help the team win. So if we just keep that up, we can go pretty far."

With this being his final chance to show UMass fans what they've been waiting to see for three years, Bright seems primed to finally break it open.

Player Profile

Donta Bright

Co-captian
6-6, 223
Senior forward

"I'll be looking to score more points but I'm going to try to do other things. Like the hard work that Lou [Roe] did, rebounding and defense, and being a leader out there on the floor." – Donta Bright

1993-94
10.8 ppg, 5.8 rpg, 24 blocks
1994-95
9.2 ppg, 4.6 rpg, 44 blocks

Career highs
Points: 28 vs. Oklahoma 11/28/93
Rebounds: 11 vs. Duquesne 3/2/94
Blocks: 6 vs. St. Bonaventure 1/30/95

UMass basketball

Want A Front Row Seat?

Before the Game
After the Game or to see
Away Games!

Great drink specials, BIG Screen TV, munchies, and best of all we are located on campus!

Come to the TOC Lounge!

11th Floor Campus Center Mon-Sat 4:30 pm - 12:30 am

Visit The University Store For The Largest Selection Of Officially Licensed UMass Clothing & Gifts

STARTER

Popular STARTER® jackets
From $49.99 To $109.99
Show Your Support For UMass Basketball

Just The Right Jacket For Game Day
Breakaway II • The Trainer • Lineup Pullover • Future
Overtime Pullover • Athlete Jacket • Motivator • Rocket

UNIVERSITY STORE

Campus Center
University Of Massachusetts
545-2619

Monday Through Friday
9am to 5pm
Saturday 11am to 3pm

Convenient Parking In The Adjacent Campus Center Parking Garage

FRESHMAN GUARD BRINGS EXCITEMENT TO UMASS LINEUP

By Candice Flemming • Collegian Sports

Looking at Massachusetts freshman guard Charlton Clarke, it's hard not to get excited.

The first thing one might notice is his size. At 6-foot-3, 210 pounds, Clarke is one of the bigger guards UMass has ever had, giving him the ability to fight off defenders and grab his share of rebounds. As a senior at St. Raymond's high school in the Bronx, Clarke pulled down 7.3 boards a game.

Then there is his athleticsm and versatility. Clarke can play both the point and shooting guard positions, giving the Minutemen some much-needed depth in the backcourt.

And then there is his shooting touch.

From behind the arc Clarke is solid, as he set a St. Raymond's record with 125 career three-pointers made. Overall, he averaged 27.6 points in his final year and scored 1,082 career points.

Simply put, Clarke has the potential to do great things at UMass, and the preseason honors being thrown his way show that.

Street & Smith's national Freshman of Influence Team. Atlantic-10's preseason Rookies of Influence team. Atlantic- 10's preseason Newcomer of the Year by Dick Vitale's College Basketball. Tabbed as the top freshman in the conference by ESPN College Basketball.

"He'll bring a lot of enthusiasm [to the team]. He's very athletic, very vocal," Massachusetts center Marcus Camby said. "He's going to help the backcourt out a lot, because we need that help.

"He has the chance to be one of the best guards to ever come out of this program. He's that's good."

Senior Donta Bright agreed.

"He'll be real good. He can shoot the ball, be strong. He can go in for that rebound," Bright said. "He's got a lot of toughness with him. I think he's a great addition to our ball club."

Coming in with impressive credentials and considerable hype could be too much pressure for some freshman, but not Clarke, who claims to have no problem dealing with pressure.

"I already put myself into this position. I had the determination to be good and by me making myself better, and going out and playing against the best competition, I just feel like this is another step for me," he said. "So I just have to come out here and prove once again what kind of player I am and what kind of talent I can show."

Clarke will likely show his talents at both the point guard position and shooting guard positions, but it is unclear where he will see more minutes.

"I feel more comfortable at the two because I've played it all my life, but I can handle the ball at the one," Clarke said. "I'm here to do what [Coach Calipari] wants. So if I have to play the one, I'll play the one. If I have to play the two, I'll play the two."

Clarke has been slowed during the preseason by a knee injury, which he aggravated enough on Midnight Madness to warrant surgery. As excited as he was to begin his first season of collegiate ball, Clarke wasn't too discouraged that his start would be a bit delayed.

"I'm a person that has a lot of heart and a lot of confidence in myself," he said. "So it's just a little layoff I have to take because of injury, but I'll be alright. [With] the determination I have, hopefully, I'll come back well and hopefully help this team like I was brought in to do."

The Minutemen's schedule this year is again tough, and it pits Clarke against some of the very best guards in the country.

On Dec. 22, he faces Stephon Marbury and Georgia Tech; It's Kentucky's Wayne Turner and Tony Delk on Nov. 28; Duane Simpkins, Johnny Rhodes and Maryland on Dec. 2; and Tyson Wheeler from Rhode Island on Feb. 20.

"It just goes on and on every game. [I'll] come out and there's gong to be a good guard in my face," Clarke said. "So I just have to overcome the challenge and basically go out there and do what I'm capable of doing."

Clarke was attracted to Amherst because he liked "UMass Basketball."

"[This is a] great program with a great coach. I like the style of play, [it's an] open style of play. Guards here can put up a lot of shots, work it inside, outside," Clarke said. "When Marcus is high get the ball to Marcus. When it's not going well for Marcus or anybody else down low the guards are allowed to shoot the ball. There's not a lot of hassle about it. [It's a] very open style of play. Everybody gets to show their talents on this team."

When Clarke is 100 percent injury-free and finally gets to display his many talents, UMass fans won't be disappointed.

Player Profile

Charlton Clarke

6-3, 210
Freshman guard

"He's going to help the backcourt out a lot, because we need that help. He has the chance to be one of the best guards to ever come out of this program. He's that good." – Marcus Camby

Senior year at St. Raymond's high school
27.6 ppg, 7.3 rpg, 5.4 apg

Player Profile

Dana Dingle

Co-captain
6-7, 220
Senior forward

"This is the year I have waited for – for three years. This is the opportunity I have waited for. To be captain, step up, and be a major contributor to the team." Dana Dingle

1992-93
4.9 ppg, 3.7 rpg, 33 assists
1993-94
8.0 ppg, 6.2 rpg, 56 assists
1994-95
7.0 ppg, 5.5 rpg, 50 assists

Career Highs
Points: 20, vs. Kansas 1/26/93
Rebounds: 11, vs. Cleveland St. 11/18/93
Assists: 5, three times

VERSALITY HAS MADE DINGLE VALUABLE

By Mike Brown • Collegian Sports

For senior Dana Dingle, the 1995–96 season is his chance to shine.

Dingle enters his final season with the Minutemen. He has been one of UMass' most consistent and overlooked players throughout his three years. Dingle has played in all 100 games since he has been with the team, and has quietly made noise.

"This is the year I have waited for — for three years. This is the opportunity I have waited for," Dingle said. "To be captain, step up, and be a major contributor to the team."

Dingle has played in the shadows of the current Detroit Piston Lou Roe, the former team captain and leader of the Minutemen, for the last three seasons. This year Dingle, along with fellow senior co–captain Donta Bright, will provide leadership for UMass through it's 1995–96 campaign.

As captain, coach John Calipari will depend on Dingle to carry the leadership burden through the long schedule. Dingle has learned what it takes from his predecessors such as Roe, Derek Kellogg, Harper Williams and Tony Barbee, to lead as captain. Dingle has a style of his own to offer to this year's squad.

"I try to lead by example. Some of the other players might be a little more emotional, but I try to do the things that the coach asks and what is right," Dingle said. "The younger players can follow me by doing what is right."

Emerging from the shadow of Roe, Dingle's role on the court has changed. In the past, he has collected the loose baskets and rebounds Roe or junior center Marcus Camby were not able to convert, averaging seven points and 5.5 rebounds per game last season. This season, National Player of the Year Candidate Camby returns, and it will be Dingle who will be looked upon to complement Camby as a force in the paint.

"I feel last year my role was a little different. I would try to help the team in whatever way, but this year I have got to step it up more offensively and that's where people get recognition," Dingle said. "Everybody knows I can rebound and play defense, but a lot of people don't know if I can score, or the other features of my game.

"This year, I will be more offensive–minded than I have been in the past. I'm looking to double my numbers and better myself in every aspect of the game. When it comes down to the end of the game, when we need key plays, I hope to be called upon to make that big play."

Dingle's best basketball qualities have been displayed banging under the basket. However, this season holds a new feature to his game that has not been as visible in the past.

With the Minutemen guard core looking thin, the 6–foot–7 left–handed shooter, will be seen playing guard. Dingle is no stranger to burying the 15–foot jump shot and will be featured as a shooting guard when necessary.

"I feel that I am the most versatile player on the team. I can pretty much play every position except for maybe center because of the height thing," Dingle said. "I've worked hard and will probably play a little guard when called upon. If I am open for a three–point shot, then I will shoot."

Dingle's versatility is a quality coaches dream about. He has the proverbial "nose for the ball", and loves to crash the weak–side glass. Dingle is arguably the strongest member of the team and his work–ethic is as good as it gets.

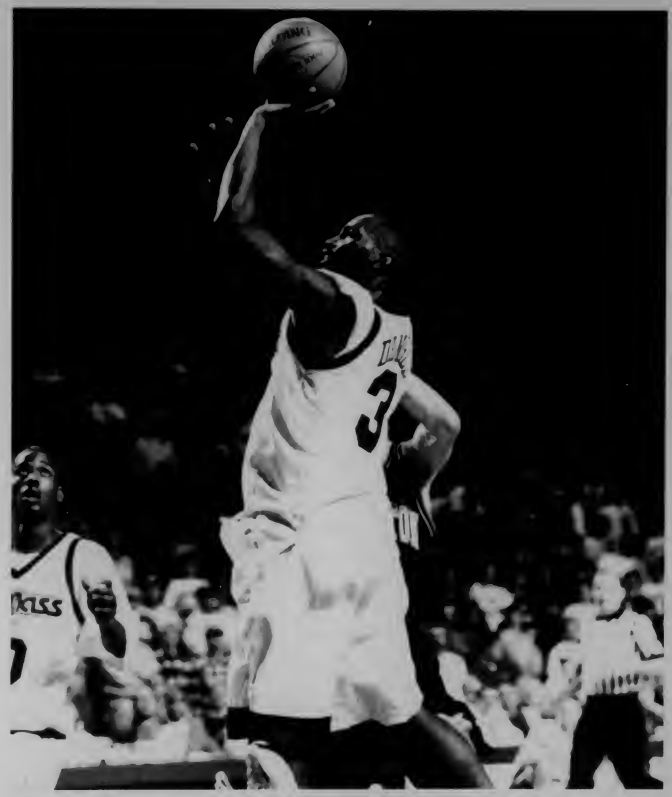
"When called upon to do something out there, whether it be defense, offense, rebound, all–around aspects of the game," Dingle said, "when called upon, I will get it done."

Dingle has completed three full season at UMass and has collected as many rings in that time. This year, the Minutemen are shooting for a fifth straight Atlantic 10 championship. Beyond that, UMass made it to the Elite Eight of the NCAA tournament last year. This year, the Elite Eight doesn't cut it, for the Minutemen have the ultimate on it's mind.

"The Atlantic 10 championship will come first. If we win the Atlantic 10 this time, it separates us as the first time we have won the league five times in a row," Dingle said. "But overall, our main goal is to win the National Championship."

Dingle will graduate upon conclusion of the year and look to advance his basketball career. So, what is in store for Dana Dingle post–UMass? Well, a professional career runs in the family. He is the first cousin of NBA players Doug and Steve Edwards.

"My first goal is the NBA. I just have to work hard and put the numbers up, and hopefully I will get drafted or get into a camp where I could make the team," Dingle said. "If that doesn't work out, then there is overseas, but right now my main focus is the NBA."



Player Profile

Rigoberto Nuñez

6-7, 195
Senior forward

"I am thinking about winning a championship. We have that in perspective. I'm looking forward to winning the whole thing and cutting down the nets. I believe that we can do that."

– Rigoberto Nuñez

Career Highs
Points: 6, four times
Rebounds: 12 vs. Holy Cross 12/11/93
Assists: 4 vs. Duquesne 1/24/95

HARD WORK AND ENTHUSIASM PAY OFF FOR NUÑEZ

By Justin C. Smith • Collegian Sports

A general preconception of athletes on highly-publicized teams is that they take for granted their gifts and care very little about those surrounding them.

Spending 15 minutes with Rigoberto Nuñez could quite possibly be the easiest way to dispel the fact that all athletes fall under that perception.

When Nuñez, a Lawrence native, walked-on to the Massachusetts basketball team three years ago, he immediately became a fan favorite with his hard work and spark off of the bench. This year Nuñez got a reward for his work as a Minutemen — a full scholarship.

"I'm proud [of the scholarship] because I worked hard for that," Nuñez said. "My mother's very happy that I got the scholarship because now the bills don't have to go home."

A lot of Nuñez's mentality and approach to the game comes from his mother, and he uses her strength as a motivational factor on and off the court.

"She's everything to me. She talks to me a lot and tells me what to do," Nuñez said. "[She] makes sure I go on the right path and I am not messed up, and doing the right thing all the time. She's authoritarian but she helps me out on any issue that is effecting me.

"I believe because my mother was always strict telling me that this is what you have to go and do. That's a tribute to her and to Coach Cal because he says, as well as my mother, you never know when the last time you step on the court is gonna be. And when I had surgery that hit me even more. It's pretty simple how an athlete can go in just a second."

When Nuñez steps onto the basketball court, he sends the crowd into a frenzy with his enthusiasm and his hard work, especially on the defensive end of the game. That part of his game is something that he takes great pride in.

"[Playing defense] is basically hustling. You have to have pride in defense," Nuñez said. "Because anybody can go on you at any time and they can just kill you on the court. It's something everybody should be able to do.

"Nobody is supposed to be a great shooter and nobody is supposed to be a great leaper, but to me, I think everybody should be able to play defense. You don't need great basketball skills to be a great defender."

The senior enjoys his camaraderie with the Minuteman fans, and the fact that they understand and appreciate his job on the court. The interaction and reaction between the two entities is not lost on Nuñez.

"I am so grateful that the fans have supported me through out my four years here," Nuñez explains. "And I want to say thank you to everybody for all the things that they have done. It feels great when I come out and everyone goes crazy. I love playing at UMass and I love playing at home because of the relationship I have with the fans."

The emotion that Nuñez brings to the court, he also brings to support other athletic teams on campus. He has been known to not only make appearances at lacrosse, volleyball, and field hockey matches, but to also be very vocal in his support at those games. It is his way of letting the other athletes know they are noticed.

"It's just basically being happy for everyone's success. That's something else my mother taught me," Nuñez said. "Don't be envious because somebody is getting all the press or the hype, or their doing something that you're not capable of doing. You gotta' encourage them and be happy for everyone's success."

In terms of the success of the 1995–96 edition of the Massachusetts men's basketball team, Nuñez looks to contribute wherever he can. Either by being that inspirational spark off of the bench or getting some key rebounds, as well as points, when the opportunity arises.

And with his contribution, along with the rest of his teammate's talent, he feels there is nothing that they cannot do in terms of winning.

"Having as good of a team as we so, I believe we are a better team," Nuñez said. "Maybe not as deep, but a better team than before. I am thinking about winning a championship. We have that in perspective. I'm looking forward to winning the whole thing and cutting down the nets. I believe that we can do that."

If winning games came down to the measure of ones heart and desire, Rigoberto Nuñez would be a winner every time.

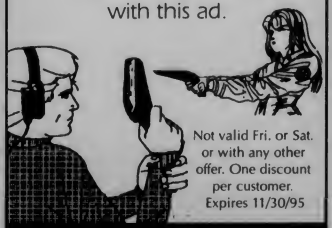
Get Real!

You hide, you seek, you BLAST!

LASER STORM
The Ultimate Laser Tag Game!

It's not virtual, it's REAL..... It's the most exciting, interactive laser tag game in the Galaxy!

LASER STORM...
where YOU are the action!
GET TWO GAMES FOR THE PRICE OF ONE...
with this ad.



Not valid Fri. or Sat. or with any other offer. One discount per customer. Expires 11/30/95

Hampshire Mall • Hadley, MA
586-8345
Blasting Daily.... Call for times

Player Profile

Edgar Padilla

6-2, 175
Junior guard

"I'm going to try and do as good of a job as Derek [Kellogg] did, and take it as a challenge. Just work hard and help the team."

–Edgar Padilla

1993-94
4.5 ppg, 88 assists, 34 steals
1994-95
7.1 ppg, 98 assists, 42 steals

Career Highs
Points: 17, twice
Assists: 8, twice
Steals: 6 vs. Stanford 3/19/95

TAKING OVER THE REIGNS

By Andrew Bryce • Collegian Sports

It is practice, and Edgar Padilla is running the point for the first team. He dribbles to the left of the perimeter, abruptly stops and, with a man in his face, spots up for a three-pointer. Swish.

The very next play: Padilla is again running the offense. He then drives to the basket, leaves his feet, and tries to make a pass inside, only to throw it out of bounds. Calipari gets on Padilla's case. Turnover.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team will put the ball into Padilla's hands to get things going. Before the ball is lofted into the air for a Marcus Camby alley-oop jam, before Carmelo Travieso spots up for a three, before Donta Bright slashes to the hoop, Padilla is the man asked to get it to them. And there's something that is needed, which has been there for the last four years in the starting point guard role.

Consistency.

Derek Kellogg, as steady as they come, was lost to graduation. When the consistent Kellogg was at the point, Padilla played some off-guard. When Kellogg went to the bench, Padilla saw time at the one guard. Now that Kellogg has become a UMass alum, Padilla looks back on playing with Kellogg, and sees stepping into his shoes as a test.

"It's a good challenge," Padilla said. "I'm going to try and do as good of a job as Derek did, and take it as a challenge. Just work hard, and help the team. There are always expectations because Derek did such a good job. I just have to run the team, and get everybody involved."

To remember Kellogg in his first two years as a Minuteman, he wasn't this consistent, confident leader of the offense which has been described. He was tame, he was reserved. He lacked the confidence to successfully run a UMass team like he did in his last two years. He would dish off to a teammate, rather than take the opening shot.

Padilla's different. The Puerto Rico native hasn't been afraid to pull the trigger since the first day he put on a Minuteman uniform. He will shoot when you need, pass if it's necessary. He's what Massachusetts coach John Calipari has called "fearless" many times in the past. And though this contributes to his occasions of inconsistency, the confidence can only help in being the floor general for the Minutemen.

This confidence has an apparent source via summer basketball. In the off-season, Padilla gets some of the best workouts possible. He has participated in the Puerto Rican summer league for the last two offseasons, playing for Guayanabo of the Superior League.

"It helps because you play tough competition," Padilla said. "It steps up your game up, and it'll help because we'll play against some great guards this year."

The 6-foot 2-inch, 175 pounder said it was a tough transition coming off the foot injury he suffered during last year's Sweet 16 NCAA Tournament run.

But he admits to being more confident than ever before.

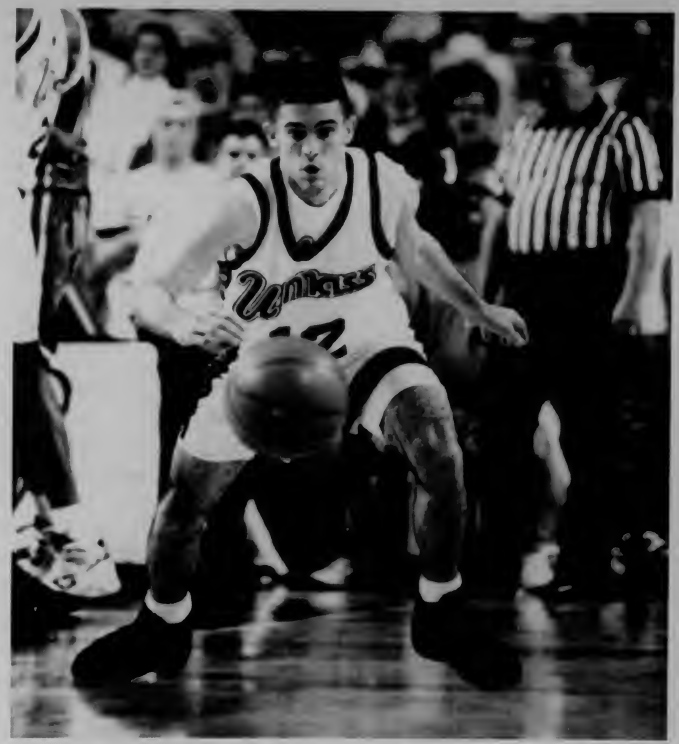
"I'm a lot more confident," Padilla said. "I swing the ball better. Mentally, I had to work hard to come off the injury. When you injure yourself, you don't know how long it's going to take to come back. Now, I'm back."

Luckily for the Minutemen, since Padilla and friends will be asked to play many more minutes than last year. Kellogg, All-America Lou Roe, Mike Williams and Jeff Meyer were lost to graduation after being part of the deepest team in school history. This season, the talent is still there, but the well does not run as deep. Padilla, who has averaged 5.8 ppg (7.1 ppg last season) and has chalked up 186 assists in his collegiate career, knows more minutes are on the agenda.

"It's going to be tough. I'm going to play a lot of minutes. I've got to get into shape to play 30-35 minutes a game," Padilla said.

If running the point isn't important enough, defense is another key element of Padilla's game which will help the Minuteman in a large way. He has exceptionally quick hands, and strips his opponent of the ball on many occasions. He is a danger to opposing offenses on the perimeter, and his steals usually end up as a fast break layup.

Padilla still eyes more improvement in his defense, mainly with the use of his legs.



"Not everybody has quick hands or the ability you've been born with," Padilla said. "Since you have it, you just have to do it. It helps to have quick hands. I have to learn to use my legs better. I'm used to using my hands. I've been practicing a lot, trying to get it down. I think I've gotten better at it."

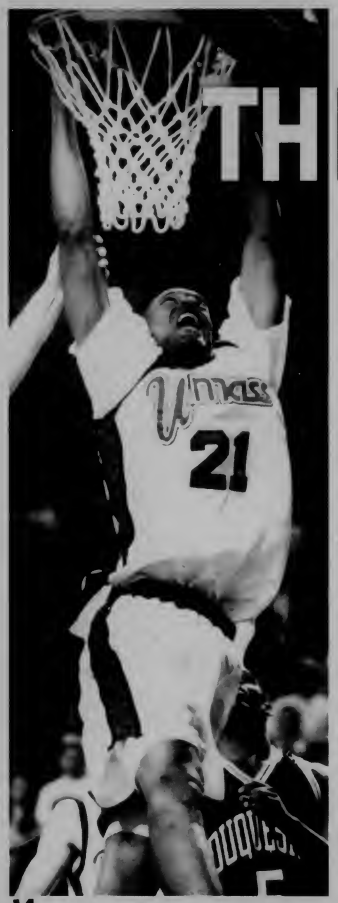
For Padilla, he will have a chance to get better at many things. His playmaking ability should improve. His shot and his defense, thought up to par already, should step up a notch. With the added minutes meaning more playing time, he will gain more experience. With the rigorous schedule, he will play against some of the best backcourts in the country.

And with all of this should come the one attribute which people are hoping for from him. These same people, who also realize Padilla has the potential of being one of the best point guards in school history, are expecting to mainly improve in one area. Kellogg is gone. Is the consistency?

Padilla won't listen to the naysayers.

"I don't really need to listen to those guys," Padilla said. "If you listen, you take it as a challenge to prove them wrong. You have to practice, work hard, and it'll be OK."

Confidence.



After spurning the pro's, Camby has the chance to be...

THE MAN

By Candice Flemming • Collegian Sports

The biggest question at the end of last season for the Massachusetts men's basketball team was simple — will Marcus Camby jump for the NBA riches or will he stay for at least another year?

Camby spurned the pros, for at least one more year, and in the process, gave himself the chance to be the man in college basketball.

This year's team is Donta Bright's and Dana Dingle's, but the Minutemen will count heavily on the 6-foot-11-inch Hartford native to lead them in the NCAA Tournament.

Camby's already been identified as the man by a lot of the college basketball preview magazines. Among the preseason honors he's garnered — National Player of the Year candidate, early favorite to win the Atlantic 10 Player of the Year award, rated as the second-best center in the nation by The Sporting News and Dick Vitale's College Basketball, and rated as the fourth-best player in the country by Ultimate Sports Basketball.

With one's face being plastered everywhere and with so much expected of you, the pressure can mount. But Camby isn't letting it get to him, or go to his head.

"I don't want to put any added pressure on me. I don't want anybody to think I have to go out there and score 40 points and grab 40 rebounds for us to win. It's a total team effort," he said. "The team sat me down early in the season, they saw my pictures on the covers of magazines and they were like 'Hey, we are here together. It's a total team effort,' and I thank them a lot for that.

"It's fun for the scrapbooks but I really don't pay too much attention to them. When you tend to look at that, you tend to get a big head. You tend to go out and do things that you cannot do. It messes you up."

While his teammates are concerned that is improtant to make it a team effort, they realize how good the Hartford native is.

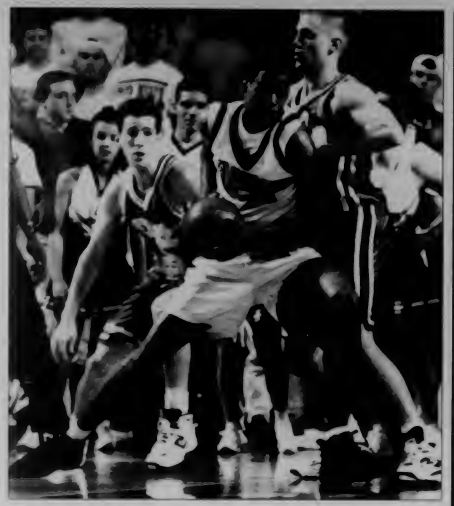
"Playing next to Marcus Camby is great. I think he is the best big man in college basketball," said junior forward Tyrone Weeks.

In UMass' season-ending loss to Oklahoma State in the Elite Eight last year, Bryant "Big Country" Reeves exploited Camby's biggest problem — lack of size and strength. Reeves held Camby to just six points, after he had averaged 18.3 points in the first three NCAA tourney games.

Realizing that he needed to bulk up in order to make it to the next level, Camby worked on his strength over the summer.

"I lifted, gained 10 pounds and worked on my stamina. I'm going to play a lot more minutes this year, basically. I just worked on a lot of shooting and a lot of running," Camby said. "This year I'm trying to be able to get a couple of easy baskets."

The Minutemen will need Camby to get more than just a couple easy baskets this season, as the loss of Lou Roe leaves UMass searching for someone to pick up the scoring slack. Camby will be one of the Minutemen looked upon to fill that void.



"I have to pick up a little bit but I think it has to be team effort. Every guy — one through our top eight — is going to have to score a lot of points, especially our forwards Donta [Bright] and Dana [Dingle]. They are going to have to come in and show strong senior leadership."

After missing six games his freshman season and three games his sophomore season due to injury, staying injury-free for an entire season would be a plus for Camby.

"I've been working in the summer on my leg strength and everything to make sure that it doesn't prevent me from getting injured again in the long run of the season, when the team really needs me," Camby said.

Camby will get a chance to see how he stacks up against other top centers in the country early in the season, as Tim Duncan and his Wake Forest teammates come to the Mullins Center on Dec. 6.

"It's going to be great opening up with Tim Duncan. That game's going to be hyped up so big. It'll be a great game for the fans to watch," Camby said.

Camby will also face off against Memphis' Lorenzen Wright and Louisville' Samaki Walker this season.

"I've got a lot of great matchups this year," Camby said. "That's good. I thank Coach Cal for that. It's giving me more exposure and plus all of those games are on national television, so it gets me exposed as well as other players."

Camby thinks the Minutemen's tough schedule will only help.

"I think the tough schedule is going to help us, it usually does," he said. "I think we have a good chance of going far. We have great size. We got the rebounding. We have great guards that can shoot and a lot of experience."

Camby does acknowledge though that the losses of Roe and Derek Kellogg will be tough to overcome.

"[Lou] and Derek were the heart and soul of this team. [Lou] was the guy, that when we needed a big play, he stepped up and came through for us. Hopefully, that's going to be my role this year."

Player Profile

Marcus Camby

6-11, 220
Junior Center

"Playing next to Marcus Camby is great. I think he is the best big man in college basketball." – Tyrone Weeks

1993-94
10.2 ppg, 6.4 rpg, 105 blocks
1994-95
13.9 ppg, 6.2 rpg, 103 blocks

Career highs
Points: 32 vs. Maryland 3/19/94
Rebounds: 13, twice
Blocks: 8, four times

OCMP
THE OFF CAMPUS MEAL PLAN
CURRENTLY FEATURING THESE FINE RESTAURANTS:
SUBWAY
RAFTERS
CUTTY'S
D'ANGELO'S
EL ACUNA
BUENO Y SANO
DP DOUGH
DELANO'S
TOP OF CAMPUS RESTAURANT
TOC RESTAURANT
AND MORE RESTAURANTS -SPRING '96-FOR MORE INFO:
(617) 246-7222

PERSEVERANCE HAS PAID OFF FOR STARTING GUARD

By Brian Perillo • Collegian Sports

At the beginning of last season, the Massachusetts backcourt looked both deep and talented. There was co–captain Derek Kellogg, the quick–handed Edgar Padilla, Mr. Clutch Mike Williams, flashy freshman Andre Burks and long range bomber Carmelo Travieso.

After a quiet freshman year, Travieso, who had come to UMass with a reputation as a deadly shooter, looked like he might be left out of the mix. Kellogg and Williams were seniors. Padilla was coming off an excellent rookie campaign, and the fans were salivating in anticipation of witnessing Burks' athletic ability. Travieso figured to be the fifth guard, and minutes looked to be scarce.

"Last year we had so many guards that could all play," Travieso said. "It was hard at the beginning of the year to find minutes for everybody."

However, the UMass backcourt that started the season changed drastically over the course of the year. In an early season matchup with West Virginia in Springfield, Burks went down with a knee injury that ended his season.

In the same game, Travieso, who had yet to play more than eight minutes in a contest that season, scored a career high 15 points on five three–pointers while logging 23 minutes on the floor.

"Things happened and I ended up playing more and showing that I could play. Coach got more confidence in me," Travieso said.

After Williams was suspended for breaking team rules, the pressure was on Travieso to step up and become a big part of the backcourt. The shooting guard had been averaging around nine minutes per contest, but with the absence of Williams, Travieso saw his playing time increase to over 20 minutes a game.

He made the most of that opportunity as well, scoring 6.9 points per game in that time, up from 3.9 in the early part of the season, and also made big strides with his defense.

"I was getting in the game for defense and rebounding, and I was fortunate enough to do the things that I was doing in practice," Travieso said. "I was being steady and shooting the ball. My team knew I could get the job done, but the other teams didn't know what I could do, and I tried to exploit that."

The guard from Thayer Academy also stepped up his game when the pressure was on, averaging 8.5 ppg in the NCAA Tournament. That included 13 points and six rebounds in the second round matchup with Stanford, and 11 points and five boards in the Elite Eight battle with Oklahoma State, a game in which the sophomore played a career–high 34 minutes.

"If anyone surprised us... it was Travieso," said Stanford coach Mike Montgomery, minutes after the Minutemen bounced his team out of the tourney. "We knew he could hit the threes, but we didn't realize they would go to him so much."

In Amherst, Carmelo Travieso has become synonymous with the three–point shot. He is already 10th on UMass' all time list in three–pointers made with 49, and whenever Travieso gets the ball, fans in the Mullins Center are looking for the trey.

"I spend a lot of time out there practicing the three," Travieso said. "It is kind of like my claim to fame."

Another thing the 6–foot–3–inch Travieso prides himself on is his rebounding. He grabbed four or more boards seven times last season, including a career–high nine against Duquesne.

"Sometimes (center) Marcus (Camby) has to go out there and concentrate on blocking shots. We all have to get in there and grab a few extra rebounds," Travieso said.

This year, Travieso's shooting touch, defense and rebounding will be counted on highly by coach John Calipari and the Minutemen. He is the likely starter at the shooting guard position, and with a shortage of experienced guards, Travieso will be a key component.

"I'm looking forward to being a big part of the team, and being a leader," he said. "We have a new team, but the players have been here for a few years now. We don't have as much depth in the backcourt, but me and Edgar are juniors and we know what it takes to win."

Starting with backcourt mate Padilla, the heir apparent to UMass' point guard position, is something special to Travieso. The two share more than a birthday and a desire to win, they share a dream.

"Edgar and I have always talked about being able to start together ever since we got here. Now we are going to get the opportunity to do that," Travieso said. "It's special because we both came in together and now we are going to share the backcourt. It is kind of like a dream for us."

Both guards will miss the presence of Kellogg, but feel ready to take over the reigns.

"Derek was always so steady, even in practice. He led by example and we'll miss his leadership," Travieso said. "Edgar has those things inside of him and he has been working on them in practice. They have been showing lately and that is one of the reasons we are starting to come together."

Travieso knows that this year's UMass team has its critics, but he feels confident that in the end, the Minutemen will be in the thick of things.

"Every year, people always come in with doubts about how far we are going to go and what we are going to do, but we know how to win and we've proven that. We may not be as deep as we were the last couple of years but we have some good players on this team, and we feel we can get the job done.

"A lot of the way UMass wins games is more from hustle and heart and a "Refuse to Lose" attitude, than from skill or shooting. If we can do things like defend and rebound, and the other things we know how to do, then we should be able to win."

Player Profile

Carmelo Travieso

6-3, 180
Junior guard

"I'm looking forward to being a big part of the team, and being a leader." – Carmelo Travieso

1993-94
2.3 ppg, 9 assists, 9 steals
1994-95
5.3 ppg, 33 assists, 13 steals

Career Highs
Points: 15 vs. West Virginia 1/3/95
Assists: 6 vs. Duquesne 1/24/95
Steals: 3 vs. Duquesne 1/24/95

Player Profile

Tyrone Weeks

6-7, 260
Junior forward

"If I can stay healthy and get to how I know I can play, I know I can do the things it takes to be considered a warrior." –Tyrone Weeks

1994-95
4.3 ppg, 4.9 rpg, 12 blocks

Career Highs
Points: 12 vs. LaSalle 1/7/95
Rebounds: 11 vs. Temple 3/9/95
Blocks: 3 vs. Stanford 3/19/95

After having a solid but injury-filled sophomore season, Tyrone Weeks looks to finally become...

THE NEXT WARRIOR

By Justin C. Smith • Collegian Sports

Expectations of a year ago circled around Tyrone Weeks, the Prop 48 star forced to sit out the 1993–94 season. His burly 6–foot–7–inch, 250 pound frame was supposed to come off of the bench and help out senior Lou Roe.

There were questions though. Would the year away from competitive action hurt the Philadelphia native? Would the addition of Inus Norville take away from Weeks' importance to the team?

Would he be the Tyrone Weeks everyone heard about coming in?

Early returns were inconclusive, as he was hampered by a foot injury, but as the year progressed and he began to get healthy, UMass fans began to see what all the hype was about.

His physical presence was felt at both ends of the court, grabbing rebounds and scoring significant points. Expectations rose again for Weeks to be a major factor on how far the Minutemen were to go during the course of the season.

As Weeks begins his junior season for UMass, he once again is trying to overcome an injury before he can become a main cog in the Minutemen's cause.

"Number one is to get healthy, Weeks said. "And number two is to get back in shape, and after that, just let it take its course."

Without the services of Roe to graduation, the vision of this team had Weeks penciled in as that type of player — "a warrior" as has been dubbed the last few prominent UMass post players.

It is a title that he could be himself taking on.

"If I can stay healthy and get to how I know I can play," Weeks said, "I know I can do the things it takes to be considered a warrior."

"I think a lot of the coaches and players are looking at me to get a lot of rebounds and score points inside, and do a lot of the things that Lou Roe did last year. I think I have the same role as last year. I just have to do a little more than last year as far as scoring, rebounding and playing more on defense."

There is even still more pressure added to the shoulders of Weeks. Not only did the Minutemen lose their number one low–post player, but they lost three talented guards that made for such a good outside game, taking a burden off of the forward's shoulders. Now he feels it is his turn, as well as all of the forwards, to help relieve some of the pressure which is now on the backcourt.

"I think the guys in the post need to take over the game more," Weeks said. "Especially with the lack of guard depth we have, if we can help the guards out it, will be easier for them to perform."

In his first year as a Minuteman, the Philadelphia native didn't have to feel a sense of urgency to get back and get healthy with Roe still commanding his presence on the block. With Roe now in the pros this time around, Weeks senses the difference in situations.

"Last season the difference was that I didn't need to prepare as much," Weeks says of entering the season. "This year I have to be ready faster without Lou here, and try to help the team the best I can.

"Last year we had a lot of depth and senior leadership that we don't have this year. We have some leadership, just not as much. There is a lot of things this team need to do this year in order to improve."

Even without those key players in the lineup, Weeks feels that this team is in control of its own destiny.

"This team can go as far as it wants to go. If we want to lose in the first round of the NCAA we can. If we want to make the Final Four, we can do that too. It's up to us."

COCA-COLA HALL OF FAME CLASSIC
SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER • DECEMBER 27 & 28
Reserved Seating • Adults: $7 • Child Under 10 & Students W/ID: $5 • Two Night Package • Adults: $12 • Child under 10/Students $8
DEC 27
Game 1 • 6:30 p.m.
WARREN HARDING H.S., CT
DON BOSCO PREP H.S., NJ
Game 2 • 8:00 p.m.
HOLYOKE H.S., MA
ALL HALLOWS INSTITUTE, BRONX, NY
DEC 28
6:30 p.m. • THIRD PLACE GAME
8:00 p.m. • CHAMPIONSHIP GAME
The Coca-Cola Hall of Fame Classic
SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER
BOX OFFICE
TICKETMASTER
Sponsored by
BLACK MEN OF GREATER SPRINGFIELD
22 WWLP-TV
Sheraton Springfield HOTEL

Ski snowboard

Only
$ 219
Winterbreak & Springbreak
INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS

Sponsors include:
❖ Molson & Labatts ❖

MT. ORFORD, CANADA
(JUST ACROSS THE VERMONT BORDER)

5 DAY SKI & SNOWBOARD LIFT TICKET

5 NIGHTS LODGING, LUXURY CONDO

5 DAYS & NIGHTS OF INTERCOLLEGIATE PARTIES, CONTESTS & HOOPLA

NOTE: THE LEGAL AGE TO CONSUME ALCOHOL IS 18

GROUP LEADER & REP DISCOUNTS
CALL FOR MORE INFORMATION.

Party in the Snow

SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED

©1995 STA of VA, Inc

www.skitravel.com

1-800-999-Ski-9

University of Massachusetts 1995-96 Men's Basketball

Nov.	28	Great Eight Classic, Auburn Hills, MI Kentucky 9 p.m.*
Dec.	2-3	Franklin National Bank Tournament, Landover, MD
Dec.	2	Maryland 12 p.m.*
Dec.	3	George Washington/Florida T.B.A.*
Dec.	6	Wake Forest 9:30
Dec.	9	Boston College (FleetCenter, Boston) 1 p.m.
Dec.	12	North Carolina-Wilmington 9:30 p.m.
Dec.	22	Georgia Tech (Meadowlands, East Rutherford) 9 p.m.
Dec.	27-30	Rainbow Classic, Honolulu, Hawaii
Dec.	28	UMass vs. North Carolina State 1:30 a.m.
Dec.	29	Second round
Dec.	30	Final Round
Jan.	4	Conference USA/Atlantic 10 Challenge, Worcester, MA Memphis 9 p.m.
Jan.	6	Dayton 2 p.m.
Jan.	9	at St. Joseph's 7 p.m.
Jan.	14	at St. Bonaventure 2 p.m.
Jan.	17	Rhode Island 7:30 p.m.
Jan.	20	at Duquesne 2 p.m.
Jan.	23	at Pittsburgh 9 p.m.
Jan.	27	St. Bonaventure 2 p.m.
Jan.	30	Fordham 7 p.m.
Feb.	1	at Temple 9:30 p.m.
Feb.	4	at Xavier 1:30 p.m.
Feb.	6	Chemical Bank Challenge, Madison Square Garden, NY Fordham 8:30 p.m.
Feb.	11	Temple 1:30 p.m.
Feb.	15	La Salle 7:30 p.m.
Feb.	17	at Virginia Tech 12 p.m.
Feb.	20	Rhode Island (Providence Civic Center, Providence) 9:30 p.m.
Feb.	24	George Washington 12 p.m.
Feb.	28	St. Joseph's 7:30 p.m.
Mar.	2	at Louisville 2 p.m.
Mar.	6-9	Atlantic 10 Tournament, Philadelphia, Pa.

 results not available at press time*

UMass basketball

University of Massachusetts 1995-96 Women's Basketball

Nov.	15	at Maine L (56-70)
Nov.	24	Stanford W (65-56)
Nov.	26	Detroit W (67-61)
		Louisiana Tech Tournament (at Ruston, La.)
Dec.	1	UMass vs. Mississippi Valley State 5:30 p.m.
Dec.	2	Third Place and Championship games 5:30/7:30
Dec.	7	Brown 7 p.m.
Dec.	13	at St. Peter's 7 p.m.
		Nationwide Insurance/Lady Gator Classic, Gainesville, Fla.
Dec.	29	UMass vs. Florida 5 p.m.
Dec.	30	Third place and Championship games 4:30/7 p.m.
Jan.	4	at St. Joseph's 7:05 p.m.
Jan.	7	at Temple 12 p.m.
Jan.	9	at Dartmouth 6:30 p.m.
Jan.	13	at Rhode Island 2 p.m.
Jan.	16	Fairfield 7 p.m.
Jan.	18	Virginia Tech 7 p.m.
Jan.	20	at La Salle 1 p.m.
Jan.	25	St. Joseph's 7 p.m.
Jan.	27	St. Bonaventure 7 p.m.
Feb.	1	at George Washington 7 p.m.
Feb.	3	Fordham 2 p.m.
Feb.	8	Temple 7 p.m.
Feb.	10	Xavier 1 p.m.
Feb.	14	Duquesne 7 p.m.
Feb.	18	at Fordham 12 p.m.
Feb.	21	at Dayton 7 p.m.
Feb.	24	at St. Bonaventure 2 p.m.
Feb.	27	Rhode Island 7 p.m.
Mar.	1-4	Atlantic 10 Tournament (at Blacksburg, Va.)

UMass basketball

MOVING TO BOSTON???

LOOKING FOR A PERFECT $ SUMMER JOBS?
Our Real Estate Company in Boston is actively searching for college students to work in our professional office as rental brokers for the summer (from May to August). This is the perfect summer job and a wonderful opportunity to learn the real estate business. Rental brokers can earn $15,000 to $20,000 during the summer rental season! We offer training, incentives and a fun and supportive atmosphere!! Please call Matt at (617) 738-0295 neighbors realty, inc.

1284 Commonwealth Ave.
Allston, MA 02134
617-738-0295

We have your next apartment. Whether you are searching for a studio, one, two, three or four bedroom +, in the Allston/Brighton, Back Bay, Brookline, Cambridge, Newton, Watertown area, we have a staff of professional and honest rental specialists who want to work with you in finding your new home. We have a superb selection of charming houses, luxury apartments and modern condos to choose from. Give us a call when you're ready to move!! We want to help!

"Your Neighborhood Rental Specialists For Over 20 Years"

IT DOESN'T GET ANY EASIER THAN THIS!
Introducing the
Big Y SHUTTLE

MONDAY & THURSDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
5:30pm	Garage	6:00pm	Merrill*	6:08pm	Orchard Hill	6:13pm	Southwest
6:30pm	Big Y	6:35pm	Merrill*	6:53pm	Orchard Hill	6:58pm	Southwest
7:15pm	Big Y	7:30pm	Merrill*	7:38pm	Orchard Hill	7:43pm	Southwest
8:00pm	Big Y	8:15pm	Merrill*	8:23pm	Orchard Hill	8:28pm	Southwest
8:45pm	Big Y	9:00pm	Merrill*	9:08pm	Orchard Hill	9:13pm	Southwest
9:30pm	Big Y	9:45pm	Merrill*	9:53pm	Orchard Hill	9:58pm	Southwest
10:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

SATURDAY SHUTTLE BUS SCHEDULE

Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location	Time	Location
12:30pm	Garage	1:00pm	Merrill*	1:08pm	Orchard Hill	1:13pm	Southwest
1:30pm	Big Y	1:45pm	Merrill*	1:53pm	Orchard Hill	1:58pm	Southwest
2:15pm	Big Y	2:30pm	Merrill*	2:38pm	Orchard Hill	2:43pm	Southwest
3:00pm	Big Y	3:15pm	Merrill*	3:23pm	Orchard Hill	3:28pm	Southwest
3:45pm	Big Y	4:00pm	Merrill*	4:08pm	Orchard Hill	4:13pm	Southwest
4:30pm	Big Y	4:45pm	Merrill*	4:53pm	Orchard Hill	4:58pm	Southwest
5:15pm	Big Y (Last pick up at Big Y for the evening.)

DON'T MISS THE BUS FOR SAVINGS AND CONVENIENCE!
Big Y 175 University Drive, Amherst

The Only Thing We Haven't Changed Is Our Name.

We've made some very dramatic changes to make you feel at home in an elegant, spacious new setting, now with 100 stylish rooms designed for your personal comfort. You'll enjoy complimentary continental breakfast, easy access to area campuses, shopping and restaurants, and our exclusive Premier™ accommodations section for business travelers. Call 1-800-654-2000 for reservations when planning that next business trip. You're going to find the all-new Howard Johnson at Amherst a very refreshing surprise.

HOWARD JOHNSON.
AMHERST/HADLEY

401 Russell Street Hadley, MA 01035 (413) 586 0114

STANDARD EQUIPMENT FOR THE ENDS OF THE EARTH.

SALE ON ALL NORTH FACE PARKAS!

WILDWATER OUTFITTERS
451 Russell St (Route 9)
Across from Stop & Shop
Hadley, MA (413) 253-5500

kinko's®
the copy center

Full & Self Service Copies
Engineering & Poster Copies
Enlargements/Reductions
Binding Services
Instant Passport Photos
Volume Discounts
Resumé Service
Office Supplies
Color Laser Prints
QuickTake Camera Rental

AMHERST
220 N. Pleasant 253-2543
FAX # 253-7906

NORTHAMPTON
35 Bridge Street 585-5000
FAX# 585-5135

FREE PICK UP & DELIVERY

OPEN 24 HOURS
FAST SERVICE, LOW PRICES
COLOR COPIES
IBM®/MAC® RENTALS
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

dairy mart
CORNER OF PLEASANT & TRIANGLE ST., AMHERST
(413) 549-5606
featuring...
TACO BELL Express

TACO BELL® At Dairy Mart
Opens At 10 AM - Seven Days A Week!
See In Store For Daily Closing Times.

TACO BELL Express
6 PACK TACOS $3.59 PLUS TAX
Before ordering please tell crew member you have a coupon. Limit one discount item per person per visit. Offer good thru December 31, 1995 at Dairy Mart, Corner of Pleasant & Triangle St., Amherst MA only.
Not to be used with any other coupons or offers.
Cash value 1/20th of a cent. Void where prohibited.
dairy mart

TACO BELL logo is a registered trademark of Taco Bell Corp.

GO UMASS!

GIDDEL PADILLA RETURNS FOR ANOTHER TRY

By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. • Collegian Sports

After playing sparingly for Massachusetts in 1992–93 — the second of four consecutive Atlantic 10 championship seasons for the Minutemen — then retreating to his home island of Toa Alta, Puerto Rico, senior guard Giddel Padilla has returned to coach John Calipari's bench for the 1995–96 campaign.

Padilla, the older brother of UMass starting point guard Edgar, plays tight defense, and can be counted on for solid foul shooting and timely offense off the bench.

"I'm a very competitive person. I'll be there any time [coach calls my number]," Padilla said. "Even when I'm not called on, I will be supporting the team from the bench. When they do, I'll be able to step it up. I have a lot of experience [from playing in Puerto Rico]. I think I'll be able to do some good for the team."

Padilla came to the Minutemen from Central High School in Springfield where he played with former Georgia Tech star Travis Best and against ex-UMass starting point guard Derek Kellogg. After earning a scholarship to play Minuteman basketball, Padilla had to give it back when he opted to leave UMass for his home in Puerto Rico to deal with personal problems.

The resilient guard decided to come back for the 1995–96 season. Being a former player, he went through minimal tryouts to make the team and join what is considered a thin Massachusetts back court.

Along with Padilla, walk-on Ross Burns and prize recruit Charlton Clarke will be the reserve guards on the Minuteman bench, while Giddel's brother Edgar and Carmelo Travieso will start at the one and two spots, respectively.

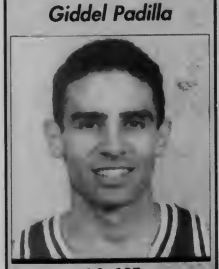
Padilla, a 22-year-old Hotel/Restaurant/ Travel Administration major, has a tremendous amount of respect for Coach Cal.

"Since day one, he's been great," Padilla said. "When I asked him if I could come back, he said 'Yes', and I appreciate that very much. It means a lot to me, and I know he's going to be there for me when I graduate because he's done it for so many other players."

Before Padilla graduates, though, he has a few matters to attend to. Right now, his focus is on helping to bring Massachusetts its fifth straight A-10 title, and giving UMass the depth to advance in the NCAA tournament.

Player Profile

Giddel Padilla



6-3, 187
Senior guard

"I'll be there any time [coach calls my number]. Even when I'm not called on, I will be supporting the team from the bench. When they do, I'll be able to step it up."
– Giddel Padilla

O'BRIEN HAS BROUGHT UMASS INTO NATIONAL SPOTLIGHT

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Sports

The year was 1991, and the Massachusetts women's basketball program was in the midst of an era which read like a Dickens classic, "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times..."

The 1990–91 season was a marked failure in Minutewomen history, as the team posted a winless season (0–27) and had not finished with a winning record in years. Yet at the close of that fateful season, a new chapter was being written in the team's history. Once it was started, there was no turning back.

Nineteen ninety-one was the year coach Joanie O'Brien and her revolution of the women's basketball program began. A 1986 graduate of Penn State, whose four years with the Nittany Lions saw four straight Atlantic 10 titles and four NCAA Tournament appearances, O'Brien found her way to UMass by way of Auburn University. From 1986–1991, O'Brien served as assistant coach for the national powerhouse which saw three NCAA Final Fours and two NCAA Final Eight showings. Her five-year tenure on the Auburn coaching staff combined for an impressive 149–20 overall record.

Looking at her credentials, it's no surprise that in just four years, O'Brien has lifted the program out of the dumps and into national prominence. However, this transformation did not begin overnight. In her first season, O'Brien's team finished with an overall record of 4–24, yet in the 1992–93 season, the Minutewomen improved to 11–15. Still not a winning record, but a substantial improvement in such a brief two-year span. By the 1993–94 season, UMass split its record in half finishing 14–14, making it to the semifinals of the A–10 Tournament. Just when the Minutewomen program was beginning to turn around, it simply took off.

Last season, Massachusetts posted a 19–11 overall record (13–3 in the A–10), the best performance in the program's history, and finished the season in second place in the A–10. O'Brien was the first women's basketball coach in Massachusetts history to lead her team

■ continued on page 38

The New Club Castaway
Home of Adult Entertainment in Franklin & Hampshire Counties
From Amherst Take Rt. 116 North to Route 5 & 10. Turn Left. Go 2 Miles South to Castaway Lounge
The New Club Castaway
Now Accepting Private Engagement Parties in our V.I.P. Room. Special rates
Castaway Lounge
I-91 to exit 24, south on Rte. 5
Whately, Mass. (413) 665-8733
Proudly Presents the Classic Cat Room V.I.P.
Special Rates For
• Bachelor Parties
• Anniversary Parties
• Private Parties
To have the V.I.P. Room for Private Parties, 20 or more required
Introducing the New Private Table Dancing
35 Dancers Appearing Weekly
Entertainment 2 p.m. - 1 a.m. Tues. - Sat.
Dancing Entertainment are Welcomed!
The New Club Castaway
The New Club Castaway

Quality Lumber

It's cut and dried at Cowls!
Visit our full line, full service hardware store and lumber yard. Expert advice for the do-it-yourself and contractor.
Come See What We Saw!
COWLS
For All Your Building and Remodeling Needs
BUILDING SUPPLY
125 Bunderland Road, North Amherst
(413) 549-0001 • 7-5 weekdays • 8-3 Sat.

$10 OFF
Any Lifetime Warranty Muffler
OR
$25 OFF
Any Catalytic Converter

Offer requires presentation of this ad. Ad must be presented at time of purchase. Not valid with other discounts. Expires 1/7/96.
MIDAS
Rte. 9 • Hadley (Near Hampshire Mall)
586-9991
Free Shuttle Service to Campus
MasterCard VISA AMEX DISCOVER

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM
FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

After showing flashes of promise last season, sophomore power forward Inus Norville looks to take...

THE NEXT STEP UP

By Leigh Torbin • Collegian Sports

With extensive losses to graduation after last season and no new faces in the Massachusetts frontcourt, coach John Calipari has to get drastically improved results from his current players if the program is to maintain its elite national status.

One of these players is Inus Norville, a strong, 6-foot-9 power forward who showed signs of promise coming off of the bench in 29 games last year, finishing fourth on the team with 21 blocks. Norville uses his size and sheer athleticism to muscle his way under the basket for both monstrous blocks and thunderous dunks.

Norville proved to be a dependable reserve in his freshman season and will look to step his play up a notch as the Minutemen vie for a return trip to college basketball's Elite Eight and possibly beyond.

He will be called upon this year as one of the key forward reserves off of the UMass bench, a role he preformed for parts of last season.

After playing six solid minutes in his first collegiate game, nationally televised on ESPN against defending national champion Arkansas, Norville saw considerable playing time in the first half of 1994-95.

Against West Virginia at the Abdow's Classic, Norville saw 16 minutes of playing time, pulling down seven offensive rebounds, a team-high 11 in all, while blocking a season-high four Mountaineer shots.

Norville played 11 minutes in UMass' thumping of No. 21 Pennsylvania, and when Marcus Camby went down with a hamstring injury against St. Joseph's, it was Norville who picked up the slack. He pulled down six rebounds and contributed three blocks to the UMass cause, in just nine minutes of play.

When Roe got into foul trouble against LaSalle in Atlantic City, Norville came off the bench and in 10 minutes of action, posted a career-high nine points to accompany six rebounds.

Norville's minutes tailed off down the stretch run, a trend that will have to be reversed for UMass to be successful this season. All five of Norville's DNPs came in the final five weeks of the season, scoring a total of 11 points and pulling down just one rebound in that time.

The Minutemen, who are thinner all-around than last year, will need more of the same steady and reliable play that Norville exhibited in the first half of last year. Norville was second only to Marcus Camby in field goal percentage last year at .542.

A hard worker, Norville uses his size well banging under the boards in a relentless pursuit of rebounds.

The Fayetteville, N.C. native started UMass' exhibition opener against Dinamo of Novosibirsk, Russia and impressed the William D. Mullins Center crowd by scoring 14. The performance showed that the end-of-season slump will have no ill-effects on Norville heading into the new season.

"Inus has really improved himself," Calipari said. "He's worked on his balance and his scoring ability in the post. He's an unbelievable athlete, long arms, a guy who runs and can do great things."

More strong performances from Norville are needed if UMass wants to go deep into the NCAA Tournament. In a season where a commonly-heard knock on UMass is lack of depth, it will fall into Norville's hands to prove them wrong.

Player Profile

Inus Norville

6-8, 225
Sophomore forward

"Inus has really improved himself. He's worked on his balance and his scoring ability in the post. He's an unbelievable athlete, long arms, a guy who runs and can do great things." – John Calipari

1994-95
2.8 ppg, 2.4 rpg, 21 blocks

Career Highs
Points: 9 vs. LaSalle 1/7/95
Rebounds: 11 vs. West Virginia 1/3/95
Blocks: 4 vs. West Virginia 1/3/95

Greenfield's Ross Burns comes to UMass hoping to make an impact and not be...

JUST ANOTHER WALK-ON

By Steven Grant •Collegian Sports

"...from Greenfield High School and Cushing Academy, No. 10, Ross Burns!"

Ross WHO?

Back on Midnight Madness (Oct. 15) that was no doubt the question on the minds of many of the thousands of applauding students watching the first Minuteman run out on to center court. For most, it was the first time they had seen the freshman walk-on, or at least heard his name.

Burns would be the first to acknowledge that fact. But although Massachusetts basketball coach John Calipari hasn't been specific in what Burns' role will be this season, the 6-foot-2-inch guard has a cautious optimism in regards to what the next four years will bring.

"I can tell you right now I'm not going to be the go-to- guy," Burns said with a chuckle. "Right now, a lot of people look at my situation as 'Wow, you're on the UMass basketball team.' But obviously, I want to make more of it than that. I don't want to be the guy who just comes here and sits on the bench for four years and just chills."

So, back to the question on everyone's mind — who is Ross Burns? For starters, it's no fluke that he was given the opportunity to play basketball at UMass. In his senior year at Greenfield High, he averaged 17.4 points, grabbed over 100 rebounds and dished out over 100 assists, leading the team at point guard to its first-ever MIAA state championship game.

After he graduated, Burns felt he didn't have enough colleges looking at him, so he decided to attend Cushing Academy, a college prep school with a sound basketball program. He led the team to the New England Championship while averaging 22 points, seven assists and over two steals per game. Burns also managed 10 dunks on the season.

"I had a good year there," Burns said. "But when it came down to it I didn't have any scholarship offers. So I called Bill Bayno, head assistant coach at UMass. I knew him from basketball camps I used to attend here and from summer league camps I used to participate in.

"I asked him if maybe he could make some calls to other schools for me. And he told me he could call some people, but if I wanted, I could have a walk-on spot here. So when spring came around and I didn't have any offers, I took him up."

Burns was recruited by various Division II and III schools, but they offered no financial assistance. And since it was always a dream of Burns' to play for a Division I team, he went for it.

And thus far, he's happy with his decision.

"I'm definitely glad I came here," he said. "I've improved a lot since I've been here. Just being in the program makes you so much better. And the school itself is a lot of fun. I'm trying to keep up with my work. I want to make sure I do well in school."

Playing against some of the best Division I basketball players in the country is a bit different than high school ball. Burns expected that beforehand and now that he's here, he makes each practice a learning experience, and he's happy with the way he's been performing.

"Playing with guards like Edgar [Padilla] and Carmelo [Travieso] everyday has made me a lot more physical. I've already gained eight pounds since I've been here. People at this level are so much bigger, stronger and quicker. And a lot more intense. But [James] "Bruiser" [Flint] has helped me out with a lot of the technical stuff. Like on handling the ball under pressure and catching the ball, and standing squared up to my defender. I've improved a lot in those areas."

First and foremost for Burns is for his team to take the NCAA championship. He sees and experiences the level of talent (All-America candidate center Marcus Camby, for one) on the squad day in and day out, and he likes his team's chances come tournament time.

"I think we can win it all," he said. "It seems like we have strong physical ability. Everybody here is a good athlete, can run the floor well, and can defend. Obviously, we have some strengths down low because we got Marcus. Nobody can really defend him. And then of course we have Inus [Norville] and Ty [Tyrone Weeks] as well, so our frontcourt is pretty strong. And I think we're a pretty good shooting team, too."

By the time he graduates, Ross Burns wants to have made a name for himself as a member of the UMass basketball team. He has the confidence, the determination and just maybe, the talent to do so.

"For now, I'm just going to work hard in practice," he said. I want to make more of this than just a walk-on experience. I don't want people to look at me and say 'Well, that kid's a walk-on. I want them to look at me and say 'That kid plays for UMass.'"

Player Profile

Ross Burns

6-3, 180
Freshman guard

"I don't want to be the guy who just comes here and sits on the bench for four years and just chills." – Ross Burns

1994-95 at Cushing Academy
22 ppg, 7 apg

Senior reserve Ted Cottrell heads into his final season with a chance to get more minutes and make a ...

CONTRIBUTION

By Casey Kane • Collegian Sports

When a team is as blessed with success as the Massachusetts men's basketball team has been over the past few years, it's understandable that a few marquee players will steal the spotlight.

But while the team would not be able to reap such rewards without those headliners, it is the play of the bench that often leads a team to greatness. Ted Cottrell, a 6-foot-9-inch 200 pounder, is one of those players whose contributions have pushed the Massachusetts players in front of him to new levels of greatness.

The role of a substitute player can be a disheartening one. But without the contributions of the reserves, a team is lost. Cottrell has become an part of the Massachusetts cavalry that has bolstered the UMass attack.

In high school, Cottrell led his Annapolis Senior High team to a 23–3 record and the state championship. Averaging 16 points, 13 rebounds and five blocks, he was named to the first-team Maryland All-State by USA Today. Before heading to college, he spent a year at Maine Central Institute. Playing for Max Good, Cottrell averaged 10 points and six rebounds en route to helping his team compile a 24– 0 record.

As a freshman at Massachusetts, Cottrell played in 15 games, averaging 1.1 points and 1.5 boards. He had a career day against Boston University, scoring 10 points and pulling down three rebounds. He also posted three blocks in the win over the Terriers. Cottrell was also impressive from the line, recording a 77.8 free throw percentage.

Playing in 17 games as a sophomore, Cottrell scored a season-high eight points against Central Connecticut, while grabbing three rebounds. He tallied three rebounds against St. Joseph's, and three more in UMass' first round NCAA Tournament win over Southwest Texas State. He also contributed some playing time in the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

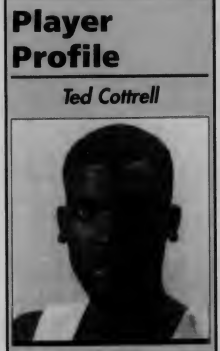
Cottrell played in 18 games as a junior, averaging 0.7 points and 0.7 boards per game. With quality minutes against West Virginia, Cottrell chipped in a season-best four points, three rebounds, and a block. In nine minutes against Duquesne, he posted three points, three boards and a steal.

But his career is not just about stats. There are, of course, the socks. The footware has become signature fashion statement will be seen on the William D. Mullins Center floor for one last season.

Coming into his final season in a Massachusetts uniform, Cottrell has found his spot on the UMass squad. With less depth than there was a year ago, injuires or foul trouble could lead to Cottrell getting minutes at center or power forward. Even though his game time is limited, his contributions in practice, guarding and pushing players like Marcus Camby, have a impact. And while his name might not be up in lights, Ted Cottrell definitely contributes to UMass basketball.

Player Profile

Ted Cottrell



6-9, 200
Senior forward
Career Highs
Points: 10 vs. B.U. 1/5/93
Rebounds: 4 vs. Buffalo 2/18/93
Blocks: 3, twice
Assists: 2 vs. Rhode Island 1/19/93

UMASS HAS NEW COMPETITION FOR A-10 TITLE

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Sports

After losing West Virginia and Rutgers to the Big East, and the addition of five newcomers — Dayton, Fordham, La Salle, Virginia Tech and Xavier, the Atlantic 10 Conference will divide itself into two divisions, East and West.

The addition of some storied basketball programs will lead to more intriguing rivalries, as well as more recruits becoming interested in this newly expanded conference.

With the departure of teams to the Big East, there was fear of it beginning to unravel. But with four of the five new teams entering the A-10 having large following at its respective schools, the conference could find itself back where it was only three years ago. No matter happens in the future, this year will surely showcase a highly competitive race to see who will be eventually be crowned conference champion.

East Division

Massachusetts — This isn't as clear cut as in the past. The Minutemen are helped by the fact they only have to play Virginia Tech, George Washington and Xavier once. As long as the backcourt stays healthy and out of foul trouble, they can get the ball to Marcus Camby and that can only mean bad things for the opposition. (For a complete preview on UMass, see page 3).

Temple — When talking about the Owls, there are two things you can always count on — one of the toughest non- conference schedules in the country and the most intense zone defense in the country.

The schedule Temple plays will give John Chaney's troops experience in how to play against anybody in the country. The style of defense that has made Chaney famous can cause the best of offensive teams fits.

Sophomore guard Johnny Miller is the real thing. When he starts raining in three-pointers, there is just no stopping him. Unfortunately, the scoring stops there. No one in the Owl frontcourt has stepped up, and without a presence in the paint, there is too much pressure on the defense.

Rhode Island — This Ram team has

■ continued on page 29

With an impressive resume from the basketball mecca of Indiana, Ed Schilling gives Massachusetts...

A COACH RICH IN HOOP HISTORY

By Ted Kottler • Collegian Sports

If Ed Schilling doesn't bring some notoriety to the position of "third" assistant for the Massachusetts men's basketball team, no one can.

Schilling assumes the post held by John Robic, who earned promotion because of the spot vacated by Bill Bayno, the new head coach at Nevada–Las Vegas.

"I have some huge shoes to fill," Schilling said. "I'm learning a lot. I'm getting to do what I love to do 24 hours a day. The basketball team's been great. They're accepting me."

But you shouldn't assume that Schilling is some ordinary, lackluster busher with little to offer this escalating program. In fact, few could match Schilling's credentials for the job, which is his first on the college level.

High school is one step down from college, but in Indiana, in terms of basketball anyway, it might even be a step up. And that's where Schilling paid his dues, as head coach of two prominent teams in the most rabid basketball environment in America.

"We had the smallest gym in the conference (at Logansport High School)," Schilling said. "It had 6,000 seats."

You get the idea. When Schilling took over at LHS, it had won three conference games in 10 seasons. Schilling posted overall victory totals of 9, 8, 14 and 16 from 1991–1995, with last season's record the school's best in 20 years.

All this with a rather small enrollment while playing in the state's top conference.

"We matched our style with who walks in the door," Schilling said.

Whatever Schilling did, the fans approved. He did three radio shows a week and all Logansport's games were televised.

Schilling got to know UMass head coach John Calipari at the famed Five Star Basketball Camp, where Calipari, then an assistant at Kansas, coached Schilling between seasons at Lebanon (Ind.) High School. Schilling later returned to the camp as a counselor, coach, and commissioner, becoming Calipari's co–worker.

"The Five Star family is close knit," Schilling said. "There's a lot of mutual respect [among coaches]."

But Schilling was close to taking a job at Kentucky, the team coached by a man partially responsible for Calipari's hiring and so often compared with him that some consider the two coaches clones.

"I've had a lot of college opportunities," Schilling said. "I nearly went to Kentucky. [Wildcats' head coach Rick] Pitino had me down there for three days. [My wife and I] were looking at houses."

The Kentucky job entailed greater responsibility, comparable to Robic's, but Schilling will be patient and keep his priorities straight. His daughter is currently 17 months old, and he does not want the strain of recruiting trips to detract from his family time.

"It's funny how things work out," Schilling said. "Now I don't have to go on the road."

Schilling also didn't have to go on the road he has chosen toward all coaches' ultimate goal: a head coaching job with a Division I program.

"I want to be a head coach again, but there are lots of ways

UMass Assistant Coach Ed Schilling

to become one," Schilling said. "One is as a college assistant, but this is my first college job. The other way is to go through high school and make mistakes while coaching. The people I talked to thought that was the way for me to go."

Schilling wasn't seeking opinions from any novices, either. He heeded the advice of Howard Garfinkel, reputed director of Five Star, and another Hoosier named Bobby Knight.

And you would expect Schilling to learn well, for he also taught English at Western Boone (where he coached from 1990–91) and physical education at WB and Logansport. Schilling's dual role as an educator has been the foundation for his communication skills with his players.

"My house was like a revolving door with all the kids coming in," Schilling said. "I love to teach."

He will get his chance, as Schilling's chief task is head scouting director. It's the job that Robic mastered so well.

"Hopefully [Robic] will help me," Schilling said.

The main part of scouting is to produce a 20–minute video tape of each opposing team, one that features its key offenses, defenses and out–of–bounds plays.

"Then I write it and present it to the players and make sure they understand it exactly," Schilling said. "Part of college athletics is you get it done, even if it takes 20 hours."

Indeed, Schilling has entered the program impressively familiar with its underpinnings.

"There hasn't been a drill here we didn't do with my teams," Schilling said.

Schilling's enthusiasm also knows no limits.

"In high school, you're teaching eight hours a day," he said. "Here I'm breaking down film, making recruiting calls, calling other coaches."

■ continued on page 38

Minutemen face new challegers

■ continued from page 27

one of the best backcourts in the conference. As a freshman, Tyson Wheeler scored 13 points a contest, while dishing out five assists and was an A–10 All–Freshman team selection. Don't be surprised if Preston Murphy is this year's A–10 Freshman of the Year. He can hit the jumper and drive to the basket. With junior Cuttino Mobley to ease Murphy into coach Al Skinner's system, the pressure isn't on the freshman right away.

The same cannot be said up front where junior center Michael Andersen appears to be ready to start this season healthy, but senior Cordell Llewellyn and others have to help out the Denmark native. If a forward can come in and bolster the paint, this URI squad can play with anyone in the conference.

St. Joseph's — Last spring on Hawk Hill, two of St. Joe's finest flew the coup. Carlin Warley and Bernard Blunt won't be around this season, but as they claim, the Hawk will never die'. So St. Joe's enters this season with a new coach, Phil Martelli, but proven talent.

Junior forward Dimitri Domani didn't play half as well last year as he had during his freshman campaign and hopes are that he will return to form. If Reggie Townsend's performance of a year ago can be repeated and guard Mark Bass is freed to launch bombs from the outside, the Hawks will be a respectable team all year.

St. Bonaventure — The losses of David Vanterpool and Jeff Quaackenbush will be too much for the Bonnies to withstand this season. Last year's impressive fourth place regular season finish won't be realistic for this team unless transfers Robert Blackwell and Marc Schoone produce immediately.

The guards will be a bit more reliable as the season opens, especially point guard Shandue McNeil, who lead the league in assists and steal a year ago. If freshman recruit Antoine Wills steps up and steadies the back court, coach Jim Baron may have a team ready to reap the benefits next year.

Fordham — There is good news on the Rams front. The switch from the Patriot League to the A–10 will help their recruiting.

West Division

Virginia Tech — If there is a team that can lay claim that it could stop Massachusetts' run of four consecutive conference tournament titles, this is the one.

The defending NIT champion Hokies move to the A–10 from the Metro, and look to continue where they left off — winning. Every player that contributed to the NIT success is back and this Hokie squad will be ranked in the Top 25 most of this season.

Junior Ace Custis just plain gets the job done. He is the best all–around player on a roster that boasts four players who averaged double figures in points per game last season. Senior Shawn Smith aids Custis up front, while on the outside guards Shawn Good and Damon Watlington are senior starters that compliment their forwards well. A definite NCAA tournament team.

George Washington — Mike Jarvis' teams always come out fired up in the big games, which is a sign of a good coach. But unfortunately, his squad sometimes forgot to show up for the games it should win.

Senior Kwame Evans is the man who can turn a game around all by himself, his 6–foot–7–inch frame is too much for most guards to cover. His athleticism not only creates easy baskets for himself but his teammates as well, though he will need support from a newcomer to keep opposing backcourts from keying on him.

Up front Alexander Koul and his 7–foot–1–inch, 265 pound monument of Russian talent returns to bang with the big boys of the A–10. He averaged 13 points and almost seven rebounds a game while blocking 53 shots on the season. Now with a year under his belt, and three talented teammates from his homeland, the Colonials should make it back to the Big Dance.

Xavier — An often over–looked team in the nation was the Musketeers. But now in a more–respected conference than the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, Xavier will have a bit more trouble, especially after returning just one starter from last season's 23–5 team.

Power forward T.J. Johnson was the MCC Rookie of the Year last year and will be the man asked to do a fair share of the Musketeer scoring this season.

The only other bright spot for Xavier is the talented youth in their backcourt. Lenny Brown and Gary Lumpkin are two newcomers that could take incumbent starters Sherwin Anderson and Ken Harvey's positions. Neither Anderson or Harvey has seen significant playing time in the past, so experience is at a premium for coach Skip Prosser.

Duquesne — First year coach Scott Edgar, who formerly was at Murray State, inherits one of the most forgot about talents in Tom Pipkins. Pipkins, along with backcourt mate Kenya Hunter, put up nearly 30 points a game last season but shot atrocious percentages from the field. They need to make better decisions shooting the ball and get their forwards the ball in the post more.

Speaking of the post, they got much needed help up front with junior college transfer Neil Hood. His 6–foot–10–inch height will help out returning forwards Matt Curley and Kevin Price. Both Curley and Price earned everything they got in terms of statistics last season. Unfortunately for the team, it wasn't all that much.

Dayton — This squad was once a team that you could never take lightly, with its long standing tradition of college basketball. Although the tradition does still surround its name, that hasn't translated to many wins in recent years. Seventeen in three years as a matter of fact and a snub from the newly formed Conference USA.

Second–year coach Oliver Purnell looks to take this opportunity to rebuild the storied program as he looks to build around talented sophomore forward Ryan Perryman. Perryman is a tough, physical presence down low, but lacks the supporting cast to do much in the conference.

LaSalle — In keeping with the trend of long–time college basketball havens mired in a slump, the Explorers fit right in. They have one proven talent in senior Romaine Haywood but little else to offer.

The rest of coach William Morris's roster is juniors and sophomores. Now that LaSalle is in a "marquee" conference, local recruits will show interest and talent will soon follow.

The Collegian's A-10 picks

First Team
Marcus Camby, UMass
Ace Custis, Virginia Tech
Shawn Smith, Virgina Tech
Kwame Evans, Geo. Wash.
Johnny Miller, Temple

Second Team
Alexander Koul, Geo. Wash.
T.J. Johnson, Xavier
Donta Bright, UMass
Tom Pipkins, Duquesne
Tyson Wheeler, URI

Player of the Year
Marcus Camby, UMass

Freshmen of the Year
Charlton Clarke, UMass
Preston Murphy, URI

Coach of the Year
Al Skinner, Rhode Island

Save 15%
withUMass
Basketball Tickets

Choose from our vast array of lighter fare, appetizers, salads, soups, burgers and vegetarian selections. The Coolidge Park Cafe is the perfect spot to relax and enjoy downtown Northampton. We offer the glass enclosed atrium filled with lush greenery for your dining pleasure.

Present your ticket stub from a UMass Home Game and receive a 15% discount on dinner. (Liquor excluded)

Coolidge
Park Cafe

at The Hotel Northampton
36 King Street
Northampton, Massachusetts
413-584-3100

It looks like the real world.
It feels like the real world.
It pays like the real world.
It's an internship.
Unreal.

Call for more information on this unbelievable opportunity.

Kathleen M. Kane
The Steffen Agency
1351 Main Street
Springfield, MA 01103
413/748-6000

Northwestern Mutual Life
The Quiet Company®

Following in the footsteps of Dontà Bright and Tyrone Weeks, Prop. 48 freshman Lari Ketner hopes to become...

ANOTHER SUCCESS STORY

By Chris Stamm • Collegian Sports

The Minutemen gain some power in the frontcourt this year, in freshman Lari Ketner. However, the 6–foot–10, 250 pound Philadelphia native will sit out this season under Proposition 48 NCAA academic requirements.

In high school, Ketner was a state–wide leader. A look at his stats from his four–year tenure at Roman Catholic High School is good indication of his ability. Last year, he led his team to a 28–3 record while averaging 24 points, 15 rebounds and 4.6 assists. He carried his team to the championship game of the Philadelphia Catholic League and the National Catholic Tournament.

Ketner gained plenty of recognition his senior year as he gained first team honors in the All–City, All–State, All– Metro, All–Catholic and All–Southeastern Pennsylvania squads.

Ketner has a good touch on the ball and strong low post skills.— He's a workhorse whose board–crashing ability would fit in well with the powerful Minuteman frontcourt. Although he will not see any playing time for UMass this season, with Marcus Camby possibly in his final season, Ketner will be working hard to fill his shoes in the 1996– 1997 season.

If history is any indication, Ketner will make a successful transition from the sidelines to the William D. Mullins Center court. Massachusetts coach John Calipari's current squad has seen Bright and junior Tyrone Weeks become impact players in the UMass game plan, dispelling some of the negative connotations associated with Prop 48 students.

Bright supported Weeks during his first year, giving him support from first–hand experience.

"I talked to Donta and they told me it's not all that pleasant," Weeks said last year of his Prop. 48 season. "They said they were upset and had trouble dealing with it at first, but I should be alright."

Bright's career at UMass includes some impressive stats, scoring in double figures 38 times. In fact, four of the five UMass losses came when Bright scored in single digits. Despite early season foot surgery, Weeks came off the bench to earn 46 offensive boards in the last 16 games of the season.

Clearly, with Bright and Weeks going from sitting out in their first years to becoming major forces on the Massachusetts squad, Ketner could follow suit. With some key holes opening up in the front court next year, Ketner could be able to fill them in. A fierce competitor, surely a season on the sidelines will make his true Minuteman debut that much better.

UMASS, GW FAVORITES IN REVAMPED ATLANTIC 10 CONFERENCE

By Chris Stamm • Collegian Sports

The upcoming 1995–1996 Atlantic 10 women's basketball season is one of expansion and development. With five new teams entering the A–10, the conference, which is celebrating its 20th anniversary, will be undergoing a major facelift. Not only will the geographic area of the A–10 increase, creating a wider fan distribution, but the new additions also promise to foster new rivalries while fanning the flames of those already in place.

Last year's A–10 women's basketball teams proved to the nation that the conference is a national powerhouse by qualifying for some of the major postseason tournaments. George Washington led the way, advancing to the Sweet 16 of the NCAA Tournament for the first time ever as St. Joseph's and Virginia Tech earned NCAA bids and Massachusetts placed fourth in the NWIT. In all, 39 women's basketball teams have advanced to play in the postseason since the A–10 began sponsoring the sport in 1982–1983.

As a whole, the conference should be as strong as ever, but let's take a look at the divisional breakdowns. Here's how the teams are expected to finish.

East Division

Massachusetts – See related stories

St. Joseph's — The Hawks are coming off a strong showing in the 1994–1995 season and with three starters returning, St. Joseph's promises to give UMass a run for the top spot in the East Division. Last year, St. Joseph's finished 20–9, 11–5 in the A–10, giving them a third place conference finish.

The three returning starters are team leaders in scoring with forward Megan Compain leading the Hawks with 13.1 ppg, 3.3 rpg. Following Compain are guards Amy Facer (12.7 ppg, 4.0 rpg) and Kristen Sullivan (11.6 ppg, 3.3 rpg).

Rhode Island — The Rams begin their A–10 season with a strong nucleus of four returning starters. Last season, the Rams finished fourth in the conference with a 16–11 overall record, 9–7 in the A–10. Junior guard/forward Tasha King was last season's most consistent shooter averaging 17.7 ppg while pulling down an average of 8.6 rpg. Also leading the stat sheet for the Rams were

■ continued on page 37

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
Monday - Saturday 9:00am-11:00pm
Not Responsible for typos • Visa & Mastercard accepted

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

SAM ADAMS 24-12oz Batt. $18.49 + dep	HARPOON 24-12oz loose Batt. $16.99 + dep	CATAMOUNT 24-12oz Batt. $16.99 + dep	MOLSON ICE 24-12oz Batt. $15.69 + dep	CORONA 24-12oz Batt. $16.99 + dep	HEINEKEN 24-12oz Batt. $18.99 + dep	BUDWEISER 30-pks $14.99 + dep	MICHELOB & LT 24-12oz Batt. $13.69 + dep
COORS 24-12oz Batt. $12.69 + dep	BUD DRY 24-12oz Batt. $9.99 + dep	BUSCH & LT 30-pks $11.99 + dep	NATURAL LT 24-12oz cans $8.49 + dep	BLACK LABEL 30-pks $9.99 + dep	HAMM'S 24-12oz cans $7.19 + dep	SALE UNTIL NEXT YEAR!
JACK DANIELS Sour MashWhiskey $11.99/.750ml	CANADIAN CLUB Canadian Whiskey $10.99/.750ml	SEAGRAMS 7 Whiskey $8.99/750ml	DEWARS Scotch $14.99/.750ml	GLENLIVET Single Malt Scotch $18.99/.750ml	COURVOISER Cognac $16.99/.750ml
JOSE CUERVO Tequila $10.99/.750ml	SMIRNOFF Vodka $7.99/.750ml	BARCARDI RUM $7.99/.750ml	FREE GIFT WRAPPING!		CHRISTIAN BROS. Brandy $7.99/.750ml	SOUTHERN COMFORT $8.49/.750ml	ABSOLUT VODKA $12.49/.750ml
ALL YOUR HOLIDAY & GIFT GIVEN NEEDS!		BAILEY'S IRISH CREAM $14.99/.750ml	AMARETTO DI Sorenno $10.99/.750ml	Kahlua $13.99/.750ml	CHAMBORD $16.99/.750ml	SAMBUCA ROMANO $14.99/.750ml	LEROUX BRANDIES $7.69/.750ml
		TAITTINGER Brut La Francaise $19.99/.750ml	MOET & CHANDON $20.99/.750ml	MARTINI & ROSSI Asti Spumante $7.99/.750ml	COOKS CHAMPAGNES $3.49/.750ml	FREIXENET CHAMPAGNE $5.49/.750ml	J. ROBET CHAMPAGNE $1.99/.750ml
ALMADEN WINES $4.99/1.5L	SEBASTIANI Country Wines $6.99/1.5L	BLOSSOM HILL WINES $6.99/1.5L	FETZER Barrel Select Chard. $7.99/.750ml	GOOD LUCK TO UMASS BASKETBALL!		MERRY CHRISTMAS WISHES TO ALL— From the Krupczak Family & Sean Barry
VENDAGE WINES $6.29/1.5L	M.G. VALLEJO Chardonney $4.89/.750ml	INDIAN SPRINGS Chardonney $6.99/.750ml	CARLO ROSSI $6.99/4.0L

CORNERSTONE OF THE PROGRAM

By Matt Vautour • Collegian Sports

One day before women's basketball practice early in preseason, senior center Melissa Gurile was chatting with coach Joanie O'Brien about the Minutewomen's upset win over George Washington three years ago.

"We watched the video of that game last night," Gurile said to her coach. "Oh my god, we were so bad, and we still won."

"For her to say that," O'Brien said later. "Really shows us how far they've come."

The difference is that when Massachusetts beat GW then, it was a pinnacle — a reason to cut down the nets. But now the program has come so much further, built off of those early triumphs.

One cornerstone of that building process has been Gurile. When the Pataskala, Ohio native came to Amherst as a freshman, she was thrown into the fire right away, starting all 26 games in her first season.

She averaged 14 points and 8.3 rebounds that season and set the Massachusetts single-season block record, helping to lead the Minutewomen to an 11-win (11-16) season. That season marked an increase of seven wins from the previous season.

Her sophomore year continued the improvement as the team reached the .500 plateau for the first time in the Joanie O'Brien Era.

Massachusetts women's basketball rose to new heights last year as the team finished at 19-11, good for second place in the Atlantic 10. Gurile was once again in the middle of things, leading the team with 15.6 points and 6.8 rebounds.

Last season in addition to her numbers, Gurile, as well as fellow seniors Octavia Thomas and Tricia Hopson, took on a greater leadership role.

"Last year we gained a lot of experience in terms of being a leader. This year we're more prepared. We're more disciplined now and that helps out being leaders," said Gurile, who believes that she needs to lead by example.

"I have to be disciplined. Everything I can, I have to do right, so other players can look at me and follow my example. I have to be vocal when it's necessary, but most of all, work hard and lead by example."

O'Brien agreed with her senior center.

"Melissa is a quiet leader. She's not a very vocal person in terms of her loudness. She leads by example," said O'Brien, who says that Gurile's work ethic is a coach's dream. "I've never ever had a problem with how hard Melissa plays. Melissa gives me everything she has, every time she steps on the floor. It's a coaches dream to know that you never have to worry about effort. The kids watch her and do what she does. As long as she keeps working hard, her leadership will be instrumental to the success of this year's program."

O'Brien said that when she recruited Gurile she knew she was getting a good player, but she had no idea how strong a player that she would become.

"Four years ago, I'm not sure we realized quite what we were going to get with Melissa," O'Brien said. "I knew she was a good player. She turned out just so much better than I thought she was going to be."

Heading into her senior season, Gurile looks back sometimes and marvels at the program that has grown around her.

"We are more of a program now. When I first got here, it was only [O'Brien's] second year coaching," Gurile said. "I think we've brought in some good players and established a name for ourselves. I think we're more competitive now."

O'Brien credits the play of Gurile and Thomas as being a key to that building.

"She and Octavia allowed us to move very quickly in our building process. The two of them have always played big-time minutes since the day they got here. Those two kids have carried the weight of the program," she said. "No matter what I do in my time here that class will the class that everything is based on. I couldn't be even more proud of a group of kids than I am of them.

"Those kids will always remember what they've been through and how far they've bought this program."

Personally, Gurile has immense pride in her role in the program's resurgence.

"We're very proud of this program and where we've taken it," she said. "We were [O'Brien's] first class. We took it upon ourselves to be leaders and to start building this program to be a successful one."

Despite everything the Minutewomen have done during her career, unless they achieve their final goal, a trip to the NCAA Tournament, the career's aren't yet complete.

"We haven't accomplished everything we wanted to accomplish," she said. "As a team, we wanted success to come a little bit quicker than it did. I don't know if it was realistic, but in our hearts, we felt we were better than our record showed.

"We wanted to make the NCAA's the past couple of years, so that is in the back of our mind. If everything happens according to plan... But we'll just take it one day at a time."

As her career is coming to a close, Gurile is more sentimental about it.

"Ever since I was a little girl, I loved to play the game," she said. "It's kind of hard to step back and realize that I'm playing out my dream right now. Occasionally, I have to step back and realize how fortunate I am."

O'Brien would contend that the program is just as, if not more, fortunate to have Gurile.

"Mel is a special kid. She's intelligent. She's intense. She so talented," she said. "She's really one of those kids that's fun to watch play. She's gotten pretty close to the most of her ability. Hopefully, this year she can finish it out with a bang."

With only one year left in her collegiate career, Octavia Thomas will do whatever it takes to go out...

A WINNER

By Justin C. Smith • Collegian Sports

As the curtain opened on the 1995-96 women's collegiate basketball season with the pre-season NIT, the Massachusetts Minutewomen participated in the festivities.

Four years ago, that would have seemed so far away, but when individuals will stop at nothing to produce victories, anything can be accomplished.

"It's a great accomplishment for the program, but also for us [as a team]," senior co-captain Octavia Thomas said. "We have shown that we deserve to play in the NIT. And now we have to make that count."

When Thomas joined the Massachusetts women's basketball program in the fall of 1992, she did whatever she could do to help her team win. At that time, winning wasn't something that was happening all that often for the Minutewomen.

During Thomas' freshman season, UMass was 11-15, but that was a tremendous improvement over the 4-24 mark the previous year. A lot of that success had to do with the arrival of the Newark, N.J. native.

As a freshman, Thomas averaged 13.6 points a game and more than eight rebounds a game, statistics that led to her being named the Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year. Thomas was doing whatever necessary to get the desired result — winning.

The following year brought more wins, and not so coincidentally, more production from Thomas. She scored in double figures in all but two games over the course of the season and collected an extra rebound a game. She continued to work hard, stepping up in big game situations, striving to get better, and in the process helping her team to a .500 record for the season.

"I'm doing what I have always done," Thomas said. "And that's being a leader, practice extra hard and having a good attitude."

That leadership and ability to step up in the clutch was especially evident in her performance against 1993 NCAA Tournament runner-up Ohio Sate, collecting 31 points. Being a clutch performer time and time again, hitting baskets to win games or protect leads were common place during that season.

"She a quiet leader, she just goes about her business, she talk to the younger kids in a quiet way," coach Joanie O'Brien said. "Octavia is a highly intelligent basketball player, she knows the game."

As a junior, Thomas had a change in her role in the game that a great deal of players would take exception to — coming off of the bench. But not Thomas. She accepted her role as a non-starter for a seven-game stretch and she produced effectively. Another way of exhibiting that she was a team player looking for ways to help her team win.

"I made a promise to coach that while I was coming off the bench, I would play hard and practice hard," Thomas said.

It paid off, as in those seven games, UMass went 5-2, helping the Minutewomen to a team-record 19 wins and a spot in the post-season for the first time in the program's history.

"She's always played big time minutes ever since she got here," O'Brien said. "Those two kids have carried the load of this program for the last four years."

Now entering her final season as a Minutewoman, Thomas will be looked to as the point guard for some minutes as well. The position is foreign to Thomas, but as in the past, when it comes to down to winning, there's nothing that she won't do.

"I am going to be playing point guard this year and that is something that is different for me," Thomas says of the switch. "It's hard at first to adjust. I have to take every practice slowly and take extra time. It's coming together slowly, but it is coming together.

"The point guard position changes me a lot because that means I will not be rebounding and playing underneath as much."

It is a change that she will not mind at all if it means bringing to UMass what she really wants.

"Just being a senior I want to win, but I really want a championship," Thomas said. "If I want to get a championship, I need to get one now. If we don't, it's just a waste of time for us. I won my conference [in high school] every year four years straight, so I want to win.

"It was very disappointing last year," she added about losing in the first round of the A-10 tournament. "It was heartbreaking after a long season.

"If we don't win it [this season], I don't know if we'll have accomplished anything."

As she has shown in previous years, she will do whatever she is asked to do, in order to not let that happen again.

Experience and chemistry boost frontcourt; depth in the backcourt a strong point for Minutewomen as they shoot for their first-ever ...

ATLANTIC 10 TITLE

By Mike Brown • Collegian Sports

In describing the frontcourt of the 1995–96 Massachusetts Minutewomen basketball team, chemistry is the chosen word, for the success of the team relies on three key elements.

This season, UMass possesses arguably the best frontcourt in the Atlantic 10. The threesome of seniors Melissa Gurile and Octavia Thomas, along with junior Crystal Carroll, plan to wreak havoc upon their opponents.

Gurile and Thomas both return for their final collegiate season, and are All–America, as well as Atlantic 10 Player of the Year, candidates. The tandem has proved they can play with anybody in the nation, and will be counted on heavily to provide the leadership necessary to take the program to the next level.

"The big key to this team is how Melissa and Octavia, along with the other seniors, deal with being seniors and the leadership they are asked to provide," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "If they accept their leadership roles, then it is sky's the limit. It's in their hands."

Starting in the middle, co–captain Gurile has been the most dependable player in the Minutewomen line–up. She was a 1995 All–Atlantic 10 first–team pick, averaging 15.6 points and 6.8 rebounds per game, while recording 48 blocks. Gurile is a smooth player who can hit the 15–16 foot jumper with ease, and also go down and play the low post. The shot blocking ability of Gurile signifies her presence on defense.

"Melissa is one of the most skilled players in the conference," O'Brien said. "She is the best shooter on the team and she causes a lot of problems for the opponents."

If Gurile is causing problems for the opponents, then the opponent can't exactly zero in on her. If they do, then Thomas will get them. Thomas, the other co–captain, is the speediest member of the Minutewomen. The small forward drives hard to the basket and will often times spark the crowd with a flashy move before releasing the ball into the basket.

Thomas has expanded her game coming into this season. She has added a consistent perimeter shot and is one of the Minutewomen's best free–throw shooters (73.8 percent last year). Thomas averaged 15.2 points per game last season and if a game is on the line, the opposition does not want the ball in her hands with a chance to win it.

"My jump shot is better this year and I have developed more creativity on the court," Thomas said. "My overall game is just better."

"Octavia played some of her best basketball at the end of last season," O'Brien said. "If she returns at that level of play this season, everyone better watch out."

Emerging from the shadows shed by the one–two punch of Gurile and Thomas is Carroll. An Atlantic 10 third–team selection last year, Carroll finally got the recognition she deserved after averaging 10.9 points and 4.8 rebounds per game. Carroll enjoys the role of playing second fiddle to Gurile and Thomas. She possesses a great touch from the perimeter and a smooth jump hook in the lane. Carroll is a great complement to the forwards giving UMass a third solid scorer and rebounder, leaving opponents

■ continued on page 36

By Chris Stamm • Collegian Sports

Depth is the name of the game when it comes to the backcourt of the Massachusetts women's basketball team.

Whether coach Joanie O'Brien is looking for coast–to–coast up–tempo play, a slower more controlled half court approach, or a deadly outside shooting attack, her squad has all the ground covered. Considering UMass's three guard offense, the combinations of lineups available to O'Brien is seemingly endless.

Although the point guard spot is up for grabs this early in the season, a top contender for the position is senior Tricia Hopson from Ocean City, NJ. Last year Hopson, known as one of the hardest workers on the UMass roster, filled the role of "floor general" for the Minutewomen. The team's 16– 4 record in her 20 starts is proof that she is a consistent performer who makes few mistakes.

Overall, Hopson averaged two points per game and 1.4 rebounds in 81 games for UMass. With 76 assists on the season, she is ranked No. 9 in career assists for Massachusetts with 208. O'Brien sites her increasing confidence, which has developed throughout her collegiate career, as one of her strongest characteristics.

Also in contention for the point guard slot is junior Sabriya Mitchell of Newark, NJ. After sitting out the 1993– 1994 season due to Proposition 48, Mitchell led the team in assists recording 135 for the 1994–95 season, ranking her sixth in all–time single season assists. This is the most since Christel Zullo tallied 162 assists in 1987–1988.

Where Hopson plays a more controlled game, Mitchell is in her element moving the ball in an up–tempo style. However, in her first season with the Minutewomen, Mitchell tended to be mistake–prone at times, something that could improve with more time on the court.

The third candidate for the point is Yanira Liceaga, a transfer from the University of Puerto Rico. Liceaga's most appealing characteristic is that her style of play is a mix between Hopson and Mitchell. Not only adept at running the half–court offense like the veteran Hopson, she has the ability to pick up the tempo similar to Mitchell. Although she has relatively little experience on the floor for UMass, O'Brien describes her as a very controlled player who makes very few mistakes. In high school, Liceaga was a four–year starting point guard at Francisco Mendoza, averaging 18 points and 5.3 assists while carrying her team to a 30–0 record her senior year.

So who gets the ball once UMass has worked its way down the court? If O'Brien is looking to utilize the three– point threat, then she gives the green light to local standout Beth Kuzmeski from Northampton. The junior is the Minutewomen's top three–point shooter, as in just two seasons she earned records for treys in a career (103), season (53) and a single game (7). Clearly a clutch shooter on the team last year, Kuzmeski hit shots in the closing minutes of five games, aiding UMass in victories each time.

■ continued on page 36

NCAA BERTH A REALISTIC GOAL FOR MINUTEWOMEN

By Mike Brown • Collegian Sports

This is the year. That is the motto supporting the 1995–96 Massachusetts women's basketball campaign. The Minutewomen enter this season with a full head of steam, coming off their best season in school history. Last season the Minutewomen posted a 19–11 record, marking its best–ever finish in the Atlantic 10 conference — second place. The squad also advanced to its first post–season tournament, the National Women's Invitational Tournament (NWIT), since 1981. This success is occurring just four short years after the Minutewomen program hit rock bottom with a winless season in 1991.

"If you were to ask the players, they would say that the team and the program have gotten better," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "But at this point, they feel that they have not accomplished everything they wanted to do. The seniors set out their freshman year to win an Atlantic 10 title, and they have one last chance at that goal. You will see a focused team in 1995–96."

The starting five from last season is intact. The experience of four seniors, three of which are in that starting five, give the Minutewomen a considerable advantage. Seniors Melissa Gurile, Octavia Thomas, Tricia Hopson and Nicole Carter came into this program after the disastrous season and have grown together with the younger players into a potential national power.

"The biggest part of this team is the seniors. They came to the program when it was nothing," O'Brien said. "They have started a legacy. They took over the team and now it is their team. I just push them in the right direction."

The Minutewomen will depend heavily on All–America candidates Gurile and Thomas. The tandem are the cornerstones of the team and are arguably the best twosome in the Atlantic 10. Each of them averaged a shade above 15 points per game last season. Complementing Gurile and Thomas up front will be junior Crystal Carroll, and sophomores Tez Kraft and Kara Tudman. Carroll is the likely starter who plays a role shadowed by Gurile and Thomas. When the opposition's attention is geared towards them, Carroll is able to utilize her abilities to score baskets.

"I think it is great playing with [Gurile and Thomas]," Carroll said. "They get all the attention and I can sneak in there and get a basket."

The guard corps is led by the likely point guard Hopson. Last year, Hopson became the true "floor–general" of the Minutewomen, taking control of and directing the team. She dished out 76 assists and recorded 26 steals.

"Tricia has really grown up, and has become confident in herself," O'Brien said. "Now she will say things to players that she was not comfortable saying two years ago. That is what I am looking for — a leader."

The other two point guards who will battle for minutes will

■ continued on page 36

Magic Lantern
40 YEARS OF THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT
FALL SEASON - ALL NEW SHOW
AMATEUR NIGHT
EVERY WEDS 8:00 PM
Featuring ...
TOP FEMALE AMATEURS COMPETING
$500 1ST Place
& runner-up prizes
ONLY 30 MINS. FROM CAMPUS!!
Rt. 9 South to Rt. 181 West to Rt. 20 West, 2 Miles On Right
Interested Contestant Call: 283-0275
Free Admission With This Ad
BOSTON RD. - Rte. 20 • PALMER, MA (413) 283-9275
HOURS: MON-SAT 12 NOON to 4:00 AM

ATKINS FARMS
Country Market
Corner of Rte. 116 & Bay Road South Amherst, MA (413) 253-9528
Country Fruit & Specialty GIFT BASKETS
The answer to your gift giving dilemma for the holidays!
Some of our most popular are:
and from the Atkins FLORIST SHOP . . .
Poinsettias . . . Kissing Balls • Christmas Trees & Wreaths • Candle Centerpieces
and much more!
A TASTE OF THE COUNTRY for the HOLIDAYS
Baker's Specialties including Desserts that Make You Feel You are at Home in the Country:
Pies • Breads • Cookies • Cakes • Pastries
ATKINS ALL NEW MEAT DEPARTMENT with Atkins Angus beef -
The best that you can buy!
A FULL LINE OF THE FRESHEST PRODUCE including Native Harvest
Deli, Dairy, Cheese, and Gifts for the Holidays
All In Our Newly Renovated Store -
Stop In For Shopping Pleasure!

Minutewomen

■ continued from page 35

be junior Sabriya Mitchell and transfer Yanira Liceaga. Mitchell has been called a "spark–plug" for the exciting and fast paced play she gives the Minutewomen. Liceaga's best quality is her error–free style of play.

"Yanira does not make many mistakes," O'Brien said. "Once she becomes more comfortable with the system, she will be a solid player for us."

Bombing away as the shooting guard will be junior Beth Kuzmeski. Kuzmeski, who already holds all of UMass' three point shooting records, will be expected to light it up from three point range this season. The 5–foot–7–inch Northampton, Mass., native has many other weapons. She is comfortable pulling up for a 15–foot jump–shot or dishing the ball to a teammate while penetrating to the hoop. Kuzmeski has proved she could be the "go–to" player in crunch time. She is no stranger to nailing a three–pointer to either seal a game, or put it out of reach.

Seeing time at the two–guard when Kuzmeski needs a breather will be senior Nicole Carter and freshman Jaywana Bradley. Carter, who was a walk–on as a freshman, has good passing skills (22 assists last year) and ice in her veins at the foul line (81.8 percent).

"I think we have kids that can shoot and I think we have a chance to be a great rebounding team," O'Brien said. "It's all there and it all fits. It's just a matter of how well they play together. I think the big thing this year will be our chemistry and our attitude."

The Minutewomen have a long road to hoe. After the preseason NIT, the Minutewomen have a tough non– conference schedule. The Minutewomen will battle top 25 teams with Stanford, Louisiana Tech, and Florida on the slate.

"We have had tough schedules in the past and we were not sure how we would do," Gurrie said. "This year with a tough schedule there are games that we can definitely win. On a national scale, if we win the big games it will help us for the NCAA tournament."

"We have put together another great schedule," O'Brien said. "We play Stanford and Louisiana Tech, which will be two of the top six teams in the nation, and when you play teams like that, you are challenged. This UMass team wants a challenge."

On top of the rugged non–conference schedule, the Minutewomen are contenders for the Atlantic 10 title. However, the league looks a little different this year. The Minutewomen will face five new foes in Dayton, Fordham, LaSalle, Virginia Tech and Xavier, while also matching up against perennial Atlantic 10 rivals George Washington, Rhode Island, Temple, St. Bonaventure and St. Joseph's.

"This team is ready to challenge for the Atlantic 10 title and go to the NCAA tournament," O'Brien said confidently. "I can't think of a better group of seniors to take this program to the next level. They want to go out in a blaze of glory."

Next season four valuable seniors will be lost, and a rebuilding year may be the result. This season the Minutewomen are hungry and focused. They are focused on that proverbial "next step", and are on a mission for an Atlantic 10 title and the NCAA tournament.

"I think we've done our share so far. For three years we have kind of sat back thinking we have another year," Hopson said. "But now we're seniors and there's no turning back. We can't say 'what if?' This is it."

Frontcourt

■ continued from page 34

wondering how to defend.

"I think it is great playing with Melissa and Octavia," Carroll said. "Sometimes, they get all of the attention and then I can just sneak in there and get a basket."

Coming off the Minutewomen bench is a fourth legitimate forward. Sophomore Tez Kraft will provide rest for the starters, but she is capable of much more than that. Kraft is a great athlete with speed and can run the floor well. She has a consistent perimeter shot and poses as a three–point threat to opponents. Last season, Kraft pitched in with 7.5 points and 3.6 rebounds per game in her freshman campaign.

"I really hope to step it up this year. I started off slow but I think I am ready," Kraft said. "I think between the four of us, we do pretty well. Our opponents can't just focus on one of us. We have established scoring."

In the past, the Minutewomen have lacked depth — but not this season. The Minutewomen also return sophomore Kara Tudman. Tudman, a 6–foot–2–inch forward/center, averaged 2.4 points and 3.2 rebounds. O'Brien's frontcourt depth continues with incoming freshmen Lucia Madajova and Yolanda Rayside. They are 6– foot–2–inch and 6–foot–3–inch's, respectively, and add yet another scoring threat off the bench.

"I think we match–up pretty well against our opponents, the only thing is I am used to playing against bigger players," Thomas said. "Melissa has the finesse, Crystal has the power and I have the speed. So altogether, we have a good combination down low."

"We have played together for three years and we are all a scoring threat," Gurrie said. "We are comfortable playing together and I think it's great."

It's called chemistry.

Backcourt

■ continued from page 34

Flashback — Feb. 23, 1995. With one minute to go, Kuzmeski nails a baseline jumper and then sinks two from the charity stripe with :21 remaining on the clock to ensure a 54–51 victory over Duquesne.

In addition, Kuzmeski can drive to the basket and sink the close range jumper, or dish the ball off to an awaiting teammate.

As for the backcourt defense, Massachusetts will look to senior guard/forward Nicole Carter from Philadelphia, PA. Taking to the floor as an off–guard or small forward, Carter brings speed to the UMass line–up with great hands and a scorching first step.

Since her days as a freshman walk–on, Carter was a key reserve last year tallying 22 assists and shooting 18–for–22 from the foul line (81.8 percent). If this upward trend continues, Carter should see increased minutes on the court.

"We have such depth in our backcourt," Carter said. "if one person gets tired, you can just insert another person and keep it going. It was successful for us last year, and with so many people coming back this year, we'll be even stronger."

Another hustler in the backcourt is freshman Jaywana Bradley of New York. Averaging 24 points, four assists and 12 rebounds per game last year as a senior at Manhattan Center High School, Bradley brings a considerable amount of athletic ability to the squad. With a great vertical leap, O'Brien will look to Bradley to use her speed to penetrate inside and break down the opposing team's defense.

"As a freshman, I'm going to look to Sabriya [Mitchell] and Beth [Kuzmeski] to guide me through the season," Bradley said. "Beth's a good shooter and Sabriya's a good driver, so I can learn a lot from them. Anytime I make a mistake, they're there for me, letting me know what I'm doing wrong and how to do it better."

This statement summarizes the overall backcourt of the team well. With such a mixture of depth and experience on the floor, UMass is in an ideal situation. This depth and experience trickles down to create a great environment for the freshmen to test their skills.

"There's so much experience on our team," O'Brien said, "that when they [the freshmen] step out on the court, it shouldn't be a big deal, as long as the other four experienced players do their part."

D.P. Dough®
Delivers Calzones
The Pizza Alternative
256-1616

$1.00 OFF
ANY 2 CALZONES
Exp. 8/30/96
Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 calzones

$1.00 OFF
ANY 2 CALZONES
Exp. 8/30/96
Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 calzones

Zone Out At D.P. Dough!
Home of the Coach Cal - Zone
TO EACH HIS ZONE®

Women's A-10 preview

■ continued from page 31

seniors Danya Smith (11.9 ppg) and Marcie Byrd (14.0 ppg, 6.0 rpg).

St. Bonaventure — The Bonnies look forward to the upcoming season with hopes of improving upon last year's mediocre 10–18 overall performance, 4–12 in A–10. With two starters returning for the upcoming season, the Bonnies will have to step up if they plan on finishing better than their eighth place showing of last year. Senior Amy Rooks will be the go–to player on offense with her team–leading 14.4 ppg stat of last season.

Temple — The Owls, like Rhode Island, boast four returning starters on their roster, but in this case, this may not be a blessing. Last year, Temple finished with a 2–25 record, dropping all 16 A–10 games earning them a ninth place finish at season's end. Sophomore Claudrena Harold will provide offensive drive for the Owls, as she posted an impressive 17.2 ppg last season. Junior Alkanese Garrett averaged 8.1 ppg last season.

Fordham — The Lady Rams are the only new team in the Eastern Division. Last season, Fordham finished in second place of the Patriot League going 19–10 overall, 11–3 in conference games. With three returning starters, Fordham will have to play tough to make the transition from the Patriot League to the A–10.

West Division

George Washington — The Colonial Women hope to defend their first place showing of last year. With a solid 26–6 record, 14–2 in A–10 play, GW broke the school record for wins in a season. After sweeping three games of the conference tournament, the Colonials earned its second automatic bid into the NCAA Tournament in four years. By season's end, GW was ranked No. 15 in the CNN/USA Today Women's Basketball Top 25 Poll.

Leading the Colonials will be All–America candidate and 1994 A–10 Rookie of the Year, junior Tajama Abraham, who earned 13.8 ppg last season.

Virginia Tech — The Hokies are one of the stronger new teams entering the A–10 this year. Last season, Virginia Tech finished 22–9, 10–2 in the Metro Conference. This successful season earned them first place in the Metro. The Hokies have a key disadvantage, as they lost four starting players. Returning for the Hokies are junior Sherry Banks and seniors Cynthia Lee and Terri Garland, who each earned 4.3 ppg last season.

LaSalle — Another of the five new–additon teams. Last season, the Explorers finished 20–10, 10–6 in the MCC giving them a sixth place conference standing by the close of the season. With all five starters back in blue and gold, LaSalle has an experienced squad, which should make the transition to the A–10 easier.

Junior Chrissi Donahue is the offensive powerhouse for the Explorers posting 18.8 ppg in 1994–1995. Consistently contributing to Donahue's offensive effort was Senior Lori Sparling (12.1 ppg) and Margit Rinke (9.9 ppg)

Duquesne — The Lady Dukes return to action this year on the heels of a 10–16 season, 6–10 in the A–10. A nucleus of three starters returns to Duquesne this season, who look to improve on its sixth place showing of last year. The Lady Dukes are led by sophomore Korie Hlede of Croatia who shot for 24.2 ppg last season.

Dayton — The Flyers are the first of two schools from the Buckeye State to join the A–10 this year. Dayton, led by first year coach Clemette Haskins, posted a 5–22 overall record, 3–9 in Great Midwest Conference action. The Flyers will lean on junior Steph Mathu (12.8 ppg) to put the ball in the net.

Xavier — The Musketeers round out our preview as the other Ohio school to enter the A–10. After knotting last season's record at 14–14, 7–9 in conference, for a ninth place ranking in the MCC, it may be slow going for Xavier. Senior Amy Siefring was last year's offensive leader with 13.1 ppg. After Siefring, it's slim pickings as her two leading distributors, junior Jenny Rauh and sophomore Connie Hamberg averaged only 3.3 ppg and 3.1 ppg respectively.

Schilling

■ continued from page 28

Pitino really could have used a guy like Schilling. Sure, the Wildcats blitz the bulk of their opponents, but often when they meet their match they become flustered and slip out of their game plan en route to a loss.

Schilling will go far in seeing UMass stays the course.

"I'll help us remain positive if adversity hits," Schilling said. "That's one of my better attributes."

Schilling has partaken in two intriguing basketball pursuits not directly linked with his coaching. He co-wrote Basketball Guard Play with the man who wrote the book on the subject while playing for Knight (ironically, the title of his own book), Steve Alford, an All-America, National Champion and Olympian during his career at Indiana (1983- 87).

Schilling, who talks frequently by phone with Alford, will keep an especially close eye on him this year as he begins his first Division I coaching job at Southwest Missouri State.

He also co-founded the Right Stuff Basketball Camp in Birmingham, Ala., in 1992. The camp gives under- privileged, inner-city kids the chance to learn lessons about basketball and life during a five-day program late in June, staffed by some of the nation's top high school coaches.

The camp, which has received serious attention from national media, is now sponsored by the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, enabling Schilling to continue to work it.

"It's unique. I've made some of my best friends there," Schilling said. "Just to see these kids, it's phenomenal."

When each kid departs camp, he's given a pair of sneakers, a basketball, a t-shirt, and, fittingly, a notebook. Old habits die hard, even for a former English teacher.

Schilling also had a fine playing career at Miami of Ohio, where he was a four-year starter from 1984-88. He set the school's career, season and game records for assists and played in some memorable contests.

The Redskins took on Kentucky in legendary Rupp Arena, "one of my better games," Schilling said.

Miami-Ohio also bowed out of the 1985 and 1986 NCAA Tournaments in dramatic fashion, losing to a Maryland squad led by the late, great Len Bias and to Jeff Hornacek's Iowa State team in double overtime. Schilling believes those experiences will aid him in coaching at UMass.

"It really does help me because it wasn't so long ago," Schilling said. "And a lot of these guys are closer to high school [than completing their college careers]."

COLLEGIAN SPORTS
your local source for UMass Men's & Women's Basketball
UMass basketball

O'Brien

■ continued from page 36

to post-season play when the team qualified for the National Women's Invitational Tournament (NWIT) last year. O'Brien's Minutewomen defeated Virginia Commonwealth 70-61 in the first round, then lost in successive rounds to Texas A&M and Notre Dame respectively, taking fourth place in the tournament. This fourth place showing was the best-ever for an A-10 team in the NWIT.

"Now everyone of these kids walks around campus and everybody knows who they are," O'Brien said of her team's resurgence in Massachusetts athletics. "I walk into restaurants, and for the first time, people are asking me for autographs. I have to laugh at that, but at the same time, I think it's a pretty good indication of how far we've come."

In her four years at the helm for the Minutewomen, O'Brien has 48 wins, making her the second all-time winningest coach in Massachusetts history, surpassing Barbara Stevens' (1983-1986) 34 career wins. As if these accolades were not enough, O'Brien boasts the most A-10 conference victories in school history with 26. Not surprisingly, O'Brien does not take all the credit for the program's success. She insists that the four seniors, Octavia Thomas, Melissa Gurile, Tricia Hopson and Nicole Carter, had a lot to do with the program's success.

"These four ladies came into this program when there was nothing," O'Brien said. "They're the ones that started everything for us and everybody that comes behind them will be part of their legacy. They have finally taken over this team. It's no longer my team — it's their team. Now my job is to push them in the right direction."

Clearly, this is what O'Brien has been doing since she first arrived at UMass four years ago and began the revitalization of the program. It is no wonder that she was honored as the A-10 Coach of the Year last season — once again, the first in Massachusetts history.

Minutewomen Head Coach Joanie O'Brien

Your UMass Alumni Association says
GO UMASS!
You'll always be ranked
#1
to us!
From the opening tip-off to the final buzzer... You can count on our support!

MIKE'S WESTVIEW
WISHES UMASS BASKETBALL A SUCCESSFUL SEASON
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Come To Mike's For Our Great Beer Specials - A Different One Every Week - Along With Our Free Buffet After UMass Basketball Home Games!

AEROBICS
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

WIR SPRECHEN VOLKSWAGEN
The Valley's largest VW inventory! Whether it's a tune-up or a full blown restoration project; from engine valves and bearings to door handles or gas caps, we have the parts for just about any model VW ever made! Plus a full inventory for Japanese and Korean cars and trucks.
WE SPEAK VOLKSWAGEN!
It All Starts With Parts...
PELHAM
AUTO PARTS
ROUTE 9
AMHERST/ BELCHERTOWN LINE
256-0457

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE

- Full Service Autobody Insurance Approved
- Full Selection of Genuine GM Goodrich Parts.
- Mass. State Inspection Station #3343
- Fine Selection of New and Used Cars & Trucks.
- Ask About Our FREE 18 Point Maintenance Check.

PAIGE'S Chevrolet Amherst Geo

DICKINSON ST. • BETWEEN RT. 9 & MAIN ST.
253-3444 • PARTS LINE 253-5928

The Raw Carrot

Vegetarian Café & Juice Bar

9 East Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002

"Hours"
Mon - Fri 10am-8pm
Sat & Sun 12pm-6pm

Salem Cross Inn 1705

(508) 867-2345 • Rte. 9 West Brookfield, Ma 01585

On your way to the game . . . Stop by . . .
Try our "Early Bird" special!

Ask about our Complete Dinner Special $12.95

Luncheon and "Early Bird" Dinners
11:30 - 6pm Tuesday - Friday $5.95 - 8.95

Fine Food & Drink
Just 30 Minutes from Amherst

Marshall Steinbeck

Complete Auto Collision & Painting Service

(413) 256-1385
(413) 256-8157

53 So. Prospect St. Amherst, Mass. 01002
STATE REG. RS #1212 MA LIC. #12384

FOREIGN DOMESTIC

ACME

AUTOMOTIVE CENTER, INC.

DON MUCCINO Jr.
BODY SHOP MGR.

KEN WALKER
SERVICE MGR.

• 220 KING STREET, NORTH AMPTON, MA 01060
(413) 584-3710

CUTTY'S

55 University Dr.
Amherst, MA
01002
(413) 549-5700

ICHIBAN

Authentic Japanese Restaurant

All Homemade Sauces • Cooking At The Table • Tatami Room • Sushi • Kareoke

10% Discount With Student I.D

1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, 585-1185

Claudia's Cafe

Homebaked goodies, awesome cheesecakes, comfy couches, relaxing atmosphere. Amherst's newest place to see and be seen.
"Always something going on"

Open every day. 549-7122
1 E. Pleasant St., Amherst

Always in Bloom

Full Service Florist

• Unique Flowers • Gifts and Plants
• FTD Wire Service • Daily Deliveries

220 North Pleasant St. • Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-5545 • Debbie Boyce Owner

facials • waxing • manicures & pedicures

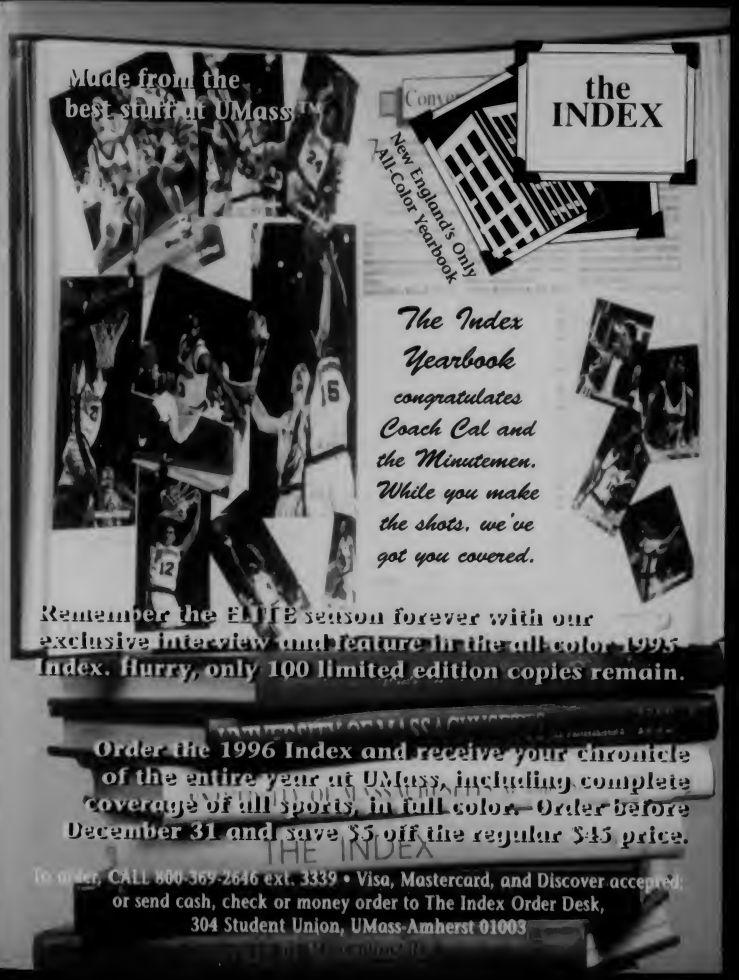
Shear Bliss

Full Service Holistic Salon
479 West St., Amherst

* Also 100% Organic Men's Hair & Shaving System! *

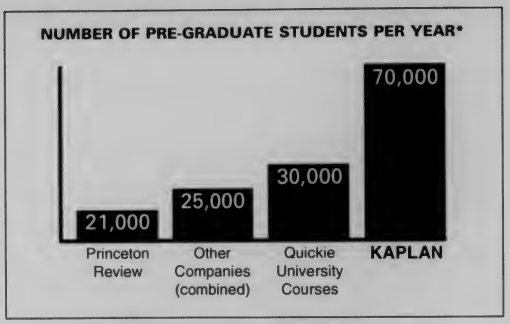
pure flower & plant essences used in every service

253-2322



Made from the best stuff at UMass™
the INDEX
New England's Only All Color Yearbook
The Index Yearbook congratulates Coach Cal and the Minutemen. While you make the shots, we've got you covered.
Remember the ELITE season forever with our exclusive interview and feature in the all color 1995 Index. Hurry, only 100 limited edition copies remain.
Order the 1996 Index and receive your chronicle of the entire year at UMass, including complete coverage of all sports, in full color. Order before December 31 and save $5 off the regular $45 price.
To order, CALL 800-369-2646 ext. 3339 • Visa, Mastercard, and Discover accepted;
or send cash, check or money order to The Index Order Desk,
304 Student Union, UMass-Amherst 01003

Kaplan prepares more students... one student at a time.



Here's Why.

Kaplan teachers are dynamic, experienced and highly effective. Using Kaplan's unique, customized prep system, they'll create an individualized study plan that focuses on your needs.

Don't risk your future with an inferior prep course. At Kaplan, we'll make sure you get a higher score.

(413)549-5780

1-800-KAP-TEST

LSAT GRE GMAT MCAT

KAPLAN

Wake Forest no Demons

Dana Dingle and the UMass men's basketball team won the battle of the boards and held off No. 10 Wake Forest last night 60-46 (See Sports, page 16).

Return to Tienamen Square

Chai Ling, a student protestor who was at the Tienamen Square massacre, spoke about the future of democracy in China (See story, page 3).

Watching in a Winter Wonderland

When the weather outside gets frightful and the lines at the mall even more so, why not head to the movies (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Today will be mostly sunny, but cold, with a chance of snow flurries later in the day. Clouds will clear up today, but return, with possible precipitation, on Friday.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 40 LOW: 25	HIGH: 35 LOW: 25	HIGH: 40 LOW: 30

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CV Issue 63 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Thursday, December 7, 1995

Vitale signs books for UM hoop fans on CC Concourse

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

Famed sports announcer Dick Vitale appeared yesterday outside the University Store to mingle with students and autograph his book, "Holding Cuts."

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The line-stretched from the Campus Center concourse all the way to the parking garage. On the basketball-crazy campus of the University of Massachusetts, students continued lining up from 11:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. for a chance to meet ESPN commentator Dick Vitale.

The Campus Center store hosted a signing of Vitale's newest book, Holding Court: Reflections on the Game I Love, and the students arrived in droves.

Vitale signed copies of his books as well as a variety of other items. Over 400 books were sold at the event yesterday.

Vitale is excited about the book's early success.

"The book is really doing phenomenal," he said. "I'm really ecstatic. We're in our third printing and it's only been out four weeks.

"It attacks all the issues of the game: Should players get paid?; Players leaving [college] early; the impact of television; the personalities that make up the game; the pressures of coaching; kids chasing dreams of being Michael Jordan when they should be chasing dreams of being a doctor."

Vitale played the crowd throughout the two hours talking and joking with each person that came through the line. He drew a loud cheer from the crowd when he teased a girl who admitted to being a Connecticut fan.

Most fans spoke highly of Vitale after meeting him.

"I think he's great for the game. I love Dick," said Dave Dec, a UMass alum (class of 1971). "He jumped on the college basketball bandwagon when it was taking off. I've always been a fan of the college game and I think he's great for the game."

"He was a friendly guy, he made jokes," said Himanshu Patel, a senior political science major. "It's exciting. Look at the turnout. The line goes to the parking garage. Having him here shows we've made prime time now. He usually does North Carolina or Duke. Now he's here."

While the crowd at UMass was clearly a fan of Vitale, the broadcaster expressed his admiration for UMass coach John Calipari.

"I think Calipari is without question, the biggest architect and builder of a program that I've witnessed in my 17 years on ESPN," he said. "It's amazing the job he's

Turn to VITALE, page 2

Snowball fight ends in violence

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

What started as campus-wide snowball fights early yesterday morning ended in an assault on a male individual who went to Cooley Dickinson Hospital to receive stitches for a head injury, according to police.

"It started out as a large snowball fight between the Central Area and the Southwest Area," said Phil Cavanaugh, associate director of the University Police Department.

At least 400 students were involved in the rash of incidents, according to police reports.

"We saw the huge mob of people. From the Haigis Mall, you could hear them yelling in Southwest," said first-year student Dan Levenson. His roommate recommended he find an alternate route home.

From his window in Johns Adams Residence Hall, first- year student David Weaver saw students from Southwest Residential Area rushing toward the kids from Central Residential Area, some of whom were yelling "Southwest sucks."

"It sounded like a party," Weaver said.

The group was running from Coolidge and Kennedy Residence Halls toward John Quincy Adams Residence Hall between 12:30 a.m. and 1 a.m., according to Weaver.

A large group congregated in front of Hampden Munchy Store in Southwest. Weaver estimated that there were more than 50 students who "formed a circle."

By the end of the night there were plate glass windows broken at the Hampden Munchy Store and at JQA Residence Hall, as well as smaller residential windows at McKimmie, a police vehicle and "other parts of campus," according to police reports.

However, the most serious damage took place about an hour after these incidents, at about 1:45 a.m., according to police reports.

After some snowballs were thrown at a vehicle in the Haigis Mall, the three males in the vehicle exited the car and confronted the snowball throwers.

The three males who had thrown the snowballs proceeded up to Thatcher Way, in the Northeast Residence Area, where they were stopped by the three males who had been in the vehicle.

"Apparently, they were followed," Cavanaugh said.

The three males from the vehicle assaulted one of the other three males, a student from Brown Residence Hall.

According to witnesses, the victim was attacked with "a metal rod, windshield scrapers and an automobile antennae," police said.

He was knocked to the ground, kicked and beat with the weapons, according to Cavanaugh.

The victim suffered a "severe laceration at the back of his head and a possible concussion," according to police reports.

The student was transported from University Health Services to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

According to police reports, the victim had not actually thrown snowballs at the assailants' vehicle.

The University Police Department has a number of witnesses assisting on the case. They are looking for a vehicle described as a blue Honda Civic hatchback. No license plate number is available.

The assailants were described as a male in a green and yellow Green Bay Packer football jacket with a hood, a male with a white Adidas jacket with stripes on the sleeves and a hood and a male with a hooded green or dark colored sweatshirt.

The incident took place on the east side of Thatcher Way behind Worcester Dining Hall.

"[The incidents] came on the hinge of the Phish concert getting out," Cavanaugh said.

Anyone who may have any information regarding the incident should call the Detective Bureau at the Community Disorders Unit at 545-0893.

Note service gives students extra edge

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

Find it hard to listen to and understand your professor in those enormous lectures, while rapidly taking notes at the same time? Well, you're not alone. And Mad Dasher Notes has the solution.

Mad Dasher Notes is a service offering students a supplement to their own note taking. Paul Slavinski, one of the three founders of the company, stresses the notes should fill in the gaps of the students' own notes, rather than provide a substitution for them.

"The lecture hall is intrinsically a handicapped situation," Slavinski said. "You can't ask any questions."

Slavinski said students are not paying university tuition for the information alone. They are paying for the expertise of the professor.

"Students should be paying attention instead of playing stenographer," Slavinski said.

The three 24-year old owners of the business are recent college graduates. Slavinski, Josh Lebow and Kerry Olson say they know more about academics than business, reiterating that they began the service with the good intentions of helping students, rather than making money off of them.

"Students are welcome to come in and look at them for free if they want to," Slavinski said. "That's why the couch is here."

However, Mad Dasher has received criticism from faculty members who do not believe in supplying notes to students. Slavinski said a professor from the University's art department said the company was "preying on the weakness of the students."

"Some professors think notetaking is a technique to learn in and of itself," Slavinski said. "We agree with that, but we promote forming your own perspective in printed form."

Don Choi is a senior biology major and Mad Dasher customer. He recently bought a note packet for his organic chemistry exam. Overall, Choi was pleased with the service.

"There are some things I didn't get," Choi said. "I'm not a confident notetaker. I'm not very organized. They help me reorganize my notes."

Choi said professors shouldn't be concerned with students using the Mad Dasher Notes as a substitute for going to class.

"The notes are just as good as the ones I take," he continued. "The issue is how much a student learns from the class itself."

Mad Dasher has the permission of every professor whose class they cover. Although they have the legal right to cover any class they wish to, it is company policy to cover only the ones they have permission to.

Slavinski, who is disabled himself, said the service is free to all learning disabled students. To protect confidentiality, professors may request a certain number of packets for their classes and will distribute them to the learning disabled student themselves, rather than submitting their names to the company.

Notetakers are students recommended by the professor. Each class usually has three exams, with each exam packet costing around $10. Mad Dasher Notes covers classes with enrollment exceeding 100 students. The company covers approximately 50 classes this semester, however owners expect to expand coverage to 60 or 70 next semester.

Business hours are Monday through Friday, 10 p.m. to 7 p.m. and Sundays, 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. Mad Dasher Notes is located at 15B Prey St., next to Speed Wash and behind Bertucci's.

White House pushes a new 7 year budget

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House began unveiling its new seven-year budget-balancing proposal to congressional Democrats yesterday, even as President Clinton delivered his long-promised coup-de-grace to a Republican plan he said bore "wrong-headed cuts and misplaced priorities."

Clinton dispatched Leon Panetta, his chief of staff, to the Capitol to brief House and Senate Democrats about the package, which the administration plans to present to Republicans when budget talks resume today.

Compared with a proposal Clinton made in June, the new plan will have deeper cuts in welfare and many domestic programs and additional limits on business tax breaks. It will call for the same savings of $124 billion from Medicare and $54 billion from Medicaid that he had sought earlier, and about the same $98 billion tax cut for families he had proposed.

Turn to BUDGET, page 3

Congress considers sex-ed aid

By Cassandra Burrell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Educators are going too far in their discussions of birth control, homosexuality and AIDS in the nation's classrooms, implying that it's OK to be promiscuous, three parents told a House subcommittee yesterday.

But other witnesses at a public hearing asked members of Congress not to block local efforts to warn teen-agers about AIDS and teach them tolerance, especially for fellow students.

"I am not asking teachers, administrators or anyone who works in a school to like a students' homosexuality or to condone a student's parent's sexual orientation," said Anne Simon, a Sudbury, Mass., schoolteacher. "I am asking that they make their classroom a safe place and a place where every student, regardless of sexual orientation, can learn. After all, that is what we were hired to do."

During the hearing before the oversight and investigations subcommittee of the House Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee, parent Warren Grantham said there's nothing wrong giving out information about different lifestyles.

But some instructors cross the line and advocate homosexuality and premarital sex while "denigrating the strongly held contrary views and beliefs, religious or otherwise,

Turn to SEX, page 3

Former surgeon general Dr. M. Joycelyn Elders speaks to UM audience

Dr. M. Joycelyn Elders will speak about her role as U.S. Surgeon General this evening at the Fine Arts Center st 8 p.m.

Elders was the first female and second African-American Surgeon General of the United States. She was sworn in on September 8, 1993. She worked for the department of public health under Bill Clinton while he was the governor of Arkansas.

Elders was fired in 1993 after she talked about legalizing drugs and teaching masturbation in public schools.

Elders received her medical degree while attending school on the G.I. Bill as pediatric endocrinologist. She has written about children's growth and hormone related illnesses. She is also a supporter of family and the legalization of drugs. Elders is considered a liberal in her field.

As Surgeon General, she championed the health issues of women and children.

Elders' presentation is being sponsored by the Commuter Area Government, as well as ALANA

Dr. M. Joycelyn Elders

Affairs, Black Mass Communication Project (BMCP), Chancellor's Office, Health Services Education, Multicultural Enrichment Fund, Student Government Association and the Stonewall Center.

– Allison Connolly

House negotiators adopt plan to restrict computer smut

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House lawmakers agreed yesterday on a plan that would make it illegal for a company to knowingly transmit sexually explicit and other "indecent" material to minors over computers.

The agreement makes it all but certain that if legislation overhauling the nation's telecommunications laws is enacted, it will contain some of the most sweeping anti-smut provisions ever imposed on computer communications.

The plan is part of negotiations on a larger telecommunications bill and settles differences among House members who were deeply divided over how to best limit children's exposure to smut carried on computer services, including the global network, Internet. The plan not only toughens an anti-smut provision contained in a House telecommunications bill, but brings it in line with a provision in the Senate's telecommunications bill.

"We're on the road to an agreement that most can agree to," said Sen. J. James Exon (D-Neb.) author of Senate's anti-smut provision, which like the House plan also outlaws the transmission of indecent material to minors.

House and Senate lawmakers serving on a committee to reconcile House- and Senate-passed telecommunications bills met for the second time in six weeks on yesterday.

"I'm determined to finish this bill," said Sen. Larry Pressler (R-S.D.) architect of the Senate's telecommunications measure and chairman of the conference committee.

Supporters are scrambling to bring a final bill to each chamber for a vote by Dec. 15. Rep. Thomas Bliley (R-Va.) the primary author of the House bill, said the conference could be completed within days.

For Your Information

Fifs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a pres release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Dec. 7

Forum — At 6 p.m. Hillel House is sponsoring Ofra Farhi of the Israeli consulate who is speaking about Israel's current situation and to explore UMass reaction to the peace process to mark one month since Yitzhak Rabin's death.

Rally — "No More Hate Rally" will be held outside Van Meter to celebrate the differences in the Van Meter community and to take a stand against hate. On the hill above Van Meter at 7:30 p.m.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Social Gathering — UMass Hillel is sponsoring "Singled Out", a mix and match social at 8 p.m. in the Hillel House Lounge.

Meeting — Alpha Lambda Delta, the Freshman Honors Society, is having a meeting at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 101. Information on initiation, study breaks, tutoring and dues will be available.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542–2277.

Lecture — Prof. Charles Nero of Bates College will speak on "Re/Membering Langston: Homophobic Textuality and Arnold Rampersad's The Life of Langston Hughes," at noon in Campus Center Room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. For more information call The Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Friday, Dec. 8

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m., Campus Center. For more information call Utama at 256–8482.

Religious — Shabbat services will be held at Hillel House at 6 p.m.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition is having the last meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. A group photo will be taken, a video shown and all are encouraged to attend. For more information call 546–0358.

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4 – 8 p.m.

Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Meeting — The Community of Intentional Conversation is holding an open forum for the community to discuss the Chancellor's restructuring plans at 2 p.m. in Campus Center Room 163.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542–2277.

Saturday, Dec. 9

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a gendarama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel–chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542–5896.

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545–2511. Advance purchase is recommended.

Astronomy — The Amherst Astronomy Association is conduction a free public planetarium show at 4 p.m. in the Amherst College Bassett Planetarium and a free public observatory observing at 9 p.m. at the Amherst College Wilder Observatory. For more information call 256–6234.

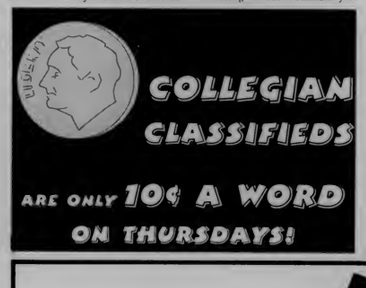
Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542–2277.

Sunday, Dec. 10

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a gendarama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel–chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542–5896.

Craft Fair — Butterfield Dining Room will feature a craft fair at 3 p.m. Featured items include jewelry, clothing, pottery and other hand–made goods.

Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542–2277.



Campus Police Log

Bomb threat
Dec. 5
Residence staff in Coolidge Residence Hall received a telephone call that there was "a bomb in your Tower." No device was found.

Assault & battery
Dec. 4
An individual reported a past assault by her former roommate. The party was spoken to and advised to stay away from the victim.

Drug law offenses
Dec. 4
Christopher J. Freeman, 23, of 454 Beale St., Quincy, was arrested on two counts of assault and battery on a police officer, disorderly conduct and possession of Class C and D substances.

Justin E. Schillinger, 17, of 242 Talcott Ville Rd., Vernon, was arrested for possession of a Class D substance.

Brett M. Tartaglino, 19, of 137 Main St., Lee, was arrested for possession of a Class D substance.

Disorderly person
Dec. 4
Thomas Francis Dalmaso, 18, of 21 Avery Ln., Great Barrington, was arrested for possession of a Class D substance and disorderly conduct.

Health/safety hazard
Dec. 5
A plastic bag containing human feces was found in McNamara Residence Hall.
Dec. 4
Unauthorized food vendors on Commonwealth Avenue were shut down by Environmental Health & Safety.

Annoying behavior
Dec. 5
Student Security staff was threatened in Van Meter Residence Hall.
Staff requested assistance in quelling disturbance, and bottles being thrown from windows, at Pierpont Residence Hall.
Dec. 5
Staff had a problem with an intoxicated individual refused to leave Baker Residence Hall. Brett O'Keefe, 18, of 213 Plum Hollow Rd., Falmouth, was arrested on a warrant from Barnstable County.

Disturbance
Dec. 4
A 21–year–old at the William D. Mullins Center was put in protective custody.

Medical emergency
Dec. 3
A person with abdominal pain was taken from Gorman Residence Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
Police checked on an intoxicated person in Kennedy Residence Hall. No transport was necessary.
Dec. 4
An individual having a seizure was transported from Dickinson Residence Hall to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
An individual with a hand injury was transported from Governors Drive to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
EMTs tended to an injured party at the William D. Mullins Center.
An individual with a migraine headache was sent to University Health Services.
An individual passed out in the William D. Mullins Center and EMTs responded.
A security officer was struck by a vehicle in Parking Lot 26, causing minor injury. No transport was necessary.
An individual with an elevated heart rate was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Fire alarm
Dec. 3
There was a faulty heat detector in William D. Mullins Center.
Dec. 4
An alarm in Lewis Residence Hall was set off by cooking smoke.

Motor vehicle theft
Dec. 3
A motor vehicle theft report was unfounded. The vehicle was found in Parking Lot 32.
Dec. 4
Owner of a motor vehicle stolen in Holyoke was in to retrieve vehicle.

Larceny
Dec. 3
There was a license plate stolen from Parking Lot 22.
There was a mirror stolen from a vehicle in Parking Lot 30.
An individual in Cashin Residence Hall reported her television, VCR and jacket stolen.
A television was stolen from a lounge in Cashin Residence Hall.
An individual reported that a food warmer was stolen from his vehicle in the Southwest mall.
An individual returned from the weekend to discover numerous personal items stolen from his room.
Dec. 4
An individual reported that cash and CDs were stolen from her room in Washington Residence Hall.

Vandalism
Dec. 3
A vehicle was "keyed" in Parking Lot 32.
Tires were slashed on a vehicle in Parking Lot 29.
There was racial graffiti scratched into an elevator panel in Coolidge Residence Hall.
Dec. 4
A rock was thrown through the window of a vehicle parked by Pierpont Residence Hall.

Animal complaint
Dec. 4
A dog was taken to the town Pound.
A bat in the Graduate Lounge was removed.

Accident
Dec. 4
There was a two car accident on Hicks Way. The owners were located, and there was minor damage.
A vehicle in the Campus Center garage was struck, causing minor damage.

Suspicious vehicle
Dec. 4
A nitrous oxide tank was confiscated in Parking Lot 26.

Liquor law violations
Dec. 5
A beer keg was found in the middle of Commonwealth Avenue.

Correction

In Wednesday's article on the protest outside the Murray– Poussaint debate, the Maoist International Movement was mistakenly given sole credit for the demonstration at the Fine Arts Center. The International Socialist Organization was also a key organizer of the protest. In addition, ISO member Peter Couvares was mistakenly identified as member of MIM. The Collegian regrets these errors.

■ Vitale

continued from page 1

done, to think that Mass. has been able to get to the winner's circle against Kentucky, Arkansas and North Carolina.

"Its amazing the job he's done to take Mass. to that level. Its great for the school. He's a tremendous teacher. I don't think people realize what a great teacher he is in practice. He develops game plans. He's constantly stressing work ethic and never letting the kids get a big head. I think he's one of the premier coaches in the country."

While Vitale enjoys the writing and the books, he has no delusions of where his real strengths lie.

"I am not truly a writer per se," he said. "I work with a writer and I talk into a tape recorder and do what I do best."

After the book signing Vitale headed to Mullins last night to do what he does best. He ranted about Marcus Camby. He ranted about Tim Duncan and when it was all over he moved to Louisville and started the routine all over again.

great scores... LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT get a higher score
KAPLAN
Kaplan helps you focus your test prep studies and your confidence, so you can get a higher score.

CANDY CANE SUNDAE
Peppermint Ice Cream
w/ hot fudge or marshmallow topping
sm. $1.50 lg. $2.00
... ONLY AT THE BLUEWALL

Collegian Elections Spring 1995

Applications for all Newsroom Editor Positions are being accepted:
Arts & Living
Black Affairs
Business
Developing Nations
Editor In Chief
Editorial / Opinion
GLB Issues
Jewish Affairs
Managing Editor
Multicultural Affairs
News
Photo
Sports
Women's Issues

Applications due Dec. 8, 4 p.m.
Candidates Night, Mon., Dec. 11 7 p.m.
Elections, Tues., Dec. 12 8 a.m. – 3 p.m.

Applications are available on the Managing Editor's desk and should be dropped off in the Editor in Chief's mailbox. All questions should be directed to Mai Vassour, Editor in Chief.
The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

Top 100 Gays and Lesbians

Once again, Out magazine has published its "Out 100," a list of the hundred most influential and/or inspiring gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people in the world.

Headed by musician Melissa Etheridge, the "Out 100" includes several famous entertainers, producers, politicians, and athletes, including Boy George, Greg Louganis, Barney Frank, Chastity Bono, Candace Gingrich, and David Geffen.

The list also identifies several individuals whose stories are less celebrated:

• "A.T.," an Iranian man living in New York, who became only the second immigrant granted political asylum on the basis of sexual orientation by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. The I.N.S. ruled that "A.T." had "a well-founded fear of persecution" if he returned to Iran, where the punishment for male homosexuality is death.

• Mandy Carter, who visited black lesbians and gay men in 27 cities in her role as liaison between the National Black Gay and Lesbian Forum and the Human Rights Campaign. Carter also convinced Coretta Scott King to write an open letter to the people of Tampa, Fla., against an anti–gay referendum.

• Matt Foreman, executive director of the New York City Gay and Lesbian Anti-Violence Project, brought the issue of anti–gay violence front and center with a comprehensive national study that was cited by mainstream news sources such as Vanity Fair and Dateline NBC.

• BCS41@aol.com, a "cyberspace newsman" who operates as a one-man Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation by circulating innumerable daily GLB news clips on the Internet. "As Bill Stosine of Iowa," writes Out, "he dispatches righteous letters to the editor when news stories are riddled with errors or anti-gay bias."

• Lorrie L. Jean, executive of the Los Angeles Gay and Lesbian Community Services Center, managed to raise money for a $15.8 million budget — an amount nearly equivalent to all the money raised by the national gay and lesbian lobbies in Washington, D.C. Jean was also around to open the new Pedro Zamora Youth HIV Clinic, named after the late star of MTV's The Real World.

Gaybashing in Zimbabwe

In Zimbabwe, the furor over gay and lesbian rights continues as members of Parliament discuss ways to rid the country of a class of people President Robert Mugabe characterized as being lower than animals.

An excerpt from a speech by MP Tirivanhu Mudanki reads as follows, "I would like to ask... that police should be on the lookout... for homosexuals and lesbians. They should take them and put them somewhere where they can never be seen because we cannot mix with such people. They will tarnish our image. We should look at ways of keeping these people separate from those who are normal."

Mudanki went on to say that as far as he is concerned, Zimbabwean gays and lesbians have no rights. If they want to "fall in love with their male or female counterparts," they should move to another country, he said.

Meanwhile, President Mugabe and other officials in Zimbabwe have been condemned by Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, South African author Nadime Gordimer and over 70 members of the U.S. Congress.

Ling talks of future for Chinese democracy

By Cristina Basto
Collegian Correspondent

The undemocratic practices in China after years of communist rule need to be disclosed and discussed in order to prevent further human rights violations, according to activist Chai Ling.

Ling, who spoke at the Student Union Ballroom last Tuesday, was involved in the events of June 1989 at Beijing's Tienamen Square. There, a pacific manifestation took place rendering tribute to a dead leader with whom students sympathized. With the purpose of suppressing the manifestation, Chinese tanks and police rolled over the place, killing and beating people. Ling is one of the survivors of this tragic incident that showed to the world the hostility and state of repression in which many Chinese people live.

To protest against these actions and the violation of human rights, a movement called The Tienamen Square Committee was then formed by the students. Ling was elected Chief Commander.

In Ling's speech on "The Future of Democracy in China," she discussed China's history in order to address the present situation of her country. According to her, communism promised justice, equality, prosperity and freedom to the population after a period of political and social instability in China.

With time, the communist party began to break its promises by taking control of people's lives and taking away many of their rights.

"People were never allowed to participate in public policy making," Ling said.

The government took absolute power and with time corruption took place, she said. Counter–revolutionary parties formed in order to try to force the government to introduce changes — but the situation remained unchanged.

Ling said that her generation is the "milk of communism." People her age grew up firmly believing what was taught at school and what the media in China said. Back then, Ling herself exemplified the model student, being awarded many times. Her years at Beijing's University, where she was studying psychology, opened her eyes to China's reality.

Ling said that there are two images of the Communist party in China. One image is a wonderful and stable nation, while the other contradicts what Chinese people believe.

"There is so much hatred, anger, insecurity in the society, there is not much freedom, there are many subjects that can't be discussed," she said.

Bringing the issue to the international arena, Ling expressed her concern about the lack of interest on the part of the United States regarding the massacre in Tienamen Square. The United States should give equal attention to the protection of human rights in the world, according to her.

"The United States should develop a policy to reward the behaviors of younger generation leadership in China and punish behaviors otherwise," Ling said.

Questioning Ling's efforts to bring democracy to China from the United States as opposed to working in China, a member of the audience asked if she was planning to return. She answered that at this moment she is not yet prepared for this type of move — the government would arrest her and torture her.

Ling's life entails a story of political persecution. Her activism entrenched her on the government's "most wanted" list, and she had to escape from China. She came to the United States to look for help and continue her struggle.

Today, she is the president of China Dialogue, a non–profit organization that raises awareness about the need of freedom and democracy in China. She has been nominated twice for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Ling's speech was organized by the Office of ALANA Affairs.

Buchanan defends stance against legalized abortion

By Paul Tolme
Associated Press

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Pat Buchanan is among the staunchest abortion opponents and has made it a centerpiece of his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

That didn't sit well with several voters — including two men who identified themselves as independents or Republicans — who participated in a forum Monday night with Buchanan. They traded terse exchanges with the conservative TV commentator over abortion. Jeff Brouillard, a 41-year-old engineer, said Buchanan has no right telling his daughters what they can do with their bodies. "Where do you come off telling my daughters they can't have an abortion?" Brouillard said. "If you don't want to have an abortion, don't have one."

Buchanan said America always has imposed restrictions on Americans, including outlawing drugs and requiring white citizens to abide by civil rights laws. Opponents of civil rights also had argued it should be their choice to hire or serve blacks, Buchanan said.

The discussion came during a meeting of New Hampshire Voters' Voice, a partnership of The Associated Press, The Telegraph, New Hampshire Public Radio and New Hampshire Public Television. The idea of Voters' Voice is to give citizens a chance to ask candidates questions directly in something akin to a living room chat.

Ten voters chosen to represent a random sampling of New Hampshire citizens participated.

Al Milchen, 71, a retired sales executive, said science does not support Buchanan's stand that a fertilized egg is a human being. A fertilized egg cannot live outside a mother, he said.

"My friend, you're getting a little agitated," Buchanan told Milchen, who repeatedly returned to the question of abortion rights during the forum.

■ budget

continued from page 1

In addition, it would contain a mechanism for forcing the federal deficit to reach zero, Panette told reporters. He would reveal no details. But another administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the White House might suggest that some of the tax cuts — including the president's proposed $500 per child tax credit — be withheld in any year that annual deficit targets were not achieved.

The new proposal was a concession to GOP demands that the president propose a detailed, seven-year package, rather than working with the broad-brush, 10-year outline he unveiled six months ago. Republicans had mixed reactions.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole (R-Kan.) said he wanted to see if Clinton's proposal will be "warmed over" or "a step toward a balanced budget in the next seven years."

■ sex

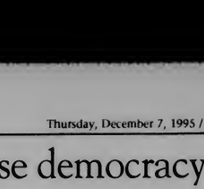
continued from page 1

of students and staff members alike," said Grantham, father of two St. Paul, Minn., public school students.

"My two children are being taught at home that sexual activity of any kind should be saved for marriage. Yet there is a very different message that they get from school officials these days," he said.

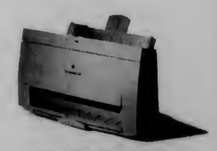
Critics also claimed that the federal government is funding inappropriate teaching.

Federal money earmarked for AIDS education and prevention is finding its way to non-profit community organizations that put together questionable education programs and "recruit" young people into the gay lifestyle, said Claire Connelly, president of the Gay & Lesbian Resource Center, a New Age-style counseling clinic in Ventura County, Calif.



Macintosh Performa 636CD
8MB RAM/250MB hard drive, CD-ROM drive, 15" color monitor, keyboard, mouse and all the software you're likely to need.

Looking for a great deal on a computer and a printer can be a whole lot easier than finding a roommate. Because right now, when you purchase a Macintosh® Performa® from the 630 series and an Apple® printer, you'll get $150 back. Just think about it. You can get your work done faster, it will look great and you can receive an extra $150 at the same time. So take a moment to look into the power that can keep you ahead. The power of Macintosh. The power to be your best.® Apple



Color StyleWriter® 2400 w/ CardShop Plus™
Ink cartridge and cable included.

Stop By The University Store Computer Department For More Information

UNIVERSITY STORE ☆ Campus Center 545-2619 Mon. - Fri. 9-5 Sat 11- 3

Purchase any Apple Macintosh Performa 630 series or 640CD DOS-compatible computer along with any Apple printer and receive a $150 mail in rebate. Offer valid through January 15, 1996, while supplies last and subject to availability. If you have any questions about the "Performa + Printer = Payback" offer, please call 800 950-6354 or see stores for a complete list of details. ©1995 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, Performa, StyleWriter and "The power to be your best." are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. PowerPC is a trademark of International Business Machines Corporation, used under license therefrom. CardShop Plus is a registered trademark of Windscape. All Macintosh computers are designed to be accessible to individuals with disability. To learn more (U.S. only), call 800 600-7808 or TTY 800 755-0601.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Helfner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Ganley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Tony Morse Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chace Systems Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Conner News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Marni E. Helfner & Geri Sahn

Housing locked all the doors of all the residence halls for 24 hours from this past Friday through yesterday morning. Why? Because they didn't want the "Phish" element causing problems in the halls. Come on! They're Phish-heads — all they like to do is get stoned, chow on some gummi bears and oregano brownies, avoid showers like the plague and listen to really atrocious and long songs over and over again. If you want to find one, just follow the smell. They're perfectly harmless, so just leave them alone to wallow in their own Phishness.

* * *

Roly Poly Phish-heads.

* * *

So, we have a new president. There was a lot of controversy and news coverage over Mr. Bulger. What I don't understand, though, is why the Trustees even bothered to nominate two other people. Everyone knew Bulger was going to get the job. Do we even know who the other two nominees were?

From what I do know about Bulger, the University seems to be hooked up pretty well now. He knows a lot of people, people with a lot of money. But, why doesn't the president have an office on the Amherst campus? We're the flagship campus — damn it.

* * *

During Orientation, the New Students Program talks about how Southwest is like a city. Well, it's starting to be more and more like a city. Forget that, it's a war zone. With shootings, bomb scares, noise and broken beer bottles everywhere, Southwest has gotten out of control. Its reputation for being the place to party has grown beyond what anyone could have possibly imagined. Sure, most frosh live there and a lot of drinking happens, but that doesn't mean the maturity factor has to drop to -15.

* * *

Life at UMass is always exciting. Throughout the year, undoubtedly, there are always issues being protested outside the Campus Center. This semester, there has been a masked man who has protested several times on campus, and on Monday there were over four or five masked protestors on the Student Union Steps. Is there a masked man club now? Are they going to register themselves as an RSO? Will they soon get office space on campus?

I always stop to listen if there are speakers outside the Student Union, but to be honest, those masked men scare me.

* * *

Roly Poly Phish-heads

* * *

The one that really bothers me is when people try to pretend like they're the gods and goddess of basketball when they make a garbage can shot from two feet away. Not only do they fail to impress me, no one can ever replace the UMass basketball team.

Mentioning basketball, it seems that this year, Marcus Camby is the new golden boy of the basketball team, replacing Lou Roe's former position. (Although Lou could never make his foul shots.) Every year, students whine and complain the team has gone down the drain because the best players graduated last year. Along comes the first win streak and voila, there's a new golden boy.

* * *

Kudos to the SGA for pushing the repeal of the "Posting Policy" (read censorship) in Northeast and Sylvan. The policy required every piece of paper hung up inside Northeast and Sylvan residence halls to have a stamp of approval from a residence hall director or assistant residence hall director. Even though nothing was denied approval, the policy was tantamount to censorship.

Not only did the SGA inform students for once about an important issue, but their voice finally had some pull at a university where students are ignored more often than heard.

* * *

As seniors, we have decided, since it is near the end of the semester, that massive quantities of drinking must commence. Soon enough, we will all be back at home, having to deal with those lovely families, so let the good times roll and just follow the smell of Phish-heads.

Marni E. Helfner and Geri Sahn are Collegian columnists.

Riding the debate in circles

I tried to keep an open mind throughout the debate, listening to each speaker's opening statements and answers to questions, but it quickly became apparent to me Dr. Charles Murray was often talking in circles, or simply not answering questions.

While Dr. Alvin Poussaint seemed to present information in a much more direct and understandable fashion, Murray said in his opening statement that it was "dumb" for an unwed mother to have a baby. Later this statement came back to haunt him. A woman asked the question of why that made women dumb?

I do not even think IQ should be a determing factor for anything. The tests are biased against many groups and contain questions which are not universally interpreted. I'm sorry, Dr. Murray, but there is no one right way to answer a question, or define a person.

Daniel Levenson

She also asked the question if perhaps these unwed pregnancies had more to do with lack of birth control. He then answered by explaining women who have children out of wedlock do not usually have a high IQ. He then explained without a high IQ, they could not plan for the future.

Basically, he was saying single unwed mothers were too unintelligent to think about tomorrow, and were therefore going to get pregnant due to a lack of this ability.

Figuring out Murray's argument took some careful thought. Based on what was said, my understanding is this: blacks have an average IQ of 85, whites have an average IQ of 100 and Asians (particularly east and South Asians) have an average IQ of 105. He then says IQ is partly determined by environment, but is mainly influenced by genetics. He also says IQ plays a large part in determining your success in life.

Therefore, based on Murray's so-called "data," it would follow that black people will not do well in life because they do not possess the genes, on average, to be more intelligent than white people or Asians. I do not believe this for a second. Poussaint pointed out it reminded him of the argument the Nazis used to convince Germany the Jews were inferior.

While I often disagree with comparisons to the Holocaust of many things or events, I could see the correlation this time. Labeling one race as genetically inferior is not only offensive, but dangerous. It is dangerous, not for Murray or Poussaint, but for the impressionable youth who may take what Murray is saying as the truth.

I have to admit I have a real problem with Murray's data. First of all, it was stated by Poussaint and confirmed by Murray, the tests on which the data was based was not a real IQ test, but a test given to people entering the armed forces. Murray said it was an accurate measure of IQ, but admitted that that was not the purpose of the test. I did not appreciate the fact that after this information was brought out, Murray continued to refer to the test results in terms of IQ.

I do not even think IQ should be a determing factor for anything. The tests are biased against many groups and contain questions which are not universally interpreted. I'm sorry, Dr. Murray, but there is no one right way to answer a question, or define a person.

Towards the end, Murray started to get aggravated and he let it show. I can understand this; most questions criticized his work and he clearly became very defensive. Poussaint maintained his composure throughout the event, getting an occasional laugh out of the audience and sometimes talking over his time limit. Overall, the two debaters did not argue all that much, and listened to what the other had to say.

When one student stated he was the result of a mixed marriage and asked which side he got his intelligence from, Murray replied by saying he had two kids from a mixed marriage and his wife was Asian.

Then at the end of the debate, Murray seemed to go off on some sort of tangent about conservative family values, citing the loss of the integrity of the family as a reason why children fail.

We learned in my high school chemistry class about misusing data and manipulating data. I am not accusing Murray of inventing information, rather I am saying if you look hard enough for something, eventually you will find it. I could probably do my own study and try to prove that people who eat bananas are not as smart as people who eat apples.

I walked away with a sickening feeling. If I'm walking down the street and I see two people walking towards me, one black and one white, both "average" individuals, should the black person be assumed to be less intelligent? Contrary to what Murray would seem to have us believe, I don't not think this is true. I don't understand why Murray would want to spread the idea of genetic inferiority. What's the point? He certainly convinced me of very little except that even the best education guarantees no protection from ignorance.

Daniel E. Levenson is a UMass student.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR AND COLUMNS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length. Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Opinion/Editorial

...AND YES, THERE WILL BE DANGER FROM SNIPERS..
Bosnia
Croatia
Bosnia
WHAT'S IMPORTANT ABOUT BOSNIA?
I'LL ONLY SUPPORT YOU IF IT GOES WELL..
WHAT DO THE POLLS SAY?
TOLES
I DON'T EVEN LISTEN TO THEM OR I MAY START TO SEE THEIR POINT

Letters to the Editor

Murray's visit raised important issues

To the Editor:

The original version of this letter was misplaced at the Daily Collegian Office this week. I am resubmitting this revised letter because there are still important issues to be cleared up.

Recent letters to the editor column concerning The Bell Curve debate with Dr. Alvin Poussaint and Dr. Charles Murray this past Monday at the Fine Arts Center have had a number of points that were incorrect. As the advisor to the student group, the Distinguished Visitors Program, I would like to take this opportunity to set as much of the record straight as possible.

In recent columns in this paper it has been implied the DVP has not offered a diverse speaker program. It has been stated only Dr. Murray was invited to give his views on his recent book The Bell Curve. It has also been stated the DVP had held up publicizing this controversial program to minimize the back-lash from the campus community. Finally, it was mentioned the scholarship of the author, the premise of his work and the conclusions of his writing are a paid for right wing conspiracy unworthy of academic discussion.

To begin with, over the past few years, the DVP has sponsored lectures from rap artist Chuck D to political activist Angela Davis. From generation X filmmaker Richard Linklater to feminist writer bell hooks. They sponsored lectures by Native-American speaker Winona LaDuke and Chinese activist Li Lu. They were also involved in the funding of Minister Louis Farrakhan's two visits to our campus.

As to points two and three, there is no basis in truth. Dr. Murray was never considered as a single lecturer and the debate model was the only format DVP considered. Since there was no signed contract, until just recently, DVP could not legally begin to do the publicity around this program. Add to this the fact it would have been foolish for anyone to spend money on a program this large and choose not to tell anyone about it.

These points are nothing but rumor and stand now corrected. The last point, however, has far reaching implications for our educational institute.

The reality is The Bell Curve has been published and its views are now a part of the "intellectual" fabric of the nation. Reviewed by The New York Times, discussed on television talk shows, and even over your dinner table at home. But the truth, or lack of truth, continues to be a very hot topic.

Our academic community, you and I, had a unique opportunity that carried with it a great responsibility.

The concerns raised by The Bell Curve, not to mention the issue of racial inferiority, were debated on Monday night. Not as a diatribe with no possibility for response. Not as a one-sided analysis and not as a lecture preaching to the converted. Monday night's program was a two-person debate; but the more important center-piece was you and (most of) your questions.

Our ability as a community of students, staff and faculty to find the truth of a matter can only be accomplished through the open and critical discussion of ideas. No one else can do it for you. The burden to find the truth is up to you. From my perspective it would be better if our faculty, our staff, and other students would offer us the tools and background we need in order to see and confront virulent ideas whenever they come up rather than suggest something is pseudo-science and will go away.

Finally, it is to the DVP students we should be sending our thanks for taking the harder road in presenting a lecture program where some very difficult issues were raised.

Joseph "Jose" Tolson
Campus Activities Office

President's job not so successful

To the Editor:

In the Nov. 29 issue of the Collegian, Peter Lewenberg stated Sherry Penney "had successfully finished our collective bargaining" as a part of her accomplishments as acting President of the University. This couldn't be farther from the truth.

At the present time the majority of employees on this campus have no contract at all and are being offered the most paltry sum possible. I am personally insulted and feel totally devalued as an employee on this campus. When you compare what has been given to faculty and what is about to be given to Professionals, it's pretty obvious where the rest of us fit.

In the past few years, I have seen my work load increase as the number of employees has diminished. This trend will continue as more people leave under the retirement package in effect.

The staff that is left will be asked to take on even more. You would think this might be a good time to encourage and reward the staff that's left with a decent offer. Instead, we are being offered a package that reeks of classism, and treats us with total contempt and lack of respect. I am angry, demoralized and most of all very, very sad this University places absolutely no value on their employees.

Pat Kane
Bookkeeper-Psychology

Hockey team thanks UMass

To the Editor:

On behalf of our coaching staff and players, I would like to thank the UMass student for their great turn-out on Friday versus Boston University. Your attendance gives us great motivation and inspiration. Although we are still growing, with your support, and our hard work, we are building the future now.

Joe Mallen
Head Coach

Student claims discrimination

To the Editor:

My name is Touch Leng. I am an Asian sophomore studying Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administrations, and am expected to graduate in May of 1998. I want to write about an incident that had happened to me on the evening of Nov. 21, 1995 involving discrimination.

My friend came with me to Panda East to get an application. Panda East is located in downtown Amherst, right behind Bart's. I asked the Asian lady who was about ready to get a couple menus and seat us, if I could please have an application.

She stood there, looked at me up and down, checking to see what I was wearing, and flat out said, "No." It was obvious she was checking me out (meaning, making a judgment about me by the way I looked and dressed). I quickly said, "Excuse me, what did you say?" She replied with another "No." I was speechless and shocked.

Not knowing what to do, my friend and I stood there for a while looking at the rude lady. I finally excused myself. I told a waiter about what had happened, and he laughingly said, "I'm sorry, I can't help you." When he laughed in my face, I felt so belittled and low. I had tears in my eyes and was practically crying.

At that moment, I decided to leave. As I got toward the door, the rude lady and I caught eye contact. I went up to her and said, "What you did to me was very rude." I walked out. I felt really humiliated, embarrassed, degraded, discriminated and practically spit upon. They made me feel like I was not worthy of working for them. Let me tell you, that is one of the worst feelings anyone could have.

When I got back home, I decided to do something about this. I can't let her get away with what she did, or else she will mistreat someone else the way she mistreated me. I was too fumed up to talk to the people in the restaurant about it, so I had my friend call and ask for her name.

The guy who picked up said there was no manager on duty, and refused to cooperate and give us her name. So I decided to take a visit to Panda East for the second time. There, I spoke to the rude lady and the man on the phone. They still refused to cooperate and even ignored me at times. I tried to tell them what they had done to me and how I felt about it.

They did not want to listen to my "pathetic" story. I only left with a name of a person they claim is the lady's boss. By the way, the rude lady owned the restaurant at where she denied me an application based on the way I looked. So at that time, I had to talk to her because she was in charge. There was no one else of a higher authority I could talk to at that time.

I feel what she did was totally uncalled for. Everyone has a right to receive an application, they can't be denied. All she could have done was given me the application and not hire me.

I deserve to have the same rights and respect as anyone else. I don't want this to happen again to anyone. I have spoken to people who have eaten there before and they told me about their bad experiences there and would never go back again.

Touch Leng
Amherst

Student faces pain of vandalism

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the article that appeared in the Dec. 4 issue of the Daily Collegian about the vandalism in Van Meter residence hall.

I was quoted in the paper as being one of the receivers of vandalism about myself and my lifestyle. I retaliated with a two page letter to my residents, which was mentioned in the article. My letter addressed the issue of homophobia in the dorms, the school, and anywhere else in the world.

I think it is important for students as well as faculty to realize what issues are facing our campus and to address them. I encourage everyone to read the letter with an open mind, and discuss it with friends and whomever else needs to know about what's been going on around here.

Thank you for all the support I have already received from your publication and I hope you will continue to address the issues that are facing society today. It is so important everyone knows what is going on in the world today and I hope more people will continue to stand up for what they truly believe in.

Jamie Sinshelmer
Central

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

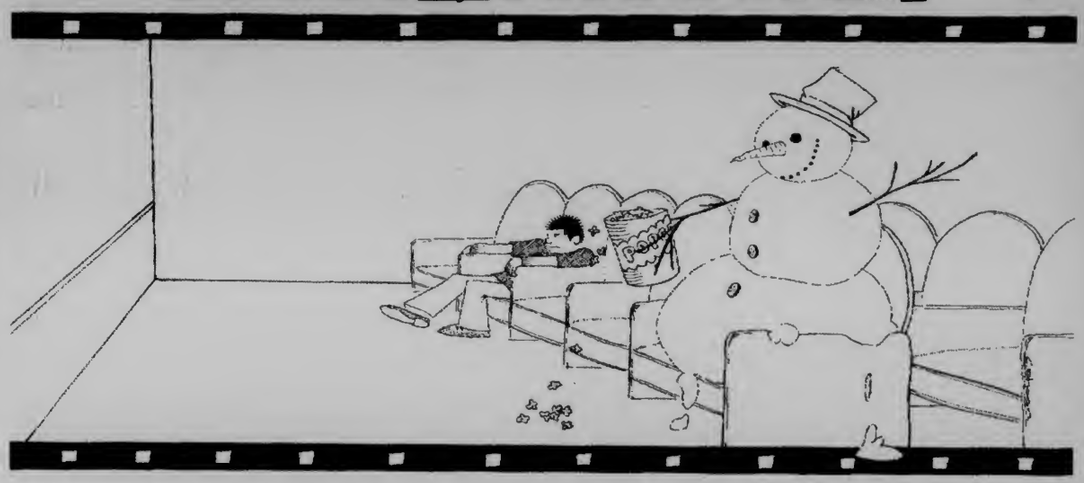
ARTS & LIVING

Thursday, December 7, 1995
Weekend Edition • Volume CV Issue 63

Jonathan Tyler stars as Tom Sawyer in the new Disney film Tom & Huck.

COURTESY WALT DISNEY

AVALANCHE!



AS THE WINTER SEASON APPROACHES, SO DOES THE SEASONAL ONSLAUGHT OF FILMS

December is unquestionably the busiest time of the year. From cramming for finals to preparing for the holiday season, most people do not have a moment of free time. Just when you thought your list of obligations couldn't get any longer, Hollywood serves up its usual array of films so appealing you'll be kicking yourself well into the New Year if you miss any of them.

Although December's movie lineup traditionally contains the juiciest films of the year (second only to the summer's bevy of blockbusters) some moviegoers actually become unnerved by all of the quality films to select from.

After spending a weekend doing holiday shopping, tripping over mall rats and burning holes in our credit cards, what makes producers think we want to drag our weary selves over to the cineplex and drop another seven bucks on a movie?

One reason is simple — people are just too tired to seek alternate forms of entertainment that require anything more than sitting in a cozy, warm theater. Another reason why movies are so hard to resist this month is because it is Academy-crunch time — every Tom ("Oscar" Hanks), Dick (Nixon by Oliver Stone) and Harry (Harrison Ford's Sabrina) is racing to get his movie into theaters before the close of 1995.

Time and money are precious things to waste this time of the year, and since the lines at the GAP are nothing compared to the lines at the movie theater, here is a preview of this winter's flicks to help you make economical and entertaining decisions.

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

JUMANJI

Always a child at heart, Robin Williams stars in yet another family comedy film that promises to have enough special effects and adult humor to entertain audiences of all ages. As a boy, Williams gets trapped in Jumanji — a mysterious board game that draws players into its surreal jungle world when a certain number is rolled on the dice. Two children (Interview With a Vampire's Kirsten Dunst and Bradley Pierce) dust off the attic-bound game 26 years later and free Williams. Williams is somehow not finished with the game, however, and seeks out his childhood friend (Beethoven's Bonnie Hunt) to continue playing it, thus freeing all of the jungle creatures once more. The special effects techniques, provided by Industrial Light & Magic (ILM), are the same as the ones in the blockbuster Jurassic Park. Between Williams' antics and ILM's wizardry, Jumanji promises to be the holiday's biggest family film.

SENSE & SENSIBILITY

Who else would we expect to star in the adaptation of Jane Austen's first novel but the queen of British films herself, Emma Thompson? Thompson (Howard's End, Carrington) teams up with Heavenly Creatures' Kate Winslet to play a pair of sisters struggling to find proper husbands, but falling into whirlwind romances nonetheless. Emma's Brit beau is the always witty Hugh Grant, and Kate's object of passion is played by sexy newcomer Greg Wise. Taiwanese director Ang Lee (The Wedding Banquet) takes the reigns of Sense in an attempt to add a humorous twist to the often stuffy and straightlaced manner 19th century stories are filmed in. This romantic and sarcastic film has already been the recipient of rave reviews.

COURTESY SONY PICTURES

NIXON

Oliver Stone rewrites Presidential history once again with his portrayal of Tricky Dick's turbulent reign in the White House. By the looks of the trailer (which has been running since August), Stone appears to be making Nixon a schizophrenic — "One man lead a country ... another man destroyed a nation" (or something like that). Sir Anthony Hopkins plays Nixon, and is joined by the likes of Paul Sorvino, Ed Harris, James Woods and Madeline Kahn. With the liberties Stone took in JFK and The Doors, Nixon may be more of a laugh than a gripping drama for those who lived through the Nixon era.

MR. HOLLAND'S OPUS

Richard Dreyfuss, who recently had a small role in The American President, has his own opus in this new film about a composer whose career turns bring him to teaching in a high school. He is the typical inspirational teacher who invokes passion for music in his students and changes the whole school. La de da! Even the principal, Olympia Dukakis, says he is her favorite teacher. The drama ensues when the teacher's son is born deaf, and can't appreciate the thing closest to his heart. The trailer, brimming with pathos, told the whole story. Opus will serve as your sacrificial lamb of a tearjerker.

SABRINA

Poor Julia Ormond. She's got some pitiful, wretched life until she goes to Paris, cuts her hair and transforms from an ugly duckling to a gorgeous swan who has two, count 'em two, rich and hunky guys after her. Harrison Ford stars as the pragmatic older brother who is just as smitten with Ormond as his younger brother (Greg Kinnear) is. Sydney Pollack's re-make of the 1954 Humphrey Bogart and Audrey Hepburn classic may prove this story is worth telling again. A romance with a comic twist, Ormond will probably be winning the hearts of more men than just Harrison and Kinnear.

COURTESY SONY PICTURES

WAITING TO EXHALE

Terry McMillan's best-selling novel about four women dealing with divorce, cheating boyfriends and other various love issues comes to life by screenwriter Ronald Bass's handiwork (and collaboration with the author). Bass, who adapted Amy Tan's Joy Luck Club, explores this storyline again, but with the lives of African-American women in Phoenix. Pop diva Whitney Houston (soundtrack, anyone?) and What's Love Got To Do With It's kick-ass Tina Turner, Angela Bassett, star in this drama. Loretta Devine and Lela Rochon are the remaining two women in the quartet of lovelorn females. Crying Game's Forest Whitaker both directs and acts in Exhale. According to McMillan and the four actresses, who were featured on the "Oprah Winfrey Show" last week, Exhale is not your typical male-bashing movie (let's just let the men decide on that one). Fans of the novel are holding their breath in anticipation of the film's release.

DRACULA: DEAD AND LOVING IT

Just about time for another vampire movie, eh? Well,

Turn to MOVIES page 11

LAURA STOCK
COLLEGIAN STAFF

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

"I think when I was younger, I wanted to tell everybody everything because I thought I was so damn interesting. Then I heard the snoring." — David Duchovny

"My life couldn't fill a haiku, much less a book." — Bill on "NewsRadio"

"Eighty–three percent of Britons say they forgive Princess Di for her infidelity. Apparently, the other 17 percent have never gotten a good look at Prince Charles."
— Conan O'Brien

People and Pop Culture in the News

It seems that America is suffering from the severe disillusionment that late night TV needs yet another talk show. Therefore Rosie O'Donnell will step up from comedienne/actress to talk show hostess with the mostess. One can hardly stand the excitement.

Madonna is just having a bad week. Recently she announced that she was raped by an unknown man when she first came to The Big Apple. Then she was presented an award at the VH1's "Fashion & Music" awards by ex–husband Sean Penn (utter surprise) and now she declares that black men just aren't romantic enough for her. Oh, to bear the weight of a celebrity.

Looking for something to scent that special someone in your life? Then how about Amphibia, the cologne for men and women created by — The Muppets. No joke, but one wishes it was.

After the recent interview with Diana, Princess of Wales, the Royal family has been taking quite a beating by the press and critics alike. The newest polls show that many people believe the royal family is Diana — the rest tea drinking relics of the past.

In the movie Waiting To Exhale there is a scene where the women are all singing "Happy Birthday." Believe it or not, two of the stars — Angela Bassett and Lela Rochon refused to sing the song in front of co–star Whitney Houston because they were embarrassed.

Sen. Bob Dole is bored again and has decided to ask the public to boycott the film Money Train because of a subway token booth that was recently firebombed. That and the fact that its co–star Woody Harrelson was also in Natural Born Killers, another Dole family favorite.

Kiefer Sutherland is back in the saddle again and plans to wed Kelly Winn next summer. She is the mother of two sons and Sutherland has a daughter from a previous relationship.

Natalie Cole has filed for divorce from her second husband and music producer Andre Fischer. The reason? Irreconcilable differences and Cole has also asked for a restraining order against him.

If you saw Home For The Holidays and just loved Dylan McDermott (Holly Hunter's love interest) than you'll be glad to hear that he just finished filming Til There Was You. It's a romantic comedy starring Sarah Jessica Parker and Jeanne Tripplehorn and sounds suspiciously like While You Were Sleeping and Only You.

Material from this is column has been compiled form various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly.

Editors' Cuts

Music — 1,200 Curfews

For their near–rabid fans, any release from the popular folk–pop duo Indigo Girls can be considered an Event. 1,200 Curfews is their first effort in a while to actually earn it. A two–CD live album recorded over the past year of intense recording, Curfews releases the Indigo Girls' sometimes uncomfortably heady music, from its self–conscious shell, delivering an electric, and frequently passionate trip through the Girls' impressive catalog.

All the hits are here, including a rousing "Joking" and "Least Complicated" as well as their signature anthem "Closer to Fine." But Emily Saliers and Amy Ray truly reach the inspired when covering other tunes, like Joni Mitchell's "River," Bob Dylan's epic "Tangled Up in Blue" and Buffy Saint–Marie's mournful rocker "Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee." Good stuff.

— George Kaplan

Movie — Carrington

Local theaters have yet to feature Christopher Hampton's film about painter Dora Carrington, yet this beautiful film is a must–see.

Based on her life's story, Carrington paints a beautiful picture of her tragic life. Emma Thompson stars as Dora, the depressed, sexually confused yet artistic soul who finds a loving friendship in gay writer Lytton Strachey (Jonathan Pryce). Dora and Lytton have a love that transcends a sexual relationship, as they live and work together, inspiring each other to create their own works of art.

The story of Carrington is not the only beautiful aspect of the film — the scenery is gorgeous and the paintings that Dora decorated her home with are brilliant. The music, composed by the same man who did the soundtrack for The Piano, adds to the drama of this romantic movie. Pryce and Thompson develop a chemistry on the screen that portrays Carrington's story wonderfully.

— Laura Stock

Music — Pirate Jenny

Hidden just off Main Street in Northampton is the cozy cafe Fire & Water. Six nights a week, the intimate cafe offers free live music as well as a delicious vegetarian entrees. Tonight at the Fire & Water local band Pirate Jenny will be celebrating the release of their debut 7" single.

Hailing from Northampton, Pirate Jenny have been a popular band in town since their inception, playing with such notables as Kicking Giant and Team Dresch. The band is releasing the single on their own label. Also in the works is a cassette compilation featuring a local all–star cast including Tizzy, New Radiant Storm King, The Mitchells and, of course, Pirate Jenny.

Opening up the show will be singer songwriter Dahia Davis and Tizzy who recently released their sophomore single on Pop Narcotic Records.

The record release party starts at 9 p.m. and the show is free and all ages.

— Mike Burke

Arts & Living...

...The Best of Everything!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • 113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Tournament Schedule

Game	Team	Venue	Location	Time
December 26 '95	Czech v. Russia	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:00pm
	Finland v. Switz.	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	1:10 pm
	Sweden v. Slovak	Centrum	Worcester	1:00pm
	Opening Ceremonies	Centrum	Worcester	6:30pm
	USA v. Canada	Centrum	Worcester	7:40pm
Dec. 27	Slovakia v. Russia	Matthews Arena	Boston	1:00pm
	USA v. Ukraine	Matthews Arena	Boston	1:40pm
	Czech v. Germany	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:00pm
	Switz. v. Canada	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:10pm
Dec. 28	Germany v. Slovakia	Matthews Arena	Boston	2:10pm
	Ukraine v. Finland	Matthews Arena	Boston	1:10pm
Dec. 29	Slovakia v. Czech	Matthews Arena	Boston	1:10pm
	Canada v. Finland	Matthews Arena	Boston	1:40pm
	Russia v. Sweden	Civic Center	Springfield	2:10pm
	USA v. Switz.	Civic Center	Springfield	1:10pm
Dec. 30	Germany v. Slovakia	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	12:10pm
	Ukraine v. Switz.	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	5:10pm
Dec. 31	Sweden v. Czech	Matthews Arena	Boston	12:10pm
	Canada v. Ukraine	Matthews Arena	Boston	5:40pm
	Finland v. USA	Mullins Center	Amherst	12:10pm
	Russia v. Germany	Mullins Center	Amherst	5:10pm
January ' 96	Qualifying Rd.	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:10pm
	Qualifying Rd.	Mullins Center	Amherst	5:10pm
Jan. 2	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	1:10pm
	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	7:10pm
Jan. 3	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	1:10pm
	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	7:10pm
	SEMIFINAL	Centrum Forum	Boston	3:40pm
	SEMIFINAL	Centrum Forum	Boston	7:40pm

Game	Team	Venue	Location	Time
Jan. 4	5th/6th Place Game	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	12:10pm
	Bronze Medal Game	Centrum Forum	Boston	2:40 pm
	Gold Medal Game	Centrum Forum	Boston	7:40pm

1996 WORLD JUNIOR HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP

MASSACHUSETTS, USA

THE COLLEGIAN "CATCH THE EXCITEMENT" TICKET GIVEAWAY! 50 UMASS STUDENTS AND THEIR CLOSEST FRIEND AND/OR ANY LOCAL COMMUNITY MEMBERS MAY SEE THE NEXT WAYNE GRETZKY PLAY IN THE WORLD JUNIOR HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIPS! ENTRY FORM BELOW...

Tickets also available at TICKETMASTER (617) 931-2000

Ticketmaster phone orders, outlet stores and venues will begin sales November 3, 1995

Mobil

MASSACHUSETTS SPORTS PARTNERSHIP

BLOOM'S BUSINESS SYSTEMS

Gretzky, Lemieux, Lindros, Leetch, Roenick, Fedorov, Bure, Jagr, Kariya, Tkachuk, Forsberg, Carey, Who's Next?

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN

New England's Largest Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • (413) 545-1592

- Catch the excitement... Liven up your holidays with GREAT Hockey Action.
- Win tickets to see World Junior Hockey Action at any of the MA locations.
- Enter today! The Collegian has 50 pairs of tickets to draw and give away.
- Drop off or mail entry forms to the Collegian office in the Campus Center today.
- Drawings will be held @ 3:30 p.m. Thursday, November 14, 1995

Collegian staff or family members not eligible

CONTEST ENTRY FORM

Name _____

Address _____

Phone _____

Location of Game Preferred _____

~ REVIEWS ~

Phish hooks Mullins crowd

COURTESY B.C. KAGAN

Phish brought their phunny phaces to the Mullins Center for two shows on Monday and Tuesday night.

By Aaron Brandes
Collegian Staff

PHISH
The Mullins Center
Dec. 5–6

What can one possibly say? What do people want to read? Giving a Phish review is like telling a starving person that the juicy steak they are about to devour is going to taste good — redundant.

Writing that Phish put on an amazing, outstanding and incredible show is redundant. Time and time again, night after night, all year long and all around the country Phish continues its tradition of quality performances.

Putting the feelings surrounding a Phish show into words and trying to compare these guys to other bands is like reaching for the top shelf cookie jar. I would like to try but I know I'm not supposed to.

Unlike any other band on the scene, Phish has a subculture following them around. This subculture are all kids that have given our institutionalized society the finger. These people tour with Phish all year long and are religious in their devotion to the band. The fact these kids are at show after show only adds to the an intangible feeling.

Making it into every show at all cost and utter appreciation for Phish by these "tourheads" spread like a wonderful virus throughout the entire Mullins Center. In order to grasp what really goes on at a Phish show one must know the unique circumstances that accompany the event.

There are a ton of great bands around. There are a ton that are in the same genre as Phish. Dave Matthews Band, Big Head Todd and Blues Traveler are just a few that are at the top right now. There are bands in this area like Clovis Point, that just jam in a fantastic Phish–like style. Each one of these bands are so talented and so much fun but there is a difference.

This difference is the feeling of togetherness at a Phish show. Phish are the originals. Simply put they are the best. They are by far the most talented and original musicians on the college music scene today.

I was delightfully surprised by the evolution of Phish. The last time I saw a show was a few years ago

Turn to PHISH, page 10

Jazz staples revised for audience

By Ian Simons
Collegian Correspondent

BIG BANDS
Bowker Auditorium
Dec. 6

On Tuesday night at 8 p.m. Bowker auditorium played host to the University Jazz Ensemble (directed by David Sporny) and the Chapel Jazz Ensemble (directed by Chris Merz).

The Chapel Jazz Ensemble opened the night's proceedings and played a set of five pieces. The renditions ranged from Bob Brookmeyer's "Ding Dong Ding" to Herbie Hancock's classic, "Dolphin Dance" which was arranged by Bob Mitzer. Solos were wonderfully performed in each and every number and it would be wrong to single out any one musician in what was clearly a group effort.

But note should be made of some muscular tenor saxophone playing on the standard, straight–ahead "Out of Nowhere" by Chuck Langford and the piercing alto sax on "Dolphin Dance" by Ryan Dexter. Also not to be forgotten is the tight rhythm section of the double bass, piano, guitar and drums which kept chugging away throughout.

The Ensemble finished with "The 4,679,385th Blues in B– Flat," a more upbeat groove with a definite swing in it. After the intermission the University Jazz Ensemble took the stage. From the loud and energetic opening of Horace Silver's "Ecaroh" (note the pianist's name spelt backwards) it was clear the exciting mood would continue.

Credit was again paid to Brookmeyer, an influential composer right up there with Gil Evans in terms of compositions for big band music, which gave the opportunity for pianist Alex Marcello to solo with wonderful feeling in what felt like sheets of notes sweeping over the ears. A new arrangement of a Horace Silver tune, "Nica's Dream" debuted last night. The piece was arranged by Carol Johnson.

The penultimate song was another student arrangement and was the one and only number which had a vocalist, Tsidii le Loka, whose superb delivery reminded one of Abbey Lincoln. "Moontrane" by Woody Shaw brought the concert to an end.

It's great that this music is still able to attract a respectable sized audience here on campus which would suggest that jazz music is very much alive. It would be interesting to see some of the musicians in quartets or quintets as this would perhaps give them more opportunity to really "let rip" outside of the big band format, but this is not to detract from last night's concert.

Finally, it should be noted that three members of the University Jazz Ensemble played their last concert last night having energetically contributed to UMass jazz since they arrived, Dave Purdy on trumpet and Neal Melley and Richard Johnson on trombone.

Terror Twins speak of Armageddon

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

LYDIA LUNCH & EXENE CERVENKA
Iron Horse Music Hall
Dec. 5

The word can be a powerful weapon. It was used just as that as the Terror Twins Spoken Word Tour stopped by the Iron Horse Tuesday night.

Donned in black, punk stalwarts Lydia Lunch and Exene Cervenka took turns on the mic and gave a little insight on their view of the world. Not surprisingly, their outlook was bleak. Ranting and raving over the impending death of our planet and all its tangibles (gender roles, new technology, material dependence), no optimism seemed to underlie what became a set of sheer anger towards the world.

Lunch wasted no time in setting the mood, declaring life a thief. Within minutes, she would have dissed everything from religion to television to males with Denis Leary attitude and rapidity. Her approach to sarcasm was serious, though, which made it that much more in your face.

Exene similarly concentrated on the imminent demise of our world yet had more pretense in her delivery. "How can you be cynical when there is no reality?" proclaimed Cervenka, as she went on to discuss the depleting environment, President Bill Clinton and fashion.

While the women's tag team criticisms provided non–stop action, the theme of Armageddon ran its course quickly. Witticisms were few and far between, with questions being raised and no real answers offered.

Tuesday's performance was indeed reactionary, yet too geared by the teenage angst so synonymous with punk rock. Lunch's negativity is apparently intact from her days of old while Cervenka's beauty still lies in the heart of X.

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS
WE DON'T KNOW THE MEANING OF SLEEP.

News channel challenges CNN

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC plans to launch a 24–hour news channel early in 1997, touting the new service as an alternative, rather than a direct challenger, to CNN.

"We're going to try to take (24–hour news) to a different level," said ABC News president Roone Arledge at a news conference with Robert Iger, president of Capital Cities–ABC, Inc.

One key difference would be participation by ABC's 200–plus affiliate stations, which will help with local news–gathering and share in the new channel's earnings, the two men said.

The service would also draw on the resources of the ABC–owned Worldwide Television News, a syndicator of international news.

ABC, whose "World News Tonight" is the top–ranked network news program, will seek distribution of the all–news channel through cable and direct satellite, as well as through new delivery systems being devised by telephone companies.

Last week, media magnate Rupert Murdoch said he planned to establish an all–news network to challenge CNN, which he complained had become too liberal.

The Turner Broadcasting System began CNN in 1980. TBS chairman Ted Turner has agreed to sell TBS to Time Warner Inc. Capital Cities–ABC is being acquired by the Walt Disney Co.

JOSEPH CURRAN ASSOCIATES
IMMIGRATION LAW OFFICES

- H–1B Specialty Occupations
- Labor Certification/Special Handling
- 212(e)/J–1 Waivers
- Outstanding Professor/Researcher
- National Interest Extraordinary Ability
- Religious Persons
- All Immigrant/Nonimmigrant Matters

Free Consultations for Five–College Students/Faculty

Northampton Office: 2nd Floor, 10 Old Ferry Road, Hadley, MA 01035, 413–731–0770

Springfield Office: 10 Old South Home Boulevard, Springfield, MA 01108, 413–886–3232

YOU'LL FEEL GREAT AFTER SOAKING IN A HOT TUB AT

EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS

FOR RESERVATIONS 586-6843

WEST STREET, NORTHAMPTON

PLENTY OF SAVINGS AS WE CELEBRATE OUR NORTHAMPTON STORE 1 YEAR ANNIVERSARY

LIQUORS 44 — Don't Drink and Drive

BEERS WINES LIQUORS

COORS & COORS LIGHT — CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS — 30 PACK — $13.99 + DEP.

HEINEKEN & AMSTEL LIGHT — CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES — $18.99 + DEP.

BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT — CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS — 30 PACK — $10.99 + DEP.

CATAMOUNT — ALL FLAVORS INCLUDING CHRISTMAS ALE — CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES — $16.99 + DEP.

SARANAC — ALL FLAVORS — 6-PACK BOTTLES — $3.99 + DEP.

BUDWEISER & BUD LT. — CASE OF 24-16 OZ. BOTTLES — WIDEMOUTHS — $14.49 + DEP.

PETE'S WICKED WINTER BREW — $4.99 + DEP.

ROLLING ROCK — CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES — 13.49 + DEP.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY — REGULAR & LIGHT — CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS — $7.29 + DEP.

O'DOULS — NON-ALCOHOLIC — CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS — $12.49 + DEP.

COKE, DIET COKE, SPRITE — 2.0L — 99¢ + DEP.

1/2 KEGS — BUD, LT, ICE, RED DOG & ICEHOUSE, MICHELOB, LT, DK. LITE — $39.99 + DEP.

WINE OF THE MONTH

FETZER VINEYARD — SUNDIAL, CHARDONNAY, VALLEY OAK CABERNET SAUVIGNON, EAGLE PEAK MERLOT — 750ML — $5.99

WINE OF THE MONTH

JEKEL VINEYARD — CABERNET SAUVIGNON — CHARDONNAY — 750 ML — $7.99 $6.99

GALLO LIVINGSTON CELLARS — ALL FLAVORS — 3.0L — $5.99

VENDANGE — ALL FLAVORS — 1.5L — $5.99

GEORGE DUBOEUF — BEAUJOLAIS VILLAGES NOUVEAU — 750 ML — $5.99

J. ROGET — ALL FLAVORS — 750 ML — $1.99

MARCUS JAMES — ALL FLAVORS — 750 ML — 3 for $9.99

FREIXENET — CORDON NEGRO BRUT — 750 ML — SALE $4.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 FINAL COST $3.49

MARTINI & ROSSI — ASTI SPUMANTE — 750 ML — SALE $7.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 FINAL COST $5.99

RIUNITE — ALL FLAVORS — 1.5L — SALE $5.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $2.99

HARVEY'S — BRISTOL CREAM — 750 ML — $9.49

SUTTER HOME — WHITE ZINFANDEL — 750 ML — $3.49

LINDEMAN BIN 65 — CHARDONNAY — 750 ML — $5.49

SMIRNOFF VODKA — 1.75L — $13.49

BACARDI LIGHT & DARK — 1.75L — SALE $13.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $10.99

CANADIAN CLUB — 1.75L — SALE $15.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$5.00 FINAL COST $10.99

ABSOLUT VODKA — 750 ML — $10.99

SEAGRAMS 7 WHISKEY — 1.75L — SALE $11.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$4.00 FINAL COST $7.99

DEWARS SCOTCH — 1.75L — $24.99

GLENLIVET — 12 YEAR OLD SINGLE MALT SCOTCH — 750 ML — $18.99

CROWN ROYAL — 750 ML — $11.99

SEAGRAM'S V.O. — CANADIAN WHISKEY — 1.75L — SALE $15.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$5.00 FINAL COST $10.99

KAHLÚA — 750ML — SALE $11.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $8.99

BAILEYS IRISH CREAM & LIGHT — 750ML — $13.99

DRAMBUIE — 750 ML — WOW — SALE $16.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$5.00 FINAL COST $11.99

JOSE CUERVO GOLD — TEQUILA — 750 ML — $10.49

TANQUERAY GIN — 1.75L — $20.99

JIM BEAM — 1.75L — SALE $12.29 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 FINAL COST $9.29

We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA

HADLEY — Campus Plaza/Route 9 — 253-9344

NORTHAMPTON — 238 King Street — 586-3007

HOLYOKE — 30 Lincoln Street — 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS. 12/7/95 THRU WEDS. 12/13/95

NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Pearl Street Nightclub

THURSDAY DEC 7 — DANCE PARTY — The Area's Biggest Dance Party — FREE FOOD COURTESY OF SUBWAY

FRIDAY DEC 8 — RETRO NIGHT — MUSIC FROM THE 70's & 80's — FREE ADMISSION WITH THIS AD

DOWNSTAIRS 8:30 PM — GOVERNMENT MULE

SATURDAY DEC 9 — CLUB NIGHT — Bud Bar Happier Night — Free Frog Rocks/Free Tee Shirt Now Available THE CLUB CARD — Good for Free Admission on Saturday — Reward after You Buy 5 or 7 or 9 and More

DOWNSTAIRS 8:00 PM — CHUCKLEHEAD

TUESDAY DEC 12 8:00 PM — MERCURY REV

WEDNESDAY DEC 13 — GAY NIGHT — With DJ Dream — Sam Adams Boston Ale — 7's 7's All Month

THURSDAY DEC 14 — DANCE PARTY

FRIDAY DEC 15 9:00 PM — RETRO NIGHT

SAT DEC 16 8:30 PM — MAX CREEK

NEW YEAR'S EVE BASH — "Out with the Old And In With the Groove" — WIN A TRIP TO THE BAHAMAS

UPSTAIRS — DANCING (of course) GREAT DANCE MUSIC SPECIAL FLOOR SHOW = CHORUSLINE

DOWNSTAIRS — Live Blues — POPA CHUBBY

ALSO... BUFFET FROM 9-11 COMPLIMENTARY CHAMPAGNE CONTINENTAL BREAKFAST SUN DEC 31/8:00 PM 2:00 AM COMING TO PEARL STREET...

12/22 EXHUMED
12/23 Perpetual Doom/Slab Blue Christmas, MARK NOMAD BAND HOT HAMMER SOUP WILDCAT O'MALLORAN
12/26 SNAPCASE
12/29 VIC/HOWE/PANGLOSS
12/30 THE BLACK REBELS
12/31 POPA CHUBBY
1/8 JOHN CAFFERTY & The Beaver Brown Band

Tickets available at Pearl Street, Northampton 413-586-1791

~ MUSIC ~

Blind Boys still have the groove

THE BLIND BOYS OF ALABAMA
I Brought Him With Me
House of Blues

There are very few artists who have the longevity to withstand the changing tides of public opinion. It is even more difficult when a group does it through five decades, but the Blind Boys of Alabama have and are still alive and running as exemplified by their new live album.

The group started at Talladega, Alabama's Institute For the Deaf and Blind when a few residents came together to sing old gospel standards. They first performed under the name, The Happy Land Jubilee Singers attracting large audiences. They changed their name when they saw the success of rival gospel group, the Five Blind Boys From Mississippi — and the Five Blind Boys of Alabama were born.

Despite a recording career of fifty years I Brought Him With Me is the Boys' first live album and it captures all the energy and spirit of this very special group. This is hardly a boring collection of organ based church hymns, instead it is full of blues-based gospel songs that make you want to stand up and feel the music. I Brought Him With Me makes for great Sunday morning music, as you wake up with a hang over, since it will supply you with a little burst of energy to get your day started and your feet stomping.

Their choice of songs on this album is excellent as it draws from a variety of styles and genres. Their version of the Weavers tune "If I Had A Hammer" is stirring and their take on "Amazing Grace" is intense to say the least. Another standout track is their duet with Koko Taylor on "Do Lord."

Trax On Trax Off

This album will satisfy many people who enjoy different styles of music. It proves the universal appeal of songs sung in harmony and with a lot of spirit. A– (Ed Hurley)

MOJAVE 3
Ask Me Tomorrow
4AD

Imagine yourself driving across the dessert, in the middle of nowhere. Turn on your cheap car radio expecting an old Hank Williams tune. Instead you are surprised to hear the beautiful ethereal voices of Mojave 3 coming out of the speakers sounding like two angels that have come to save you from the deserted sandy land.

Ask Me Tomorrow offers a breath of fresh air for listeners everywhere, from its minimal instrumentation to its heavenly voices, as this album is filled with moments of utter beauty and surreal moments. "Love Songs On The Radio" starts off the album in magnificent fashion. Listening to Rachel Goswell's hypnotic, soothing voice is sure to send shivers up and down your spine.

Goswell and Neil Halstead were the driving force behind Slowdive, a British band that broke barriers with their distinct dreamy tunes. After three successful albums, Just For A Day, Souvlaki and Pygmalion, Slowdive called it a day. Mojave 3 continues Slowdive's success at making perfect soundtracks for a peaceful afternoon nap. The most noticeable change is the significance placed on vocals in the Mojave 3 sound. Often in Slowdive Goswell's voice was hidden amongst the other instruments, similar to My Bloody Valentine.

Fans of Mazzy Star and Galaxie 500 will be intrigued with the Mojave sound and their songs. This is a powerful album that will take you to other lands and back. This is no mirage. A– (Mike Burke)

COURTESY MARK LANC

The Blind Boys Of Alabama still going strong after five decades.

Janet Jackson releases compilation

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

JANET JACKSON
Design of a Decade 1986–1996
A&M

For a long time Janet followed in the footsteps of her five older brothers who soared to fame as The Jackson Five, but recently Janet has had other plans than just being the little sister.

Design of a Decade is a testament to Janet Jackson's rise to fame and power, a power some have even compared to that of her most famous and closest sibling, Michael. Beginning in 1986 with "Pleasure Principal," Jackson brought her own brand of pop and funk to the world of music along with her own set of dance moves courtesy of LA Laker cheerleader Paula Abdul.

Her first album, Control topped the Billboard charts going platinum and selling millions of copies world wide. Hair permed to the max, long military jacket and key ring earring, Jackson was an '80s staple. Other hits like "Control" and "Nasty" assured her a spot amongst the stars.

Her second album Rhythm Nation 1816 was named after the year woman got the right to vote. It was a hip bop album with a definite agenda. Splattered amongst hits like "Black Cat" and "Miss You Much" were snippets of messages about gang violence and racism. Her title track won several MTV Music awards and began the trend towards message albums.

It was also on Rhythm Nation that fans first saw the new Janet Jackson. In a crop-cut tank-top and ripped jeans the "Love Will Never Do" video dispelled any notion that Jackson would remain in Michael's shadow. With all traces of baby fat gone, Jackson was out to prove she was all woman and the success of the song only furthered that belief.

Then came Janet, an album that left no doubt in people's minds that this was an artist to be reckoned with. While Michael was knee deep in child abuse accusations and LaToya prancing around screaming for attention, Janet quietly stepped up to bat and hit a stunning home run establishing her right as the new number one Jackson.

Even her brother's HIStory failed to do what Janet did minus all the hoopla. Almost every song on the album has hit number one bolstered by the success of her first single "Again," which was also featured in her first major motion picture, Poetic Justice. Songs like "If," "You Want This" and "Anytime" gave the world a view of Jackson that she established with "Love Will Never Do." Sexy, strong and in control there just didn't seem a way to stop her.

Now the singer is approaching 30 and Design of a Decade celebrates 10 years of music making. The album features 14 tracks including many of the above mentioned and many more including "Alright," "That's

Turn to JANET, page 11

VITAPUP
An Hour With Vitapup
Plump

This album must be nominated for the most diverse sounding album of the year from the emo-core/jazzy sounds of "Burger King" to the rap soaked "Blast Off With A Verse" to the spoken word of "City Soul." An Hour With Vitapup will take you on ride through more musical styles than you knew existed.

The band cites John Coltraine and the Beastie Boys as main influences, and much like the B-Boys, Vitapup takes the risk to experiment greatly with their music. Listen to "Freedom For Saturn," a jazzy tune augmented by the spoken word of guest star Jane Hohenberger. Another highlight featuring special guests is the hip hop of "Blast Off With A Verse" featuring rappers Reality and CNI of the Crey Eye Cue.

More rap can be heard on "I Forgot," a low-fi hip hop tune reminiscent of Beck. At times it is easy to forget the true sound of Vitapup. The diversity on this 19 song release is unmatched by any contemporary group and An Hour With Vitapup is one of the most daring and interesting debut albums in recent memory.

If this is not enough Vitapup to keep you satisfied, the band is busy working on various other projects. Melissa York recently became the drummer of Team Dresch and Greg Griffith performs on the debut album by the Godrays featuring Alex Kemp and Phoebe Summersquash formerly

Turn to TRAX, page 10

ON SALE $9.99 CD

Newbury Comics
"a wicked good time!"
50 MAIN STREET • AMHERST
256-8840
SALE ENDS 12/26/95

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS Holiday SAVINGS
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS Insurance Policy
Shop Around For The Best Possible Price, Then Come To Klein's And We'll Beat That Price!
Gift Certificates For The Holidays
Something For Everyone On Your Holiday Gift List!
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
Hampshire Mall • Hadley

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Michelob & Michelob Light $6.99 12 pack Bottles
Bass Ale 12 pack bottles $10.99
Sea Dog (Blond Ale, Brown Ale & I.P.A.) $5.99/Six Naked Aspen (Pale Ale, Brown Ale, Raspberry Wheat) $5.99/six
Smirnoff Vodka $7.99 750 ml
Myers Rum $12.99 750 ml
Early Times Bourbon $5.99 750ml
Tanqueray Gin $12.99 750ml
Emmit's Irish Cream $9.99 750ml
Hot Damn $6.99 750ml
Keg Special: 1/2 keg $75.00 Sam Adams Scotch Ale
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

Newbury Comics
50 Main St • Amherst, MA
256-8840
Top 50 Discs Always on Sale!
Live broadcast with WHMP on December 9th From 3:30-5:30 pm!
We'll be giving away tons of wicked cool stuff!
•Gift certificates
•Posters
•T-Shirts
•and much more!
Shop here. Die Happy.

Newbury Comics
"a wicked good time!"
Limit 3 Discs Per Coupon
$3.00 Off Any Compact Disc*
regularly priced $11.99 or more • sale items excluded • no double discounts
expires 12/18/95 997067

Newbury Comics
"a wicked good time!"
Limit 3 Discs Per Coupon
$3.00 Off Any Compact Disc*
regularly priced $11.99 or more • sale items excluded • no double discounts expires 12/18/95 997067

■ Trax

continued from page 8

of Small Factory. A– (M.B.)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Spiritual High
OM

Catching on to the recent wave of artists such as Sarah McLaughlin and Bush, OM Records have released a CD which combines a full length album in addition to a CD–ROM track. Spiritual High is a global celebration of mind and soul from such artists as Future Sound of London, Entrancing Iris, Moodswings and others.

The audio part of Spiritual High is a mix of ethnic beats, futuristic melodies and tribal grooves. It is an ambient descent through world religions and eastern ideas which are expressed musically. Its tranquil sounds engage the listener into a near hypnotic state. Combining electronic with vocal chanting it carries the listener to a "spiritual high."

The CD–ROM portion is by far more intense than any other of the recently released enhanced CD's. Its colorful and mesmerizing effects will keep even the least attentive person entertained for quite some time. In addition to the trippy videos which feature such scenes as the ocean morphing into a woman's face and a laughing Buddha, it includes interviews with the Dali Lama and a slide show of different pictures from China, India and other Eastern countries. Also included is a Holistic Wheel from which the user can learn Tai Chi moves, meditation techniques and view psychedelic animation.

Most fans of ambient/trance music will enjoy this CD greatly. Even the most ardent hard rock would be enticed by these powerful sounds. Don't let this CD go unheard. A (Lisa M. Oliveri)

■ Phish

continued from page 7

and I kind of shut myself off from the band after their last record "Hoist." It was nice to see that they still let everything traditional disappear and keep the audience on their toes.

"You Enjoy Myself" has been a collective favorite from the early days and the boys played it with that same longevity and intensity. Phish has become tighter and their shows flow much better now. As these guys make the adjustment to bigger and better venues, intimacy may be sacrificed but it's a small price to pay for continuous talent.

Paul Bley to explore unique piano style in Noho

By Matt Wexler
Collegian Correspondent

The final leg of A World of Piano, a three week showcase which spotlights several of the most accomplished piano artists, hits the stage tonight at the Northampton Center For the Arts, and who better to finish the series than Paul Bley, one of the most well known and most proficient jazz pianists of the century. In addition to the evening concert, there is a clinic in the afternoon offering the public a rare chance to speak with Bley.

Paul Bley is a musician who's done it all, from recording with jazz legends such as trumpeter Miles Davis and bassist Charlie Mingus, to introducing new talents Jaco Pastorius and Pat Metheny, to recording with the most modern jazz musicians on the scene today. Bley has released over 100 albums in his lengthy and successful music career.

Bley sports a unique improvisational style which relies heavily not only on the notes played, but on the notes not played as well. Silence is an essential part of Bley's style, making for an unexpected but definitely masterful combination of noise and quiet into music. He firmly believes in space, not just in the music itself, but in jazz as a whole.

Bley has said "in terms of improvising in the jazz idiom, there are only a few corners that were overlooked that are still workable." He considers too much freedom in music to be the biggest restriction; placing discipline on himself and his playing, letting silence and sparsity meld with his playing are what create his rare phrasing technique.

Bley began performing with the jazz greats while he was still rather young. He had taken over Oscar Peterson's job at the Alberta Lounge by the age of 18. Soon Bley founded the Montreal Jazz Workshop and brought accomplished artists Sonny Rollins, Brew Morre, Alan Eager and arguably the most legendary of them all, saxophonist Charlie Parker to Canada to perform with him. A very impressive beginning.

Bley studied in New York at the Julliard School of Music. During this time, Bley played with Jackie MacLean, Lester Young, Roy Eldridge and Bill Harris. When Bley was president of the Associated Jazz Societies of New York, he became the conductor for bassist Charlie Mingus' ensemble. Bley can be heard on several of Mingus' albums along with drummer Art Blakey on Mingus' own label, Debut Records.

In 1963, Bley and fellow pianist Herbie Hancock were offered positions to tour with saxophonist Sonny Rollins and trumpet virtuoso Miles Davis, each of which were leading their separate bands on a double bill at Birdland. Bley opted to play for Rollins, which led to a tour of Japan and a year to record with that band. By the late 1960s, Bley was delving into the world of synthesizers; Bley performed the first live synthesizer concert at Philharmonic Hall in New York City.

By the mid 1970s, Bley was working heavily with electric bands. He gave technical bass master Pastorius his first introductory recording session. Guitar player Pat Metheny's recording debut came through Bley at the same time. Recently Bley received five stars from Downbeat on his latest solo synthesizer album.

The list goes on. Bley could be compared with any aspect of jazz; he has been there, done that. The names of performers he has performed with is far more extensive than the aforementioned players; guitarist John Scofield, percussionist Gary Burton, saxophonist Ornette Colman, guitarist Charlie Haden and so on. Looking back through the history of jazz is much like looking at Bley's personal four decade career; he's been there on the cutting edge of jazz all along.

Paul Bley performs at the Northampton Center For The Arts at 8 p.m. tonight. Tickets are $10 in advance, $12 at the door. Students and seniors tickets are $8 in advance and $10 at the door. Tickets may be purchased through the Northampton Center For the Arts and at For The Record.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Chesapeake perform at Bowker Auditorium tonight.

Bowker hosts Chesapeake for an evening of music

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Tonight, Five College audiences will have the opportunity to hear the unusual blend of a dobro, steel guitar, mandolin, bass and guitar in concert at Bowker Auditorium on the University of Massachusetts campus. The critically acclaimed group, Chesapeake will present their mixture of traditional acoustic instrumentation at 8 p.m.

The newly formed group, which is based in Washington D.C., prides itself on original vocal arrangements and elaborate harmonies. Already the group has been recognized by the Washington Area Music Association.

Mike Auldenidge is known for his tone, taste and technique on the dobro. He has produced eight solo dobro recordings and the added dimension of his other specialty, the steel guitars, have lent the band a new sound.

Mandolinist Jimmy Gaudreau is known all over the world for his vocal and picking ability. He is able to make a duet sound like one voice and his ability for lightening fast improvisation is known all over the world.

T. Michael Coleman, the group's bassist, provides the foundation and drive, but also plays a creative role in song writing and arrangements. He has won two Grammy awards as well as having produced numerous albums which have received grammys.

Chesapeake will be playing at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets for the show are $5 for Five College students and $15 and $10 for general public. Children under 17 are $8. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Box Office and at the door. For more information, please call the Box Office at 545–2511 or 1–800–999–UMAS.

It looks like the real world.
It feels like the real world.
It pays like the real world.
It's an internship.
Unreal.
Call for more information on this unbelievable opportunity
Kathleen M. Kane
The Steffen Agency
1351 Main Street
Springfield, MA 01103
413/748-6000
Northwestern Mutual Life
The Quiet Company.

Come to
Barnes & Noble at Boston University's JOB FAIR!
and get off to a great start this winter . . .
If you want a fast-paced job that will get your Winter off to a great start, it's here at Barnes & Noble at Boston University. Boston's best source for books and the best choice for retail jobs. Find out more at our JOB FAIR on December 13th
• Part-time jobs
• Immediate hires
• Flexible scheduling
• Store Discount up to 35%
• Friendly work environment
You could be a sales associate or a cash office associate – just long enough to get us through the Winter rush and get your bank account in shape. Get here early enough, and you could be hired on the spot!
WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13TH 9AM–3PM CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
If you want to get a closer look at us, but can't come to our JOB FAIR, call (617) 236-7402 for more information.
We are an equal opportunity employer
Barnes & Noble AT BOSTON UNIVERSITY

Create your own revolution —
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Affairs at the Collegian!
New editor and writers sought.
There will be a meeting today at 4 p.m. in the Collegian newsroom, in the Campus Center basement.

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
584-4112 • 535-1888
SAME DAY DELIVERY
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Starts Fri. Thru Dec. 13 / Separate Admission at 7:00 Daily at 9:05 Daily
RYDER BANCROFT BURSTYN NELLIGAN WOODARD
HOW TO MAKE AN AMERICAN QUILT
EDWARDSON
"VANESSA REDGRAVE GIVES A GLISTENING... OSCAR-CALIBER PERFORMANCE!"
"UMA THURMAN SPARKLES!"
"TWO THUMBS UP!"
A MONTH BY THE LAKE
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON
Opera House 584-8435

COLLEGIAN NEWS
Because it happens everyday.

When you're not hitting the books, hit the slopes at Stratton Mountain.
Stratton has sensational savings for college students throughout the winter and spring semesters. Just present your valid college I.D. to get mid week lift tickets for just $20. And save $5 on weekends and holidays. And Stratton Village has loads of restaurants, pubs and live entertainment right at the mountain, so you'll have an amazing time off the slopes, too. Do your field work at Stratton Mountain this semester. Your Econ professor will be proud. For more details, call 1-800-STRATTON. Or visit Stratton on the Internet at http://www.genghis.com/stratton.htm
Stratton VERMONT
The mountain will move you.
EXTRAORDINARY RESORTS BY INTRAWEST
BLACKCOMB PANORAMA STRATTON TREMBLANT

Emerson College - Boston
Winter 1996 Intersession
Advertising • Marketing • PR
Television • Film • Radio • Management
Creative Writing • Screenwriting
Fiction Writing • Political Communication
Intensive 2-Week Program
January 2 - 13, 1996
Accelerate Your Program!
Emerson College
Division of Continuing Education
180 Tremont Street, Boston, MA 02116
Call: (617)824-8280

■ Vitale

continued from page 11

The self–proclaimed basketball fanatic said that because of that enthusiasm he prefers college hoop the most.

"College has what we have at the Mullins Center, the rah– rah, the spirit, the pageantry, the student body and everybody a part of it," Vitale said. "That's what makes it so unique and special. I love basketball at all levels but there is something about the spirit of a college environment."

That spirit that exists in college hoop today has taken Vitale as its poster boy and turned him into a celebrity.

His signature fast–talking style of commentary, permeated by his own hybrid of English, has made him among the most recognized broadcasters anywhere.

What people sometimes don't realize about Vitale, is that he is more than just an overflowing fountain of energy. He is one of the most knowledgeable broadcasters in the business and he puts in countless hours of preparation.

"You don't last 17 years on ESPN just yelling 'Awesome baby,'" he said. "I pride myself on preparation, trying to know the players and know the coaches."

On Tuesday night after Vitale had dinner in Northampton, he was walking through the town, when guys came running out of a bar saying "Dickie V, Dickie V come watch the game with us."

"It was dark, I don't know how they recognized me," said Vitale with a laugh. "I guess it's my bald dome."

A man in demand

Everybody wants to talk to Dickie V, and he is almost always obliging. He answers every letter personally and routinely sends copies of his book and his video game for free.

When the members of the band Phish found out that Vitale was coming to the Mullins Center, they asked that he come by and take some pictures prior to their Tuesday night show. While he had no idea who Phish was, Vitale grabbed a few copies of his book and headed over to meet the neo–hippies.

"I knew about Hootie and the Blowfish," he said, "but I didn't know about the Phish. Out of my league, baby."

While the attention is really flattering, Vitale says there can be negatives. "Obviously the negatives are that very rarely can you go, sit down and relax in a place, without someone coming up. They mean well so I really don't mind. But you feel like you just have to be on stage, and I'd rather just be myself.

"People have a hard time understanding that people in the public eye have the same problems as everybody else. The same fears, the worries about people we love. I have several people in my family who have been afflicted with cancer. People think you just live the life and that your life is just phenomenal."

While the downside exists, Vitale is the first to admit that the job itself, is the best he could ever ask for.

"Professionally we got the greatest life in the world. People treat you like royalty," he said. "You get the best seat in the house. You get paid really well. It blows my mind to think I make my living getting paid to sit there to see Duncan play Camby."

■ hockey

continued from page 11

said. "At this point in time we can try to take a look at one of these defensemen. All four guys bring different things to the table. It all depends on what we're trying to look for that night."

Shaw, a Cumberland, R.I., native brings an impressive high school resume to UMass. He played with current Minuteman goalie Brian Regan his junior season and earned Rhode Island Player of the Year honors during his senior season. He was also named Top Defenseman at the prestigious Hockey Night in Boston.

"Brendan Shaw has good hockey sense," Mallen began. "He has decent size and good mental makeup."

Shaw has taken his sideline duty in stride and has designs on being a contributor in the future.

"You have to understand that the guys here have played here before and there hasn't been any graduation," he said. "When I came here I looked at the future of this program."

Hurley, another freshman, was a high school teammate of current UMass forward Dean Campanale. Mallen describes him as an intelligent blueliner.

"Jason Hurley is very good defensively," Mallen said. "He's very smart."

Trosky came to UMass through a familiar pipeline, having played for the Springfield Pics. His work ethic and strength has helped him gain attention.

"Joe Trosky is very strong, very tough," Mallen said. "He's got a very hard shot."

"You wait your turn as a freshman and pay your dues," Trosky said. "You work hard and hopefully you get your shot."

Doyle, a sophomore, has been in this situation before. He has been on the Massachusetts roster since the program's reinstatement, but left UMass to play junior hockey for the Flamboro Gamblers. He decided to return to UMass for this season. At 6–foot–2, he has the size that Mallen likes in his players, especially defensemen.

"Adam Doyle has size, toughness and a fairly good understanding of the game," Mallen said.

Doyle is hoping to play to jumpstart his game.

"When you haven't played in a while, your confidence is a bit down," Doyle said. "It'd be nice to get in there Friday and get the confidence level back up and start playing to your ability."

The fact that the Minutemen are facing Yale, one of the weaker teams on their schedule, will be a bonus as one defenseman gets his feet wet, but Mallen said that the Minutemen aren't taking the Bulldogs lightly.

"We're not looking at Yale as any less of a team," he said.

The foursome said that the regulars have been supportive.

"The guys are good guys," Shaw said. "They all know you're trying just to play. They're behind you all the time."

"They're really helping us out," Hurley said "They've been giving us pats on the back and pulling us aside and telling us what we're doing wrong."

Morris resigns with Cincinnati

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds retained one of their high-profile free agents yesterday by agreeing to a $5 million, two-year contract with first baseman Hal Morris.

Morris, who made $3.3 million last season, agreed to take a pay cut of more than 50 percent for 1996. He'll receive $1.6 million next year and $3.1 million in 1997.

The contract includes a mutual option for 1998. If the two sides agree, Morris will receive $3.5 million in the option year. If the sides don't agree, Morris would get a $500,000 buyout.

Morris was close to signing a contract with the San Francisco Giants, but chose to stay in Cincinnati. He has a home in northern Kentucky and indicated during the season that he'd like to stay with the club that obtained him from the New York Yankees in a December 1989 trade.

"We have very, very serious discussions with the Giants," Morris said during a telephone interview. "My loyalties are to Cincinnati and (manager) Ray Knight. I wanted to go back to Cincinnati."

Giants general manager Bob Quinn declined comment yesterday. The Reds wanted to keep Morris, but not at the same price. They've got more than $30 million committed to 12 players and want to reduce a payroll that was one of the highest in the major leagues last season.

"This sends a message to our fans that even though we might make some deals to lower our payroll, we are committed to winning," general manager Jim Bowden said.

The Reds have released outfielder Darren Lewis to save money and are trying to trade some high-salaried pitchers to make room on the payroll.

Take A Study Break With These Great Specials At SCOTT'S
Thank You For Your Patronage
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692.
Open Sunday 12-6
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum $15.99 1.75 Liter Bottle
Natural Light 24 - 12 oz cans $8.29 +dep
Molson Ice, Light, & Golden 12 Pack Bottles $7.99 + dep
Keystone Ice 24 - 12 oz Cans $8.29 +dep
Corona Extra 24 -12 oz Bottles $16.79 +dep
Baileys Irish Cream $15.99 750 ml Bottle
Boone's Wines All Flavors 3 for $6.00
GO UMASS
MasterCard VISA MasterCard Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Now open Sundays 12-5 until 1996
Before University Drive Alumni Stadium SCOTTS Victory Market After

Ever Think of writing for Sports?
Stop by the Collegian Office at 113 Campus Center

Student Affairs Special Services
UNDERGRADUATE COMMENCEMENT
BACHELOR'S DEGREE CANDIDATES
- Preliminary Information -
Undergraduate Commencement will be Sunday, May 26, 1996 10:30 - 11:45 a.m., at McGuirk Alumni stadium (rain or shine).

ELIGIBILITY: Seniors whose degree requirements will be completed in February, May, or September, 1996, are eligible to participate. Immediately contact a member of the "Senior Staff", Undergraduate Registrar's Office, 207 Whitmore (5-0555), if you are unsure of your academic status or have questions in this regard! Only Seniors of record as of April7, 1996, will be listed in the Commencement Program.

INFORMATION BROCHURE: A brochure with general Commencement information will be mailed to seniors and their parents by late February . As update with further details about the ceremony will be made available to seniors in May as well as in one of the last issues of the "Collegian" in the spring. There is no Commencement rehearsal, so it is very important that the brochure be reviewed, and retained for further reference in May.

The brochure will include information about Accommodations (on-campus); Announcements; Caps; Gowns, and TAssels; Disability Services; Food Services; Parking and Shuttle Services; Seating; Travel Assistance, including suggested alternative routing; Videotape orders; When and Where to Assemble; and Yearbook orders; as well as the seating plan for graduates.

INVITATIONS, TICKETS, GUEST SEATING: Neither invitations nor tickets are required. There is no limit on the number of guests you may invite. Guest seating is unreserved.

HOUSING (on-campus): Guest housing will be available in residence halls the night before commencement. Details will be noted in the information brochure mailed in February.

STUDENT SPEAKER: Those interested in being considered for Student Speaker are advised to watch for ads in the "Collegian" concerning this competition. The deadline for proposals will be February 14. Contact 5-3464 for additional information.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION: Please call the Visitors Center, 545-0306.

Congratulations to all concerned, and good luck with Finals.

Bluewall Special
Egg Nog 99¢

Come Enjoy our all new delicious
BUFFET
Over 20
Different Items To Choose
Served 7 Days A Week Lunch & Dinner
Lunch Buffet • $5.95
Dinner Buffet • $8.95
"Bringing The Tradition To You"
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Delivery thru Delivery Express 549-0077
Route 9 & University Drive in Amherst
256-8800
OPEN DAILY: 11:30 AM-10 PM • FRI. & SAT. TILL 11 PM • SUN 12-10 PM

Massachusetts 60, Wake Forest 46

At The Mullins Center

Wake Forest (3-1)
Allen 0-1 0-2 0, Peral 0-3 0-0 0, Duncan 4-18 0-2 9, LaRue 7-10 2-2 20, Rutland 3-13 6-8 15, Goolsby 1-3 0-0 2, Amonett 0-0 0-0 0, Wilson 0-0 0-0, Jackson 0-2 0-1 0, Stringfellow 0-0 0-0 0, Totals 15-50 8-15 46.

Massachusetts (4-0)
Dingle 0-2 5-6 5, Bright 8-14 6-7 22, Camby 6-19 5-8 17, Padilla 4-9 0-0 9, Traveso 3-8 0-0 7, Maclay 0-0 0-0 0, Weeks 0-1 0-0 0, Nunez 0-1 0-0 0, Norville 0-1 0-0 0, Totals 21-53 16-21 60.

Halftime
Massachusetts 30, Wake Forest 27. Three-Point goals: Wake Forest 8-19 (LaRue 4-6, Rutland 3-8, Duncan 1-2, Peral 0-2, Goolsby 0-1); Massachusetts 2-11 (Padilla 1-4, Traveso 1-3, Bright 0-2, Camby 0-2). Fouled out: None. Rebounds: Wake Forest 34 (Duncan 12), Massachusetts 40 (Camby 9). Assists: Wake Forest 8 (Goolsby 2), Massachusetts 12 (Padilla 4). Total fouls: Wake Forest 17, Massachusetts 16. Attendance: 9,493.

Donta Bright – 22 points, four rebounds.

Highlights...

The game was billed as a Marcus Camby–Tim Duncan matchup, but it was the supporting casts that won it for the Minutemen. Donta Bright was solid from the charity stripe and finished with a game-high; 22 points... Dana Dingle was tough on the glass, pulling down a team-high 10 boards... Edgar Padilla (nine points, four steals) and Carmelo Traveso (seven points) were keys to the victory, as was the play off the bench of Tyrone Weeks and Inus Norville... Camby won the head-to-head battle with 17 points while Duncan had just nine.

■ UMass

continued from page 16

It was in the second half where Dingle hurt the Demon Deacons. With 7:06 left in the game, Duncan pulled down what seemed to be an easy board, but Dingle surprised the 6–foot–10–inch junior by swiping the ball away. While on the floor, Dingle was able to find Bright open for an easy basket off the glass, giving UMass a 46–39 lead. That basket came in an 8–0 run by the Minutemen that seemingly put the game away.

Dingle finished with just five points, but it was his rebounding and overall hustle that made the difference, as he finished with three assists, two steals and no turnovers.

"Dana Dingle has just been playing great basketball," Calipari said.

Padilla didn't put up the same kind of offensive numbers as Wake Forest guards Rusty LaRue (20 points) or Tony Rutland (15 points) but he made things happen. He played almost the entire 40 minutes and grabbed eight boards, all on the defensive end, and dished out four assists while notching four steals. On one sequence in the first half, Padilla stole the ball on the defensive end and then went the distance of the court for a two–handed dunk, making it 14–7 at the time.

As for the duel between the two future lottery picks, it was Camby who won the battle, scoring wise, as the Hartford native scored 17 points to Duncan's nine (Duncan was held to just six points for almost 39 minutes until he sank a three with 1:15 left). Duncan, however, held the advantage in rebounds (12–9) and blocks (4–3).

"Marcus Camby is an excellent, excellent basketball player — excellent," Odom said. "He has a lot of skills. We have even more respect for him now."

"[Camby] played a great game tonight," Duncan said. "He affected my shots. I think I had a few shots that I could have made but I just didn't. He played great, he got his shot, and hit his turnarounds. He took his shot when he had the chance and made them."

"I thought Marcus did a tremendous job, but he got help," Calipari said. "It was a team effort, but Marcus did a fine job."

■ hoop

continued from page 16

The hustle part of the UMass game was best exhibited by the other Minuteman co–captain. Though his offensive numbers will not impress many, (five points) Dana Dingle's tenacity on the offensive boards and denying his man to drive to the hoop were keys to UMass holding its opponent under 20 points in a half for the third straight game.

Dingle alone caused three jump balls with his hard work on both the offensive and defensive ends of the court. He finished with 10 rebounds, two steals plus three assists, two of which were from the seat of his pants.

Junior guard Edgar Padilla also played terrific defense for UMass, grabbing eight boards and making four steals, including picking Wake Forest guard Rusty LaRue's pocket and going in for two of his nine points on a breakaway dunk.

"I don't know if they're the best or most talented," Odom said of UMass guards Padilla and Carmelo Travieso. "But if you ask me who understands what their coach wants them to do, and is able to execute that better than any other pair I've seen this year, I think they do that.

"They bother opponents on every trip because they are feisty. During the meat of the game they definitely were factors."

Though the UMass bench did not score a point for the second time this season, Inus Norville and Tyrone Weeks did play effective defense for the Minutemen. Norville blocked Duncan cleanly, sending the crowd into a frenzy, during the second half run that put the game away for UMass.

After UMass built a 30–18 lead after a 14–1 stretch late in the first half, LaRue hit three–consecutive three–pointers to cut the Wake Forest deficit to 30–27 heading to the locker room.

Rutland led the way for the Deacons with 20 points, 12 of them coming in the first half. LaRue contributed 15 points, including four of six from downtown.

The Minutemen return to action when they meet Danya Abrams and the Boston College Eagles at the FleetCenter Saturday at 1 p.m.

With regular season over, it's bowl time

GREG COREY on College Football

The college football regular season has ended and now all that remains are the bowl games that will take place throughout December and early January.

The bowl games will culminate with the Fiesta Bowl, pitting Florida and Nebraska going head–to–head for the national championship.

The win by Florida last Saturday in the SEC championship game was huge — it left both UF and Nebraska with perfect records setting up the big game. Florida dismantled Arkansas 34–3 last weekend and will head into the game No. 2, with Nebraska being No. 1.

With no games this weekend, the Heisman is all that is up for grabs. Now we'll take a look ahead to late December and early January to step up the key bowl match–ups.

Sugar Bowl — Virginia Tech vs. Texas

Despite Miami being sanctioned by the NCAA, the Hokies still didn't get a bid to the Orange Bowl, but will head to New Orleans for another major bowl instead.

For the Hokies it's been defense all season. They held both Miami and Syracuse to season lows of seven points. The offense isn't that strong but QB Jim Druckenmiller is helped by FB Brian Edmonds and wide–out Bryan Still.

Texas has been rolling. The Longhorns are 8–0–1 over their last nine games. QB James Brown, despite playing hurt, has led the offense and Tony Brackens has returned from injury to key the defense.

Tech's defense has been huge all year and has won the Hokies some games. They'll pressure Brown and win another one for the fans in Blacksburg. Virginia Tech 23, Texas 16.

Florida Citrus Bowl — Ohio State vs. Tennessee

Tennessee is built around an offense that can put serious points on the board. Peyton Manning had huge numbers this year and will likely be the leading candidate for the Heisman next year, providing he stays in school.

The trouble for Phil Fulmer's team is the defense. The Vols can score, but they have trouble stopping high–powered offenses like the one they'll face in the Buckeyes.

OSU was one loss away from the Rose Bowl and a chance at an undefeated season.

The Buckeye defense with Shawn Springs and Matt Finkes has been tough, but the offense is where the stars lie.

QB Bobby Hoying, RB Eddie George and wide–out Terry Glenn can move the ball with anyone in the nation.

The time to digest the loss to Michigan, and the redemption factor, lead the Buckeyes to victory. Ohio St. 37, Tennessee 28.

Rose Bowl — Northwestern vs. Southern Cal

The Trojans began the season with high hopes and a lot of promise. They were predicted No. 1 by some preseason polls but fell by the wayside early on.

The Trojans have the ability to score with Keyshawn Johnson and a solid passing game.

You have to want the Wildcats to win this one. They bucked the odds all year and went 10–1 and won the Big 10 title. All of that has landed them in "The Grand Daddy of Them All." Darnell Autry leads the offense at running back and the Cats also rely on tough defense and special teams.

The Wildcats are a four–point underdog — they'll beat the odds one more time and complete the dream season. Northwestern 28, USC 24.

Orange Bowl — Florida St. vs. Notre Dame

The Orange Bowl got an in–state team and the Irish, both of which combine to draw plenty of fanfare.

This is an interesting game. FSU heads into this one hoping its defense can play well enough to stop ND. Sure QB Danny Kanell and running back Warrick Dunn can lead the offense to the end–zone, but can the Noles keep the opposition from scoring?

ND had itself a good season. Ron Powlus, Marc Edwards and Randy Kinder key the Irish offense but again the story is defense. Will the Irish have the team speed to keep up with FSU?

The Irish were pounded in last year's bowl game and Lou Holtz is tough with so much time to prep, but something tells me the Irish will come up a bit short. FSU 31, Notre Dame 28.

Fiesta Bowl — Nebraska vs. Florida

The Big Daddy for the whole enchilada. It's No. 1 versus No. 2 for the national championship.

Nebraska has a solid defense, which is better than most think, and an offense that can run. QB Tommie Frazier and running backs Ahman Green and Lawrence Phillips can run the ball on anyone.

The Gators don't run much, but why should they when they have Danny Wuerffel. This guy has been immense all year. Wuerffel excelled in the "Fun and Gun" offense for 35 TD's and 3,000 plus yards passing.

Key to the game is the Nebraska pass rush; the 'Huskers have to pressure Wuerffel. They will be able to run behind their offensive line, but if they don't get to Danny Boy the Gators will match them on the score board with ease.

I like Steve Spurrier to prep his team well. Wuerffel will shine as the Gator claim their first national championship. Florida 31, Nebraska 24.

Well, that will do it for another college football season. Hope everyone enjoys the rest of the semester and the holiday season. Thanks for reading, I hope you enjoyed it as much as I have.

Greg Corey is a Collegian columnist.

Minutemen receive verbal commitment

With the recent success of Marcus Camby, and the attention placed on last night's battle with Wake Forest's Tim Duncan, the center position has been on the forefront of most Massachusetts basketball fans' minds.

So, in keeping with the pivotman theme, the Minutemen received a verbal commitment from Ajmal Basit a 6–foot–9– inch center from Jersey City, NJ.

Basit, who plays at the legendary St. Anthony's under Bob Hurley Sr., has been described as a player who is less athletic but more polished offensively than current Minuteman forward/center Inus Norville.

Basit is also reported to be good friends with Winston Smith, the 6–foot–5–inch guard that also commited to UMass during the early signing period.

The commitment of Basit brings the current crop of freshman for next season to five. Massachusetts signed four players during the early signing period: Chris Kirkland, a forward from Pittsburgh; Monte Mack, a 6–foot–1–inch point guard from South Boston and Mike Babul, a 6–foot–6–inch forward from North Attleboro.

Basit cannot officially sign until the next signing period in the Spring.

— Matt Vautour

■ basketball

Continued from page 16

team's leading rebounder, averaging 7.6 boards per game and Elizabeth Turner is a sophomore scoring threat for the Bears, chipping in 10.8 points and pulling down 5.4 rpg.

Brown is a young squad, with a roster featuring two seniors and a single junior. The team is rounded out by four sophomores and eight freshmen.

Massachusetts was listed as the No. 32 team in the nation last week, having garnered 24 AP votes. The team is 2–0 on the year at the Mullins Center, and attendance for the Minutewomen's home games have grown dramatically. A record 4,110 fans watched the Stanford–UMass matchup.

There are times when you wish you could do more than watch the world pass by in a haze of wonder and a cloud of what if's

COLLEGIAN NEWS

"Make it happen"

The Daily Collegian, making the world a better place, one day at a time

COMMUTER AREA GOVERNMENT
Proudly Presents
DR. M. JOYCELYN ELDERS
FORMER U.S. SURGEON GENERAL

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1995
UMASS AMHERST • FINE ARTS CENTER
8:00 PM
FREE ADMISSION

During the Senate hearings on her confirmation, Dr. Elders stated, "I want to change the way we think about health by putting prevention first. I want to be the voice and vision of the poor and powerless."

NCAA®
1995 DIVISION I WOMEN'S
VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP
December 14 & 16
Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts
For tickets, call
413/545-0810

January
Winter Session at UMass Boston

Make the most of your January break by taking a course or two at UMass Boston. You can choose day or evening classes in a variety of disciplines. Courses meet January 2 through January 25. The undergraduate course fee is $130 per credit, and you can charge your fees to a MasterCard, VISA, or Discover account. To receive a copy of our Winter Session schedule, send in the coupon, email us at dce@umbsky.cc.umb.edu, or call

617 287-7904

Please send me information about UMass Boston's January Winter Session.

Name

Address

City, State, Zip

Return to:
Division of Continuing Education
UMass Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125
Fax: 617 287-7922

Appears at no cost to the Commonwealth.

UMass Boston

Wiesel's memoir answers questions

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

ELIE WIESEL
All Rivers Run To The Sea
Knopf Books

There's something strangely poetic about a man whose devotion to God and family can overcome even the greatest of tragedies. Elie Wiesel is such a man. The Nobel Prize winner, who has touched hearts with autobiographical books such as Night, recounts his memoirs in All Rivers Run To The Sea.

The book opens with a realization. Wiesel sees his father in a dream and for a moment, he is confused. Is this his father or not? Then he admits that he never really knew his father at all. Wiesel describes the type of man his father was and slowly the chapter evolves into a tribute to Shlomo Wiesel and other members of his family.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS
Elie Wiesel

Probably the most notable thing about Wiesel is his understanding. While there is an undertone of sadness throughout the memoirs, he is empathetic in remembering the victims. Wiesel recalls an incident when two brothers came to visit him. Their father had been beaten by a Jewish kapo in the concentration camps and the father had, decades later, recognized the voice of the man who had beaten him so severely he nearly died.

Wiesel asked the brothers questions, trying to show that perhaps their father's memory deceived him and the man they suspect may be innocent. The brothers could not be dissuaded and were about to reveal the name of the alleged kapo to Wiesel, when he stopped them. His reason? Only the victims interest him.

While understanding and gentle with the characters, good and bad, who move in and out of his life, Wiesel is painfully honest throughout the book. He rages against God, wondering at God's silence and those who permitted Auschwitz. His spiritual journey eventually leads to some sort of uneasy truce with God.

Detailed and well–written, Wiesel recounts his memories from childhood to his marriage, sometimes fondly and sometimes with a smile. There are happy times, such as the reunions with family members he thought were dead and then there are other moments, such as those dealing with his littlest sister Tsiporah, that are too painful for him to write about.

The sparse writing style that characterized Night, Dawn and other books is missing from All Rivers Run To The Sea. The tone is more philosophical, asking deep questions like "Are we to be victims of each other?" and in general, Wiesel seems to be searching for answers to most everything, from the Holocaust to life itself.

All Rivers Run To The Sea is a journey that doesn't have a clearly defined beginning nor an end. It's a spiritual quest but at the same time it's a positive and enlightening experience that no one should miss. A

■ movies

continued from page 5

this tale about Dracula certainly won't be as dark as other bloodsucking features — it has Mel Brooks written all over it. Naked Gun fave Leslie Nielsen wears the cape and plastic fangs and delivers his own brand of craziness. Nielson sets his sights (and fangs) on the supple white neck of The Mask's Amy Yasbeck.

12 MONKEYS

Its the 21st century and Bruce Willis is a convict who takes a trip through time back to the present, determined to find the cause of a deadly virus (hmm... sounds a little like Outbreak, maybe?) Brad Pitt also makes a gritty appearance as an animal rights activist who preaches about monkeys. Terry Gilliam directs this dark, sci–fi thriller that takes place in a prison that more resembles an insane asylum. Madeline Stowe plays a psychotherapist who attempts to help Willis with his mission.

TOM AND HUCK

How many times can the story of these two, adventurous young lads running around and causing trouble in a small town be told? Apparently, not enough — especially according to Disney. Man of the House's Jonathan Taylor Thomas plays the hardy Tom Sawyer, and The Client's Brad Renfro tackles the role of Huck Finn. Over the years and through various interpretations, the story has been twisted and turned more times than Mark Twain is rolling in his grave.

WILD BILL

Get ready for another Western from writer–director Walter Hill (Geronimo: An American Legend). This one tells the tale of Wild Bill Hickock (played by Jeff Bridges) slinging guns, playing cards, upholding the law and winning the ladies. Ellen Barkin mastered her talents with a whip to star with Bridges as a tough little lass.

CUTTHROAT ISLAND

It's Hook meets Waterworld in Renny Harlin's film about pirate Geena Davis and her shipmate Matthew Modine. The two brave rough seas to find, what else, but a treasure buried somewhere in the Caribbean. Dark and adventurous, its hard to say whether Cutthroat will sink or swim.

Laura Stock is a Collegian staff member.

COURTESY CLIVE COOTE
Two of Hollywood's top stars, Emma Thompson and Hugh Grant star in the new romantic comedy, Sense and Sensibility.

■ Janet

continued from page 8

The Way Love Goes" and "Come Back To Me."

Two new tracks are also included — "Runaway" and "Twenty Foreplay." The former has already dominated the charts for several weeks and the latter has yet to be released. Jackson fans can also by a VHS video tape of all the videos plus some special footage of Miss Nasty.

Many critics argue that Jackson is merely attempting to top her brother's double disc bonanza. And Jackson herself has told interviewers that she intends to top the sales record her brother set with Thriller. But Design of a Decade leaves no doubt that it's Janet that is in control. A

Collegian Elections Spring 1995

Applications for all Newsroom Editor Positions are being accepted:
Arts & Living
Black Affairs
Business
Developing Nations
Editor In Chief
Editorial / Opinion
GLB Issues
Jewish Affairs
Managing Editor
Multicultural Affairs
News
Photo
Sports
Women's Issues

Applications due Dec. 8, 4 p.m.
Candidates Night, Mon., Dec. 11 7 p.m.
Elections, Tues., Dec. 12 8 a.m. – 3 p.m.

Applications are available on the Managing Editor's desk and should be dropped off in the Editor in Chief's mailbox. All questions should be directed to Matt Vautour, Editor in Chief.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Arts & Living
So you wanna write for arts
But you don't know what it does
So you come down to 113 Campus Center
And you talk to Tara, Mike, Seema or Laura.
They give you an assignment.
You take it and write.
You're happy.
It's a lot like Nike – you just have to do it.

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
R&P Liquors
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
253-9742
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brook, & The Boulders
505 WEST ST. • SOUTH AMHERST

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-3774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex: Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply • EAT IN ONLY

HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS?

If you want to earn some money during your holiday vacation, come to work for the Barnes & Noble College Division. To determine which of the more than 30 college bookstores in Massachusetts and New Hampshire will be closest to where you will be spending your holidays, please call Barnes & Noble Regional Office at (508) 934-6430.

Full and part-time jobs, immediate hires, flexible scheduling, friendly work environment, and store discount up to 35%.

We are an equal opportunity employer.

BARNES & NOBLE COLLEGE DIVISION

Classifieds Now
VISA
MasterCard™
Accepting Credit Cards

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD

a.k.a. Life-saving Sodium Intake. Thursday 10-12pm and Friday and Saturday 10-3pm at Sun Star, 374 ...

Attn: All University Women ... Omega ... will be a pre-run holiday party on Dec. 7 ... 8 pm. Call Becky at 549-1[illegible]

UMASS HOCKEY

UMass Hockey! UMass Hockey ... Massachusetts. Another sport shows what ... new rank! Students pick up your free ... tickets @ Boyden Hillel Cage or @ Mullins Center for the game Saturday night! Mass takes on the University of ...

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Beautiful ... apt. Ideal for grad student. Non-smoker. Still half ... large bedroom with available now over $675/month 253-[illegible]

2 bedroom apartment for rent starting Jan. 1st. ... month. 549-[illegible]

AUTO FOR SALE

1980 Ford Pinto Excellent condition, ... miles, only $1,000 or make ... Needs minor work and paint job. Must see before ... $1,000 or best offer. Call 549-5040.

1995 Olds Ciera ... new parts ... miles ... 549-0646

1986 Toyota Pickup ... miles ... Runs great. ... 549-8415

1988 Mercury Tracer (Mazda 323) Low ... miles, great shape. Kept $500 fall 253-[illegible]

91 Hyundai Excel 5 spd very well-maintained ... of new parts! 85,000 miles $3,300. Call 256-6680

EMPLOYMENT

$40,000+ Stamm[illegible] hiring ... for fresh college graduates with a bachelors in Marketing. Call now 665-0141 or Fax 665-0111.

BABSON COLLEGE BOOKSTORE

Help Wanted at Babson College Bookstore from ... December 19th ... late January. $5.00 per hour. Call 617 239-4376.

C/C++ programmer 10 part time to full time position. Macintosh programming experience preferred. Apply to ACI, 121 Triangle St. Amherst, Ma 01002 Phone 549-0701

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $275-$350/week working to save the environment with Massprig Casual, fun atmosphere. Call Teri at 256-6434

Hey DJ's! Nationwide touring chain [illegible] operator/clerk ... dockeyship! ... no-hold salary, travel parties and achieves ... Massachusetts and Nassau! In-house room for the 1996 season. Room, trans. and salary pro... Please fax resume to (617) 292-9235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel, 76 Summer St. Boston MA 02110. Attn Product Dev.

Looking to hire enthusiastic dedicated and career-minded personal trainer who gets results! Call 549-5929

No pomp, no circumstance, no suit. Open Development, a software development company located in Westwood, is looking for top talent to work on our leading edge telecommunication product. Join our growing team as a software engineer, QA engineer, database developer, or data base administrator. Excellent compensation for hard work. Hands on experience a must. Send resume to S. Barrison, open development, 14 Southwest Park, Westwood, MA 02090 or fax (617) 251-9144

Spring Break On Site Reps National spring break tour operator seeks motivated people to work in Cancun, Mazatlan, Nassau and Florida during the 1996 season. Room, trans, salary and training provided. Part/Full employment afterwards. Please fax resume to (617) 292-9235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel, 76 Summer St. Boston MA 02110. Attn Product Development.

Travel Abroad and Work. Make up to $25-$45/hr. teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J60012

We want you. Unique liquor related position. Retains for $200. Inventory required. $7500. Follow our planned and only 2 sales per day in each location your profit $5, 400 first year. 941-766-9001

FOR RENT

Two 300 #s. Be creative to earn big money. Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Classic Video Game systems for ... Nintendo, Genesis, Super Nintendo ... Receive online commissions! No investment! 1-800-796-2251

Double bed practically brand new, mattress, boxspring, frame $225. Call Elaine 549-9911

Furniture / futons bed mattress all just three months old. Can Tom 256-6606

IBM pc. Bid computers both home with mon. Make great xc cheap! Call 6-2540

Regorator $700 7 year old quasar 4 x 2 ... refrigerator, supplies last! $700 open alcove hardrock 18" mountain bike $175 or bo 549-8166 Gary or Denise

Pioneer VSX 453 dolby surround receiver. 100 watts/channel, remote. 6 months old $180 562-9889

Top of the line ... sale for sale at an unbeatable price. ... boots for sale bo. Call at 253-1867

UMass vs Maryland 2 tickets for basketball tourney in Maryland 4 games. If interested Call Anthony @ 549-7324

UMass BC / 1's Red Good seats! Lowest 549-3894 Adam

Women's XZ ... Like ... Bindings & poles included. Asking $200 or bo. Call 546-7444

1995 trek 930 Excel con d $450 or bo Call Peter @ 253-2617

286/386 Computer System $105/$295. Keyboard, CPU monitor. Call Steve (413) 566-3324

INSTRUCTION

Shaolin live animal kung fu forms and fighting classes begin in Jan. Contact Sifu Jim 665-4145 or 549-7[illegible]

PERSONALS

Congratulations now sisters of AXO Amie Heather Jodie Corinne Stacey and Shannon

Erica of Hinds affinities. Last month's conversation should be continued. Give me a call (phone number is in new Hadley directory) R.D. (of course)

Lynn You are the most illogical illogical Sophomore. Your secrets has cast me into darkness. Ask me to move the earth and I shall it. I would bring back your smile

ROOM WANTED

Single female seeks room for rent immediately! Must be on bus line. Call Marie @ 549-5043

ROOM FOR RENT

Large room for rent 1 or 2 people (female only) $[illegible]. Large house, close to campus. 549-6942

Looking for upbeat female to share 2 bedroom apt. Available Jan. 1 - Aug. 31. Rent negotiable Call 549-4935

One bedroom in a five bedroom house ... $280/per month. 256-4295

One room in South Amherst with three ... mates. Call Mike (413) 584-[illegible]

Room for rent Private home quiet ... kitchen/vegetarian kitchen ... sharing, sharing furnished. $325 incl. Jan 30 545-4851

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted for spring ... bedroom in 3 bedroom apt. 7 full baths, located on bus route ... and hot water included. Call 256-3847

Rent 1 bedroom ... bedroom apt on ... very nice ($[illegible]/month incl. ...) Call 253-1366 Now

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located ... mile to UMass and center of Amherst) beautiful 3 bedroom 2-1/2 bath condo at Amity Place Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen and great sunset views. Must be responsible, ... non-smoker $425.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3986

Roommate wanted non-smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month. On bus route. Start Jan 1st. Call Anne 253-1605 heat & hot water included.

SERVICES

Free limoncini aid! Over 6 billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parent's income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services !! 800 263 6495 ext. FS0017

Quick movers & storage Sign up now to beat the rush! 256-1300

Need help moving? Buying a new bed? Trash to dispose of? I have a pickup truck and am available year round. Please book early for end of semester moves. Hourly rates. Page anytime 297-0065

RESUME

Inexpensive professional resume services. Packages $15-$30. Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union 545-2771

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair and ear piercing. Silversage Designs 254 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

One Room Available in three bedroom apt for spring semester in Amherst Ctr. 253-4985.

Irm for Jan Main st Noho $190 more info Call 582-8974

TRANSPORTATION

Need a ride to Florida? I'm driving to Florida Dec 24 & I need someone to accompany me Call Susan 549-6139

TRAVEL

JAMAICA

Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril- $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience

Czech a jet! Cancun/Mexico $189 /1. Europe $169. Call $129. Call Airhitch for more info! 800 326-2009

Going home for the holidays? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporter Airport shuttle. Hourly service to Bradley. Affordable, door to door. Advance reservations 549-1350

Intercollegiate ski trip Ski with 200 Jewish students from the Northeast and Canada Jan 26-28. Sign up by December 15 with Beth at 549-1710

Spring Break Bahamas or Florida Keys. Spend it on your own private yacht! One week only $389.00 per person including food and much more. Organizers go for free! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters ! 800 783-4001 Site us on the net http://www.shadow.net/~zonai/

Winter Break Special Killington week $269. Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Models Wanted National published sports and actions photos seeks athletes/models for photo shoot will photo you and your sport 413 584-8545

Collegian Classifieds are only 10¢ a word on Thursdays Collegian Classifieds are only 10¢ a word on Thursdays Collegian Classifieds are only 10¢ a word on Thursdays Keep repeating it and it will come true. 545-3500

HOROSCOPE

Aries March 21-April 19: Business topics are best postponed. Deal with routine assignments while trying to increase your knowledge in areas useful to your career. Earthy tendencies to be overly critical when dealing with loved ones.

Taurus April 20-May 20: Focus on financial meetings. A long term project could be launched as soon as possible. Personality adjustments are favored. An intelligent companion will improve conditions. Use mode information sparingly.

Gemini May 21-June 20: Your analytical skills will get a real workout now. Beware of erratic people and unstable situations. Keep out of other people's private arguments.

Cancer June 21-July 22: Make decisions regarding percentages, accounting procedures and the cost of a proposed project. You could learn how to boost your income. Listen to higher-ups. Be attentive.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22: Your co-workers will want different things from you than those in authority want. Obey company rules and keep your passions in check. Straight sit back and relax for a change.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22: Turn the tables on a blue mood by pouring your energies into festive pursuits. A romantic rendezvous goes awry tonight. Postpone financial and business discussions until tomorrow. Someone will have you suggest a creative scheme.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 22: Your serious side emerges. When influential people see how conscientious you are at work, you will be rewarded. A tasty proposition comes through at a love relationship. Investigate an offer of employment. Rewards abound!

Scorpio Oct. 23-Nov. 21: Friends reveal their motives. You may not like what you hear. A purchase may not be the bargain it seems. Be more practical about money matters. Help a teen-ager who is headed for trouble.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21: Avoid acting aggressive today. Calm an ogre or an unavoidable events will help your cause both maternally and emotionally. A phone call or letter could bring exciting news. A young person offers good advice. Heed it.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19: The effort you put into your work now will pay off at the cash register. Your confidence in your abilities is justified. Spend a little extra time on your appearance. A new romance is possible.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18: Emphasize the safe and sure today. This will not be possible if you gamble on speculative ventures. Examine merchandise carefully before purchasing. Summoning up extra willpower will help you conquer a bad habit.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20: Be very discreet about a private arrangement and you will have no reason to worry. Making an appearance at a hobby school is obligatory. Go and learn interesting things about your offspring. Be supportive.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday Ticker

Market closes as of 4 p.m. December 6

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	5,199.13	+21.68
Standard & Poor's 500	330.83	+1.04
Nasdaq Composite Index	1061.73	-4.16
AMSE Index	537.59	-1.82

Market Reports

Compiled by Matt Wurtzel

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks ended yesterday's session on a mixed note, as blue-chip issues extended a record-shattering performance but technology stocks came under selling pressure.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 21.68 points to 5,199.13, logging its third consecutive record and its 68th new high for the year.

The blue-chip index was up more than 30 points in late morning in sympathy with bonds, breaching 5,200 for the second day in a row. But it retreated in early afternoon, sinking briefly with bonds into negative territory before recovering two-thirds of the day's best gains.

Advancing issues had a slim & to-7 lead on decliners on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume was moderately heavy at 404.9 million shares as of 4 p.m., down from 434 million Tuesday.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

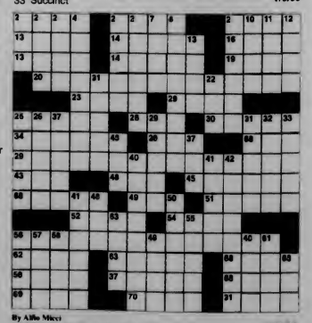
ACROSS
1 Comic's offering
5 Hautboy
9 Acknowledges applause
13 Pinnacle
14 Erupt
16 Caucasian language
17 Actress Rowlands
18 Susan Lucci role
19 Columnist Barrett
20 Rolling stone, proverbially
23 Notion
24 "Star Wars" princess
25 Alan Ladd role
28 Wright wing
30 Defraud
34 Small roles
36 Hoo lead-in
38 Mine yield
39 Hope, proverbially
43 "The Delta of Venus" author
44 "— the season to be..."
45 Works dough
46 Finished
49 Wide's partner
51 Birchbark
52 Quince or pear
54 He was, in Rome
56 Charity, proverbially
62 Bird on a Canadian dollar
63 Fable message
64 Jacob's twin
66 Friend
67 Two under par
68 Land's end
69 Appear
70 — the line: obeyed
71 "Auld lang —"

DOWN
1 Notch
2 Ready for business
3 Casino game
4 Test monitor
5 More than plump
6 Anatomical pouches
7 Photocopier insert: Abbr.
8 Edge ornament: Var.
9 Part of FBI
10 Repute
11 Sommelier's interest
12 Duel memento
15 "Little Man —": Jodie Foster film
21 "— a Grecian Urn"
22 That guy
25 Act part
26 — hand: abjectly
27 Correct
29 Hydrophobia
31 Boston's airport
32 Tenet
33 Succinct
35 Made a lap
37 Where Mindy honeymooned
40 1944 Hitchcock film
41 Early Peruvian
42 It often counts
47 Name giver
48 Comic DeLuise
50 Entertain
53 The same, in Soissons
55 Angered
56 Word of woe
57 Ornate metalware
58 Links unit
59 Therefore
60 Behold
61 Weather forecast
65 Singer Lemper

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

	C	H	G	S		A	B	E	T		S	M	O	G
A	L	E	R	T		N	O	L	O		H	O	T	E
R	A	N	E	E		T	E	M	P	L	E	T	O	N
E	N	D	A	N	G	E	R		P	U	R	E	E	S
		E	T	T	E	S		M	E	R	I	T	S
P	E	R	S	O	N		A	R	I	D
E	L	S		R	E	A	D	S		D	A	L	E	S
A	M	O	R		S	O	U	S	A		N	A	M	E
T	O	N	E	R		R	E	A	M	S		N	I	N
			L	E	S	T			E	P	A	C	T	S
	S	H	A	S	T	A		A	N	I	T	A
T	O	U	P	E	E		A	N	D	E	R	S	O	N
A	R	M	S	T	R	O	N	G		S	U	T	R	A
A	G	U	E		E	R	N	S		O	C	E	A	N
L	O	S	S		S	T	E	T		N	E	R	D

1/5/05



By Allie Micci
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

1/5/05

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

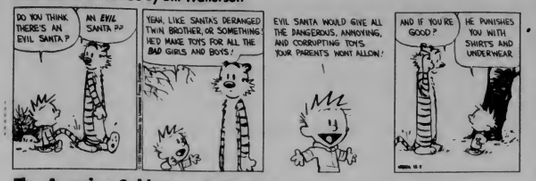
Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1	1
2	2
3	3
4	4
5	5
6	6
7	7
8	8
9	9
10	10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply • Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Don't Go There By K. & Justine

WHY DON'T YOU GO TO THE BEACH, YOU PRETENTIOUS PRICK!

Sports

Massachusetts defeats Demon Deacons, Duncan

RYAN TIEZZI / COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby goes up over Tim Duncan for two of his 17 points in last night's 60–46 victory over No. 10 Wake Forest.

■ Bright and Dingle help lead Minutemen to victory

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Staff

In what was supposed to be the Marcus Camby–Tim Duncan show, the Massachusetts men's basketball team showed it can win without depending on its superstar.

Senior co-captain Donta Bright scored 22 points, including 6–for–7 from the free throw line, as the No. 3 Minutemen (4–0) shut down Duncan and the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest (3–1), 60–46 at the William D. Mullins Center last night.

Massachusetts	60
Wake Forest	46

"We need Donta Bright to score 15–20 points," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "If we want to win basketball games, he needs to score and finish. He is a finisher. I was so happy to see Donta show what a great finisher he is."

The match–up between Duncan (nine points, 12 rebounds) and Camby (17 points, nine boards) wasn't necessarily the difference in the game, as much as how the supporting cast picked up the slack when the players were off.

"If anybody thought that these two guys were going to come in and dominate," Wake Forest coach Dave Odom said, "they were barking up the wrong tree."

"Marcus was a little nervous," Calipari said. "As much as we didn't want to say he wasn't worried about Duncan and Duncan wasn't worried about him, that was a factor in the game.

"Marcus is a swing–power forward, he is not a center. I think he showed that tonight."

Thirty–five of the other 37 points that Duncan didn't score were by two Demon Deacons. The two starting forwards for Wake Forest coach Dave Odom, Sean Allen and Ricky Peral, were in foul trouble all game and never got in the scoring column. All five UMass starters scored at least five points a piece.

After a Tony Rutland three–pointer brought Wake Forest back to within three with just over 11:30 left to play, UMass went on a 12–2 run, in effect putting the game out of reach with a 52–39 lead with just 2:24 left in the game. The spurt was ignited by the defense and hustle of the Minutemen all over the court.

"That defense was just hustling, just playing with passion, just playing with emotion," Calipari said. "That's a habit of how we play and it's the only way we know how to play."

Turn to HOOP, page 12

Highly–anticipated duel overshadowed

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

It was billed as the battle between Marcus Camby and Tim Duncan — a duel between two players who many think will go No. 1 and No. 2 in next year's NBA draft.

The signs in the stands displayed the magnitude of the match–up as well — "See Marcus Stop Duncan", "No Duncan in Cambyland" and "Hey ESPN! Camby knows a little something about Duncan" were just a sample of the many signs popping up throughout the William D. Mullins Center.

The highly–anticipated match–up didn't disappoint, but it was the play of UMass' supporting cast that helped the No. 3 Minutemen win the game, 60–46.

Donta Bright continued to open it up offensively, Dana Dingle continued to play stingy defense, and guard Edgar Padilla continued to play heavy minutes.

"If anybody thought [Camby and Duncan] would come here and dominate, they were barking up the wrong tree," Wake Forest coach Dave Odom said.

With all of the early attention on the Camby–Duncan duel, Bright was able to take advantage. He scored the Minutemen's first four points on a jumper and two free throws, and then connected for four more points in the half, one on an assist where Edgar Padilla found him open underneath the basket.

"I was just so happy to see Donta be the play finisher that he is, not try to start plays but just keep finishing them," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "He rebounded the ball and played good defense. Donta needs to score for us to win."

Dingle had a relatively quiet first half but did pull down four rebounds.

Turn to UMASS, page 12

RYAN TIEZZI / COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby [right] won the offensive battle against Tim Duncan [left] with 22 points compared to nine for Duncan, but Duncan won the battle on the boards 12–9.

Vitale sends UMass a message

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

At about 12:05 p.m. yesterday, the usually hectic traffic traveling through the Campus Center drew to almost a halt, as students gathered across from the Campus Store in silence listening to the bald man with the carrying voice.

The speaker of course was ESPN/ABC broadcaster Dick Vitale. He was in Amherst to broadcast last night's showdown between Massachusetts and Wake Forest, and to sign his new book Holding Court: Reflections on the Game I Love.

In the middle of the signing, however, Vitale stopped. He stood up and spoke to the crowd with a message about life. He talked about his humble beginnings and how he rose to where he is.

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN

ESPN/ABC announcer Dick Vitale talks with Channel 40's Mike Ratte during his book signing in the Campus Center Concourse yesterday.

"Don't ever allow the word 'can't' to become part of your vocabulary... I remember growing up how people would tell me you can't do this, you can't do that. If I had listened to those people, I would never have what's happened to me today."

He finished that by warning everyone present about the dangers of drugs and alcohol. "You can't win that game," he said.

This is the way Vitale spends his days. He spends his time on college campuses during the season. During the summer he gives speeches and helps at clinics and camps. One thing is constant in every message in every speech he gives — the theme of positivity. He uses his celebrity status to get out what he feels is an important lesson. Despite the hectiness of his schedule, the job keeps Vitale young.

"I love the college scene. I love being around young people. My daughters ask me 'When are you going to start acting 56 instead of acting 10?' To me that's the greatest compliment," he says with a laugh, "because I love it. I love being with young people. They just blow off such enthusiasm, such energy. I love that kind of a rush, that kind of adrenaline."

The greatest years

"Too many kids don't realize that the greatest years of your life are your college years," Vitale said. Those are days you just can't get back. You see Kevin Garnett now in the NBA, you gotta' believe he's missing so much, never having been a part of the college environment."

Turn to VITALE, page 13

Four Minutemen vie for open spot

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Everyday they come to practice and they work hard. They battle, putting themselves on the line, hoping that the coaches will notice, hoping that one thing that they do will stand out in the minds of the Massachusetts coaching staff — and translate into a chance. One chance to put on the jersey and join the UMass hockey team when it takes the ice.

Tonight, when the Minutemen travel to Yale for a non– league battle with the Bulldogs, one of the four Massachusetts defensemen, freshmen Brendan Shaw, Joe Trosky, Jason Hurley or sophomore Adam Doyle, who have yet to see game action this season, will dress for the first time.

With Dale Hooper still sidelined with a separated shoulder and Brad Norton suspended for one game because of a late game altercation against Boston University Saturday night, Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen has a hole at one of his defenseman spots.

The competition in practice has picked up, but according to the players, the rivalry is friendly one.

"We're all battling, because we know there is a spot open on Friday," Doyle said. "We're friends off the ice, but on the ice it's all business."

"It has picked up," Shaw said, "but it hasn't changed that much. Everyone is going about it like it's a normal week. We know there's a spot open and everyone wants their chance."

"We talk about it all the time," Hurley said. "What happens on the ice happens on the ice. Off the ice, we're all friends. We all hang out with each other."

According to Mallen each of the foursome has something different to offer the squad.

"We have four guys contending for this spot," he

Turn to HOCKEY, page 13

Women's hoop hosts Brown tonight

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

After upsetting then No. 8 Stanford, and travelling to Louisiana to play tough games against Mississippi Valley State and No. 1 Louisiana Tech, the Massachusetts women's basketball team returns to the friendly confines of the William D. Mullins Center for tonight's matchup against Brown.

The Minutewomen are coming off a weekend road–trip, as they travelled south for the Louisiana Tech/Dial Soap Classic. Melissa Gurile, who led UMass against the top ranked Lady Techsters with 21 points, and Crystal Carroll, who chipped in 12, were both named to the All–Tournament team.

Massachusetts is also riding the tails of a home–opening win over Stanford. The Minutewomen knocked off the perennial powerhouse Cardinal, 63–56, on Nov. 24 at the Mullins Center.

Gurile, who was named the Atlantic 10 Player of the Week, and Octavia Thomas, who leads the team in scoring with 14.4 points per game, pack a one–two punch for the Minutewomen. The duo has recorded double digit scoring marks in all but one game apiece.

Gurile is also on the way to setting two new school records. She needs just five more blocks to break Helen Freeman's career mark. Also, by making 14 more shots from the line, she will break the UMass record for free throws (344).

Sophomore Tez Kraft has been a solid performer for the Massachusetts squad, coming off the bench in all five games this year. She has become the team's third leading scorer, averaging 10.4 points per game. She has also posted double figures in three of the five games this year.

Brown comes to Amherst with a 0–5 record on the year, and a 0–4 lifetime mark against the Minutewomen. Leading the Bears in scoring is freshman Vita Redding with 19 points and 5.2 rebounds per game. Senior Kjersten Boschen is the

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 12

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 64 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, December 8, 1995

Minutemen go Eagle–hunting
Edgar Padilla and the UM Minutemen will battle BC for state bragging rights, Saturday at the FleetCenter in Boston (See Sports, page 10).

Aging heirs could take throne
With King Fahd's failing health, the Saudi Arabian throne's succession could soon become murky (See story, page 3).

Pass the Papas Fritas
The Boston band's debut single takes first place in our Liner Notes Top 10 Best Singles of 1995 (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast
Today will be sunny with a high of 30. Clouds will form tonight and there will be a low of 5 above. Snow is likely Saturday with a high of 29. Sunday will be cloudy with a high of 30.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 30	HIGH: 29	HIGH: 30
LOW: 5	LOW: 18	LOW: 21

Campus cops still reporting mishaps from Phish shows

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

During the two nights Phish played at the William D. Mullins Center there were several medical emergencies and acts of violence on the University of Massachusetts campus, according to campus police.

On Tuesday night, a "disorderly person" who was "waiting to get into the Phish concert" had to be handcuffed by two officers with two sets of cuffs before police could get him in a cruiser, Associate Director of the University Police Department, Phil Cavanaugh said.

"The defendant became extremely violent," according to Cavanaugh.

About 1,000 people waiting to get into the concert circled around the officers and cruisers, knocking several officers to the ground, according to the police report. Officer Stephen Westerling, who sustained knee and ankle injuries, was treated and released from Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Unidentified individuals in the crowd were able to get the prisoner out of the cruiser and "he took off," Cavanaugh said.

"The main objective [of the officers] was to get him under control and get him into custody, and then find out who he was," Cavanaugh said.

Therefore, the individual was never identified by police.

"If anyone finds a couple sets of handcuffs in their dorm, we'd be interested in knowing about it," said Cavanaugh. He described the incident as "like something out of the '70s," and said it was probably drug related.

"Fortunately for us, we had a lot of help," Cavanaugh said. For example, the mounted patrol was able to get right in the middle of the crowd.

While that was one of the worst incidents due to the concert, both police and medical personnel were kept busy both nights.

Most reports in the Police Log regarding "disorderly persons" Monday and Tuesday nights "were mostly [individuals] trying to crash the gate because they didn't have a ticket," said Cavanaugh.

Another security officer was hit by a vehicle while in a parking lot.

An individual arrested for two counts of assault and battery on a police officer, disorderly conduct and possession of Class B and D substances gave a false name to police and the district court. The individual, who has been identified through the FBI bureau in Washington, D.C., is at the

Turn to CONCERT page 3

Students rally against hate

JEFFREY J. DI GIOVANNI / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Residents of Van Meter and Butterfield light candles in a rally to protest vandalism and hate graffiti in their dorms.

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

Last night, residents of Van Meter and Butter Field held a rally by candle light in front of Van Meter to protest the hate graffiti that has plagued the halls and stairwells of the dormitory for the past couple of weeks.

Recently, Van Meter has been the scene of several acts of vandalism including one that occurred last week, in the second floor men's bathroom, which contained a slew of racial and anti–hippie comments that included the name of one Van Meter resident. In response to the increase and recurrence of these and other acts of vandalism, residents of Van Meter decided to make a statement, and express how they felt about the graffiti hate crimes in last nights rally.

"I think it's absolutely horrendous and the fact that some people choose to walk by and ignore it is even worse," said junior Kate Roberts concerning the hate graffiti. "It's not that the building hasn't been renovated, that's causing these problems, it's the fact that some people have closed minds."

Many Van Meter residents hold the same view on the reoccurring graffiti and are becoming increasingly annoyed with seeing it in their home.

"I think it sucks," said sophomore and resident assistant, Kirstin Smith. "I can't believe there's so much in the building and on campus, for that matter," she said.

"I'm sick and tired of it," said senior Don Valentine. "It's on my floor and every day there's something else."

Valentine has lived in Van Meter for two years. Being a resident assistant, he has had to deal with hall vandalism and the frustrations that go along with it.

"It is our home and people are people," said Valentine. "Why can't we look at a person on what they can give, instead of what their race, color or sexual orientation is?"

Speeches were given at the rally and grey ribbons were passed out to symbolize all races coming together in one common bond.

Residents at the rally were encouraged to take action and do what ever they could to help solve the problem. Suggestions included covering up hate graffiti with pieces of paper when spotted and calling police or reporting to staff members acts of vandalism that are witnessed.

Turn to RALLY, page 3

Elders blasts politicians on health issues

Dr. M. Joycelyn Elders

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

By Amy H. Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Dr. M. Joycelyn Elders, former Surgeon General of the United States, gave an audience in the Fine Arts Center her common sense analysis of health care in this country last night.

Elders statistically outlined the problems with our current health care system, and encouraged the health care providers and nursing students in the audience "to make a difference."

She spoke about the need for universal health care and health education.

"We live in a society that says we can't teach health education, that if we teach about health care, they'll do it," Elders said. "There are 1 million teenage pregnancies per year in this country...

"As I began to do the job [as Surgeon General] I became that controversial woman who wanted to give our children condoms," Elders said. "I didn't mind being called the condom queen if everyone who needs one uses one."

At the speech, members of Commuter Area Government passed out condoms packaged like match books, printed with the words "Don't play with fire."

President Bill Clinton fired Elders in 1993 because of these types of actions, and in particular, for telling health workers that masturbation is something that needs to be discussed.

Elders explained to last night's audience that she believes health educators need to stop saying masturbation will cause hair to grow on the hands, or cause blindness or madness.

According to the former Surgeon General, 90 percent of men and 70 percent of women masturbate "and the rest lie."

Masturbation, said Elders, has never gotten anybody pregnant or infected them with a sexual transmitted disease, including HIV.

Elders emphasized that she was not suggesting that masturbation be taught. "You never have to teach anybody how to, God taught you how to," she said.

A killer among us

But three years ago Elders, the first female and second African–American

Turn to ELDERS page 3

SGA presents proposal for improving campus life

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

In response to Chancellor David K. Scott's "Strategic Thinking Plan," the Student Government Association brought a preliminary version of their own plan of restructuring to the senate floor for consideration on Wednesday night.

According to the former Surgeon General, 90 percent of men and 70 percent of women masturbate "and the rest lie."

The SGA's plan is one of the few presented recently in response to Scott's vision of the University of Massachusetts in the 21st century. Most recently, the Academic Deans' plan stirred much controversy, proposing to eliminate the Vice Chancellorship of Student Affairs currently held by Tom Robinson.

First and foremost on the SGA's plan is that the University make "a firm commitment to the Commonwealth of an affordable and accessible education." This promise entails a tuition and fee freeze for the next five years.

The SGA plan acknowledges the fact that for fiscal years '95 an '96, the fees were increased at a low rate, however it says any increase is unacceptable.

The fact remains that room and board fees increased $291 in that two year span and much of those increases were spent on new costs which Housing incurred because the administration shifted costs off themselves and onto the Housing trust funds, thereby effectively giving themselves that increase," the plan stated.

The SGA raised the issue that UMass is currently the second most expensive state university in the country. They agreed with Scott's proposal to freeze the curriculum fee for five years in the event the University receives a $3 million increase.

However, they said they believe Scott should take it one step further. They also want a five year freeze on all mandatory and optional fees. They said this amendment would not alter the Chancellor's plan but would "help improve the University's access."

Turn to SGA, page 3

Dalai Lama, prof discuss good and evil

By Matthew Pottinger
Collegian Staff

The ancient Confucian scholar Xun Zi argued that human beings have the potential for both good and evil behavior, and that only under proper guidance can one be led to recognize the difference.

Ervin Staub, professor of psychology at the University of Massachusetts and a Holocaust Survivor, would probably agree.

Staub returned recently from Dharamsala, India, where he attended a conference titled "Altruism, Ethics and Compassion." At the conference, the fifth in a series called "Mind and Life," Staub and other Western scholars conducted private interviews with the Dalai Lama, the exiled spiritual and religious leader of Tibet.

During the conference, Staub focussed on "what leads people to help others – or stops them from helping in emergency situations." In addition, he discussed his research work concerning both the causes of genocide, and "how the tendencies of helping and caring develop in children."

Children require "positive experiences"

In his office at UMass, Staub discussed his research work concerning human altruism.

"I have spent my professional life studying what leads people to help others— caring and altruism— and what leads people to harm others [through] genocidal violence..." Staub said. In addition, he said that much of his work has focused on "what leads people to remain passive bystanders in the face of other people's need."

Staub also made the distinction between the Dalai Lama's and his own view of human potential for altruistic behavior.

"There is one slight difference," he said. "[The Dalai Lama] believes that human beings are by nature compassionate. He also believes that we have the capacity for anger, but he emphasizes that we are, by nature, compassionate.

"I believe that we have a very significant potential to become caring and helpful, but also the potential to become hostile and aggressive, and that which of these potentials develops depends on experience," he said.

According to Staub, good experiences in interacting with other people, along with socialization at home and in school, is the key to developing helpful and caring behavior in children.

"Children don't learn to be helpful so much by being told to be helpful, or even by being rewarded for being helpful," he said. "At the core, helping others requires having positive experiences with other people. Positive connections lead children to have a positive orientation towards other human beings.

"By contrast," he said, "experiences of neglect, rejection, hostility and abuse lead to a negative orientation for people."

Staub also said it is important for parents to explain to their children the consequences of their behavior towards other kids.

"Pointing out how some things [children] do help others, and other things that they do harm others also contributes to children becoming helpful because it contributes to their understanding of what goes on inside people, and enables them to consider their own power to impact other people's welfare," he said.

In addition to discussing conference–related issues with the Dalai Lama, Staub also interviewed him for his own research project on "optimal human functioning."

According to Staub, his motive for the interview was two– fold: to find out the Dalai Lama's views on "what it means to be fully human and to develop our humanity," and to ask the Dalai Lama about his some of his personal experiences in order for Staub to test his own conceptions concerning the correlation between people's experiences and their nature.

"I think of the Dalai Lama as a pretty highly evolved person," Staub said, "[I asked] about his experiences in life to see how they fit with some of my views."

Addressing problem of "passive bystanders"

Staub said that he is currently working together with The Friends of Raoul Wallenberg, a Washington–based group, on creating "an unusual conference to initiate a process of creating institutions, and to influence the community of nations so that they won't be passive bystanders."

Staub said he hopes the conference, called "Bystander Nations," will encourage nations to respond to and prevent ethnic violence. He also hoped the conference would play a role in the healing process of genocide victims.

"The Armenians are still greatly suffering from their genocide in 1915 and 1916, and partly it is because the world has not even acknowledged that a genocide has

Turn to DALAI LAMA, page 3

JEFFREY J. DI GIOVANNI / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Through the looking glass.
Freshman Sue Kuncis tries to decide on her favorite window ornament at the craft fair on the concourse of the Campus Center. The craft fair continues through today.

Campus Police Log

Medical emergency
Dec. 5
An individual in the Franklin Munchie Store suffered a seizure. The victim refused treatment.
An individual in Grayson Residential Hall with possible drug-related problems was transported to University Health Services.
An individual in North Village Apts. suffering chest pains was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
A person passed out at the Mullins Center. EMTs were sent to handle the situation.
An individual was unconscious on the second floor of Van Meter Residential Hall. There was no transport given.
Two individuals were taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital from the Mullins Center.
Three individuals were treated by EMTs at the Mullins Center.
An individual collapsed at the Mullins Center, and was treated by EMTs.
Dec. 6
An individual was struck in the eye by a snowball in Washington Residential Hall, and was taken to University Health Services.

Disturbance
Dec. 5
An individual was taken into custody for disorderly conduct near Lot 25 on Commonwealth Ave. During the arrest, the officers were surrounded by a crowd estimated at 1000 people. As the officers attempted to control the crowd, persons unknown opened the cruiser door and aided the prisoner, who escaped while still handcuffed. He was not found or identified.
There was an individual evicted from the Mullins Center.

Disorderly conduct
Dec. 5
There was a juvenile, 15, arrested for delinquency by disorderly conduct at the Mullins Center.
Christian Burns, 22, of 23 Kay St. Sudbury, was arrested for disorderly conduct at the Mullins Center.
Dec. 6
There were individuals throwing snowballs at vehicles on Eastman Ln.

Vandalism
Dec. 6
There was a wiper snapped off from a vehicle during a snowball fight on Washington Rd.
There was a report of windows broken in a number of buildings in the Southwest Mall during a snowball fight.

Annoying behavior
Dec. 6
There were snowballs thrown at windows in Mackimmie Residential Hall.
There was a large snowball blocking a roadway on University Dr.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Dec. 5
Donovan D. Barbier, 24, of 7811 Southwest 56 Ave, Gainesville, Fla., was arrested on Commonwealth Ave. for possession to distribute a Class D substance, possession to distribute a Class B substance, and disorderly conduct.

Weapons violations
Dec. 5
There was a weapon confiscated from a vendor at the Mullins Center who had a license to carry but was unaware of the laws pertaining to college campuses. The weapon was returned when he left the campus.

Traffic stop
Dec. 5
Ian T. Romboletti, 19, of 1070 Northampton St., Holyoke, was arrested for an outstanding warrant, and Raymond Mitchell, 19, of 199 N. Pleasant St., Holyoke, was arrested for possession of alcohol in an open container in a motor vehicle, underage possession of liquor and a vehicular equipment violation.

Accident — Property damage
Dec. 5
There was a two-vehicle accident on Massachusetts Ave. There was no injury, and the owners exchanged papers.
Dec. 6
The owners exchanged papers and left the scene prior to the officers' arrival on Massachusetts ave.
Two vehicles collided in lot 26 on Governors Dr. There was no injury.

Accident — Personal injury
Dec. 6
There was an unfounded report of an individual hit by a car on Eastman Ln. The individual had fallen in the road, and left the scene.

Larceny
Dec. 5
There was a TV stolen from the lounge of McNamara Residential Hall.
An individual in Field Residential Hall reported credit cards stolen.
An individual reported her bookbag stolen from Worcester Dining Commons.

Burglary/Breaking and entering
Dec. 5
There was a vehicle broken into in Lot 13 on Authority Way.
There was an attempted break-in into a storage room in Prince Hall.

Snow happens...
Be prepared with the Collegian's daily weather report.

Correction

In the article in yesterday's Collegian about Mad Dasher note service, the professor who said that the company was "preying on the weakness of the students," was misidentified as a member of the art department. The professor is from the art history department. Also, notetakers for the service are often recommended by the professor, but not always.
The Collegian regrets the errors.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Dec. 8

Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545-2511. Advance purchase is recommended.
Community — Jumaa Service, the Muslim Students Association holds Jumaa prayer service every Friday, at 12 p.m., Campus Center. For more information call Utama at 256-8482.
Religious — Shabbat services will be held at Hillel House at 6 p.m.
Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition is having the last meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. A group photo will be taken, a video shown and all are encouraged to attend. For more information call 546-0358.
Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS" is an exhibition of international posters that promote public awareness of the AIDS crisis and deepens compassion for people living with AIDS. Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4–8 p.m.
Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.
Meeting — The Community of Intentional Conversation is holding an open forum for the community to discuss the Chancellor's restructuring plans at 2 p.m. in Campus Center Room 163.
Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542-2277.

Saturday, Dec. 9

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others" a genderama evening of three original solo performances is being held in Hampshire College's Studio Theatre at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel-chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542-5896.
Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS." Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4–8 p.m.
Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.
Performances — Three one act plays directed, designed and dramaturged by undergraduate theater majors are performed at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater of the FAC. $3.50 for students and seniors, $6 general admission. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Fine Arts Box Office at 545-2511. Advance purchase is recommended.
Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542-2277.

Sunday, Dec. 10

Performances — "One of These Things is Not Like the Others." 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 general admission, with no reservations. The performance is wheel-chair accessible and there will be a sign interpreter. For more information call 542-5896.
Concert — The University Chorale will perform under the direction of Dr. Richard Du Bois in their Holiday Concert at 3 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Admission is free for UMass students with ID. $6 for adults and $3 for seniors and children.
Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS." Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4–8 p.m.
Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.
Craft Fair — Butterfield Dining Room will feature a craft fair at 3 p.m. Featured items include jewelry, clothing, pottery and other hand-made goods.
Performance — The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance is presenting The Cradle Will Rock in the Fayerweather Backroom at 8 p.m. For more information call 542-2277.

Monday, Dec. 11

Panel Discussion — "Can a White Person Be Anti-Racist," at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center Room 168C is sponsored by the STPEC office, and will discuss the ideology of whiteness, white privilege and how white people can and must betray their whiteness in the fight against racism. For more information, call the STPEC office at 545-0043.
Mini-Mall — UMass Hillel is sponsoring the 9th Annual Mini-Mall of vendors selling a variety of gift items from 9 a.m.–5 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.
Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS." Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4–8 p.m.
Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.

Tuesday, Dec. 12

Gallery Exhibition — "Visual AIDS." Located in the Wheeler Gallery until Dec. 14. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 4–8 p.m.
Meeting — The Golden Key Honor Society will hold a general meeting and Holiday Ornament Making Party at 4 p.m. in H-2 North Village, at the Community Center. Ornaments will be donated to the Giving Tree.
Mini-Mall — UMass Hillel is sponsoring the 9th Annual Mini-Mall of vendors selling a variety of gift items from 9 a.m.–5 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.
Exhibition — UMass panels of the Five College Beyond the Names AIDS Quilt will be displayed in the Graduate Lounge until Dec. 14.
Benefit Coffeehouse — People's Market, Earthfoods and Campus Design & Copy are sponsoring a free coffeehouse with local performers, poets and artists to benefit Necessities/Necesidades from 7 p.m.–11 p.m. in Earthfoods. No admission, but donations are accepted.

Notices

GLB Grad Students — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization invites you to join us in the Graduate Student Lounge every Friday, 5–6 p.m. Contact the Stonewall Center for more information at 545-4824.
Dancing — There is International Folkdancing at the Bangs Community Center in Amherst every Friday, 8–10 p.m. Greek, Bulgarian, Turkish, American, former Yugoslavian, Armenian, Israeli, Hungarian, French... teaching at all levels, beginners welcome. For more information, call Eva and Gene, 549-6748 or Cindy and Dennis, 323-6330.
Absentee Ballots — Absentee ballots for the Dec. 12 Amherst Special Town Election are available in the Amherst Town Clerk's office on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Wednesday 8 a.m. to noon. For more information call 256-4035.

Tournament Schedule

1996 WORLD JUNIOR HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP
MASSACHUSETTS, USA

Game	Team	Venue	Location	Time
December 26, '95	Czech v Russia	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:10pm
	Finland v Switz	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	1:10 pm
	Sweden v Slovak	Centrum	Worcester	1:10pm
	Opening Ceremonies	Centrum	Worcester	6:00pm
	USA v Canada	Centrum	Worcester	7:40pm
Dec 27	Slovakia v Russia	Matthews Arena	Boston	1:10pm
	USA v Ukraine	Matthews Arena	Boston	7:10pm
	Czech v Germany	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:10pm
	Switz v Canada	Mullins Center	Amherst	7:10pm
Dec 28	Germany v Slovakia	Matthews Arena	Boston	2:10pm
	Ukraine v Finland	Matthews Arena	Boston	7:10pm
Dec 29	Slovakia v Czech	Matthews Arena	Boston	1:10pm
	Canada v Finland	Matthews Arena	Boston	7:40pm
	Russia v Sweden	Civic Center	Springfield	2:10pm
	USA v Switz	Civic Center	Springfield	7:10pm
Dec 30	Germany v Slovakia	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	12:10pm
	Ukraine v Switz	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	5:10pm
Dec 31	Sweden v Czech	Matthews Arena	Boston	12:10pm
	Canada v Ukraine	Matthews Arena	Boston	5:40pm
	Finland v USA	Mullins Center	Amherst	12:10pm
	Russia v Germany	Mullins Center	Amherst	5:10pm
January 1, '96	Quarterfinal Rd.	Mullins Center	Amherst	1:10pm
	Quarterfinal Rd.	Mullins Center	Amherst	5:10pm
Jan 2	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	1:10pm
	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	7:10pm
Jan 3	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	1:10pm
	Relegation	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	7:10pm
	SEMIFINAL	Conte Forum	Boston	3:40pm
	SEMIFINAL	Conte Forum	Boston	7:40pm
Jan 4	5th/6th Place Game	NE Sports Center	Marlborough	12:10pm
	Bronze Medal Game	Conte Forum	Boston	3:40 pm
	Gold Medal Game	Conte Forum	Boston	7:40pm

THE COLLEGIAN "CATCH THE EXCITEMENT" TICKET GIVEAWAY!
50 UMASS STUDENTS AND THEIR CLOSEST FRIEND AND/OR ANY LOCAL COMMUNITY MEMBERS MAY SEE THE NEXT WAYNE GRETZKY PLAY IN THE WORLD JUNIOR HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIPS!
ENTRY FORM BELOW...

Tickets also available at TICKETMASTER
(617) 931-2000

Ticketmaster phone orders, outlet stores and venues will begin sales November 3, 1995

Mobil
MASSACHUSETTS SPORTS PARTNERSHIP
BLOOM'S BUSINESS SYSTEMS

Gretzky, Lemieux, Lindros, Leetch, Roenick, Fedorov, Bure, Jagr, Kariya, Tkachuk, Forsberg, Carey,
Who's Next?

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • (413) 545-1592

- Catch the excitement... Liven up your holidays with GREAT Hockey Action.
- Win tickets to see World Junior Hockey Action at any of the MA locations.
- Enter today! The Collegian has 50 pairs of tickets to draw and give away.
- Drop off or mail entry forms to the Collegian office in the Campus Center today.
- Drawings will be held @ 3:30 p.m. Thursday, November 14, 1995

Collegian staff or family members not eligible

CONTEST ENTRY FORM

Name _____
Address _____
Phone _____
Location of Game Preferred _____

Saudi Arabian king hospitalized

King Fahd's diminishing health causing controversy & unrest

By Anwar Faruqi
Associated Press

MUSCAT, Oman — Saudi King Fahd's history of bad health and his current hospitalization have stirred talk about who will be the next monarch of the world's largest oil exporting country.
It is widely assumed that Crown Prince Abdullah, Fahd's half-brother and the longtime head of the National Guard, will become monarch after Fahd dies. He substituted for Fahd at this week's summit of the Gulf Cooperation Council, a six-nation alliance that met here.
Fahd has been hospitalized for a week in the Saudi capital of Riyadh with what Saudi officials described as a "temporary health emergency." Some reports, quoting unidentified U.S. officials in Washington, said Fahd had a mild stroke.
Information is sparse, but it appears the king is recovering. Nevertheless, Fahd is an overweight diabetic in his 70s who has suffered from arthritis for years and is unable to walk without a cane.
Fahd, as king, wields absolute power in Saudi Arabia and has the final say on all important policy issues. The kingdom has the world's largest oil reserves and exports 8 million barrels a day, fueling cars and factories from Japan to the United States. Little is known about the views held by Fahd's probable successor. Abdullah is considered less pro-American than Fahd, and during the 1990-91 Gulf crisis, Abdullah is said to have opposed the huge presence of U.S. forces in the kingdom. But he has not hinted at any changes he might introduce to the conservative kingdom.
Abdullah, a tall man with a neatly trimmed black goatee, lacks Fahd's experience in foreign policy and is believed to be more traditional and inward-looking.
While Fahd is most comfortable in the cosmopolitan society of Jiddah, his summer capital in the west, Abdullah is at home in the desert heartland of Saudi Arabia, hunting with his falcons and living the Bedouin life.
Although he is believed to be just a year younger than Fahd, Abdullah's advanced age is not seen as an obstacle to his becoming king. The transition from one monarch to the next has traditionally been handled swiftly and privately by the ruling Al Saud family. "Even if there are controversies, they will not be publicized because the Saudi clan is more concerned about its reign and it is aware that there are external and internal forces that could threaten its dynasty," said Saleh Qalab, a columnist at Jordan's Ad-Dustour newspaper.
In any case, Fahd's death will likely spark "a speedy succession of kings" due to the ages of likely future monarchs, said Labib Kamhawi, a professor of political science at the University of Jordan.
After Crown Prince Abdullah, the next in line is Prince Sultan, the outspoken minister of defense and civil aviation who oversees the $13 billion defense budget. He is roughly Abdullah's age. Then the question of succession becomes less clear.
Abdul-Aziz ibn Saud, the founder of the modern Saudi Arabia, fathered more than 40 sons by 22 different women. Abdul-Aziz died in 1953, and has been succeeded by four of his sons, including Fahd, who has ruled since 1982.
More than 30 of Abdul-Aziz's sons are still alive, with the youngest of them now approaching age 50, but only a handful are considered potential monarchs.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

The SGA's document also allocates $2 million for the Quality of Life of students at the university, a figure not represented in Scott's document or in the deans'. Student Speaker Dan Castellano, feels this is most important because it would give money to student groups without raising fees.
Another feature of the document is the demand that the University fulfill its 1992 agreement with ALANA students to fund an office of ALANA Affairs and to increase the population of students of color to 20 percent. The office would provide a resource for students of color to turn to during their stay at the University.
The student governing body also asked that the $1.5 million increase in financial aid over four years in Scott's earlier recommendation to the Board of Trustees be reinstated.
Also included in the SGA document is a provision to provide students with a Course and Teacher Evaluation (CATE) Guide that would enable students to access more information about their classes and professors before choosing them, rather than just a short course description.
The SGA agreed with the Chancellor's plan to consolidate programs and courses by moving to a four-credit system. "by focusing on a fewer number of classes during a semester, a student will be able to devote more meaningful and quality time to subject matter."
The SGA also feels the University should financially support Registered Student Organizations, internships and campus governance, such as the SGA because students learn "real-life skills" through these co-curricular activities.
SGA made another recommendation that the Student Union be revamped into a viable Community Center. The group also set aside $7 million for infrastructure repairs.
Castellano said the reason the SGA's plan was delayed in being presented was because the Chancellor's version was very long and detailed. The senate wanted to give it their closest attention.
Castellano said the Chancellor's final draft will "shape the very near future of the University." He said it was vital that the student body have a voice in what the vision of that future might be.
The SGA's version of their response to Scott's document is currently being revised by the senate. It will then be submitted to the Chancellor.

■ concert

continued from page 1

Hampshire County Court of Corrections. Bail has been set at $10,000.
During the two shows, more than 40 individuals "were evicted from the building for smoking... mostly marijuana," said Cavanaugh.
On Monday night, the medical emergencies included a person with an "elevated heart rate," according to the campus police log.
Tuesday night, there were two arrests for possession of drugs, one for possession of alcohol, three people who passed out, two who were evicted from the William D. Mullins Center, and five unspecified medical emergencies which involved treatment by emergency medical technicians or transport to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.
That same night, weapons were confiscated from a vendor who had a license for the weapon, but was unaware of the laws pertaining to college campuses.
The snowfall early Tuesday morning added to the disorder on campus.
Three Asian males assaulted a 19-year-old student from Brown Residence Hall, attacking him behind Worcester Dining Hall with "a metal rod, windshield scrapers and an automobile antennae."
The victims' friends, with whom he had been walking, had thrown snowballs at the vehicle belonging to the three males. However, the victim said he did not throw any snowballs. Therefore, he did not run from the assailants when his friends did, according to the police.
The victim received stitches at Cooley Dickinson Hospital and has been released.
"The incident came on the hinge of the Phish concert getting out," Cavanaugh said. However, there is no indication that the two events were related.
"Within the past hour, new information has developed, based on working with the victim and the witnesses, which we believe will lead us to the identification of the three individuals allegedly involved in this attack," Cavanaugh said yesterday afternoon.

■ rally

continued from page 1

Fliers that listed suggestions to "make a stand against hate" were also handed out with the encouragement that students post them on their doors and windows to signify their objection to graffiti hate crimes.
Some 200 residents signed a letter proclaiming their seriousness and commitment to maintaining the struggle to end hate graffiti in Van Meter Hall. Also included in the letter were the sentiments and feelings of Van Meter residents about living in the current climate that the building is in.
"It is no longer a place that we can live in without knowing that we're bound to find a racist comment or symbol somewhere. Van Meter is no exception on this campus... Many hideous references are left untouched throughout this campus, continuing to depict and discriminate against certain classes of people. Van Meter is our home away from home and we do not want it plagued with continuous hate messages."

■ Dalai Lama

continued from page 1

taken place. Part of healing is acknowledgement from the rest of the world," he said, adding that although victims of ethnic violence do not always become perpetrators themselves, they are more likely to participate in ethnic violence than non- victims.
Staub described the process leading to genocide:
"Genocide in societies usually develops step by step. A government group harms some kind of minority. Discrimination and lesser acts of violence against [the minority] changes people, and leads them to devalue their victims more, and to regard them in even more negative ways, making greater aggression against them possible," he said.
By extending the realm of what he termed "inclusive caring," Staub claimed ethnic violence could be avoided.
"If we act reasonably, and we act early, and we act time and again," he said, "perpetrators would realize that there would be consequences."
The Dalai Lama has also agreed to participate in the Bystander Nations conference, which is tentatively scheduled for Stockholm, June 14–16.

EMILY REILLY / COLLEGIAN STAFF
Professor Ervin Staub discusses his recent expenences with the Dalai Lama from the security of his UMass office.

■ Elders

continued from page 1

Surgeon General, did try to convince Congress to spend money on health education geared toward reducing the spread of what she calls "HIV disease."
Congress, according to Elders, said more people were dying from cancer and strokes.
Three years later, HIV disease is the most common cause of death among 25 to 45-year-olds, Elders said. More than a million people in the United States are infected by HIV disease — one of every 92 men, one of every 33 black men and one of 77 high school students in Washington, D.C.
"This is a real killer in our midst," Elders said.
The general consensus is that providing clean hypodermic needles is supporting drug use. However, studies have shown that when clean needles are provided there is a 40 percent decrease in the spread of HIV disease, Elders said.

Destructive cycle

"I'm not about abortion," Elders said. "I'm about preventing unplanned, unwanted pregnancies... I've never known a woman to need an abortion who wasn't already pregnant."
She believes the "decition" should be between "a woman, her significant other, her doctor and her God."
"I feel that politicians don't know enough to make that choice for women. Even if they are good enough or if they know enough, they don't love enough," Elders said.
Elders made it clear that children who are unwanted or abused or uneducated perpetuate a cycle of hurt, abuse and ignorance.
"We're losing a generation of bright young people," Elders said. "We've been building prisons rather than rebuilding the lives of our young people."
In 1993, the United States spent $34 billion on AFDC (Assistance for Families with Dependent Children), food stamps and Medicaid — three types of welfare targeted at children. Yet, according to Elders, Congress does not want to invest in family planning and health education.
"If we can spend $250 billion for war, why can't we spend $25 billion for children?" Elders asked. "If we're going to be uneducated and diseased, we won't need a defense system. We'll self-destruct from the inside."

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 S. Pleasant St. Amherst 256-0733
145 Main St. Northampton 586-0155

We Deliver
Kai Chi
To UMass
Chinese-American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774
Open Sun-Thurs 12-11 pm
Fri-Sat 12-3 am
Enjoy HALF PRICE APPETIZERS
9 pm - Close • 7 Days a Week
31 Selections!
Ex: Pu Pu (for 2) Reg. $11.99 Now $5.99
No other promos apply - EAT IN ONLY

UMass Division of Continuing Education
• January 2-25 •
Winter Session 1996
• More than 100 credit courses both day and evening
• Noncredit workshops
• Professional development courses, seminars, workshops
• Courses for recertification points for teachers
Register Now!
Call for a free course catalog • (413) 545-0107
e-mail: contined@admin.umass.edu
Division of Continuing Education • University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for 25 years

Steve Madden Sale.
One week only
Downtown Amherst

Intellectual intercourse Tour
Alanis Morissette
with special guest
THE RENTALS
FEBRUARY 4 • 7:30 PM
MULLINS CENTER
TICKETS ON SALE THIS SAT • DEC 9 • 10AM at the MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE,
TICKETMASTER OUTLETS:
TOWER RECORDS • FILENE'S • ANN & MORE
TICKETMASTER PHONE CHARGE:
(413) 733-2500 • (203) 525-4500
EVENT DATE & TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT GROUP

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Matt Vautour Editor-in-Chief Marni E. Hellner Managing Editor
Earl T. Martin Business Manager James P. Conley Production Manager Ethan Bloomfield Advertising Manager
Natasha Kahn Advertising Production Manager Wendy Darling Senior Diversity Editor

Tara MK Connelly Arts & Living Editor Ron Alpert Staff Artist
Christopher Byrd Black Affairs Editor Laura Schmidt, Aimee Schwartz Women's Issues Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Tony Morre Editorial Production Manager
Syed Mohammed Ali Raza Developing Nations Editor Adam Chase Systems Manager
Geri Sahn Editorial/Opinion Editor A.J. Stewart Finance Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Ryan Courtemanche Distribution Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Rosario Navarro Classifieds Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Chris Taylor Connecticut Valley Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Daymion Smith Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Candice Flemming Sports Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

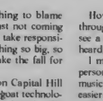
Entertainment via government

Hey there! Been looking for something to blame lately? Is your current scapegoat just not coming through in the pinch, forcing you to take responsibility for your actions? Do you need something so big, so all-encompassing that it can conceivably take the fall for any action you can come up with?

Well, wait no longer friends. Our pals on Capital Hill have come up with a breakthrough in scapegoat technology. It's new, it's improved and it's big enough to handle the largest mess and come back for more. And they're passing the savings on to you!

It's... (drumroll, please)... the entertainment industry! (Ta– Daa!)

Yup, Congress has done it again, finding a way to take a genuinely tragic incident and turn it around for political gain.



This time a New York subway worker was attacked during a robbery supposedly modeled after a scene in Money Train. Bob Dole went right to work, leaping to the Senate floor and launching a vocal denouncement of the movie, and by implication the entire movie industry, recommending a boycott. Thanks for clearing up my weekend entertainment plans, Bobby.

Now, go balance the budget, would you?

The entire argument would seem laughable, if it wasn't really happening. The absurdity has reached the point of authorizing an entertainment task force to study the "problem." Who's non-essential?

The problem is, when you really sit down to think about the notion that movies, music and television are directly responsible for the behavior of the viewers and listeners, it just doesn't make any sense.

This question has come up before, most notably during the "porn-rock" hearings a few years ago. When the late Frank Zappa reasoned that if music had that much influence over peoples behavior, then people would be falling in love all over the place, seeing as there are more love songs written than any other kind.

Using that reasoning, if television and movies influenced real life as much as Mr. Dole believes, why aren't we all quick-witted, funny, bright and proud participants with fascinating and fulfilling sex lives. Unless everyone else already is, and they're just keeping secrets from me.

How come just the violent and unsavory messages get through? How come if thousands of people hear a song or see a movie and one person imitates something seen or heard, it's the medium's fault?

I mean, it would be nice to think that problems and personality disorders were traceable to the films, shows, music and novels that we've read, it would make things easier, wouldn't it?

"See, I must be doing poorly in school because of messages I got about how underachievers thrive from watching movies like Dumb and Dumber and Forrest Gump."

"Wow, I'll bet I'm not doing well socially because of all of those sexist and misogynistic messages I get from all of those James Bond movies."

"I'll bet I'm becoming a violent, moody sociopath because of all of those rap songs I've been hearing lately." Yeah, right.

If you look closely, the one major media outlet that has been spared Dole's wrath it it talk radio, which strangely enough happens to be dominated by conservative viewpoints. Although, I'm sure that couldn't influence Dole's unbiased opinion, could it? Just as I'm sure that Dole's tirade against Hollywood has nothing to do with the lackluster financial support which the Republican party received from the entertainment community during the last election cycle.

When you think about it, though, there really isn't much difference between Ice-T saying that he's a cop killer in a rap song and G. Gordon Liddy determining on his radio show that the best way to deal with an unwelcome ATF agent is a shot to the head. It surely couldn't have anything to do with the fact that Ice-T is an African–American, could it? Nah.

When it's all over, you have to think maybe the implications of government regulating what comes out of Hollywood are just too scary. Maybe it's social problems influenced by government policies and practices that drive people to desperate acts, like the recent subway attack, and not the latest movie, show, record or whatever.

If the country is going to hell, I don't think it's getting there by driving down Hollywood and Vine.

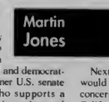
Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Bill Weld for President?

Last month Gov. William Weld of Massachusetts formally entered the 1996 presidential race with a pledge to cut taxes and downsize government operations and spending, and to change the political culture of America as he has so successfully done in Massachusetts.

No, this is not an editorial error. Yes, I did say presidential race. By now, you're probably wondering what this riddle is leading to. Well, I'll explain it to you. It's quite simple, really.

One day a few weeks ago, while walking through town in Amherst, I entered a phone booth to call a friend I had came to town to visit. One can imagine my amazement when the phone booth immediately transformed itself into a time machine. The telephone became an instrument panel which listed my destination as San Diego, 1996 A.D. There was a quick flash of light, and I found myself on the floor of the Republican National Convention. Newt Gingrich was giving a long, rambling speech introducing the Republican nominee for president, and Bob Dole's name was not mentioned once. The name that was uttered over and over was Bill Weld.



Yes, Bill Weld, the socially liberal/fiscally conservative governor of Massachusetts who defeated his last democratic challenger by a three-to-one margin in a notoriously liberal and democratic state (tabbed "Kennedy Country" by former U.S. senate candidate Mitt Romney). Bill Weld, who supports a women's right to choose along with affirmative action, and who appeared on the cover of The Advocate, a national gay and lesbian magazine for his support of gay rights, was being hailed by Newt Gingrich, the conservative Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, as the GOP's best hope for regaining the White House in November.

Obviously in a state of confusion, I went to the nearest newsstand for some "background information." The latest issue of Time Magazine (no pun intended) featured a cover story on the new republican nominee that read: "The Great Weld Hope." Inside, a timeline was constructed outlining his "journey towards the White House."

It began with a campus controversy in October of 1993, when a student activist called for the removal of the school mascot of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, the Minuteman, on the grounds that the mascot (a white man with a gun) represented "racism, sexism and violence." The university immediately caved in to the demand and suggested that a new mascot would be more profitable and better suited to represent women's athletics. The chancellor of the campus, Dr. David K. Scott, defied heavy opposition from alumni across the country and prepared to initiate a campus discussion of the issue, adding that "Justice wasn't cheap."

The magazine article then acknowledged how the "courageous" governor of Massachusetts had intervened on behalf of the "heroes of the American Revolution." Branding the controversy "political correctness run amok," Bill Weld fired the "second shot heard 'round the world."

The onslaught against the Minuteman by the British chancellor of the state university of Massachusetts had been stopped dead in its tracks, as Scott immediately responded that there would be "no change" to the famous icon of the American Revolution. (A year later, the student leader of the protest recanted his initial opposition to the Minuteman mascot, offering a public apology and even traveling to Concord, Mass. to visit the National Historic Site of the Minutemen's famous battle against "British colonial tyranny.")

The writer of the article used this seemingly irrelevant story to make a point about the Governor being a "New Republican" who could effectively harness and contain the liberal forces of political correctness, among other things, and still build vast support for re-election in a traditionally liberal and democratic state like Massachusetts. In this writer's eyes, Weld's strong stand in defense of the Minuteman was seen as symbolic of his resolve in changing the political culture of the University of Massachusetts, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and eventually, the United States of America.

Gov. Weld had indeed proven himself worthy with these and other acts to receive the 1996 G.O.P. nomination for President. Unlike Bill Clinton, no one would ever be able to question his character, his resolve, or his patriotism.

The next major events in the timeline focused on his 1994 re-election over democratic State Rep. Mark Roosevelt by a 45 percent margin of victory, with the writer pointing out that Weld's ability to win votes in a democratic state like Massachusetts enabled him to seriously cut into President Clinton's base of support in November.

It then went on to highlight his passage of "the nation's toughest welfare bill," 11 tax cuts during his six years in office, various initiatives to downsize the state government and consistent efforts to restore the death penalty in Massachusetts.

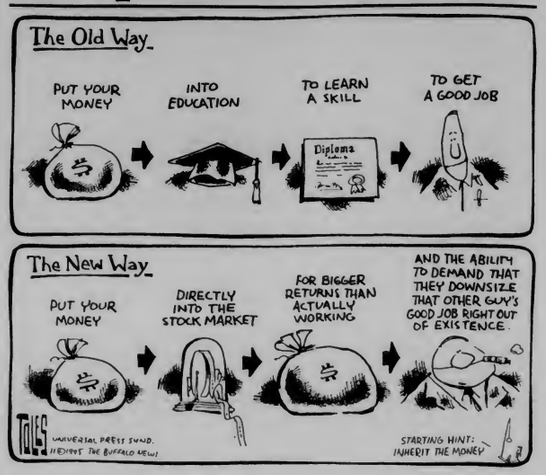
Next was his announcement in Dec. of 1994 that he would not run for president, citing financial and family concerns. He would, however lend a hand to his buddy, California Gov. Pete Wilson, becoming his east coast fundraiser for a presidential bid of his own (one that "fell apart" quietly during the following summer months). So loyal was Bill to his pal Pete that he skipped a visit to Great Barrington, Mass., after a Memorial Day hurricane ripped through the quiet western Mass. town, qualifying it for federal disaster relief funds. Meanwhile as the Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci visited the victims, "the big red head" (as he is often called around these parts) was in California at a fundraiser for his new political partner Pete "three strikes, you're out" Wilson.

Soon after more than a few misses of his own, Wilson would become the first GOP candidate to "strike out" of the presidential ball game. He would, however, go on to lend a hand to another future political flunkie: Bob Dole of Kansas, becoming — yes, you guessed it — Dole's national fundraiser and hopeful guarantor of the California delegation to the Dole campaign.

With Wilson out of the presidential race and Weld in search of new reasons to be out of Massachusetts (should another hurricane hit his state), the Governor began to publicly discuss a possible senate campaign against Massachusetts Sen. John Kerry, Democratic incumbent and husband of the mega–millionairess Theresa Heinz of the Heinz Ketchup fortune. For weeks, political pundits across the state were singing, "Anticipation," as they waited for Weld's eventual entry into the U.S. Senate race on Nov. 29, 1995. He did, however, acknowledge a problem competing with the Heinz fortune now that his old pal Pete was hard at work delivering the political bacon to Bob Dole's hopeless bid for president, and could not be counted on to return the favor for the Governor's Senate race (at least not for now).

So far you've seen nothing new or prophetic. You are still probably waiting to hear how in God's name a U.S. Senate candidate becomes the Republican Nominee when most of the other republican presidential candidates have already been in the race for months at a time. Well, I'll tell you. Unfortunately, due to space constraints you'll have to read the dramatic conclusion to this story in Monday's edition of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

Martin F. Jones is a freelance journalist and political analyst living in Springfield, Mass.

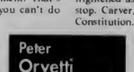


The Old Way
PUT YOUR MONEY
INTO EDUCATION
TO LEARN A SKILL
TO GET A GOOD JOB
Diploma
The New Way
PUT YOUR MONEY
DIRECTLY INTO THE STOCK MARKET
FOR BIGGER RETURNS THAN ACTUALLY WORKING
AND THE ABILITY TO DEMAND THAT THEY DOWNSIZE THAT OTHER GUY'S GOOD JOB RIGHT OUT OF EXISTENCE.
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
DETROIT FREE PRESS
STARTING HINT: INHERIT THE MONEY

Amendments used religiously

Newt Gingrich likes to think of himself as an intellectual and his revolutionary troupe has conjured up the spirit of the Ninth and 10th Amendments to prove their actions right. We hear the First Amendment tossed around in debate all the time, usually by those who don't care much for it; the Second, Fourth and Fifth come up all the time.

But the Ninth and 10th are forgotten, hanging out on the far edge of the Bill of Rights, an awkward appendage that is ignored by the government. That's because these two basically say, "Hey, you can't do that!"



The Ninth ("The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people") and 10th ("The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people") may be misused by Gingrich, but he is essentially correct. After the First, these are the two most important amendments in the Bill of Rights.

Anything the Constitution does not say you cannot do, you can do. Anything that the Constitution does not say is the role of the federal government, is the role of the state governments.

The United States has worked because it is a confederacy of different cultures sharing the same rights and interstate trade. The culture of Maine is different from the culture of Connecticut, which is different from New York, Virginia, Alabama, Minnesota, Arizona, California, Alaska... each of these is a state, but with very different interests. The U.S. was established as a free commerce zone with general rights shared by all its members. But the autonomy of these many societies was to remain untouched.

Remember, the Constitution almost didn't get written. Even when there were only 13 states, each feared losing its distinctness. There was a definite difference between a Massachusetts Yank and a Georgia cracker. The Ninth and 10th Amendments, more than any others, founded the United States and made Constitutional union possible.

We just passed the bicentennial of the Bill of Rights a few years back and during that time, Nine and 10 have been relegated to the back alley. It wasn't until angry folks started blowing up office buildings that the new states' rights movement came into public view.

Sen. Max Baucus of Montana reported to Washington that his constituents were angry at D.C.'s patent arrogance. The loggers especially because the feds had regulated they must wear steel–toed boots. But these boots get cold and the metal freezes loggers' toes on snowy days. The patrician condescension of a D.C. bureaucrat who wouldn't even know how to hold a saw, telling Montanans how to do their job, was incensing.

Fancying himself a new Paul Revere, Nye County, Nev., commissioner Dick Carver, a rancher, rode onto federal land atop a Caterpillar bulldozer on Independence Day, 1994. The usually quiet Carver was frightened as the federal Forest Service ordered him to stop. Carver, with a flourish, pulled out a copy of the Constitution. 200 Nyeans cheered Carver, who was trying to plow open a weather–damaged federal road and make a point at the same time.

Nye is one of 35 counties nationwide, mostly in the Southwest, which has declared authority over federal land within its boundaries. In Nye, the federal government owns 93 percent of the land. Federal regulations, based on environmental concerns and simply on the size of the Washington bureaucracy, has kept many of these lands off– limits to the people whose livelihood depends on them.

The feds have favored tourists over Nyeans. Eastern visitors "want to see wild country that looks wild... they want to see clear water, not muddy and they don't want to see cow turds everywhere," says Karl Hess, Jr., of the (Washington–based) libertarian Cato Institute. And the Rangeland Reform '94 legislation package, championed by Bill Clinton and Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, took away the ranchers' voice in deciding how grazing land would be used, leaving it up to environmentalists and Washington.

Even the airspace above Nye County is restricted because of Nellis Air Force Range. And the Energy Department decided, without consulting Nyeans, to use Yucca Mountain here for the country's only high–level radioactive–waste dump. (Where were the environmentalists on that one?) This waste isn't dangerous to the Energy Department's suits — they're 2,500 miles away.

Carver's melodrama has made him a hero in the grassroots. He has travelled to 23 states, telling audiences, "Isn't it a shame that our people fear the government? That's tyranny."

Unless the Ninth and 10th are respected, this could turn violent. Pipe bombs have been found in the Gila Wilderness in New Mexico; a forest ranger's van was blown up at his Carson City, Nev., home; someone tried to shoot a Forest Service biologist in California. It is pompous government interference that makes people join militias.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

No desire to sink to Murray's level

To the Editor:

In a Dec. 1, 1995 meeting of the University of Massachusetts Black Graduate Student Association, we, its membership, voted on what, if any, position to take on the coming to campus of The Bell Curve co-author Charles Murray. We are aware that many students and student organizations protested his speaking. We did not.

We are in agreement with the position taken by Professor Michael Thelwell in the Nov. 14 Collegian article "The UMass Experience, Indeed!" The already discredited writings of Mr. Murray are not worthy of the further attention that protest of this arrival on campus brings.

Further, we believe Professor Thelwell is correct in asking that we view the Distinguished Visitors Program's decision to bring Mr. Murray in context, a context which includes the bringing of Minister Louis Farrakhan to campus by a number of student organizations.

Whatever ones views of Minister Farrakhan, it seems clear that during the debate over whether he should be invited to UMass that many, if not most, of the loudest voices arguing for his visit were not interested (or even particularly knowledgeable) about Minister Farrakhan's history or message. What was of greatest concern was the controversy — the right of some to make others uncomfortable, a right upheld by the Supreme Court but whose application here would seem ill advised.

And so, it was with Murray. It is questionable whether it was the original intent of the distinguished Visitor's Program to place black psychologist Dr. Alvin Poussaint on the program to debate Mr. Murray. It would seem a rather insulting afterthought designed to appease those most violently offended by Murray while still retaining the television talk–show flavor of his visit.

If Dr. Poussaint was always to be invited, how should we intrepct Mr. Murray's receiving of the lion's share of the $15,000 used to bring the two? Is this an acceptance of Murray's thesis? Is black intellectual thought worth less than white intellectual thought?

What is at issue here is not Charles Murray, Louis Farrakhan or anyone else, but rather the reasons why we bring such speakers to the university. Many important speakers who come to UMass will be controversial. We should not, however, bring speakers because they are controversial, because we have a right to wound others, or because they happen to have name recognition.

In doing so, we sink to the level of the Jerry Springers, Geraldo Riveras and Ricki Lakes of the world. We titillate instead of educate. An intellectual community, indeed. The Black Graduate Student Association is interested in discussing with others the issues of how we keep the University from sinking to this level.

We are not interested in discussing or protesting the coming of Charles Murray.

The Black Graduate Student Association
UMass

Veterans should get day off

To the Editor:

The other day while reading an article on SGA debates, I came across something that disappointed me. The senate passed a motion to allow GLBT students a formal holiday. I was just recently discharged from the Marine Corps after four years of service, so maybe I'm a little out of touch with the college scene. I cannot understand how the university did not cancel classes on Veteran's Day, but will excuse GLBT students from classes to participate in coming–out day activities. I have yet to see anything that would have abstained veterans from tests of class to participate in Veteran's Day activities.

I can honestly say I'm insulted in the fact that the majority of state schools had the day off, while UMass had classes. I guess this reinforces a point to myself that UMass is more concerned with being politically correct and catering to the needs of everyone who is out of the mainstream than on the entire student body. I now know where the men and women who serve their country stand at this university.

Chris Hannon
Southwest

Arts & Living

Papas Fritas at top with best pop single of 1995

Carmody's sweet as syrup music fills "Joie de Vol";local Tizzy pleases with Sub Pop single

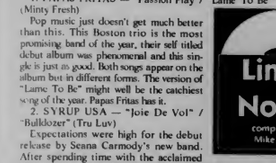
Here it is another top ten list for 1995. To say the least this was not the best of years for music. In fact, the biggest music event of the year was a television documentary about the Beatles. Below is my top ten for the best independently released singles of the year.

1. PAPAS FRITAS — "Passion Play"/ "Lame To Be" (Minty Fresh)

Pop music just doesn't get much better than this. This Boston trio is the most promising band of the year, their self titled debut album was phenomenal and this single is just as good. Both songs appear on the album but in different forms. The version of "Lame To Be" might well be the catchiest song of the year. Papas Fritas has it.

2. SYRUP USA — "Joie De Vol" / "Bulldozer" (Tru Luv)

Expectations were high for the debut release by Seana Carmody's new band. Swirlies, Carmody left to form Syrup USA. Although less experimental than her previous band, Syrup makes up for it with their catchy upbeat sound. Take one listen to "Joie De Vol" and you will know Carmody hasn't lost it.



3. VERSUS — "Big Head On" / "NITA" (Teenbeat)

The hype around Versus has been growing astronomically over the past year. Turn on WAMH and you are likely to hear DJs proclaiming them as the best band in the universe. It might well be true. Even though this is their weakest single it still stands out as a must buy.

4. VERBENA — "I Say So" / "Silver Queen" (Merge)

Merge Records has released nearly 100 records over the past six years and this may be one of the better singles. Hailing from Alabama, Verbena came out of virtually no where but on the strength of "I Say So" they have firmly made a name for themselves.

5. TIZZY — "New Jersey" / "Betty Vs. Veronica" (Chunk)

This was the long awaited debut single from one of the area's best bands and it didn't disappoint a bit. From band painted covers to colored vinyl to the two excellent songs this release was the highlight of the local music scene for 1995.

6. TULLY CRAFT — "Bailey Park" & 2 (Cher Doll)

Yeah, this is the band who sings "Pop Songs Your New Boyfriend Is Too Stupid To Know About" but they are hardly a one hit wonder. "Bailey Park" and "Sweet" are two excellent songs featuring Seana Tollefson's unique childish vocals. This may not lack the punkness of Crayon, Tollefson's former band, but it makes up for it with catchy melodies.

7. SCUD MOUNTAIN BOYS — "Knievel" / "1/2 Way" (Sub Pop)

Who would have even imagined the Scud Mountain Boys would sign with Sub Pop, the original home of Nirvana and Soundgarden? Well, on the strength of this two song single it looks as if Sub Pop made a good move. Look for a full length CD in the spring.

8. PEST 5000 — "Toast" & 2 (No Life)

Hailing from North of the border, Pest 5000 is one of several girl–led Canadian bands (Cub, Plum Tree) who are making waves in the States. Pest 5000's debut single, "Philosophically Dyslexic" released on Harriet last year was one of the most impresive releases of the year. This is just as good as it shows the bands softer, cuter side.

9. INKLING — Friends Are Made For Loving EP (Rubber Goldfish)

1995 may be remembered as the year that the indie rock world rediscovered their childhood in the form of cuddle core. Inkling, an obscure two piece from Boston, is at the forefront of this movement. "Love Song" and "Shooting Stars" are two of the sweetest and cutest songs of the year. They may not be proficient on their instruments but music comes from the soul, not an instruction book. This is one fun record.

10. (tie) BUNNYGRUNT — "Inanimate Objects"/"Fish Of Life"; EMILY'S SASSY LIME — Summer Vacation EP; THE MAKE UP — "R U A Believer" (K); VEHICLE FLIPS — "Our Returning Champion" & 2 (Harriet); SPIRITUALIZED — "Any Way That You Want It" / "Step Into the Breeze" (Sub Pop).

COURTESY MINTY FRESH
Papas Fritas' number one single "Lame To Be."

COURTESY TRU LOVE
Syrup USA's upbeat tune "Joie de Vol."

COURTESY TEEN BEAT
Versus' catchy "Big Head On."

STUDENT COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Is there something you would like to say immediately before grading? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker.

Eligibility:	Graduating UMass-Amherst Senior.
Format:	Submit not more than three word-processed or typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time.
Subject Matter:	Text should concern higher education, and be relevant to the University and your experience(s) here.
Submit Proposal To:	Paul R. Appleby, ADA Compliance Officer, AA/EO Office, 305 Whitmore.
Selection Process:	A committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. Author's names will be deleted prior to the committee's review to ensure objectivity. Ratings will be assigned and selected authors will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the finalist will be selected.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 14, 1996 4:30 p.m.
For additional information:	Paul R. Appleby, Chair, 305 Whitmore, 545-3464

Play to combine comedy & drama in performance

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow, at 8 p.m., New WORLD Theater and the Latino Theater Project will present GRUPO BRIDGES' world premiere of The Return of Margarita, a multi–media presentation that combines dance, drama, movement, humor and music. Written by Sandra Rodriguez, the show will be presented at Bowker Auditorium.

The Return of Margarita tells the story of Margarita, one of several flowers in grandmother Dona Lirio's (Mrs. Lilly's) garden. Margarita (Daisy), is neither exotic like Aunt Orquidea (Orchid) or sweet–smelling like Aunt Rosa, but rather simple, impressionable and strong. She leads the audience to the garden pathway to reveal the hidden secrets, pains, hopes and dreams of Latino women. Margarita helps shed a whole new light on every family garden and encourages women to take an introspective look into their lives.

The Return of Margarita celebrates Puerto Rican women, their strengths, their choices, pain and happiness. Although the piece may be specific to Puerto Rican women's experiences, the themes affect all women.

Rodriguez says, "I draw from my experiences and those of the women in my family as Puerto Ricans, with our own history in Puerto Rico and here in the States. However, this piece is also about being a woman, any woman."

Rodriguez shows how women, like flowers, may appear fragile and weak, but their souls harbor a vibrant strength that no matter how many times they are cut down, reaches for the light and blooms again.

Ricardo Ponz, composer and musician, will perform a combination of Puerto Rican and Latin American music to accompany the performance.

Tickets are $6 general public and $3.50 for students, senior citizens and children. For tickets, please call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545–2511 or 1–900–999–UMAS. For more information on New WORLD Theater, the Latino Theater Project, call 545–1972.

Ever Think of writing for Sports?

Stop by the Collegian Office at 113 Campus Center

SPORTS
Stop sitting on your butt
Stop wondering what it's like to play the game . . .
Write about it instead.
See Candice.

NCAA®
1995 DIVISION I WOMEN'S
VOLLEYBALL CHAMPIONSHIP
December 14 & 16
Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts
For tickets, call
413/545-0810

basketball

continued from page 10

Camby. "I'd rather play UConn."

Camby has the task of shutting down Abrams, an All-Big East Conference selection a year ago. With the same type of frame as Florida's Hill, Camby should be prepared for the banger.

UMass co-captains Donta Bright and Dana Dingle should match up well with BC's frontcourt. The two have been outstanding, but have been overshadowed by Camby. In Wednesday's game against Wake Forest, Bright scored a game-high 22 points, while Dingle was all over the place, battling for rebounds and diving for loose balls.

In the game against the Demon Deacons, bench scoring presented a problem again for the Minutemen, as there was no bench support for the second time this season.

UMass guards Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso continued to see heavy minutes in the Wake game and will likely see the same amount of time tomorrow. But it remains to be seen if the two will be able to make it through an entire season averaging 40 minutes a game.

After the Minutemen tangle with the Eagles, they head back home to the Mullins Center for a matchup with North Carolina-Wilmington at 9:30 p.m., Wednesday. Then it's a marquee match up at the Meadowlands between Georgia Tech and freshman sensation Stephon Marbury.

DAYMION SMITH / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Junior Edgar Padilla will try to continue his impressive play tomorrow as the Minutemen try to extend their season- opening winning streak to five games.

NBA

continued from page 10

play must overshadow his attitude. Otherwise, Coleman's attitude will keep Philadelphia in the NBA's wasteland for years to come.

• The other major story this week focused around Coleman's ex-teammate Kenny Anderson. Anderson, a free agent in waiting, recently spurned a six year, $39.6 million dollar extension from the Nets. This means one thing, sometime before the trading deadline in February, Kenny will be shipped out of New Jersey, the NBA's own Titanic.

The Nets simply have no other choice. Anderson wanted to make more money than Coleman, who averages $7.5 million/per year. Now things are different for the Georgia Tech superstar. By way of salary cap rules, the Nets could offer more money than anyone, nonetheless Anderson isn't listening.

"The No. 1 thing I'm looking at is the commitment to winning," Anderson stated recently. How about that, a Net (besides P.J. Brown) with a sense of devotion. It's too bad he's packing his bags.

Anderson's next home? Kenny has expressed interest in coming home to the Knicks, with the Pacers in the hunt as well. If the Knicks look to trade for Anderson a deal might consist of Charles Smith and Charlie Ward, in exchange for the kid from Archbishop Molloy.

• Former NBA and Syracuse star Dwayne "Pearl" Washington is in a fight for his life after suffering seizures three weeks ago as a result of a brain tumor. After earning All-America honors for the Orangemen, Pearl struggled in the NBA. Out of the league for four years, Washington was getting ready to start a job in the Boston school system. On behalf of all NBA fans, let's hope Washington can get well soon.

Spanning the "Globe"

• They're back: Late Monday night the real referees agreed to the NBA's latest proposal, ending a lockout imposed by owners since the preseason. Ironically, the deal was struck the same day the league expanded crews of replacement refs to three.

The extra official apparently did little good Monday in Boston, where the Celtics and the Heat were assessed a total of 79 personal fouls and eight technicals in a double-overtime game. The game also featured a brawl between Miami rookie Kurt Thomas and Boston center Pervis Ellison.

• Last but not least, Jerry "Ice" Reynolds is back in the NBA. After recovering from neck surgery, "Ice" convinced the Bucks he hasn't lost his touch (31 ppg in four CBA games).

Darren Cohen is a Collegian columnist.

horn

continued from page 10

Red Sox to sign Jose Canseco. It would also be nice for the Sox to sign Rick Aguilera. However, it is essential that General Manager Dan Duquette sign Mo Vaughn, and sign him fast.

Jose looks great in the middle of the lineup, and Aggie is a pretty nice luxury coming out of the pen late in a game, but Vaughn is the heart and soul of this team. What he does for Boston, both on and off the field, cannot be measured. The Hit Dawg wants the money that a Most Valuable Player deserves, and he should get it.

The Sox need to sign Vaughn to a long term deal that will keep this unselfish superstar in Beantown for many years to come. Losing Big Mo would be the Sox' biggest blunder since The Babe (and that includes a lot of blunders).

• DC for Shawn Bradley? Enough said.

• While the Pats watch their chances for a playoff spot slip through the suddenly slippery hands of Drew Bledsoe, you have to wonder who the favorite coming out of the AFC is. Without a dominant club, its anyone's guess who will be the annual whipping boys in this year's Super Bowl.

• So the debate now is whether Penny Hardaway has eclipsed Michael Jordan as the best player in the NBA. The two are 1-2 in the league in scoring, and both are quite capable of bringing a crowd to its feet. I'm just wondering if Hardaway can do the one thing Jordan has already proven he can't.

Can Penny play baseball?

• Here's a little blast from the past for Red Sox fans. Former Sox hurler Paul Quantrill will return to the AL East next year, as he was traded from the Phillies to Toronto. The Q will be reunited with former battery mate Rich Rowland, who signed a minor league deal with the Jays.

• One of the greatest dynasties in collegiate sports came to an end last weekend when the North Carolina women's soccer team fell to Notre Dame 1-0 in the Final Four.

The Tar Heels, who had won the last nine National Championships, not only fell to the Irish, but lost when one of UNC's freshman scored on her own goal.

Somebody try to find me a better definition of "heart wrenching."

• Not only does Wake Forest's Rusty LaRue have a great name, but he can really bury the trey.

• Speaking of women's teams, how 'bout the Minutewomen basketball team? First they pull off a major upset by defeating then No. 8 Stanford in the Mullins Center. Then, Coach Joanie O'Brien's club got a shot at the No. 1 team in the land last weekend, and played Louisiana Tech tough, falling 75-63. UMass center Melissa Gurile scored 21 in that contest en route to being named A-10 Player of the Week.

The Minutewomen are for real, and could be on their way to their first NCAA tournament ever.

• The Yankees front office seemed to be in disarray this off-season. They lost manager Buck Showalter, slugging catcher Mike Stanley, and Mr. Versatility Randy Velarde. Last night the Yanks pulled off a deal with the Mariners that sent Jeff Nelson and Tino Martinez to the Bombers in exchange for Sterling Hitchcock and Russ Davis.

Davis is a young player who could develop into a good third baseman, but Martinez is a bona fide slugger. This trade is another steal for the Boys from the Bronx.

• Hey, Dickie V! You're awesome, baby, with a capital A! I mean, you're a real PTPer! You're a real Rolls Royzer, baby!

Hey, now can I have a free book?

Brian Perillo is a Collegian columnist

hockey

continued from page 10

most prominent weakness this year, an area that became weaker when second line right winger Phil Eboli went down with a broken wrist during the third period of a win at Union.

Junior Tim Thomas, a draft pick of the Colorado Avalanche, has held down the fort in the UVM goal this season. An All-American last year, Thomas has not disappointed this year, posting an excellent 2.34 goals- against-average and .924 save percentage to accompany his 8-2-1 record.

"We're optimistic and want to see if we can get back on the winning track," coach Joe Mallen said. "I think we're going to be in for a much tougher game than we might be expecting [at Yale], but we'll be ready.

"Vermont's at the top of the ECAC and will be a test for us," he said. "They're fairly close to BU and it's another chance for us to see where we stand against one of the top teams in the country."

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Rob Bonneau and the UMass hockey team face Yale tonight, before returning home for a matchup with Vermont on Saturday night at the Mullins Center.

Collegian Sports, where the action is!

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS, THEY WORK!

Great Gifts
Bags Stocking Stuffers Hats
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Earrings Rings Bracelets Sweaters Toys Candles Chains India Print Bedspreads
Gloves Mugs Socks Leather Sole Merry X'mas Cards Chinese Shoes Dresses
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile Weeknights 9PM Dec. 7-22 Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St. Amherst-Carriage Shops

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 6 NOT EVERY MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY
Call Theatre For Showtimes
MONEY TRAIN
WHITE MAN'S BURDEN
AMERICAN PRESIDENT
CASINO
HAMPSHIRE 6 HAMPSHIRE MALL ROUTE 5, HADLEY
Call Theatre For Showtimes
HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS
TOY STORY
GOLDEN EYE
ACE VENTURA PET DETECTIVE II
GET SHORTY
FATHER OF THE BRIDE II

It looks like the real world.
It feels like the real world.
It pays like the real world.
It's an internship.
Unreal.
Call for more information on this unbelievable opportunity.
Kathleen M. Kane
The Steffen Agency
1351 Main Street
Springfield, MA 01103
413/748-6000
Northwestern Mutual Life
The Quiet Company

Steve Madden Sale.
One week only
ZAHA
Downtown Amherst

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS ARE ONLY 10¢ A WORD ON THURSDAYS!

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Starts Fri. Thru Dec. 13 / Separate Admission at 7:00 Daily at 9:05 Daily
RYDER BANCROFT BURSTYN NELLIGAN WOODARD
HOW TO MAKE AN AMERICAN QUILT
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON
VANESSA REDGRAVE EDWARD FOX UMA THURMAN
"VANESSA REDGRAVE GIVES A GLISTENING OSCAR®-CALIBER PERFORMANCE!"
"UMA THURMAN SPARKLES!"
"TWO THUMBS UP!"
A MONTH BY THE LAKE
Opera House 584-8435

Men's swimming set for Brown

By Jay Warner
Collegian Staff

Coming off of an impressive showing at last weekend's New England Championships, the Massachusetts men's swim team looks to continue its success as the Minutemen face Brown University at home this weekend.

With memories of last year's defeat to Brown in the back of their minds, UMass hopes to begin their holiday season with a redeeming victory over the visiting Bears.

Given the attitude of last year's team at the time, and the attitude of this year's team, coach Russ Yarworth expects a much different outcome.

"We're out for a little revenge this year," Yarworth said. "Last year we were a little flat, they swam a little better, and it just wasn't a great meet for us. It was at a time when we weren't swimming that well, but this year they are down on numbers and we've got a real strong team."

For the first time this season, the Minutemen are not going to have to worry about a lack of depth, as they will be at full strength for the Dec. 9 meet. Having patiently waited for this year's successful water polo season to come to an end, several swimmers have returned to the team and will play major roles the rest of the season.

"I'm closer to having my whole team in the water than I was last week because we, obviously, have the kids back from nationals [water polo championships]," Yarworth said. "Other than Mark Collier and Mike Shaw, who will be eligible in January, we've got the whole squad together finally."

In order for UMass to be successful this weekend, senior tri-captain Keith McLarty, a major contributor to UMass' second place finish at the N.E. Championships, will need to continue to show leadership both in and out of the pool.

Along the same lines, junior Sean Anderson, also a key swimmer at the championships, will have to continue performing well in the medleys as well as individually.

As a whole, Yarworth is looking for the team to build on its success last weekend.

"I'm hoping we do what we can do," Yarworth said. "I'm looking for them to keep up the same intensity and great attitude they had at the New England Championships."

The Minutemen will begin a long stand away from campus after this weekend's meet, returning home January 20.

women's hoop

continued from page 10

"Once we got that going, the running game got going, and everything else seemed to take care of itself."

Indeed it did, as UMass held the lead throughout, peaking at a 20 point advantage eight minutes into the second half, 52-32.

The Bears outside shooting proved ineffective in the second half, and UMass crashed the boards off failed three- point attempts and ran the ball the other way for points.

Massachusetts' considerable depth was another important factor in the win, with a total of 23 points coming from the bench.

At the top of the scoring list for the Minutewomen was Thomas with 15, followed by Carroll tallying 11, and Gurile recording 10.

Also contributing to the UMass win was forward Tez Krafi (10.4 ppg) who shot 4-9 from the floor and pulled down four boards.

The Minutewomen take to the court again next Wednesday as they travel New Jersey to face St. Peters with a shot to break into the AP Top 25 in the near future.

"We've got four days to get ready for St. Peters," O'Brien said. "We're going to work on some things, get better, finish up this first part of this season, and head into Christmas break on a positive note."

Gurile

continued from page 10

between good ol' Morningstar and the UMass cheerleaders. Since none of the players on the floor could jump that high, Morningstar grabbed a fan's crutch in the seats, while three cheerleaders looked to set up a mini-pyramid ran to the hoop.

Gurile was on the bench throughout this escapade, and as for freeing the lodged ball — she would have made it happen.

When Gurile was on the floor, her presence was felt. The 6-foot-3 center was focused on by her opponents, and was only able to muster 10 points. Gurile would often receive double-team attention so she would dish the ball to a streaking teammate for the basket — making things happen.

Gurile is a very soft-spoken person. She says her leadership is primarily set by her example. As co-captain, coach Joanie O'Brien has asked her to stretch those vocal chords and get the team moving.

With just over four minutes remaining in the first half and UMass clinging to a one point lead, Gurile took the ball just outside the paint. Teammate and fellow co-captain, senior Octavia Thomas was to her left signaling for the ball. All of a sudden, Gurile yelled with might, "cut!" Thomas sprinted to the hoop where she met a pretty bounce pass on the way to ringing up two points.

"The cut was right there. With Octavia's speed, I knew we had it. It was wide open," Gurile said. "As far as being more vocal goes, it is something that I've worked on."

"That was a great pass," O'Brien said, shaking her head. "Wow, that was a great pass."

The great pass to Thomas also resulted in a foul, where Thomas could have completed a three-point play at the line, but to no avail. That play sparked the Minutewomen and they were able to build a nine point lead by the half. Gurile made it happen.

In the second half, the Minutewomen continued to light it up. With 15 minutes remaining in the game, Gurile grabbed a rebound with authority, and laid it in giving the Minutewomen a 20-point lead. With that kind of cushion, O'Brien sat Gurile on the bench and inserted inexperienced freshmen forwards Lucia Madajova and Yolanda Rayside into the game. The only way to gain experience in the game of basketball is by playing. Gurile made that happen too.

Mike Brown is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

UMass guard Beth Kuzmeski and the Minutewomen downed Brown 66-51.

Collegian Graphics, doing the job no one else wants to do.

PUBLISH YOUR BOOK!
Join our clientele of distinguished authors, including professors and professionals, in a full-service publishing program. Gain the recognition you deserve. Carlton Press, a leading connect publisher spanning 5 decades, is seeking manuscripts for book publication. If you have an idea, or manuscript in progress, send for the booklet, How To Publish Your Book. If you have a completed manuscript, send it to us. We will provide you with a free, professional evaluation of your work...with no obligation. We'll also send you a sample of Carlton's quality work. Contact us today.
CARLTON PRESS, CORP., dept. CVS
11 W. 32ND ST., New York, NY 10001

WANTED
Nominations for the 1996
Outstanding Academic Adviser
DESCRIPTION:
A faculty or staff adviser who builds strong relationships with students; monitors students' progress toward academic and career goals; makes appropriate referrals; knows and understands institutional regulations, policies, and procedures.
Submit nominations in writing by FRIDAY, December 15, 1995 to:
Lu Butler, Chair
Outstanding Academic Adviser Selection Committee
Division of Continuing Education, 614 Goodell Building

ATTENTION FOREIGN STUDENTS

Office Of Foreign Students & Scholars
467 Hills South

PEER ADVISOR PROGRAM

Do you enjoy meeting new people? Do you want to help new students? Are you reliable, responsible and mature? If so, read on!

We are looking for 15 students to act as peer advisors/mentors to the foreign students who will be joining the University in the Fall of 1996. Advisors, who will be both undergrads and grad students, will be drawn from a wide range of University departments. Preference will be given to foreign students who will have completed at least one year of study by May of 1996 and who plan to be at the University at least through the end of the Spring 1997 semester. Good academic standing and a visa status which permits on-campus employment are required. Other requirements include a positive attitude, enthusiasm and solid interpersonal and communicative skills. Computer literacy is a plus.

Those selected will have the opportunity to be in contact with new students prior to arrival day, will work as part of out Orientation Staff, will lead a variety of tours and trips during the academic year and will act in a mentoring capacity. The salary is small but all expenses will be covered.

Interested? Intrigued? Come to 467 Hills South on 15 February at 5PM for an informational meeting. Please call us at 545-2843, no later than 15 December to reserve space at this meeting.

PRACTICAL TRAINING

If you will be completing your studies at the end of the fall 1995 semester and are on a F-1 visa and wish to apply for practical training, please contact our office and request an information packet. The latest you can make application is 25 March. If you are on a J-1 visa and the University of Massachusetts is your visa sponsor, you can request practical training authorization but must do so no later than the end of February and, for J visa holders only, you must have a job offer.

TRAVELING OUTSIDE THE U.S.???

If you are a foreign student who will be traveling outside the country during intersession, it is most important that your papers be in proper order. Please check with our office before traveling to insure that your return will not be problematic.

EMAIL ADDRESSES WANTED

We are going to begin sending Newsletters/Newsflashes by email. If you would like to be on the list, please email your address to jennyem@ipo.umass.edu.

SPRING SEMESTER BILLS FOR UNDERGRADUATES

Spring semester bills will be sent to your permanent address and must be paid by the due date. If you anticipate that mailing time might result in your bill/payment arriving late, please contact out office before you leave for holiday. Unless you make prior arrangements, a late bill payment can cause you to lose housing and pre-registration.

VISA LOTTERY

Rules for the 1996 d/v lottery have not been announced as of today's date. We anticipate that these will be available sometime after the first of the year. Assuming that the same rules are followed as in the past, application is very simple and does not require a fee or any special preparation. You may see advertisements which imply that a firm or individual - for a fee - is willing to assist you in making application. This assistance is not necessary and does not increase your chance of being chosen.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHINESE FOOD

Kai-Chi delivering Sunday through Thursday 12-11pm and Friday and Saturday to 3am 546-2774

UMASS HOCKEY

UMass Hockey! UMass Hockey! U Mass Hockey! No other sport shows what a real man is! Students pick up your free tickets today @ Curry Hicks Cage or @ Mullins the night of the game Saturday night! U Mass blows on the University of Vermont!

Aphe Chi Omega Let's celebrate at the Hub party tonight!!

The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau are holding open rush! House hours Mon December 11 | 3:30-9:30pm Tue December 12 | 7-9pm Wed December 13 & 30 | 8:30pm For more info, call Tara at 549-6179

To the owners of Delta Zeta Get ready for an amazing formal. Love in DZ

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedr apartment well kept, fully furnished, inexpensive on bus route, Jan 1 Feb 1 256-6806

Beautiful sunroom apt. Ideal for grad students. Full kitchen, full bath, large bedroom and washer/dryer. $825/month 253-2515

2 bedroom apartment for rent starting Jan 1st. 2 bedrooms on bus line, near school. Contact Nagih 549-8415

AUTO FOR SALE

1980 Ford Pinto Excellent condition inside and out. Only 51,000 miles. New sunroof and paint job. Must sell before Christmas $1900 obo Call 549-3040

1982 Dodge Aries Needs work (cv joints, gasket) for parts or restoration, $300 256-8718

1985 Olds Ciera Runs good new parts $2000 obo Heather 253-5048

1988 Toyota Pickup 89000 mi. Runs good $500 323-9987

1986 Mercury Tracer (Mazda 323) Low miles great shape. Firm $2500 Call 253-4012

91 Hyundai Excel 5 spd very well maintained lots of new parts 85 000 miles $2300 Call 256-8800

EMPLOYMENT

BABSON COLLEGE BOOKSTORE

Help Wanted at Babson College Bookstore from mid December until late January. $5.00 per hour Call 617-239-4375

Activity coordinators & front desk assistants- Attn college grads! If sunny and warm at some of Orlando's finest resort hotels! National recreation company is now accepting applicaxons for their spring training class beginning January 22nd. Broaden your education in the hospitality industry or just use it as a resume builder! Fully furnished apts & $150 monthly stipend. Call 800-864-8762 for more information and application

Environmental Jobs over winter break earn $275-$375/week working to save the environment with Mastering. Casual fun atmosphere. Call Tom at 256-8434

Hey D.J.s! National spring break tour operator seeks experienced disk jockeys/mc's to host spring break parties and activities at Cancun's Mocaplex's and Nassau's hottest clubs for the 1996 season. Room, trans. and salary prov. Please fax resume to (617) 262-8235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel 76 Summer St. Boston MA 02110 Attn Product Development

Local Representatives Needed. Post graduate's Receive lifetime commission! No investment! 1 800 796-2351

Looking to hire enthusiastic dedicated and experienced personal trainer who gets results! Call 549-5529

Spring Break Go Site Reps National spring beach tour operator seeks resp people to work in Cancun Marathon, Nassau and Florida during the 1996 season. Room, trans, salary and training prov. Pass U1 employment requirements. Please fax resume to (617) 262-8235 or mail to Take A Break Student Travel 76 Summer St, Boston MA 02110 Attn Product Dev.

Travel Abroad and Work Make up to $25-$45/hr teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea. No teaching background or Asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. 2000J2

We want you Unique import related product. Resells for $200. Inventory required $2500. Follow our plan and in only 2 sales per day in each location your profits $32,400 first year! 941-766-9001

Waitresses/os Jobs Tolleland is hiring 5 50 per hour plus bonuses. Flexible evening hours. Come to the basement of memorial hall & apply today

FOR RENT

Two 900 #s Be creative to earn big money. Call 253-5762

FOR SALE

Double bed practically brand new, mattress boxspring, frame $225. Call Elaine 546-9911

Furniture 2 futon bed mattress all just three months old. Call Tobi 256-6606

IBM pc Two computers both come with mice. Make great way. Cheap! Call 6-0540

Kegerator $200 2 year old iguana 4 x 2 tanks all supplies incl. $200 specialized handtruck 18" mountain bike $175 or bo 549-9186 Larry or Denise

Top of the line VGA skis for sale at an unbeatable price—boots for sale too Lon at 253-1882

UMass vs Maryland 2 tickets for basketball tourney in Maryland 4 games in mainstand! call Anthony @ 549-7324

UMass-BC 2 sb (bo) Good seats (Lower) 549-3694 Adam

Women's K2 salmon skis 170's Bindings & poles included Asking $200 or bo. Call 546-7444

1995 trek 930 Excel cond $450 or bo Call Peter @ 253-2817

286/386 Computer System $105/$205 Keyboard, CPU, monitor Call Steve (413) 586-3324

PERSONALS

Congratulations new moms of AXO Amie, Heather, Jodie, Corney, Stacey and Shannon

Tara Even though you never come work with us, we still think you're pretty sassy. Maybe next year, eh?

The Thursday Crew.

Thursday Night Graphics Thanks for a great semester. Hope you all come back next year. Thank you for being the person you are. Jacob

Kris and Carolyn Itchy Knees and sunny beers! Wish until next semester when we will become Greens! Man Low san

Mike, Tim, Wilson, & John congratulations on passing your national, yay guys are almost there. Keep up the good work and don t drink too much. Old Crow The brothers of Alpha Chi Rho

Tashi Why won t you dance with me in class anymore? Our love can transcend our age! Your secret admirer

Jimmy I see you every day sitting behind your computer. Looking so lonely. Why won t you open up to me? We can be so much more than friends! Forever yours, T.E.S.

Dave Meet us in the hotel tonight bring Karen - A & M

Rachel I love you so much, please forgive me I was insensitive and stupid, and you're so much better than Jake. -Ross

Happy B-Day Mom Stone Get psyched to party tomorrow night. I love ya. Abb

Jackie and Matty I love staying at your house and watching MTV late at night. KCK

Casey

Chubby Hubby is gross. It made me yack. It's not as gross as tomato and basil pizza or whoppers? What are you thinking? Elephant pace

Male seeking single female with bad breath, head lice and no teeth. I enjoy country music, sex with relatives and squirrel hunting. Ill impressed meet me by the bank machines Monday at noon

Luke

I am your father. I kid you not

DV

Betty Lou

Does getting divorced mean we can t be cousins anymore?

Buck

Conner I love you. You are the best. No one loves you more than me.

Conner

ROOM FOR RENT

Female seeking own bedroom in apthouse. Needed immediately for spring semester. 549-9285

Single female seeks room for rent immediately. Must be on bus line. Call Marie @ 548-5048

ROOM WANTED

Large room for rent. 1 or 2 people preferably 2. M/F Large house close to campus. Call 549-6582

Looking for upbeat female to share 2 bedroom apt. Available Jan 1 - Aug 275/mo negotiable Call 549-4935

One bedroom in a five bedroom house. Smoking Ok. $270 per month 256-4295

One room in South Amherst with three male three mates from U Mass. $230 rent. Call Mike 253-1984

Room for rent Private home quiet neighborhood kitchen/vegetarian kitchen Laundry, parking furnished $325 and Jan 30 549-4853

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted for spring semester, single bedroom in 3 bedroom apt 2 full baths located on bus route Heat and hot water included. Call 256-0847

Heat 1 bedroom in 4 bedroom apt on bus route. Very nice. 270/month all incl Call 253-3706 Now!

Roommate wanted to share a conveniently located (1/2 mile to UMass and center of Amherst), beautiful 3 bedroom 2-1/2 bath condo at Amity Place. Laundry, fireplace, central air, patio, full kitchen and great sunset views. Must be responsible cat-lovingnon-smoker $425.00/month plus utilities. Available January 1, 1996. Contact Gary at 549-3998

Roommate wanted non-smoker to share room for Spring semester $185 per month. On bus route. Start Jan 1st. Call Anne 253-1605 heat & hot water included

Roommate wanted for open bedroom in Brandywine Heat & hot water included. Starts Jan 1. Call Andy 549-5747

SERVICES

Free financial aid! Over 6 billion in public and private sector grants & scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parent s income. Let us help. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. 5N012

International Students Visitors DV-1 Greencrd program by US Immigration Legal services tel 818-772-7166 20231 Sunga St. Canoga Park, CA 91306

Quick movers & storage Sign up now to beat the rush! 256-1900

Need help moving? Buying a new bed? Trash to dispose of? I have a pickup truck and am available year round. Please book early for end of semester moves. Hourly rates. Page anytime 292-0065

RESUME

Inexpensive professional resume services Packages $15-$30 Only at Campus Design and Copy. The affordable alternative. Upstairs in the Student Union 545-2271

Jewelry repairs watch batteries, eyeglass frame repair, and ear piercing. Silverstage Designs 264 N. Pleasant St Amherst 253-3324

Pregnant? Need help? Call birthright of Amherst area for free testing and carrying assistance 548-1906

TO SUBLET

Looking for Apt/bedroom to sublet January-mature responsible male needs place to stay over intersession Call Bill at 548-7077

One Room Available in three bedroom apt for spring semester in Amherst Cir 253-4985

Trim for Jan Main st Nohs $190 more info Call 362-9874

TRANSPORTATION

Need a ride to Florida? I have the perfect solution. Deliver my car to Ft Lauderdale. Call Anne 413-628-3878

Need a ride to Florida? I'm driving to Florida Dec 24 & I need someone to accompany me. Call Sarah 549-0178

Ride needed to Western NY (Rock Bull Syr) Dec 20 or 21 st - Chrissy 256-0888

TRAVEL

JAMAICA

Go with whom you know Spring break in Negril- $549 U Mass Ski Club 545-3437 Trust our experience.

Catch a jet! Cancun/Mazatlan $188 r/t, Europe $188. Call! $129. Call Airhitch for more info! 800-326-2009

Going home for the holidays? Need a ride to the airport? Call Valley Transporter Airport shuttle Hourly service to Bradley Affordable door to door. Advance reservations 549-1350

Isracollegiate ski trip Ski with 200 Jewish students from the Northeast and Canada Jan 26-29. Sign up by December 15 with Beth at 549-1710

Fort Antonio, Jamaica Ocean view cottages, great neighborhood. Walk to beaches, restaurants, dancehall clubs. $150/week 413-367-9390

Spring Break Bahamas or Florida Keys Spend it on your own private yacht. One week only $365.00 per person including food and much more. Organizers go for free! Easy Sailing Yacht Charters 1-800-783-4001 See us on the net http://www.shadow.net/~ersail

Winter Break Special Killington week $288 Interested? Call the U Mass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Models Wanted National published sports and actions photos seeks athletes/models for photo shoot will photo you and your sport. 413-584-9545

Wanted A title IX found advertise here

Thursday Ticker

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Market closes as of 4 p.m. December 7

Index	Close	Change
Dow Jones Industrial Average	5,159.39	-39.74
Standard & Poor's 500	616.17	-4.01
Nasdaq Composite Index	1053.17	-8.56
AMSE Index	535.71	-1.88

Market Reports

Compiled by Andrew Ferguson

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge dove in October to its lowest level in nearly two years, prompting analysts to warn of a potential recession next year unless the Federal Reserve lowers interest rates.

The Commerce Department, reported Wednesday the barometer fell 0.5 percent in October. That's the biggest drop since it skidded 0.6 percent in April.

WASHINGTON (AP) — With strong bipartisan support, the House passed a bill that restricts securities class-action fraud lawsuits, sending the much-contested measure to the White House. The House vote, a veto-proof 320-102, came a day after the Senate passage of the compromise bill by a near veto-proof margin. Technology companies and accountants complained of being unfair targets of frivolous suits. Opponents said the bill goes too far.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

Aries (March 21–April 19): Join a special group. It will give you fresh insights as well as a chance to make new friends. The literary bug bites! Try your hand at writing poetry or a short story.

Taurus (April 20–May 20): Entertaining is great so long as you do not allow it to interfere with business. Play for time if faced with a romantic choice. Losing your self in your work will take your mind off other things.

Gemini (May 21–June 20): Questionable companions or activities are best avoided. Careless or defiant behavior can have serious consequences. Stick to the straight and narrow.

Cancer (June 21–July 22): Curb a tendency to act overly emotional. You do not want to say anything that could jeopardize your standing with loved ones. Creative ideas flow freely this afternoon.

Leo (July 23–Aug. 22): Be diligent where a health matter is concerned. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Consult your lawyer or accountant about a financial question.

Virgo (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): A personal matter requires your prompt attention. If necessary, change your work schedule. A business meeting turns out to be less than expected. A friend may not appreciate your advice.

Libra (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): See and be seen early today! Accumulating savings is important for your peace of mind. Be frugal. A change in your weekend plans calls for a tactful explanation. Resist playing a prank on someone.

Scorpio (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Job-related training in technology or legal issues will boost your earning power. Family members want your company. Enjoy being fussed over! A romantic weekend could tempt you to make promises you cannot keep.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): A hobby becomes a passionate interest, consuming more and more of your time. Spend more time with your mate. Consider traveling to a distant location to attend a conference or a trade show.

Capricorn (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Give friends a chance to invite you for the weekend. Pass up the opportunity to argue with a close relative. Confusion over a financial matter could cause tension. Donate funds to a worthy cause.

Aquarius (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Do not let a fear of loneliness prompt you to settle for a so-so relationship. True love is still possible! Continue to search for your soul mate.

Pisces (Feb. 19–March 20): You have an overriding desire to increase your earning power and live a more adventurous life. Discuss a game plan with a trusted friend, then look for sounder investments.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS

1 Master, in colonial India
6 Susa was its capital
10 Kind of benefit
14 Duplicate
15 Actress Garr
16 Clapton or Roberts
17 Game enjoyed by George Bush
19 12th cen. date
20 Seizes illegally
21 Virgules
23 Wagner heroine
24 Play part
25 Seven: Comb. form
27 Famous Native American Chief
34 Número —
35 Facility
36 Related on the mother's side
37 Small salamanders
40 Linguist's deg.
41 Oft-seen auto adornment
42 Coffee whitener
43 Commanded
45 First lady?
46 Princess Anne, for one
48 Let fall
49 First name in pairs skating
50 Prefix used by wine lovers
52 "Breathless" actress Jean and others
56 Conflict's opposite
58 Name of five Norwegian kings
59 Tireless toilers
62 In — of
63 Mine, in Marseilles
64 Onion's cousins
65 Chief Justice Warren
66 Lo —
67 Double curves

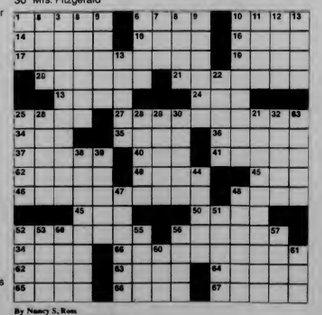
DOWN

1 Acad.
2 Baseball brothers
3 Speed demon's muscle
4 Antonym of compliment
5 Malt beverages
6 Old English letters
7 Composer Delibes
8 War god
9 Lose
10 Citrine or topaz
11 Sly
12 Not taped
13 Galatea's beloved
18 Room
22 Pined
25 Guess
26 Jerez January
28 Stallone after ego
29 State in NE India
30 Mrs. Fitzgerald
31 Tobasco Cat and others
32 Norwegian — church
33 Fished for congers
38 Becoming
39 Slander
44 Tennyson's Arden
47 Native American dwelling
48 Nocturnal noises
51 Place for élèves
52 One and only
53 Lamb of letters
54 Max of boxing
55 Unspecified amount
56 Related
57 Astronaut Slayton
60 King of France
61 Draft org.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

J	O	K	E		O	B	O	E		B	O	W S
A	P	E	X		B	U	R	S	T		U	D I C
G	E	N	A		E	R	I	C	A		R	O N A
		N	O	M	O	S	S	G	A	T	H	E R E R
				I	D	E	A		L	E	I	A
S	H	A	N	E		E	L	L		M	U	L C T
C	A	M	E	O	S		V	O	O			O R E
E	T	E	R	N	A	L	S	P	R	I	N	G E R
N	I	N		T	I	S		K	N	E	A	D S
E	N	D	E	D		F	A	R		C	A	N O E
		P	O	M	E		E	R	A	T
A	T	H	O	M	E	B	E	G	I	N	N	E R
L	O	O	N		M	O	R	A	L		E	S A U
A	L	L	Y		E	A	G	L	E		S	P I T
S	E	E	M		T	O	E	D		S	Y	N E

1/6/95



By Nancy S. Ross
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X _____ Words: = _____ X rate _____ = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used - see rate card

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

DEAR SANTA, BEFORE I SUBMIT MY LIST TO YOUR MORAL SCRUTINY, I DEMAND TO KNOW WHO MADE YOU THE MASTER OF MY FATE?!
WHO ARE YOU TO QUESTION MY BEHAVIOR, WAY ??? WHAT GIVES YOU THE RIGHT?!
SANTA MAKES THE TOYS, SO HE GETS TO DECIDE WHO TO GIVE THEM TO.
OH
TIME TO PREPARE MY APPELLATE CASE.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

I SEE YOU CALVIN, AND YOU'D BETTER NOT THROW THAT SNOWBALL. I'M MAILING A LETTER TO SANTA RIGHT NOW!
IS THE ENVELOPE ALREADY SEALED?
YES, BUT I COULD WRITE A P.S. ON THE BACK
DO YOU HAVE A PEN?
AS A MATTER OF FACT, I DO!
I'LL BET SHES BLUFFING. BUT THIS ISNT THE TIME OF YEAR TO TEMPT FATE

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

I--NEVER MEANT--TO HURT YOU. I--I--LOVE YOU...
YOU HAD A STRANGE WAY OF SHOWING IT!
YOU CAN'T DO THIS TO ME!
WANNA BET?
MMMPHH...
DON'T BOTHER ANSWERING, JUST NOD!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

OH BRUNO... I DON'T BELIEVE JACOB DUMPED ME LIKE THAT. I FEEL LIKE MY LIFE IS LIKE... LIKE A BAD RED STEWART SONG...
AS OPPOSED TO WHAT? A GOOD ONE?

Ali People By Ali

Small Potatoes By Jon Art

Buttah By Darling

The UMass Daily Collegian, it doesn't get any better than this.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"We don't know what those things are, but everyone who has bought one says they're very affectionate."

Close to Home By John McPherson

"The main difference is that that system will be obsolete in eight months, whereas, for only $400 more, you can have a system that's guaranteed not to be obsolete for a full year."

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Lowell and I were walking down the street and I thought this girl was waving at me but she was actually fanning her face from the heat. I almost said, "hi".

I'm a jerk.

I told Lowell, "We're losers. We have nothing going on in our lives."

Lowell said, "yeah, we're losers."

Then I said, "Actually I'm not a loser Lowell, but you are."

I said, "Really Lowell, you can't be a loser. It's virtually impossible because you have a beautiful new mountain bike."

Lowell said, "Thanks Leold, I forgot I had the bike."

I said, "yeah, no problem.... .....loser."

Coming at you one last time:

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Copy Editor.....Tara MK Connelly
Photo Technician.....Jeffrey DiGiovanni
Production Supervisor.....Joshua Grey
Production.....Marianne Harner
William Darby

Dining Commons Menu

Friday

LUNCH
Phishburger
Ravioli
BASICS LUNCH
Red Beans
Phishburger

DINNER
Savory Beef Strudel
Turkey Tenderloin
BASICS DINNER
Curried Chick Peas
Turkey Tenderloin

Saturday

BRUNCH
Breakfast Sandwich
French Toast Sticks
BASICS BRUNCH
Breakfast Sandwich
Split Pea-Veggie Stew

DINNER
Barbecued Chicken
Beef Strips and Veggies
BASICS DINNER
Barbecued Chicken
Bean Burrito

Sunday

BRUNCH
Omelet w/ Veggies
Waffles and Sausage
BASICS BRUNCH
Omelet w/ Veggies
Sesame Noodles & Peas

DINNER
Veggie Lasagna
Breaded Chicken Breasts
BASICS DINNER
Veggie Lasagna
Sweet & Sour Tofu

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Top 10

By Brian Marchionni

Top 10 Least Popular TV Shows

10. NYPD Magenta.
9. Amherst 01003.
8. Enemies.
7. Dr. Kevorkian, Medicine Man.
6. Monday Night Ballroom Dancing.
5. Married with Herpes.
4. Floppy Copy.
3. DMV.
2. The Young and the Impotent.
1. Saturday Night Live.

Quote of the Day

I would like to fall in love again but my only hope is that love doesn't happen to me so often after this. I don't want to get so used to falling in love that I get curious to experience something more extreme – whatever that may be.

– Douglas Coupland

Sleep, eat, breath, read the Daily Collegian, it's just that simple.

Sports

UMass takes on BC in Commonwealth Classic

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Besides a UMass–UConn matchup, this is the next best thing — UMass vs. Boston College, a game that will undoubtedly be for state bragging rights.

The Minutemen and the Eagles will face off tomorrow at 1 p.m. at the FleetCenter in Boston. In 27 previous meetings between the two clubs, BC holds a 15–12 advantage. In its last meeting during the 1990–91 season, UMass edged the Eagles, 83–81.

A lot has changed since the last meeting. For one, the Minutemen are now a national power, and secondly, Boston College was in the midst of its third straight losing season.

Entering this season, the Eagles weren't supposed to be that good. With seven sophomores and freshmen (no seniors) on the squad, BC is young.

But the Eagles have surprised everyone by jumping out of the gate with a 4–1 record, along the way upsetting a tough Louisville squad 81–67. They also beat lowly Buffalo and Holy Cross, along with Big East foe Pittsburgh by two points Wednesday night. BC's only loss came at the hands of Connecticut, 63–62.

"We're going to Boston to play a good BC team," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "They have great talent. This is a big game for them, we're coming in there knowing that. We have a lot of work to do. It's going to be a war."

Danya Abrams is the man for BC. The 6-foot-7-inch, 265 pound junior has been averaging 20.2 points per game along with 7.2 boards, and is coming off back-to-back games with a double–double. Against Louisville, he scorched the Cardinal with 30 points and five rebounds.

"He's a good low-post player," Marcus Camby said. "He uses his body well, just like [Florida's] Dimetria Hill."

Sophomore guard Antonio Granger is also a threat to score, averaging 11 points. He scored a game-high 15 points and also grabbed seven boards against UConn.

Freshman guard Scoonie Penn from Salem, Mass., who spurned UMass to attend The Heights, has started every game and is averaging 11 points per game.

Duane Woodward (8.8 ppg) and Keenan Jourdon (7.6 ppg, 7.4 rpg) round out the probable starting five for the Eagles.

Mickey Curley, Billy's younger brother, will likely be the first off the bench, and is averaging 8.8 points and 4.8 boards.

Calipari and the Minutemen are refusing to treat this game any differently.

"This is just the next game [on the schedule]," Calipari said.

"It's just another big, important game," said Hartford native

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 6

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Senior co-captain Dana Dingle will lead the Minutemen into an intra–state rivalry Saturday, as UMass meets Boston College in the Commonwealth Classic.

Game Preview

No. 3 UMass Minutemen vs. Boston College Eagles

At The FleetCenter
Boston, Mass.
1:00 p.m.

Dana Dingle

Danya Abrams

Probable Starters

Dana Dingle	F	Keenan Jourdon
Donta Bright	F	Antonio Granger
Marcus Camby	C	Danya Abrams
Carmelo Travieso	G	James "Scoonie" Penn
Edgar Padilla	G	Duane Woodward

On the Air

TV: CBS
Radio: WMUA 91.1 FM Brian Perillo, Pat Sheeran
WHMP 99.3 Mark Vandemeer, Jack Leaman and Tony Barbee

Women's hoop preys on Bears; wins third straight at Mullins

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team returned to Amherst last night looking for their third–straight Mullins Center win, and got it, beating Brown University 66–51.

Coming off an impressive showing last weekend in the Louisiana Tech/Dial Soap Classic, where UMass (4–2) dropped Mississippi Valley State, before losing to No. 1 Louisiana Tech, the Minutewomen promised to be tough competition for the 0–5 Bears.

It was slow going in the beginning for UMass, as the first points did not appear on the board until Melissa Gurile laid in an easy two from the foul line, after a foul 2:30 into the game. The Bears kept it close, taking a surprising 8–9 lead early in the game off a three–pointer by guard Vita Redding.

It was this impressive attack from outside the arc led by Redding (4–8) and forward Liz Turner (3–9) that powered Brown as they were 6–12 from three–point land.

"The first half, I was a little disappointed," said UMass coach Jamie O'Brien. "They hit some threes. I didn't think they were going to hit. We played the first half a little bit down and not with the intensity we needed to."

A key factor in the Minutewomen's slow start was rebounding.

"In the first half, we didn't rebound," O'Brien said. "We gave them the shot, and then we didn't go rebound it, so we gave them the second shot."

This dip in the Minutewomen's game didn't last long. When the UMass squad is down in the intensity department, there are two players that surface time and again to take the reigns, senior co–captains Gurile and Octavia Thomas.

UMass tied it at 12 off an inside jumper by Gurile (13 ppg) at the 9:28 mark. After battling it out in close points, it was forward Crystal Carroll (10 ppg) who knotted the score at 18 with 6:36 to go.

With under five minutes to play in the first, the Minutewomen came alive, as Thomas led the way for the UMass offense.

Thomas drove the lane for the layup with 4:33 remaining in the half, bringing the Minutewomen within one, 22–23. It was all Thomas from here in. Driving the lane for two, she again gave the Minutewomen a one point lead, 24–23.

With Thomas gunning at full force, the Bears were doomed as UMass went on a 17–5 run to take an 11 point lead at the half (37–28).

To start off the second half, Thomas stole the ball and went coast to coast for an easy two, and there was no looking back.

"We picked up our intensity on defense," O'Brien said.

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 7

UMass meets dogs and cats

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

In baseball, off–speed pitching can be deadly. A pitcher can baffle the batter with a change–up smack crafti–ly in between a pair of fastballs.

Such will be the predicament for the Massachusetts hockey team this weekend. Coming off of a testing weekend against No. 2 Boston University, the Minutemen will face lowly Yale tonight with No. 6 Vermont on the immediate horizon.

The Minutemen (6–5, 3–5 Hockey East) will face off against the 3–7 (1–6 ECAC) Bulldogs tonight at 7 p.m. in New Haven, Conn., and then return home to battle the high–flying Catamounts (8–2–1, 4–0–1 ECAC) tomorrow night at the William D. Mullins Center.

UMass will look to get back to their winning ways tonight after losing a pair to BU.

"We're coming off two losses and we need to get back on the winning track," captain Jaynen Rissling said. "The team feels confident. We weren't happy with the two losses, but we feel confident that what we tried to do against BU we can carry on."

The Bulldogs have snazzy new uniforms this year, but little else has changed from last year's 8–17–3 team that finished last in the ECAC. Coach Tim Taylor, who coached the 1994 U.S. Olympic team, has seen few positive results since returning from Lillehammer last year.

Yale has won just one of eight games since opening its season with a 3–0 and 8–1 sweep at 1–11–3 Air Force, and enters tonight's game at Ingalls Rink coming off of conference losses at Cornell (6–2) and Colgate (8–1) this past weekend.

UMass will try to keep the pressure on Yale, which has been outshot in each of its last eight games and has yet to win a game when trailing after one period.

Dave Kilduff will start in net for the Minutemen tonight, in UMass' first meeting with Yale since the reinstatement of the program.

Vermont will pose a greater challenge than the Bulldogs. The country's sixth–ranked team has only lost to BU 5–4 and at Maine 2–1 in overtime, and possesses two of the country's top forwards in Martin St. Louis and Eric Perrin.

Both juniors from Laval, Quebec, the two Hobey Baker Award candidates, along with linemate J.C. Ruid, lead the team in points this season. Perrin (9–17–26), St. Louis (3–19–22) and Ruid (13–9–22) have set the ECAC ablaze, forming one of the most potent lines in the nation.

"[Perrin and St. Louis] are exceptional and we've got to find a way to slow them down," coach Joe Mallen said.

St. Louis, an All–American last year with 144 points in 79 career games, has been selected to play on the Canadian national team at the upcoming Spengler Cup in Switzerland, one of only five U.S. collegians on the team.

Depth has been the Catamounts'

Turn to HOCKEY page 6

Gurile making things happen for UMass

In the game of basketball, much emphasis is placed on the ability to make things happen on the court. When Massachusetts senior co–captain Melissa Gurile steps on the hardwood, she makes things happen.

Last night, the Minutewomen took the floor of the William D. Mullins Center against the struggling Brown Bears. The Bears came into the contest having lost five straight, with no victories to speak of. However, Gurile and the Minutewomen would not overlook this game, for the team motto states, "One game at a time."

Mike Brown

Leading the way for the Minutewomen was Gurile, who made just about everything flow smoothly in UMass' 66–51 beating of Brown. The only thing Gurile didn't make happen was when official John Morningstar lost a contact lens and had to stop the game for five minutes to find it and wash it off. I will refrain from the "blind ref" joke.

Gurile also took no part when the ball got lodged between the hoop and the glass, and there was a race

Turn to GURILE, page 7

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Atlantic 10 Player of the Week Melissa Gurile scored 10 points in Massachusetts' win over Brown.

Nets get Bradley; Anderson going?

Darren Cohen on the NBA

Question: Why isn't anyone in NJ happy Derrick Coleman is no longer a Net?

Answer: The Nets traded him for Shawn Bradley.

Yes, that's right the NBA's own version of Plastic Man, Shawn Bradley. Just what the Nets needed, another "long–term project." In order to make the deal salary–cap–friendly the Nets tossed in (1993 draft bust) Rex Walters and journeyman Sean Higgins. The Sixers, feeling generous, coughed up the "ever reliable" Tim Perry and the "always dangerous" Greg Graham.

Don't you think it would have been nice if (Net GM) Willis Reed decided to acquire someone with just a tad bit more of an offensive repitoire. Granted, on occasion Bradley has been a factor on defense, but the Nets are absolutely anemic offensively.

Reed, whose entire regime has been scarred by draft busts and poor administrative decisions is now under the gun. There is no question Derrick had to go, but why not hold off and let him build up his trade value.

Case in point: The Sixers have been shopping 6–11 power forward Sharone Wright and occasionally have dangled Clarence Weatherspoon. By proving Coleman could overcome his irregular heartbeat, the Nets surely could have inquired about either one.

In the Sixers eyes they have suckered New Jersey once again... Anyone remember when they sold Dr. J to Philly? (Sixers GM/Coach) John Lucas knew he had to shake up his (2–12) troops but is this the right deal?

True, they finally washed their hands of Bradley — However, they still need a point guard. Bottom line: Coleman can help this team under one condition; his

Turn to NBA, page 6

UMass/BC clash, Sox need Vaughn, Yanks make deal

Around the Horn with Brian Perillo

The UMass men's hoop team will take a perfect 4–0 record down the Mass. Pike this weekend for the much anticipated battle against Boston College. The Minutemen have three wins over Top 20 teams, and a blowout over a decent Gator club.

Not that I actually believed Coach John Calipari when he said his team could start the season 0–7, but this Massachusetts club has surprised some people, including me. Marcus Camby, amidst all the hoopla, really is playing like the best collegiate player in the nation.

With the loss of many of last year's star underclassmen to the NBA, the Minutemen, dare I say it, could have a better chance to go to the Final Four this season than they did a year ago.

• The Eagles, who many thought would be a pushover for the talented Minutemen, have played well early on. BC is 4–1, with their only loss coming at the hands of No. 9 UConn. The Huskies, the only BC opponent that could make UMass fans root for the Eagles, barely hung on to beat BC by a point.

With all the emotion surrounding the big intrastate battle at the FleetCenter this weekend, and fans in the Boston area pulling for the Eagles, Danya Abrams and BC should make a game of it.

• Speaking of Boston, it would be nice for the

Turn to HORN, page 6

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CV Issue 65 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, December 11, 1995

UMass, Bright outlast Eagles
Donta Bright scored a game–high 24 points to lead the Minutemen to a 65–57 victory over BC Saturday (See Sports Weekend, page 10).

WFCR is making waves
After recently holding a fund drive that surpassed all expectations, WFCR is hoping for a new transmitter (See story, page 3).

Yerself Is Steam
Upstate New York's Mercury Rev takes their mind– blowing rock symphonies into Northampton tonight (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Today should be windy and cold, with highs in the 20s. The time for hot chocolate has come in full force as the cold and winds will continue into Tuesday and later on in the week.

HIGH: 21 LOW: 2	HIGH: 24 LOW: 5	HIGH: 20 LOW: 0

Motions passed on reading days & candle policy

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association passed motions last Wednesday night on behalf of their constituents, increasing accessibility for students on campus.

Senator Bill Ramsey presented the motion to mandate that the University have two reading days before finals each semester. This semester, University students have only one reading day before finals.

"Finals are important," Ramsey said. "Students need more time to prepare."

The same senator presented a motion that there be toaster ovens in each of the dining commons. This motion also passed.

The Senate also passed a motion to make an amendment to Housing Service's candle and incense policy. Amy Howland presented the motion on behalf of students who wish to light candles for religious purposes around the holidays.

Currently, candles and incense are forbidden in the residence halls. Under the new amendment, students will be able to light candles and incense provided they use safety devices which will be issued by residence assistants.

A motion petitioning to support an Asian American Studies Program at the University, proposed by senators Anh Ly and Lisa Chiu, was tabled for another week due to a loss of quorum.

The last Senate meeting of the semester will be held Wednesday night in the Campus Center.

The Student Judiciary will hear a case tonight raised by Sen. Peter Luongo. Luongo is charging Senate Speaker Dan Castellano with ruling outside of his bounds as Speaker.

Castellano previously struck a motion dilatory before it reached the senate floor. Luongo is arguing that Castellano's actions were unconstitutional. Castellano maintains that it was within his powers to strike a motion dilatory, whether it had been to the floor or not.

The case will be heard at 6 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room.

UMass students finish house before holidays

By Roseann Cohen
Collegian Staff

Wilhemina Humphries and her three daughters were welcomed to their new home, renovated by Five College Habitat for Humanity volunteers, on Friday afternoon.

Family portraits and Christmas stockings hung over the fireplace and a gigantic Christmas tree stood in the corner, with ornaments and decorations made by Humphries' three daughters Bianca, Arecia and Paget.

With the warmth and friendliness of neighbors, family members, and volunteers gave the once dilapidated house on Old Town Road a lived–in feeling. About 40 students, neighbors, family members and other volunteers with Habitat for Humanity welcomed the family.

Habitat for Humanity is a nation–wide organization that uses volunteer labor to build or renovate homes for low– income families at affordable rates. The group tries to eradicate the financial constraints which can often block these families from becoming homeowners.

"It's a permanent solution rather than a temporary solution," said Marjorie Lineck, a volunteer with Habitat for Humanity. "The family becomes part of the community and then they contribute to that community. We feel it is a hand– up rather than a hand–out."

Humphries, who works at Student Legal Services at the University, expressed her gratitude to everyone who had helped give her the chance to give her daughters a better standard of living.

"I have so much respect for my own mom because she did so much for us when we were young, and I wanted to show my girls there is so much more than apartment living," she said.

"I wanted them to experience their own yard — raking and shoveling — and just doing family oriented things that you can't do in an apartment."

Humphries and her children have lived in many different apartments, including Puffton Village in North Amherst, and said they are pleased that they can finally have a real home.

"I love this house," she said. "The moment I first saw it, before I had known that my application had been approved, my daughters and I had looked in the windows and I said 'This is mine' and I couldn't be happier."

Students walked around the finished house proud of the work they had completed, and came away from the experience with the feeling that they had done something concrete to help someone in need.

"For me, it's a great thing you can do for the community," said Hampshire College sophomore Lucy Mayo. "It's an immediate result, it's something you can make and see what you've done. It's about working hard and getting down on your knees scrubbing the floor or doing other work."

Turn to HOUSE, page 3

DAYMON SMITH / COLLEGIAN

A battle for bragging rights...
Thousands of UMass fans braved inclement weather Saturday morning to be part of a sold out FleetCenter crowd for the UMass–BC men's basketball showdown.

Mfume chosen as NAACP head after 15 months

By Shawn Donnan
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Kweisi Mfume was chosen Saturday to head the NAACP, after 15 months during which the nation's oldest civil rights organization became better known for controversy than activism.

The Maryland Democrat, who said he will leave Congress in mid–February, said his first order of business would be to address the organization's $3.2 million debt and change the group's administrative structure.

"We're not going to sit by and watch the world change," said the former head of the Congressional Black Caucus. "We are going to change."

Elected by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's board in a unanimous vote Saturday, Mfume said he would seek to cut the size of the board.

The board has been criticized for being too large and too politicized and the organization now has more board members than staff members.

In the past, executive directors have clashed with the 64–member board over the extent of their power, and potential candidates for the position have blamed the board for scaring them away.

But Mfume said one of the conditions he had demanded when he agreed to take the job was that he report to the board's 17–member executive committee rather than the entire panel.

"It is easier to assemble 17 than 64 on any given day," Mfume said. His title will be president and chief executive officer, reflecting his desire for more autonomy.

Mfume said he would meet with Chairwoman Myrlie Evers–Williams this week to come up with a short–term and long–term financial plan.

He said that plan would include re–opening the stream of donations from corporate donors, approaching potential individual donors such as athletes and actors for support, and trying to increase the ranks of the NAACP's 500,000 members.

Mfume said he hoped his decision to leave a safe seat in Congress for the leadership of the beleaguered NAACP would encourage people to return to the organization.

"That example might say to other people that it's all right to come back home," he said.

Many of the organization's large donors withdrew their support last year after allegations of financial impropriety were leveled at former executive director Benjamin Chavis and former chairman William Gibson.

Chavis was fired in August 1994 for committing more than $330,000 in NAACP funds without the board's approval to settle a sex discrimination suit filed against him.

Gibson, a South Carolina dentist, was ousted in February after accusations he double–dipped on expenses. An audit released this summer questioned more than $112,000 in expenses he charged to the NAACP.

The resulting drop in donations worsened the NAACP's financial situation and forced the temporary layoff of most of the national staff.

The NAACP now has only 50 national employees, less than half what it had when Chavis took office.

Critics had said the search for a replacement to Chavis took so long because of a lack of qualified candidates interested in the job.

ELIZABETH BROWN / COLLEGIAN

Holding on for dear life...
Sandi Krauss, a first year art major, decides to not take any chances on the slippery stairs, but to go down in the snow in front of Mary Lyon Residence Hall.

Dispute sparks ire of Harlem gunman, leaving seven dead

By Richard Pyle
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A day after a white–owned Harlem clothing store was stormed by a black man who turned the business into a fiery tomb, those who had organized a boycott of the business denied that they were motivated by race.

The black–led boycott had targeted the property owner, a predominantly black church, as well.

"The fact is that the landlords are black. The issue was never black and white," the Rev. Al Sharpton said Saturday. "We never said we were going after whites or Jews... The issue was protecting a member of our community."

Police Commissioner William Bratton said the crime that left eight dead, including the gunman, had racial overtones — including witness accounts that the attacker fired his pistol only at whites. Three of the four shooting victims were white.

"The ones he was allowing out of the store were all blacks," Bratton said.

Bratton also noted that on Nov. 29, a store security guard had overheard a protester say, "We're going to come back with 20 niggers and loot and burn the Jew."

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, without mentioning Sharpton by name, blamed the protests for turning a landlord–tenant dispute into a dangerous emotional racial confrontation.

